The valuable office of Deputy Keeper of the Rolls, vacant by the resignation of Mr. Robert Wogan, has been conferred on Mr. John Reilly, son-in-law of Lord St. Leonard's, and Secretary to the Master of the Rolls. The latter appointment has been given to Mr. W. R. C. Smith, son of the Master.

Archbishop Cullen has issued a a pastoral on the peace. He points attention to the conduct of our "brave Catholic fellow-countrymen and our poor Catholic allies." He then refers with indignation to the Protestant attacks on Maynooth and the efforts at proselytism.

The Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland has granted a reprieve to Agnes Byrne, who was convicted at the late Downshire assizes of the murder at Saintfield. His Excellency yielded to the memorial got up by the local Presbyterian clergy.

There are accounts from Westmeath, that the county begins to assume an alarming aspect, one "ruffianly offence" succeeding another with fearful rapidity. Some burglars have been using fire-arms in their attacks.

An order has been issued by Lord Panmure to the county of Dublin Militia to resume the recruiting. This appears to signify that the Militia force will not be disbanded for some time to come.

Two French vessels of war, carrying twenty-four and twelve guns respectively, arrived in Kingstown harbor on the 25th, and saluted ; they are on a cruise from Cherbourg.

Miss Vandenhoff is at present fulfilling a series of engagements in the Irish provinces. At Limerick, last week, her success was most unequivocal.

A line of powerful screw propellers is shortly to commence running between New-York and Cork. Some wag says it is to be called the Cork-screw Line.

Mr. R. M. Fox, one of the representatives in Parliament for the county of Longford, is dead.

The expenses of the Encumbered Estates Commission are set down for the current year at £15,529.

English News.

The Globe confirms the report of her Majesty having signified her wish to confer a marquisite upon the Earl of Clarendon, who, however, begged her Majesty's permission to decline the honor.

Lord Elgin, as was anticipated, has declined the offer of the governorship of Victoria. The appointment, says the London Morning Star, has also been offered to Lord Marcus Hill, and declined by his Lordship on domestic considerations.

An "early rising association" has been formed, says the Sunderland Herald, in the thriving and populous town of Middlesbro. All the members are bound under penalties, not to be in bed after half-past 5 o'clock, A. M.

According to the return from the Bank of England for the week ending April 12th, the stock of bullion in both departments is £10,098,667, showing an increase of £41,562, when compared with preceding term.

A proposition has been started at Liverpool for building a cathedral in that town, at a cost of £40,000. One gentleman has offered to give £5,000 towards the object.

The Leicester Mercury says that a man nearly 80 years old lately applied for parochial relief, his wife having just presented him with twins.

The annual cost of coroners' inquests to the county of Middlesex is £10,000.

An English Exchange gives us the following glimpse at the Berkshire Jack Sheppard. The subject of it is so nimble that we must run as we read.

The capture of the convict Thomas Hirons—whose escape from Portsmouth in a suit of clothes he had manufactured out of his rough sheets, was lately reported—has been effected under circumstances of great interest. On the night of his escape from Portsmouth he committed a burglary in that neighborhood, carrying off eatables and £6 in money. He took the rails to Oxfordshire, and on Sunday last he rummaged the workshops of two carpenters, at Great Barford, and stole a saw; with that he cut out the window frame, secured with iron bars, of Mr. Woolgrove, a grocer, and carried off clothes and money. His next exploit was on his old friend, Mr. Timms, of Little Barford, stable, but failing in his search, he broke open Mr. Austen's, where he found a horse, halter, and sack, with them he rode away to Rathby, where he turned the horse adrift. The local police traced him to Wellesbourne, and the services of the Warwickshire police were enlisted, but without success. On Monday night a number of people were keeping "Saint Monday" at the New Inn, Hatton, when they were astonished at the breaking of some panes of glass in the window of the room by a man's leg. They hastened outside, and gave chase to the offender, but he was too swift for them; and it appears that Hiron had ransacked the bedroom, and in descending outside the windows his foot struck against the glass. About a quarter of a mile from the New Inn he, the same night committed a burglary at Mr. Smith's, farmer, where he regaled himself heartily. The police, suspecting that he would take rest after such a repast, raised the "hue and cry" and several impromptu detectives were got together, and commenced a vigorous search, which resulted in the surprising Hiron, about 2 o'clock on Tuesday, in a barn, in the Old Park, Warwick. He gave "leg bail," and outstripped his pursuers ; but a horse being procured, he was, after a chase of three miles, run down, and consigned to Warwick lock-up. Nearly all the stolen property was found upon him, and he declares that no prison can hold him, glorying in his many attempts to escape from them hitherto.

One day last week a baby was left by its mother, who resides at Pembroke, fast asleep in bed, while she proceeded with her domestic duties in another part of the house. In a short time after the child was heard crying, which pitiful noise arrested the attention of the parent, who at once went towards the spot where the infant lay; on approaching the bed, she discovered a rat, of a large size, in the act of devouring the face of her little one, which was now bleeding profusely, and the bedclothes were stained with blood. The rat when it saw the mother, turned upon her, and, for a moment, hissed defiance, but ultimately departed, leaping in an adjoining bed, where lay two other children asleep. From this place the rat could not be dislodged until two men came, when the rat was killed. The child was taken to a chemist to be dressed, and is progressing satisfactorily.—Haverfordwest Telegraph.

The Russian prisoners of war, in number 326, who have been confined in the Lewes war prison, have left that town for Portsmouth, for embarkation on board the Imperatrice. The station was crowded with townspeople to bid farewell to the prisoners, who were escorted to the train by the town band. The Russian officers have addressed a letter to the authorities at Lewes, thanking the people for their kindness and hospitality.

The London Economist makes a statement which is of considerable importance, with reference to financial prospects. It is, that the balance from various sources of revenue, up to the 21st of March, suffices to cover the balance of expenditure, namely, £22,000,000. From the relation of the Economist to the Government, says the Cork Examiner, this may be considered an official intimation ; and as such it differs from the statement recently circulated as to the deficit being so large as to require a continuance of the increased Income Tax for another year. Should the statement be correct, the public may be saved a renewel of this infliction.

The builder states that the Houses of Parliament, Sir Charles Barry's great work, are approaching completion. The whole outline of the clock tower is now seen, and the Victoria Tower is finished to the top of the parapet and foot of the turrets. These latter, however, will be 70 feet in height, and there will, further, be a flagstaff of great elevation to bear aloft the banner of England, when the monarch is present.

A paragraph has been circulated by several journals, says D'Israeli's organ, the Press, stating that Sir James Graham and Mr. Sidney Herbert were about to join the present ministry, in the course of a few days. The rumor is entirely without foundation. Sir James Graham is far too clever a man to commit himself so egregiously, and though Mr. Sidney Herbert is a most benevolent character, it would be carrying sentimentalism too far if we were to embark in a sinking vessel.

Mr. Jacob Herbert has retired from the Secretaryship of the Trinity House, after a servitude of 32 years in that office, and upwards of 50 years in the establishment. He is succeeded by the Assistant-Secretary, Mr. Peter Henry Berthon, who has been more than 30 years in the active service of the corporation.

The Queen has conferred the honor of knighthood upon William Henry Holmes, Esq., of the Civil Service, British Guiana.

The Eighty-second Anniversary of the Royal Human Society has been celebrated at the Freemason's Tavern, the Duke of Wellington in the chair.

Medals and testimonials were presented to the following : Rev. Waltar Thursby ; Mr. Francis Robert Ransome ; George Guest, a member of the Irish constabulary force stationed at Cork, whose gallantry deserved special commendation ; Alderman Hill, of Tamworth ; Mr. Robert Mason, jr., of Guilford ; Capt. Pengelley, R.N., and Mr. C. N. P. Portman, of H.M.S. Colossus ; Mr. W. H. Wilkes, jr., of Worcester ; Commander J. R. Woodruff, Admiralty Agent at Gibraltar ; and Mr. John C. W. Ellis, all of whom had been instrumental, under circumstances of great personal peril, in saving the lives of several fellow creatures. The case of George Guest, who in one day had rescued no less than three persons from watery graves, excited considerable interest. The Duke of Wellington complimented him on his bravery, and said that it was only equalled by the modesty and great propriety of demeanor which he that evening exhibited.

Alfred Howard, alias Allen, stated in the English papers to be "an American swell mobsman," was arrested at Liverpool just previous to the sailing of the Persia, on board that vessel. Telegraphic information was sent from London of the robbing of two gentlemen at the Great Western Hotel. Howard suited the description given. Having satisfied himself of the identity of this Mr. Alfred Scott, alias Mr. Allen, Inspector Scott approached him, and asked him if he was a passenger per the Persia, and, of course, was answered in the affirmative. Then attributing some complication of the luggage, he induced Alfred Howard to his cabin, when, having discovered where all his luggage was, he at once arrested him. Upon searching him Inspector Scott found upon his person a first-class ticket to New-York, and the following sums in cash—viz., 115½ sovereigns, 78 gold pieces of $20 each, 32 of $10, 34 of $5, and 2 of $2 1-2 each, all gold, $45 silver pieces, two quarter dollars, and 4s. in silver. In addition he had a large quantity of luggage on board.

Florence Nightingale has been gazetted as Directress-general of all hospitals in the British dominions. No nurses can for the future be appointed in any public hospital without her sanction.

The entire wealth of England is estimated at £3,700,000,000.

Three million five hundred thousand tons of iron are made in Great Britain every year, and 2,000,000 tons are exported.

A correspondent in Peel, Isle of Man, writes :—"A man named Thomas Megrattin died on the 11th of April at the house of a man named Johnston, who went to the clergyman and clerk of the church here, to pay for the loan of a bier to carry the remains to the Castle, the burial-place of the Catholic people. The bier was refused ; and I know no objection except the deceased being a Catholic. The widow, Elizabeth Megrattin, now left with five children, knew no one, I understand, in Peel, but Mr. Johnston ; and her eldest son now serving in the Crimea, she had no one to depend upon to see after the burial of her poor husband but this honest Irishman."

Mdlle. Rosalie, the famous equestrian, has died in Cheltenham, from the effects of a fall whilst performing.

Mr. Guthrie, one of the most eminent surgeons in Europe, died rather suddenly in London on May 1. He was seventy-one years of age.

The house which Palmer, the poisoner, occupied at Rugely, England, is to be opened as a tavern, with the sign of the "Strychnine Arms."

A shoemaker at Lowestoff, England, suddenly dropped down dead, from the excitement at unexpectedly meeting his son in the street, after his return from the Crimea.

A petition has been presented by the English convocation of clergy to the Queen, urging the necessity of more righteous laws against clergymen convicted of drunkenness and similar offences.

Presidential Facts and Rumors.

A new Democratic paper is announced in Boston. Its name is The Constitution, and the prospectus is backed up by a certificate from J. W. Beard, assistant-treasurer U. S., Boston. It professes to be Washingtonian, Jeffersonian, and Jacksonian, and in the following paragraphs sufficiently indicates its presidential leanings :—"Believing, as we do, that no man has more earnestly endeavored to carry out the principles, or maintain with greater fidelity and firmness, the doctrines of the fathers of democracy, than the present Executive of the Union, we should be happy if the claims of Franklin Pierce for re-nomination for election to the position he now fills, with so much honor to himself and advantage to the best interests of the country, are recognized by the Democratic Convention which meets in June next, but the nomination of that Convention shall receive our concurrence and hearty support. With Know-Nothingism we shall maintain constant war. The principles of that party, if carried out, would be destructive of our national prosperity, and make our country a bye-word and a reproach."

At the afternoon session of the Pennsylvania Native Americans, at Harrisburg, General William F. Small presented a series of resolutions ratifying the nomination of Fillmore and Donelson as President and Vice-President, denouncing the Administration for repealing the Compromise of 1850 and the Missouri Compromise, and condemning the Kansas-Nebraska act as a breach of faith and an outrage on the people. Gov. Johnston offered a substitute, approving of the action of the delegates who retired from the Philadelphia National Convention, and calling a convention to be held in New-York on the 12th of June. Considerable debate ensued, when R. C. Smith called the previous question, which was sustained, yeas 33, nays 22. The substitute was then rejected and the original resolutions adopted.

The Madison (Wis.) Argus and Democrat is strongly in favor of Douglas, and "shall be surprised if he is not nominated at Cincinnati. If," it continues, "another man, aside from Douglas, would suit the Democracy as well, we would be suited too. We think they would like Buchanan pretty well. He is a brave, noble old man. He "likes the noise of the Democracy." The Democracy would like him. Four weeks ago, had the Democratic National Convention then transpired, he would doubtless have been nominated.

But the commonest observer must be aware that the current, within that time, has turned strongly in favor of Mr. Douglas. His giant speech in the Senate, in defense of his Kansas policy, the gradual conviction which is taking possession of the public mind that it was the true policy of the country, and that by falsehood only has it been assailed, are rapidly making him the prominent Democratic candidate, whether politicians will it so or not."

The Wisconsin says, however, that the Argus and Democrat has "two first choices" for President. To which the latter replies that "t he Wisconsin is not so limited. It has as many as you please, gentlemen, but one at a time."

We received a letter to-day, says the editor of the Mirror, from Buzzard's Roost, Alabama, in which the writer proposes to subscribe to the Weekly Mirror, provided we will advocate the claims of Fillmore for the Presidency. O that Almighty Dollar! It tempts us sorely. But, perhaps, if we wait until all the candidates are in the field some generous patriot will offer to subscribe for two copies as a bribe on the other side of Mason & Dixon's Line. Nous verrons.

The casual memorials, says the Evening Post, which Mr. Buchanan drops along the way, in the progress of his pilgrimage to Washington, are worth examining. They show what kind of expectations, phantasies, and dreams he is feeding upon, and to a careful student they reveal the general condition of his political system. In his late speech at Baltimore, he has been rather more demonstrative than usual.

His compliments to Lord Baltimore show that he does not share Mr. Fillmore's intolerance of Roman Catholics or of adopted citizens,

Albert Pike, late a leading Know Nothing of Arkansas, says in his letter of withdrawal that, "under present circumstances, Millard Fillmore will not be able to carry a single county in the South."

The New Hampshire Know Nothing State Council met and passed resolutions repudiating Fillmore and Donelson, which were unanimously adopted.

The Massachusetts Know Nothing State Council met at Boston and, after organizing, split upon a resolution repudiating Fillmore and Donelson.

The State Convention of Maryland instructed their delegates by a vote of 81 to 9, to support Buchanan in the Cincinnati Convention.

Delegates favorable to Buchanan have been elected from New-Jersey.

The "Old South State" has concluded to send delegates to Cincinnati. Pierce men were elected.

The steam frigate Susquehanna sailed on the 15th from Philadelphia for San Juan del Norte. Capt. Sands commanns her, and carries out important despatches to Col. Wheeler, our Minister at Granada. In the course of a fortnight there will be in the harbor of San Juan the steamers Susquehanna, Fulton and Merrimac, and the frigate Potomac. The sloop-of-war St. Mary's, now at Panama, will remain there as long as her presence is deemed necessary for our interests in that quarter.

Answers to Correspondents.

Mr. Meagher takes this, the earliest opportunity, to express his very grateful and most cordial acknowledgments to the Rev. Mr. Sheridan, of St. Paul's, Philadelphia, to his many Reverend friends of that city and neighborhood, to Charles McDonough, Esq., of South street, and the gentlemen of the Lecture Committee, of which Mr. McDonough was Chairman, for their genial and generous hospitality, of which, during the last week, he had the honor and happiness to partake. The brightness of the season, the object of the Lecture, the gay, familiar interchange of friendly sentiments at the social board, the beautiful points of interest which were so pleasantly visited—everything concurred to render his reeent experience of Philadelphia, and the good and true men who have their homes there, delightful in the extreme, and to stamp it in glowing colors on his memory.

Such episodes sweetly and brilliantly intervene in the rude, dusty, worrying battle of life. Reviving many fond hopes, many good and holy feelings, many memories full of music, flowers, and sunshine, they come to recompense us for a world of bitter or dark adversities, and re-invigorate us for better and stronger efforts in the opening grand future. Our day with Robert Tyler was singularly pleasant, and will forever associate his name in our mind with household scenes of exquisite goodness, worth, and beauty. Long known to us in public life, he is now known to us by those features which the glare of a political career invariably eclipse, and sometimes—but not in his case—injure. With a hand and a heart warmed with the recollection of the visit we allude to, we shall look forward earnestly to the time we can, in person, pledge our truth to these written thanks, acknowledgments, and remembrances.

Part 2nd of the Lecture for the Catholic orphans will be published next week. The Personal Recollections will then be resumed, and continued without intermission.

The lecture on St. Patrick's Day (the first part of which we publish today) was first delivered at the Academy of Music, for the benefit of the Roman Catholic Orphans of New-York, and then at Yorkville, in aid of the funds of the Society of St. Lawrence O'Toole, and, last of all, last Wednesday night, in the National Hall, Philadelphia, for the benefit of the parochial schools of St. Paul's. The second part (as we elsewhere said) appears in our next. Immediately after which it will be published in pamphlet form, dedicated to Robert Tyler, and all the copies placed in the hands of the Rev. Mr. Sheridan, of St. Paul's, for the benefit of his schools, or for any other object he thinks fit.

Capt. Markey, of the Ninth Regt., N. Y. S. M., sent us a communication two or three weeks ago, correcting a statement which appeared in our Memoir of that Regiment. We sincerely regret that the pressure of many claims upon our time compelled us to postpone this acknowledgment. Capt. Markey, we trust, will kindly forgive any apparent want of courtesy our delay may have occasioned. It is impossible for us, however, to insert the numerous communications with which, on this subject of military organization, we are continually favored. And as for giving all the corrections sent to us, were we to do so, nothing would be right.

Just as we are going to press, we learn that Dr. E. D. Connery and others on a committee representing many highly respectable gentlemen, have tendered a public dinner to Joseph Purcell, Esq., on his return from Ireland. Next week it will gratify us to publish the correspondence, which is alike worthy of all the parties.

An important communication from Colonel Oliver Byrne appears in our next. We insert it with great pleasure, and beg the gallant Colonel to accept our friendliest acknowledgments of the honor he does us, in selecting our columns for "his first and last communication to any newspaper." All military men—especially all those bound for Nicaragua, or any other country where the fight for Freedom is on foot—will, we are sure, be deeply interested and greatly served by Colonel Byrne's letter.

We have in type a long letter from our Dublin Correspondent. It appears in our next.

Correspondents addressing us on mere personal matters, and desiring to see their sentiments in print, must put their own proper names to the communications, or else they go, as some of them have already gone, in to the oblivious depth of our waste basket. Gentlemen reflecting on others, must come out and show themselves, and manfully take the consequences of their strong language, or else be delivered (their precious productions we mean) to the rag-picker.

Our absence, the whole of last week in Philadelphia, will account for the absence of a chapter of the Personal Recollections, and other original matter.

"J. B." (Pittsfield), sends us the following stanza, which, if rough and ready, has the ring of the sterling metal about it:

To divide or enslave us let England come o'er,
With France as her ally, to land on our shore;
She'll find that the freedom we fought for of yore
We'll fight for, and die for, and bleed for once more!
Then hurrah for each man that is truthful and true—
The native, the German, the Irishman, too;
Where'er be his country—whate'er be his creed
We care not—for Freedom he's willing to bleed!

"A Leighlan lad."—Dr. Cahill is a man of noble appearance. Handsome, tall, largely built, with an abundance of flowing black hair, and a voice of the most musical power, he has all the natural advantages which a popular orator, to be thoroughly effective, should possess. As a lecturer, his success is incomparable. He far surpasses such men as Lover (Sam's brother), Sir Robert Kane, and many others of equal note. As to his politics, we do not consider them very reliable or elevated. All through the Repeal agitation, he stood aloof. Indeed, he criticized the agitation rather scornfully, and in private expressed no very warm devotion to O'Connell. For this, however, we heard him assign a pretty sufficient excuse. It was at dinner, at Dr. Foran's, the Catholic Bishop of Waterford, one day in January, '45. He said he had witnessed, over and over again, the cruel vengeance with which the tenants, and especially the Forty-shilling freeholders, had been visited by the Tory landlords, in consequence of the former voting at the bidding of O'Connell, for Repeal and other candidates. His heart fairly bled, he said, at the thought of all he had seen the people suffer, and he would never be a party to a recurrence of what they had endured. As a scholar, he is richly accomplished. In history and science, he is truly opulent and glowing. In social life, he is positively delightful. His anecdotes are exhaustless. He pours them out with the most copious fluency, and strews them with the rarest flowers of wit, eloquence, and mirth. His letters, however, to my Lord This and my Lord That, are perfectly appalling.

"Neutral."—The foreign enlistment question has not been brought to a satisfactory conclusion. You will find a compendious statement of the whole affair in the April and May numbers of the U. S. Democratic Review. The conclusion in this month's issue is very seriously satirical and bitterly truthful. The writer regards Mr. Crampton as the English Viceroy resident at Washington, for the purpose of administering English affairs in America independently of the Government of the United States. Lord Clarendon, the writer adds, takes particular care that there should be no possibility of mistake or misapprehension in the matter, and "therefore transmit her Majesty's full endorsement and commission to Mr. Crampton, as her Majesty's Viceroy and Lieutenant-General in her revolted colonies of North America." I entirely approve, says Lord C. to the Viceroy, of your proceedings "with respect to the proposed enlistment, in the Queen's service, of foreigners and British subjects in the United States. The Review concludes its able article with the conviction "that the American Administration, which rests satisfied with anything short of a complete atonement for the past, and guarantee for the future, will fail to secure either the confidence or approbation of the American people."

"T. A."—Wright's History of Ireland is altogether wrong. The name of the author is a mere libel on truthfulness. People should not be led to purchase it because it has pictures. A blank book is of much more value than Mr. Wright's wretched compilation.

Our correspondents, especially our irritable poetic friends, must bear with us. We have marked for early consideration, "Home Thoughts," by B., "Dear Cahermone," by F. O'R.

Declined.—"The Declaration," from the French. We agree with our correspondent that the author was "a very fit candidate for a Bedlam House." "J. T. K." (Watertown). Too redundant; the same thing is said over and over without any visible improvement. "James" has taken our criticism on a former favor in good spirit. That is well; the emendations he has sent us, however, are not so well. "T. C.'s" (Syracuse) "Impromptu" looks rather premeditated.

MR. TIMOTHY EDWARD HUGHES, has received our written authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "Irish News," throughout the New-England States.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

☞ We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 24, 1856.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The Message of President Pierce, transmitted to both houses of Congress on the 15th inst., has thrown a fresh element of agitation into the troublous political waters—Presidential, Central American, British—that lash, and fret, and foam about the Capitol.

Its appearance, all the more remarkable from the antecedents which led to it; and its effect the greater, from the general belief that on the subject the President had so cornered himself as to preclude the possibility, even if the attempt was thought probable, of taking or creating any popular or expansive position.

But this is an age of startling effects; and the Message is a brilliant antithesis to the bowing out of Col. French and the activity of District Attorney McKeon. With the antagonistic movements of both gentlemen, however, in their respective relations to the Executive, a very constitutional compatibility is argued in and for the Message.

After the dismissal of Col. French, the recognition of Padre Vijil was not anticipated; but the President explains why it should have been expected.

After the seizure and serious discomfitures of the gallant "filibusteros," the recognition of the government made by their party—for there was no government at the time in Nicaragua until General Walker gave it one—could not enter into the dreams of the most hopeful; but President Pierce forcibly reconciles both, shows that the prestige of the United States as a Republic—which does not care a whit about the direct line, nor peep into executive bed-chambers to watch over the legitimate inception of governments—demanded such recognition; that, in fact, the "established policy of the United States" could allow of no other action.

Between the inconsistencies which readily suggest themselves, of the President's past and present conduct, he apparently swings in an unsatisfactory manner; but on this head he clears himself from bidding Signor Marcoleta adieu, and receiving Col. French, by stating that the latter would have been welcome but that he was "of that class of persons" known through the reporters as "filibusters;" which incited a doubt as to the information he brought concerning the Government of Nicaragua. A "special exigency"—which shall be hereafter alluded to, in conjunction with and apparently superseding the established policy of the United States, induces the present recognition of the Walker-Rivas government of Nicaragua.

Having said so much by way of preface, we devote our leading columns to a consideration of this document, which will manage to revivify an excitement it (of course) designed somewhat to quell.

Opening with a reference to the importance of Central America to all maritime nations, and especially to the United States since the accession of California and the settlement of the Washington and Oregon Territories,—the Message alludes to the measures taken to insure suitable means of commercial transit by canal, railway, or otherwise, across the Isthmus.

Notwithstanding the paramount interest of the United States over any European Government, in the security and freedom of the projected lines of travel by the way of Nicaragua and Honduras, still, the American Executive did not, through any desire of "territorial aggrandizement," or even of "exclusive advantage, either of communication or commerce," yield to opportunities which presented themselves for the attainment of such advantages, "by peaceful means and with full and free assent of those who alone had any legitimate authority in the matter." Upon considerations of domestic and foreign policy those opportunities were unrecognized.

The old enemy of the Republic, however, did not exhibit so disinterested a front. Its recognition of the rights of others was less balmy than that of Uncle Samuel, which surprised (as it should not) the well-intentioned trustees of that old gentleman's property and character.

"It was with surprise and regret, therefore," says the President, "that the United States learned, a few days after the conclusion of the treaty of Gaudaloupe Hidalgo, by which the United States became, with the consent of the Mexican Republic, the rightful owners of California, and thus invested with augmented special interest in the political condition of Central America, that a military expedition under the authority of the British Government had landed at San Juan del Norte, in the State of Nicaragua, and taken forcible possession of that port, the necessary terminus of any canal or railway across the Isthmus within the Territories of Nicaragua. It did not diminish the unwelcomeness to us of this act on the part of Great Britain, to find that she assumed to justify it on the ground of an alleged protectorship of a small and obscure band of uncivilized Indians, whose proper name even had become lost to history—who did not constitute a State capable of Territorial sovereignty, either in fact or in right, and all political interest in whom and in the territory they occupied, Great Britain had previously renounced, by successive treaties with Spain, when Spain was sovereign of the country, and subsequently with independent Spanish America.

Still, these facts could not wipe out the "many and powerful ties and mutual interests by which Great Britain and the United States are associated;" and the latter, with a beautiful elongation of benevolence, "proceeded in earnest good faith" to strengthen the "bonds of peace" between them, by negotiating a convention, to the correct reading of which six years of "fruitless efforts" have been devoted already, without arriving at a mutual understanding as to its intents and purposes.

Touching the unsettled condition of the Spanish American Republics, and the chances they afford to speculative or hungry nations, the President refers to the ease with which we could annex and absorb them, as England and France "colonize" and "civilize" Asia and Africa. Justified, as such annexation could be, by the stability insured to the territories annexed, the President, with evident pride, looks upon the opposite action of the United States as a memorable instance of self-denial, for the sake of keeping up a gentlemanly character before the European powers.

Under these circumstances, the President "has never failed to exert all the authority in him vested to repress such enterprises," and if he has been "successfully evaded," it was not his fault.

With such preliminary remarks touching the past of our relations with Nicaragua, the Message comes to the more immediate necessities of the case.

Nicaragua derives its present prominent importance from geographical position. A regular inter-oceanic transit route has been established by the American citizens in it, and the principal drawback on its prosperity arises from the occupation of its only Atlantic port, San Juan, by the British, and the "disturbing authority, set up and sustained by the same Power, in a portion of its territory." By this Protectorship, the domestic sovereignty of the territory is rendered but the enacting of a drunken farce, its port robbed of revenue, and its unsettled land made the prey of their own wild luxuriance.

"In these circumstances of the political debility of the Republic of Nicaragua, and when its inhabitants were exhausted by long continued civil war between parties, neither of them strong enough to overcome the other, or permanently maintain internal tranquillity, one of the contending factions of the Republic invited the assistance and co-operation of a small body of citizens of the United States from the State of California, whose presence, as it appears, put an end at once to civil war, and restored apparent order throughout the Territory of Nicaragua, with a new administration, having at its head a distinguished individual, by birth a citizen of the Republic, D. Patricio Rivas, as its provisional President."

"It is the established policy of the United States to recognize all governments without question of their source or organization. * * * We do not go behind the fact of a foreign government exercising actual power, to investigate questions of legitimacy. We do not inquire into the causes which may have led to a change of government. To us it is indifferent whether a successful revolution has been aided by foreign intervention or not. * * * All these matters we leave to the people and public authorities of the particular country to determine; and their determination, whether it be by positive action or by ascertained acquiescence, is to us a sufficient warranty of the legitimacy of the new government. * * * It is the more imperatively necessary to apply this rule to the Spanish-American Republics, in consideration of the frequent and not seldom anomalous changes of organization or administration which they undergo, and the revolutionary nature of most of these changes, of which the recent series of revolutions in the Mexican Republic is an example, where five revolutionary governments have made their appearance in the course of a few months, and been recognized successively, each as the political power of that country, by the United States. When, therefore, some time since, a new minister from the Republic of Nicaragua presented himself, bearing the commission of President Rivas, he must and would have been received as such, unless he was found, on inquiry, subject to personal exception, but for the absence of satisfactory information upon the question whether President Rivas was in fact the head of an established government of the Republic of Nicuragua, doubt as to which arose, not only from the circumstances of his avowed association with armed emigrants recently from the United States, but that the proposed minister himself was of that class of persons, and not otherwise or previously a citizen of Nicaragua."

Colonel French's citizenship appears indisputable. The message admits that a party of Americans "were invited" to uphold one of the rival parties, and by their aid—and in fact by them alone, as is well known—the Americans were left to bear the brunt of the first and most momentous movements. Peace was restored, and an administration formed by the junction of both parties. Of this administration Col. French was a member, being "Minister of the Hacienda;" which fact appears sufficient guaranty of citizenship to him, even as to Gen. Walker who made it; or Rivas, the choice of whom was at their option.

To resume:

"Another minister from the Republic of Nicaragua has now presented himself, and has been received as such, satisfactory evidence appearing that he represents the government de facto, and, so far as such exists, the government de jure of that Republic. That reception, while in accordance with the established policy of the United States, was likewise called for by most imperative special exigencies, which require that this government shall enter at once into diplomatic arrangements with that of Nicaragua. In the first place a difference has occurred between the government of President Rivas and the Nicaragua Transit Company, which involves the necessity of inquiry into the rights of citizens of the United States; who allege that they have been aggrieved by the acts of the former, and claim protection and redress at the hands of their government. In the second place, the inter-oceanic communication by the way of Nicaragua is effectually interrupted, and the persons and property of unoffending private citizens of the United States in that country require the attention of their government. Neither of these objects can receive due consideration without resumption of diplomatic intercourse with the government of Nicaragua."

This "exigency," then, it would seem is the real warrant for the recognition of the Walker-Rivas government; which is rather humiliating, as it is an avowal that what the "established policy of the United States" could not recommend, the astuteness, or boldness, or both, of the Nicaraguan government has forced upon the American Executive. The late disturbances at Panama, which have obstructed the New Granada route, rendered this decision of immediate necessity.

The Message will make its mark; and, all minor considerations out of the question is clear, and "better late than never." Its appearance has been as a bombshell among the politicians. It touches more or less all available topics of international interest. Some parties credit the Message entirely to the reception of Mr. Buchanan since his return. Others think that Senator Douglas's defence of Gen. Walker inspired the President to a more official effort; while others, yet, look upon it as a bold attempt to "take the wind out of" Gen Cass. All of those surmises and rumors bear upon the Presidential contest. We do not adopt any of them. We welcome the Message, as we believe it will tend to sustain brave men and republican stability in that glorious spot of earth, which only needs an admixture of American faith and energy to be what old Peter Huylin called it, "The Paradise of Mahomet."

THE MURDER AT WILLARD'S.

We have purposely refrained until now from alluding to this horrible event. Strongly as we felt, we thought it better not to anticipate the opinion of the press at large. That opinion has been fully and boldly expressed. From one end of the country to the other, an indignant denunciation of the brutal perpetrator of the crime has broken out. Everywhere, there is the deepest sympathy for Keating. Everywhere, we find execrations heaped upon the head of Herbert. The American press has in the noblest manner proved itself the champion of the innocent and the chastiser of the guilty.

So loud and coarse have been the opprobrious words and slanders flung, these two years past, upon the Irish in America; with so bitter an ingratitude have they been pronounced unworthy to share the privileges and honors of the republic; so fiercely have they been threatened with proscription; that we were somewhat fearful lest, in this case, justice would not be done between the parties. We confess ourselves grievously mistaken. Justice has been done. Prompt, rigorous justice has been done.

Poor Keating lies there in his red grave, and thousands of manly voices all over the country bewail his fate. Herbert hangs upon a gibbet at the gate of the Capitol, amid the hootings of the people.

The event teaches two great lessons. It warns the arrogant and brutal, that the poor man to whom God has assigned an humble lot in the community, is not to be struck down by the murderer with impunity. It warns them that the spirit of the Republic watches over the lowliest of her children, and for every wrong done them that a terrible retribution shall be exacted.

On the other hand, the public expressions which have followed full and fast upon the murder, should satisfy, even the most timid or suspicious of our countrymen, that, though factionists may rail at them, deriding their creed, race, and poverty, there is no true reason for them to be alarmed. On the contrary, they should rest convinced that the laws, the constitution, and above all, the chivalrous and generous spirit of the people of the United States, will see them protected, honored, and avenged.

Herbert may not die by the hand of the Sheriff. But he lives to walk the streets, and journey by boat and cars, and sit at the public table of the hotel, with the damning brand of Cain upon his forehead. The public opinion of America, expressed through her press, has marked him with the blood of Thomas Keating. The brow on which it has been stamped shall never be white again upon this earth.

SOMETHING IN THE WIND.

The recognition of the Nicaraguan Minister, the Padre Vijil, by the government at Washington is a happy event. It places the independence of one of the most beautiful countries in the world beyond all further dispute. It insures to the intrigue and covetousness of England, in that quarter, a prompt arrest.

The sailing of the Susquehanna to San Juan, is another event of an aspect equally agreeable. It will accelerate the results which the former event clearly guarantees.

That it was full time for the Federal executive to interfere, no one honestly questions. The overhauling of the Orizaba by the Captain of the Euridice, and the other proceedings of the British officers at the mouth of the San Juan, called for the speediest and boldest action on the part of the United States' authorities.

The affair of the Bay Islands—the hot denial given last week in the Capitol, by Senator Clayton, to an alleged statement of Mr. Crampton, in reference to Ruatan—the refusal to withdraw Mr. Crampton—the intercepted letters at the mouth of the Seripiqui—the reported landing of several hundred muskets from Jamaica at Aspinwall, and the strong suspicion that the English authorities in Jamaica have secretly expressed their sympathy with those of New Granada, concerning the recent infernal massacre at Panama—a crowd of circumstances at this moment conspire to render the relations of America and Great Britain most precarious. There's something in the wind!

GAVAN DUFFY IN AUSTRALIA.

Our Dublin Correspondent sends us full particulars of Mr. Duffy's reception in Melbourne. They shall appear in our next. A subscription was commenced immediately on his landing, in order to purchase him a splendid estate; a public dinner was given him, and addresses from Sydney and other places presented. An ovation such as this must surely more than recompense him for all the vexations, worrying, and bitter disappointments of his political life in Ireland. Under the genial, sweet skies of Australia, may he find, and long enjoy, the happiness denied him at home.

MINISTERIAL MISERIES.

There is a humor in impudence when well carried out, that even the most stolid must admire. If one cannot respect the vehicle, we must certainly stop and commend the audacity that drives it. In our day audacity is one of the fine arts, subject to much cultivation; and no better proof of the attention paid to its development could be instanced, than that furnished by the pith of a Washington dispatch to one of our city cotemporaries, which states that "all the foreign legations have determined not to recognise Padre Vijil socially or officially."

The fun of the thing must not overcome us. We must retain a little vitality to look earnestly at it.

That the report is founded on fact we do not question. Unmistakeable evidences—inuendoes and "devilish sly" hints—flood the papers like note-marks—stars and daggers—all of which refer to Padre Vijil. Printed whispers, audible "asides," they are, which inform us that the Nicaraguan Padre has been "cold-shouldered already"—"put in Coventry"—that "foreign legations" will have the courage to look every where but at him when he approaches; that in fact they know what is good for this country better than its Government; and are determined to make a "telling display."

The American Executive has received Padre Vijil—good! Does this ministerial clique mean to usurp the place of the Cabinet, and throw the influence of that toleration which guarantees them as gentlemen to society at Washington into the scale against the Executive, to prove themselves the opposite of that which their residence near the seat of the United States Government recommends them as being?

They must have an audacity that Guiseppe Balsamo—"thaumaturgic moralist and swindler," as Carlyle states him to have been, would have worshipped, or that might have saved Barnum. It is refreshing really to behold such European assumption bursting forth in this bright and promising spring-time.

In the midst of all that is beautiful, the warm grasp of nature is not niggard. Its sun hides not from the weeds no more than from the flowers, but the former, like their human brethren, encouraged by recognition, leap up with vulgar forwardness, until they actually appear gigantic beside the delicate and highly favored offspring of Heaven's tenderest emotions. But rudeness is always gigantic.

We understand that the "foreign legation" taciturnity is incited in the first place by Mr. Crampton, who is ambitious to add the vice-royalty of the United States to his protectorship of Mosquito; and carried out under his instruction by Mr. Marcoleta.

Now it would be well for both of those patriots not to add an obliviousness of the position they at present occupy, to the forgetfulness of the respect due to a minister accredited to and received by the United States. Probably they think it time to forget themselves when the people of this country remember them so well to their disadvantage.

The "English Minister has been convicted of the most decided prevarication—of direct falsehood, as the Democratic Review states, and as Mr. Clayton in the Senate has distinctly charged. Using his position to deteriorate and outrage international good faith, he is broadly accused of having taken advantage of his friendly intimacy with the Secretary of State to deceive that official as to his participation in the foreign enlistment business; and not having been able to clear himself, is on the eve of a dignified though ignominious dismissal.

Certainly Padre Vijil is in good fortune to escape the attention of the head and front of the "foreign legations."

As for poor Mr. Marcoleta, his excitement may be somhwhat excused; though his giving the "cold shoulder" is rather ludicrous. Why, it is himself who has received it! And apparently it was time. He should remember that he has been receiving "distinguished consideration," and other diplomatic perquisites, on false pretences for some time. He has been a minister without a ministry. He has represented no government, for the administration that sent him is now as unknown as the builders of the pyramids. The President's Message settles the point. It clearly states that Walker made peace and a government, which it was the policy of the United States to recognise: and Mr. Marcoleta has taken great pains to show that he was not sent by Walker's government. Well, then, what has he represented, besides himself, these six months? What?

These "foreign legationists" would do well to keep their temper. Nothing so becomes such men "as mild behavior and and humility." Their hungry antipathy to Padre Vijil reminds us of the twenty wasps that visited the cage of Gulliver in Brobdingnag. They came flying about him, buzzing louder than the drones of as many bagpipes, batting him about the head, confounding him with their noise, and giving him great terror. He took courage however, slew a few of them, and the others decamped. He took out the stings of his victims, and ultimately carried them home as trophies and curiosities, which Padre Vijil may well do with the stings of the "foreign legations;" for certainly their abuse and non-recognition is a trophy to him, as it is something curious to the "rest of mankind."

MILITARY MEMOIRS.

THE MONTGOMERY RIFLEMEN, PATERSON, N. J.

This company was organized in March, 1850, by a few young patriotic citizens, in the city of Paterson. After a great many meetings they came together and elected the following officers: Captain, S. H. Wall; 1st Lieutenant, John Jordan; 2d Lieutenant, Richard Burke; 3d Lieutenant, James Turner.

The company at this time numbered about 40 good men. After the election of officers they wrote to Trenton to secure their arms and equipments; the Quarter-Master General answered that before he could send arms, it would be necessary for the officers to be regularly commissioned, which gave the company considerable trouble (as there were no staff officers in Passaic county,) and in their absence there was no person qualified to hold an election. It was necessary, therefore, to wait until the Legislature met, in order to get a bill passed authorizing the Governor in the absence of field officers to appoint a suitable person to hold elections and send a warrant to that effect to the commander-in-chief, and have the officers commissioned according to law; all of which was done by this company, after considerable preliminary meetings, trips to head-quarters and petitioning for the passage of such a law. Having waited about six months, they succeeded in getting the arms and equipments and having their officers duly commissioned according to law—(the only commissioned company at that time in the whole brigade.) During the several months spent in getting the officers commissioned, many of the members of the company left it, as well as some of the officers, so that it became necessary to hold an election for Lieutenants, which they did immediately and succeeded in the promotion of privates C. H. O'Neill as 1st Lieutenant, F. Donnelly 2nd Lieutenant, W. Archdeacon 3d Lieutenant. The officers and the privates then went to work with a good will, and in the short space of two months, after receiving their arms and equipments, paraded on the 4th of July, with 30 men in full uniform, which consisted of dark green frock coat, dark blue pants with buff stripe, U. S. belt and plates, with large felt hats trimmed with buff cord and tassel and black plume, green epaulettes with brass crescent.

The company were composed of young, manly mechanics, all American citizens, principally Irish. They received great praise for their grand military appearance, soldier-like conduct, &c., &c. They made but three parades, and they were all in the first four months, under their first Captain.

The ladies of Paterson presented the company with a magnificent silk American flag, which the company bear to this day. They have made several parades under the new command, and have on all occasions received marked praise for their drilling, discipline, unanimity of good, feeling on duty and off. In street finery they are considered the best company in the State, and equal to any in the school of the soldier, company or battalion. They number about 45, and are all young, smart, active, intelligent and temperate men. They met with a loss a few weeks since, in consequence of their Capt., C. H. O'Neill, commencing business in Jersey City. It was necessary for him to remove there, which leaves the office vacant. The names of the officers are—1st Lieut., J. Agnew; 2nd Lieut., F. McClary; 3d Lieut., P. Chapman, either of whom are qualified to fill the office of Captain, and either of whom would reflect honor and credit on their command. The company is now in good condition, and is held in high esteem by the public. Number 40 men.

Literature.

An Address Delivered for the Benefit of the Roman Catholic Orphans of New-York.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY—IRISH MEMORIES—THEIR SIGNIFICANCE AND BEAUTY—THEIR HARMONY WITH THE REPUBLIC. PART I.

Near the city of Florence, in the shadow of the mountains of Else, there lived, many generations back, a young workman who was known in the valley of the Arno as Paolo, the Young Campanero. His craft was beautiful and most noble. He cast bells for the towers of church and convent, and made the air of Italy, from Etruria to the Alps, musical with the harmonies he had wrought. But there were eight with silver tongues which surpassed in purity and depth of tone all the others he had fashioned. These he dedicated to the Church of our Lady, which, on a cliff, in the midst of myrtles, olive-trees, and vines, overlooked the valley in which he lived, and loved, and worked. Divine almost were the raptures which the sound of these bells ever woke within him. Night and day, in breathless ecstacy, he drank in their music, until all about him there came the fragrance and the visions of a land brighter even than that of his dear Italy.

Years pass. The church on the cliff is in ruins. The vines have been trampled. The white blossoms of the myrtle have been made red. There is no cottage now in the valley of the Arno, in the shadow of the mountains of Else. Sunrise, noon, and sunset, the birds in the desolate valley miss the grand voices of the eight sisters in the tower. War has passed through it in his chariot of fire, and with dripping hoofs his steeds have torn through and laid waste the corn-fields and gardens in the valley of the silver bells, and the robber has seized upon the bells, and, as the jewels of the slain, he has borne them away.

The Campanero, grown old, stands amid the wreck. His wife, the children of his loins, home, workshop, the glorious children of his handicraft, are gone. But the latter are not dead. Captives in a strange land, they are still somewhere resonant on earth. He will seek them out. With way-worn foot, and breaking heart, he will journey till he finds them.

Now he is on the shore of the Adriatic, listening for them there. Now, in the heart of Rome, worried with the tumultuous clangor of a thousand tongues, he watches for the tones which were the pride of his youth. Then, through the cities of Castile he wends his weary way, staying his steps wherever a tower or belfry renews his hope or exhilarates his search. So, too, through the ancient streets of the Flemish towns, from the cathedral where Rubens, in the glory of his achievements, sleeps, to that vault where the crown of Charlemagne still presses the fleshless brow, within which the dream of empire has been extinguished.

One evening he comes to anchor in the Shannon. It is an evening in spring. Not a ripple on the water—not a speck above. The noble river is at rest. The sweetest slumber that visits the soul of childhood could not be more calm So calm, so grand, so serene the picture, the old man dreams that it is Italy.

From out the smoke and mist of the old town of Limerick, the brown battlements of St. Mary's, the cathedral church, emerge. They expand. And as they expand, they grow more and more distinct. They seem to move nearer to the silent ship of the Campanero. His gray head is sunk upon his breast. He is in a trance, and Italy is his vision. Suddenly, from those brown battlements there bursts a tumult of the richest melody through the heavens! The old man starts, looks up with flashing eyes, claps his hands in a delirium of joy, gasps a prayer, and then falls back! The sailors run to him. He is dead! But his eyes are still fixed upon the brown battlements, from which came forth that glorious peal. He is dead—dead on the breast of an Irish river—and the bells he had wrought in the valley of the Arno, for the Church of our Lady on the cliff, announce that the workman of Florence has gone to clasp his wife and children to his heart in a land far brighter even than his loved Italy!

Of the deep emotional power, excited by sounds or scenes that have been familiar to us in our early days, we have recited to us, in that exquisite story of the Campanero, evidence the most touching. Elaborate essays, speeches the most impassioned, histories quickened with the spirit of the philosopher and colored with the genius of the painter, would fail to convey the impressions which that gentle story vividly imparts. Not less thrillingly than the song of the Lesbian lyre—not less sweetly than the rippling of the river of laurels, in the vale of Tempé—not less solemnly than a funeral chorus in the camp of the Arghives, does that story tell us, that love of home, love of all that belongs to home, love of all that makes the home of our childhood beautiful or dark, sad or happy, poor or prosperous, is the supreme passion, inexhaustible, invincible. Wealth cannot stifle; with all its excesses of vanity, fashion cannot dissipate; the inexorable appetite for per-centages and stocks fails to disease; poverty but deepens, spiritualizes, and renders still more intense, this imperishable love.

From its humanizing and holy influence, no condition of life is too lowly or too proud, too turbulent or too tame, too wretched or too opulent, to be exempt. In some it feebly stirs. In others it impetuously beats. In some it is a lingering sentiment. In others it is an unappeasible enthusiasm. Here it dwindles into a genteel respect for certain duties and observances. There it bursts into a boundless ecstacy, and divinely kindling arm, heart, and brain, instigates to victories the most splendid, or sacrifices the most sublime. In a word, everywhere on this earth it is the ruling passion, strong in death!

With almost every race, there is a day traditionally and impressively set apart for festivities and ceremonies in attestation of this love.

There is the American! What of him? What of his day? The sun rises from out those deep blue waters in which the Madeira and Azores—those warm islands of the orange and the grape—are rocked in sleep; and slowly coming on, and widening, and mounting higher—like an eternal truth spoken in obscurity at first, and then spreading itself among the people—lights up an empire whose frontiers are girt, whose highways are tracked, whose cities are signalled by stately shafts—pillars of pine—from which flies out the flag we stand and swear by—the Stars and Stripes—these symbolizing the red gashes taken in the war for freedom—the former being the inextinguishable indications of the Power above which blessed the struggle.

It is a brighter Sun than that of Austerlitz which comes up that morning. It is the Sun of Liberty which breaks upon the Fourth morning of July!

And there is Ireland! On what day does she rejoice? On what day does she proclaim herself in robes and wreaths of joy, with the golden cup glittering in her white hand, and her ancient name set in emeralds along her cincture, an elder sister among the nations? On what day do her children, wherever they may be, turn their faces towards her, and bow the head, and bend the knee, and then rise up, and in a chorus which clasps the earth invoke upon her the benediction of Him, whose cross, through ages of temptations, buffetings, and agonies, she has borne? In this mighty audience, where, as audible as the booming of the sea on the rocks where stands the Tower of Hook on the Wexford coast, I hear the great Irish heart pulsate, it is an idle use of words to put the question. You know—the city knows—America to where the Monroe doctrine throws its irrevocable veto and interdiction—Europe, through all its libraries, coffee-houses, colleges, senates, camps and palaces—India, wherever a white foot has been planted, or an English bayonet gleams—Australia, which out of a mist looms up one of the republican sovereignties of the future, and comes into the world with a sceptre of pure gold to strike down with the power of Democracy the palsied pretences of the Old World—all know, from the rising to the setting of the sun—all know that the Seventeenth day of March is the day of all days in the calendar of Ireland!

On that day, if one could look out upon the world from a height which would enable him to do so, what would he behold? He would behold the spectacle of a people, originally divided by feudalism as the rest of Europe were; then by the intrusion of royal plunderers, in the name of order and religion, a profane hypocrisy which still obtains; then by the malignant sagacity of Lord-deputies, Chief-secretaries, and others, setting county against county, family against family, house against house, and—worst of all! most ruinous of all! most execrable of all!—creed against creed, until it came to this, that between two altars, as between two camps faced with batteries, the country reeled to, rocked over, and then went down; stationed on a height commanding the circle of the world, this spectator would behold a people thus divided, thus broken, thus dispersed, rising from every isle, however lone—from every forest, however dense—from every swamp, however poisonous—from every city, whether Pontiff, Sultan, King, or People ruled it—he would behold the people, thus divided, thus broken, thus dispersed, with an electric sympathy uniting, in the same reminiscences rejoicing, in the same prayers conforming, in the same hopes exulting; and thus, though divided, though broken, though dispersed—as if convoked by the trumpet of the Archangel—re-appearing in an incalculable aggregate, which, it would seem, some great genius might localize, consolidate, and from an eternal rock perpetuate.

Who finds fault with this? Am I here, in this noble county, where everything is generous, and great and free, to vindicate that love, of which in the story mentioned to you at the commencement of these remarks, you have had an exemplification so impressive, and without which this world would be a heap of ignoble ashes, and history a shrivelled almanac? Am I here—here in this magnificent temple, dedicated to the Muse of Song, to vindicate that love, which—especially in Ireland whose melodies are immortal—finds through song its noblest utterance?

Is the the almighty dollarism of the day—insipid, sapless, crabbed, sordid, soulless—to eradicate this love, disperse its blossoms, and arrest its growth? They who would decry these beautiful memories and festivities, with their ejaculations of nonsense! trash! nuisance!—these bloodless and Godless levellers would, if they had the power, convert the Jerusalem of St. John into a railway station, without benches, and no smoking allowed; or feeling it against their grain to let so much desirable real estate run innocently to waste, would sink a shaft in Gethsemane for coal, or dig in Paradise for gold.

But we hear it said, by gentlemen who pride themselves on taking practical views, and inculcating common sense, and who sedulously affect an English tone in their very learned, polite, and dainty disquisitions, we hear it said, that Ireland is not worth remembering. We hear it said, with a compassionate suavity which might be endurable but for the sneaking docility to English opinions which accompanies it; we hear it said, that Ireland has had nothing in the past for her children to point to, and with pride enumerate. We hear it said, that she has had Fairies, and Leperchauns, and Banshees, but no scientific rotation of crops, no sarsaparilla, no Russ pavement which in all weather keeps horses from slipping, no cockroach and rat exterminator, no Paphian lotion, no cough candy, no wooden clocks, hams and nutmegs, no rocking-chairs or fire-annihilators. We hear it said, that it is only now she is beginning to think of thinking to set about to try to do something; only now putting forth the energies which realize riches and consolidate prosperity; only now exhibiting the intellect which is the life of a nation, and in history encircles its gray head with an inextinguishable splendor.

Ireland not worth remembering? No great names? No great achievements? No splendors that endure? Is that the fact—the visitation—the decree? What said Dr. Johnson—the great Samuel—the friend of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Garrick, Hogarth, Mackintosh, and the infallible oracle of them all? Writing to Charles O'Connor, of Ballinagar, the distinguished Irish antiquarian, he says: "I have long wished that Irish literature should be cultivated, for it would be most acceptable to those who are most curious, either in the origin of nations or the affinities of languages, to be informed of a people so ancient, and once so illustrious."

Ireland not worth remembering? No great names? No great achievements? No splendors that endure? Is that the fact—the visitation—the decree?

What of Barry, of whose paintings the author of the Pleasures of Hope has said that Michael Angelo himself would not have been ashamed, and of whose Archangel at the gates of Paradise, Canova declared, that Rome—Rome! possessed nothing superior of its kind. What of Maclise—with a pencil true as a sunbeam—the grandest painter of the human form? What of Burton, whose Helen Fawcit, in the Antigone of Sophocles, even when unfinished, was so beautiful, that Davis, with an exquisite sensitiveness, begged it should be left so, lest a touch should obliterate some excellence. What of Samuel Forde, who was to Ireland what Murillo was to Spain?

Ireland not worth remembering! No great names? No great achievements? No splendors that endure? Is that the fact—the visitation—the decree?

Go to the Cathedral of Carlow, and in the lofty aisle you will behold the figure of a great Bishop in his robes—erect, majestic, calm—standing firmly on the earth, and with his right arm uplifted, pointing with a sublime confidence to Heaven. His left arm gently presses the neck of a beautiful, sorrow-stricken, heart-broken woman, who, with head bowed down, and big tears bubbling from her large spiritual eyes, kneels on one knee beside him. She leans upon a harp, the strings of which are broken. A mural crown presses the mournful head, and on the zone, in gilt letters, you read the name of Erin. It is the name of the great Dr. Doyle, Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin. The artist is John Hogan, whose Dead Christ is a mystery of Art—who has thrown the human figure into positions unknown to the ancient sculptors—and who, honored as no native of the British isles ever was before or since, was invested with the insignia of Raphael by the Virtuosi of the Pantheon.

Ireland not worth remembering? No great names? No great achievements? No splendors that endure? Is that the fact—the visitation—the decree?

What of the resplendent line of writers, in every variety of literature and science, from which the names of Swift and Maturin, Hamilton and Kane, Mangan and Maginn, Griffin, Banim Lover, with an irrepressible brilliancy irradiate? What of, Goldsmith, of whose Vicar of Wakefield a German critic wrote, that if you woke up a thousand years hence, you would find the Vicar still alive! What of Moore, the vibrations of whose lyre shall never cease whilst the human heart has sympathies for the oppressed, love for the beautiful, gratitude for the generous, homage for the heroic, a genial impulse, a gay susceptibility of wit, aspirations for liberty, and for those who strike, or win, or fall in her holy cause, the enthusiastic prayer, the blessing, and the tear?

Ireland not worth remembering? No great names? Nothing worth preserving? No imperishable realities? Nothing but fairies and leperchauns; dreams and fables? Again I say—Is that the fact—the visitation—the decree?

What of Edmund Burke; a superb model of rhetoric, and of statesmanship; an immutable authority with the statesmen of Great Britain? What of George Canning, who out of the obscurity of his orphaned childhood in Kerry, rose, with all the graces of his cultivated eloquence and wit, to replenish the void caused by the death of Tierney, Fox and Wyndham? What of Henry Grattan? What of him, who with own hand broke the chains of a century, gave to his country a free constitution, free trade, and opened all her harbors; of whom Lord Brougham said, that in the easy and copious flow of most profound, sagacious, and original principles, enunciated in terse and striking, but appropriate language, no orator of any age was his equal; and whose remains the most eminent of the Commons of England petitioned from his sons, "that so," as the prayer expressed the wish, "they might repose in the sacred edifice where great men have been for ages interred!" What of Sheil, who made his footing sure in that arena where Flood had failed, and Grattan himself had faltered; of whose speech on Pennenden Heath old Jeremy Bentham said, that it was "the most masterly union of logic and rhetoric he had ever laid his eyes upon;" of whom the Duke de Montebello, writing from Ireland in 1826, said, he was "a combination of Juvenal, Pindar, and Mirabeau;" and of whom, after one of those ebullitions of eloquence which used to overwhelm the most reluctant audience in the world, Sir Robert Peel rose from his seat and declared that "his eloquence invested all he uttered with an irresistible charm, and that Ireland should be proud of his genius." And there is Sheridan! What of him? What more could be said of him than was said by his great compeer, Edmund Burke—than was said by his great eulogist, Lord Byron—then was said by his great antagonist, William Pitt? Enter Westminster Hall, when the peers and peeresses in their robes and jewels, with the ambassadors of foreign countries, and the high judges, and the great officers and statesmen of the kingdom are seated there—the grandest judgment-scene ever presented to the world—see Guilt bursting, in letters of red flame, from the forehead of the criminal who had laid waste the gorgeous regions of the Ganges, and, on the most sumptuous scale, had perpetrated the deadliest sins against humanity; and when above that crouching culprit, struck to earth with the consciousness of his guilt, there rises up the beautiful figure of India—"dusky as the night, but night with all her stars"—and she blesses the voice that has spoken out triumphantly in her behalf; exult!—you who have no country worth remembering—no memories worth preserving—no splendors that endure—for it is the voice of Sheridan the avenged and victorious victim blesses—'tis Irish eloquence—and the glory of that voice is all your own!

Oh! you who from the sunrise to the sunset are doomed to drudgery, and by the sweat of your aching brows earn the scanty bread you eat; you who carry the hod, and, helping to build the rich man's house, contribute a monument to the industry or cunning which, out of an obscurity deeper than your own, disguises its primitive plebeianism in an aristocracy of brown stone; you who sweep the streets at midnight, that so the dainty foot of some splendid fortune may not be soiled in crossing on the morrow, nor the crested carriage of the patrician, superbly oblivious of the meat or milk cart out of which the carriage sprung, may not be splashed, nor the hammercloth, once a butcher's apron or a potato bag, may not be porcupined with flying straws, nor peppered with the dust; you who dig the canal and lay the railroad; you who fell the trees out West, and clear the road on which commerce travels, and the arts supplant the savageness of nature; toilers as you are; drudges as you are; reviled for the labor which Providence assigns you; by an arrogant faction proscribed for that you are in rags, and havn't been to school, and have rough hands, and wear no gloves; slaves!—as they would make you, but, by the Republic! never shall—remember that you are of the same land which gave birth to the men whose names I have recounted; that you are blood of their blood; direct inheritors of their fame—a fame which illuminates the world—and with this consciousness stand your ground, hold up the head, proudly show your honest hands though scarred and foul with toil, and in your deepest drudgery exult!

[The author of "Spring," in our third issue, sends us the following graceful effusion.]

DREAMING.

"I am haunted by a spirit,
Every where I go;
That I'm near it—yet not near it,
I too sadly know.
When I'm hushed and sorrow-laden,
'Tis a solace there;
When my heart would clasp its maiden
Figure—it is air!"

By a streamlet, bright and glancing
On a summer eve I lay,
Just as starry night advancing
To her bosom clasped the day.
Peace was in the air around me,
In the streamlet gliding by,
Quickly slumber's chain had bound me—
All was dreaming—so was I.

As I looked upon the water,
Rose a form from out the stream;
Fair, Oh, fairer far I found her
Than the spirit of a dream.
More of beauty, fabled story
Ne'er to Aphrodite gave,
As she rose in radiant glory
From the bosom of the wave.

First retreats she, then advances,
Nearer, nearer comes she now;
Love-light sparkled in her glances,
Love was pictured on her brow.
Garments white, but ill concealing
From the eye her breast of snow,
Floated round her, half revealing
All the heart would wish to know.

Nearer came she, till before me
Shone the love-light in her eyes;
Nearer still, till bending o'er me,
I could hear her gentle sighs.
In her hair bright dew-drops glistened,
As it swept along my cheek;
Hark! a murmur—how I listened
For the accents she might speak.

Then I thought that I would clasp her
Fondly to my beating heart;
Forth I stretched my hand to grasp her
Ere she might again depart;
O what sorrow, O what sorrow,
On that summer eve was there,
Joy from hope I sought to borrow,
And I clasped the empty air.

Thus the promises of gladness,
Which we cherish in the mind,
Ere fulfilment, turn to sadness,
Leaving nought but care behind.
All our hopes and joys Elysian,
Howsoever real they seem,
Vanish like the fading vision,
Of this unsubstantial dream.

PONTCHARTRAIN.

Loomis's "Treatise on Arithmetic" is, as far as we are able to judge, a very full and desirable work. While aiming to be theoretical, he believes in the best sense of the word, his design to embrace the best practical resources. The style is clear.—(Harper & Brothers.)

The author of a tragedy called the "Gladiator of Ravenna," which has excited much enthusiasm in Germany from its first appearance, some eighteen months since, still remains unknown. This is the more extraordinary, as the tragedy, which gains steadily on public favor, has already laid up on the author's percentage 10,000 thalers (over $6000), which sum still remains to his credit in the treasuries of the theatres. Neither the success of his piece nor his pecuniary gain have, however, induced him to break his incognito. A unique fact in the annals of theatrical literature.

The last Melbourne papers mention that Miss Catherine Hayes, after fulfilling a short engagement at the Bendigo diggings, would sing a few nights at Sydney, and then return to the Old World for "good and all." The Limerick Chroniele says: "Late advices from Melbourne state that the mayor of that city entertained a distinguished party, including Miss Catherine Hayes and her mother, and many other ladies and gentlemen; and that the Irish Nightingale looked exceedingly well."

DEATH OF JAMES G. PERCIVAL.

Doctor Percival, if he has not chiselled his name as high up, or so conspicuously on the literary monument of the republic as Bryant, Longfellow, and Halleck, has left memories which entitle him to the esteem and respect of those who worship at the shrine of intellect, of energy, of taste, and profitable scholarship. If he was not a great poet, he was in every sense a good one; and if he did not startle by the originality of his views or ideas, has done sufficient to recommend his varied rhythms and harmonious exercises to those who delight to watch the growth of a nation's literature, and behold with anxiety the best offshoots of other elements and countries engrafted artistically and fruitfully upon it.

James Gates Percival was born in Berlin, State of Connecticut on the 15th September, 1795. While yet but twelve years old his father died, leaving the boy to the care of a guardian. Between fifteen and sixteen he entered Yale College, and graduated in 1815, with more than the usual honors. His father having been a physician of eminence, the son ambitioned to walk in his footsteps; and with this honorable desire pursued the necessary studies for five years in the Yale Medical College, at the end of which period he took his degree as Doctor of Medicine.

While a student he had a poetical reputation among his fellows, having as early as 1809 written for a "Commencement Exercise" a tragedy entitled "Zamor," which he subsequently revised, enlarged, and published. In 1821 his first work was given to the world. With other things, the volume included the first part of the author's "Prometheus." The Spensorian stanza was the one chosen by our poet, and he was so far successful as to draw from Edward Everett, in the North American Review, favorable recognition. The following year, while in Charleston practicing his profession, he published a volume entitled "Clio," which was succeeded by another at New-Haven. The fecundity of his genius is spoken of as remarkable, "for in the same year he brought out the second part of his 'Prometheus' and an elaborate historical essay."

In 1824, receiving a commission as assistant surgeon in the army, we find him lecturing on Chemistry at the West Point Academy; but distracting his mind from the literary pursuits which then seduced him, he gave up his professorship and took refuge in poetry. In Boston, the following year, a complete edition of his poems appeared; and in 1827 the third part of "Clio" went through the press at New-York. The succeeding two years Dr. Percival was engaged in assisting the preparation of the first quarto edition of Webster's Dictionary; which laborious task was followed by another scarcely less so, though more interesting—the translation of Malte Brun's Geography, the entire publication of which was not concluded until 1843.

In the meantime he was otherwise busily engaged. Indeed, his industry was proverbial. In 1835, at the request of the Legislature of Connecticut, he made a geological survey of the State, and published the results of his explorations in an elaborate report, which appeared in 1842. As an evidence of the assiduity with which he went to work, it is said that he walked over almost every field in the State, that his report might be as perfect as possible, basing all his conclusions and statements upon actual observations and experiments.

In 1843 his last volume of poems was published. In the preface he says, "In the long interval which has elapsed since the publication of my last volume of poems (sixteen years), I have been engaged in pursuits which have little or no relation to poetical studies." He offered his book, "not as the fruits of a continued and regular study of the art," but as containing the occasional exercises of his muse.

Dr. Percival's knowledge of the various dialects of European languages induced him to the somewhat thankless, if tedious, task of giving specimens of their poetry; thus, his last volume is nearly taken up entirely with paraphrases or imitations of more than one hundred and fifty different forms or modifications of verses. Their merit to us seems almost as various as the metres. They lack the fire which will guarantee to them a lasting importance. They are not without much grace, frequent happiness of illustration, and a copiousness of diction; but they are also redundant, and rarely leave that lasting impression which those who read to be delighted, seek.

Numerous poems are given to illustrate phases of nationalities in Europe; but without success, in our opinion. There are, however, scattered through them, striking and pretty passages as—

"Near Moskva's stream, through heath and forest gliding,
Deep in a river vale by meadow green,
Embowered in beech, a lonely church is seen,
Like timid fawn in dewy thicket hiding.

"Above its roof, a Grecian crosslet, shining,
Points to the pious serf his heavenward way;
Around it spreads, bestrown with blossoms gay,
The field, where wearied hearts are safe reclining.

"O'er swelling graves the bounding rabbit plays;
All breathes of peace and gentleness around;
Light steals the maiden by; subdued each sound;
Even fainter glances there the evening blaze.
There, nestling side by side, at evening's close,
Soft coo the billing doves, and then repose.

Another sonnet on Bohemia has a touching and happy simile running through the opening:

The rose now blooms—with love my bosom heaves;
It fades and withers—sorrow chills my heart:
The cold rains trickle o'er the faded leaves—
Tears from their secret fount unbidden start.

The dewy morning rises fresh and fair—
Hope comes again to wake my love anew:
With blooms of May the maiden wreaths her hair;
Joy swells my heart, as swells the rose with dew.

Thus flows the Cheskian song—the song thus flows,
In Servia's vales, on Russia's boundless plains,
By Visla's banks, unfettered or in chains,
Where the poor Slavonian spirit glows.
Ages have flown away, yet still remain
The seeds, that time and force have crushed in vain.

The German Emigrant's Song, which is evidently in imitation of the "Fatherland," is not to be compared to Clarence Mangan's fine version of the same subject. We give a stanza from Percival to indicate the poem:

Oh! Deutschland, our good Fatherland,
Where grows the vine, along the Rhine;
Where far the Alpine summits stand,
And o'er the free-born Switzer shine;
Where bright thy southern summer glows,
Thy northern winter sleeps in snows:
Thy pine-clad hills, thy heaths of sand,
All linked by Union's golden band,
Thou art our Fathers' Fatherland!

Among the national paraphrases are a couple founded on the Irish melodies, which though not very successful, (coming after Tom Moore), are commendable for a diffusion of the good spirit which breaks out in the last stanza of the following:

THE HARPER.

The Harper once in Tara's halls
Rung loud the martial strain;
Nor were these full and stirring notes
Struck by his hand in vain.
They roused the sons of Erin, far
To drive the invading foe;
They fired the heart, and nerved the hand,
To deal the avenging blow.

In vest of green, the harper sat
Beside the royal throne;
The golden chain, that slung his harp,
In pride around him thrown.
Wide through the halls his music rang,
And warriors leaped to hear;
Drew the bright sword, and shook it high,
And tossed the beamy spear.

But Tara's halls are seen no more;
In ruin low they lie:
The green turf o'er them weaves it sod;
The weeds there mantle high—
And Erin's sons no longer leap
To hear the harp's wild tone;
The light that o'er their country shed
Its beams from heaven, has flown.

And sadly now the harper wends
To other realms his way:
He seeks a freer, happier land,
Where Britons bear no sway.
Then welcome here, with generous cheer,
The minstrel, wandering lone;
And let us ever hold him dear,
And prize him as our own.

Some two years ago, Dr. Percival was appointed Geologist to the state of Wisconsin, where he has since resided. He died on the 2d instant, at Chicago.

LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD.

The Life and Death of Lord Edward Fitzgerald. By Thomas Moore. New-York: P. M. Haverty.

Arthur O'Conner said that Fitzgerald was not only free from a vice, but a defect. He was, indeed, a pure, noble-minded, chivalrous soul; one for whom conviction was the tocsin of action, and whose natural enthusiasm, guided by all that was manly, led him into a front rank with those patriots who, in 1798, raised the republican standard in Ireland. The poet says "the child is father of the man." Military science was a passion with Fitzgerald from his boyhood. His playthings were cannon, and his nursery the fields overlooking the Garonne, in France, where he built mimic fortifications. He entered the army young, performed some striking manœuvres in the American war, under Lord Rawdon, in the South, was wounded, and, after serving on the staff of General O'Hara, at the West Indies, returned to Ireland. He was so possessed with the love of action, that he writes to his mother, in 1783, "I have made fifty attempts to write to you, but have as often failed, from want of subject." * * * "If you insist on letters, I must write you an account of my American campaigns once again, as that is the only thing I remember."

He entered the Irish Parliament, but, as may readily be imagined, he was ill at ease amidst that scene of disquiet, slavishness, and Anglo-Irishism. It was not long before his impetuous truthfulness flung him forward in the opposition, and made him a man of mark. Having fallen in love, however, without success, he started for North America; and here, among the Indians, the first decided change in his opinions of society took place. He was charmed with the equality that surrounded him. He says himself that he was "obliged to think." Contrasting the mode of his life with that amidst which he was reared, he says:—

"To bring things home to oneself, if we had been Indians, instead of its being my duty to be separated from all of you, it would, on the contrary, be my duty to be with you, to make you comfortable, and to hunt and fish for you. Instead of Lord ——'s being violent against letting me marry G——, he would be glad to give her to me, that I might maintain and feed her. There would be then no cases of looking forward to the fortune for children—of thinking how you are to live; no separations in families, one in Ireland and one in England; no devilish politics, no fashions, customs, duties, or appearance to the world, to interfere with one's happiness. Instead of being served and supported by servants, everything here is done by one's relations—by the people one loves; and the mutual obligations you must be under increase your love for each other."

This romance of savage happiness was, says Moore, but one of the various forms which the passion now predominant over all his thoughts assumed. The principle, however, retained its footing in his mind, after the reveries through which it had first found its way thither had vanished.

A visit to France, during the revolution, confirmed the republicanism of the forest in his mind, which was thus quickly rendered sensitive to those affairs in his native country which were foreing the people—chiefly under the inspiration of Tone and the Northern United Irishmen—to an armed attitude. Publicly, at Paris, he flung off his title, and at a public dinner drank to "the speedy abolition of all hereditary titles and feudal distinctions."

He became a United Irishman, was placed on the Dublin Directory, sent to France as Envoy from the Society, returned with promises of aid—though he was opposed to the principle of taking any—and, after the treachery of Reynolds, was arrested at Murphy's, the feather merchant, in Thomas street, Dublin. He made a desperate fight, but was eventually captured and lodged in Newgate, where he died of his wounds on the 3d of June.

Such is a brief outline of the life which Moore has "taken" in this volume—which is by no means a good biography. It is more a soothing palliation for the sake of the surviving family, than a glorious, dignified defence of the noble rebel's career. Contemporaneous events, during Fitzgerald's connection with the United Irishmen, are barely indicated; and the only value of the book is the collection of letters, which might have been satisfactorily abridged, for general readers, into one half the space. Mr. Haverty's edition, however, is a great improvement on the English one, inasmuch as two little volumes are conveniently printed in one, and more especially because there is a considerable and useful addition to the text, in the shape of notes referring to events which Moore scarcely hints at. These notes are taken from the best historical and biographical memoirs of the men of the period. We learn, with much pleasure, that the present volume will be followed by Madden's Life of Robert Emmet, and Haine's Life of Thomas Addis Emmet. Much new matter will be added to the latter, and both memoirs furnished with judicious notes, after the manner of the present publication.

Literary and Artistic News.

Messrs. Hodges, Smith & Co., of Dublin, announce a new edition of the "Annals of Ireland," by John O'Donovan, M.R.I.A. The very large price they were of necessity compelled to place on the the first edition published in 1850, namely, 14 guineas, confined the sale chiefly to public institutions and to men of large fortunes. With the concurrence of many distinguished persons, they now announce a reprint of the work, to be in every way as beautiful as the fourteen guinea edition, with the exception of the paper, which will not be so fine; but in extent, type, and subject matter it will be the same. In the event of four hundred copies being immediately subscribed for, they purpose re-issuing the seven volumes within twelve months, at the moderate cost of three dollars per volume; and as a guarantee, if such be necessary, for fulfilling their engagement with the subscribers, they will not require payment until the entire work is finished. The work of the "Four Masters" is now so well known, that it may seem unnecessary to say that there is scarcely an Irish family of any note of which mention is not made, and the full history of nearly every family is given, their origin traced, their different branches, and the localities where they resided, the great chieftains and learned men belonging to each, and every other circumstance of importance that it has been possible to glean connected with them. The antiquarian, the topographer, or the historian can identify every locality in which an important event, a battle, or the death of a great man took place. By an admirable alphabetical index, reference can be made with the greatest facility to the names either of men or of places mentioned in the work.

On Sunday night the premises of Messrs. Naybour & Co., 144 Oxford street, London, were robbed of pictures valued at nearly ten thousand dollars. Pictures of some of the most celebrated masters have been stolen, including works of Rubens, Carlo Dolci, Cuyp, Ostade, Hogarth, Morland, Teniers, Smirke, Vandyke, Murillo, A. Vandervelde, Wattean, Poelemberg, and others, some of which were purchased at Col. Sibthorp's sale. The burglars divested these pictures of their frames. On information being given to the proprietor, it was ascertained that 69 pictures had been taken, principally of a small size, none above 30 inches by 25; also, some bronzes and books. On the proprietor entering the premises on Monday morning, a new dark lantern, well stocked with tapers apparently only used once, a pair of pincers and a gimlet were found, the latter having been used for the purpose of fastening the door while the burglars were engaged in the work of plunder. The stolen property would fill two or three cabs, and take from ten to twenty minutes to remove, which was effected about ten o'clock at night. It appears extraordinary that such a bulk of property could be removed in a thoroughfare so public as that part of Oxford street (between Vere and Old Cavendish streets) without detection by the police. In a merely commercial point of view this loss of property is heavy. The principal proprietor is stated to be a gentleman of well-known property.

A Paris letter gives us a glimpse into an editorial sanctum, thus:—"In a large velvet arm chair, with a table before him, sits the editor himself, enveloped in a plain, dark dressing gown. He is not immersed in any profound thought, or he may be meditating, for aught we know; but his head rests on the back of the chair, whilst he inhales oblivion from all care thro' the amber tube of a perfumed narghile, standing beside him. What have we on the table? A large vase full of flowers—a pile of tiny oyster-shells—an empty bottle of chablis—a china dish with pears and oranges—the remains of an omelette souffle—a silver coffee-pot, thick, hot cream, and—could he have forseen our visit, and intended to invite us to breakfast? The table certainly is laid for two; and that delicious, easy, low chair, with its soft satin, wadded back, is actually placed ready for us. How charmingly considerate! But soft! the guest is evidently not ourselves, but, whoever it was, has been and gone. Here are vestiges of another presence—a handkerchief, so fine, snowy, and gossamer, lies under the table: and as we pick it up, our eyes, however discreet, could not help seeing, in florid and filagree letters, the word 'Nathalie' embroidered in the corner."

The Artists' annual festival, at Rome, took place on the 14th ult., at the customary picturesque locality of Castel Guibileo, and the abandoned solitudes of the ancient Fidenæ once more rang with the tumult of revelry in every continental and artistical tongue. The motley crowds were coerced by the sceptre of President Haag, whose state car, drawn by four oxen with crimson trappings, and escorted by Moors, templars, and demons on horseback, excited no small astonishment and admiration among the early peasants bringing their produce to market. A decidedly bacchanalian tone prevailed amongst the masqueraders as the day advanced, until a perfect tornado of wind, dust, and rain closed the proceedings, and drove the way and wine worn stragglers home.

Not the least curious among the literary items of the day, says the Publisher's Circular, is the rapid increase of that class of publications known as "Spiritual Literature." This has grown into an important branch of the bookselling business. It occupies the attention of two or three establishments in this city, and of others in Boston, Philadelphia, and the western cities. Spiritual books are regularly announced, and a Spiritual newspaper is published here weekly.

A new journal, (non-political) to be called the Gazette de Paris, is announced in Paris. Among the numerous staff of redactuers announced in the programme, are the names of Alexander Dumas, Jules Janin, Arsene Houssaye, Louis Lurine, E. Texier, Roger de Beauvoir, Felix Mornaud, Th. Pelloquet, A. Husson, Alex. Weill, Nadar, Jules Lovy and Louis Bellett.

The Life of Col. Daniel Morgan, of the Continental Army, has been prepared from his unpublished letters and papers by his grandson, James Graham, Esq., of New Orleans, and will soon be issued by Derby & Jackson. No life of the gallant and popular hero of the Cowpens has yet been published.

The Journal de Frankfort says that Staudigl, the celebrated bass singer, has gone out of his mind. His intellect had been failing for a long time, and he has lately been removed to a lunatic asylum.

The amount required for a copy, in bronze, of Chanrey's statue of James Watt, to be placed in front of the Manchester Infirmary, is about £1,100; £800 has been subscribed in Manchester.

Mrs. Julia Dean Hayne had a most magnificent and well-deserved farewell benefit at Niblo,s, last Saturday. Her preeminence as the favorite of New-York, was manifested by a crowded and appreciating audience. We learn that nearly three thousand tickets were sold; one thousand dollars were taken at the doors, and not an inch of standing room in the capacious theatre was left unoccupied. The play was Mrs. Hayne's adaptation of "Camille," and her performance sustained the eulogistic notices of the Southern press. At the end of the play Mrs. Hayne was called out, and addressed the audience as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen—It is with no ordinary emotions that I appear before you to acknowledge and thank you for the very flattering evidence of your approval of this, my farewell appearance before a New-York audience. When I think of the numerous occasions on which the same kindness has been extended to my efforts, my sense of obligation becomes doubly great, and as I attempt to express the deep feelings of my heart, I but too deeply feel how inadequate my words are to convey what I would wish to say. I am about to bid you a long farewell; but I trust the time will one day come when I may renew an acquaintance which has so many pleasant recollections connected with it. Wherever I may go, and in however distant a land my future lot may carry me, you may rest assured that the recollection of this parting hour will ever be cherished by me as one of the brightest spots in the memory of the past. With these feelings I bid you an affectionate farewell.

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

MILITARY PRESENTATION.

On the evening of the 12th inst. we attended by invitation a social meeting of the members of Company K., 69th Regiment, at their Drill-room, in Delancy street, convened for the purpose of presenting to their Captain, Mr. James Huston, certain testimonials of the regard entertained for him by his military friends. These articles consisted of a very elegant rapier and sword, and their belts, with a superb pair of epaulettes. The presentation was made by Lieut. Lyons, on behalf of the company, in a neat address; and the reply of Captain Huston, thanking his friends for the marks of favor conferred on him, was to the purpose; closely resembling the point of the beautiful gifts he had received. A number of gentlemen were present as guests—among whom we noticed Colonel Ryan, who presided by request, Captain Phelan, Captain Lyons, Adjutant McCartan, Paymaster White, Lieut. O'Rourke, Messrs. Soria, and a number of others, all of whom seemed to do justice to the ample hospitalities of Company K. Several sentiments were proposed and speeches made, and some very good songs were sung through the evening, which passed off most pleasantly to all concerned.

Almost all the gentlemen whose names we have mentioned, were called on to speak during the evening, and the appearance of some of them seemed to be a signal for a more than ordinary display of enthusiastic feeling. Our limits, however, preclude our giving the remarks of all the speakers, and we, therefore, decline to give any—a decision which we dare to say none of them will much regret.

THE SEVENTH REGIMENT, AT EAST NEW-YORK.

Tempted by the fineness of the day, and by the rumor which had somehow got abroad, that the Third Brigade would manœuvre at East New-York, we started with a friend for that part of Long Island on Monday, the 12th inst.; not grieved to have any reasonable excuse for a brief respite from city turmoil. On the road we encountered several military gentlemen of our acquaintance, all of them making a "bee line," as fast as the speed of their respective steeds would permit, for the scene of action. On the ground, however, their expectation was disappointed considerably, when they learned that the military present comprised only the Seventh regiment, Col. Duryee; consisting of about 300 men, officers, musicians and privates, all told.

The ground at East New-York is well suited for military display on an extended scale. For any manœuvres, however, possible to a single regiment, we think it rather inferior to Hoboken or Elm Park; inasmuch as, these grounds being more contracted, do not dwarf a regiment, and explorers state that they are equally rich in "Lager" and other staples.

The forenoon was occupied in isolated company movements; each company drilling by itself, and practicing the programme of the regimental drill to take place in the afternoon. A judicious method of initiating the new recruits. The plain, dotted with these military groups, some firing, others practicing Hardee's light infantry drill, presented an animated appearance. During the continuance of these exercises, the proficiency of the 2nd and 3d companies seemed conspicuous. One by one, however, they were dismissed about noon, stacked arms, and applied themselves to their commissariat department for "aid and comfort" to withstand the labors that were to follow. We have to acknowledge the hospitalities of the 5th company, Capt. Speaight, whose company drill we did not have an opportunity to observe. The regimental line was to have been formed at a quarter past two in the afternoon, but it was near three before the formation of the regiment. The first formation was slow; the second better We noticed that the Drum-major saluted the Colonel when beating off; by what authority? After some orders in the manual of arms, orders were given to spring rammers, a proper precaution, the timely observance of which will, generally, preclude accidents.

The firing commenced by company, which was, however, promptly checked, to re-commence by wing. The first wing's fire was bad, equalled only by the first fire by battalion. The fire of the second wing was well delivered. The firing by battalion was bad. That by file in the successive formations was very good. Change front forward on first company—fire by file—good. The advance in line commenced badly and ended not much better. By the right of companies to the rear into column. Forward into line. Well done. By the right of divisions to, the rear into column. Left into line—wheel. Very well. (Why do the guides reverse the butt of the musket?) Advance in line—not good—too much space between files. Passing in review, the drums did not beat until the reviewing officer got to the right, and remained on the right. Adjutant posted no markers. The orders were given too quick—but we pause, lest our free criticism get us into trouble.

The Seventh did not justify its reputation on this occasion, which is, no doubt, well deserved, so far as the materiel of the regiment is concerned. But, "piled up" on the drill, it is sometimes a distressing load to bear.

Gen. Hall was the reviewing officer on this parade, at which also, we noticed several military gentlemen; among others, Major Barry and Captain Murphy, of the Ninth, and Major Nugent and Capt. Corcoran, of the Sixty-ninth. A number of spectators, and carriages with ladies, were also present.

U. S. Army Intelligence.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 4.

HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE ARMY, New-York, May 9, 1856.

I. The following movements of troops have been indicated by the War Department, and will be carried into effect as hereinafter directed:

1. The four Companies of the 2d Infantry to join the Head-quarters of the Regiment on the Upper Missouri.

2. The 10th Infantry to be distributed as follows:

The Head-quarters of the Regiment and four Companies at Fort Ridgely. Two Companies to establish a post at some eligible point at or near the Red River of the North and near the Northern boundary of Minnesota; its precise location to be determined by the commanding officer, after an examination of the country and its resources. Two Companies to take post at Fort Ripley, and one Company at Fort Snelling. The Company now serving with the Sioux Expedition to take post at Fort Snelling when its services can be dispensed with by General Harney.

II. The Company of the 2d infantry now at Fort Ripley, will, as soon as practicable, move to Fort Ridgely, and the four Companies of that Regiment will then, as soon as practicable after being relieved by the Companies of the 10th, march across the country to Fort Pierre.

The Companies of the 10th Infantry will be assigned to the stations above indicated, by the Colonel, who will give such instructions and orders as as shall be necessary to place them in position.

The Lieutenant-Colonel and junior Major of the 10th will take post at Fort Ripley, and the new post on or near the Red River of the North, to be assigned by the Colonel.

As soon as he can dispense with its services, the General commanding the Sioux Expedition will order Company E, 10th Infantry, to Fort Snelling, either by way of the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, or across the country and down the Minnesota river, as shall be most convenient for the service.

By command of Brevet Lieutenant-General Scott,

Irwin McDowell, Assistant Adjutant-General.

American News.

A steam-boiler in Edson's distillery, Albany, exploded on the 15th, instantly killing Cyrus Edson, one of the firm, Mr. Henderson, the engineer, and Mr. Donovan, the fireman. One or two other employees were badly injured. The boiler was new, and the engineer was engaged in testing it when the explosion occurred. The bodies were horribly mutilated, Mr. Edson's head being completely torn from his body, and so much disfigured that he could be recognized only by his pocket-handkerchief and finger-rings. Mr. Henderson's head and legs were torn from the trunk. Mr. Edson leaves a wife and three children. He was highly respected. The Board of Trade adjourned immediately on the announcement of his death. Mr. Henderson, the engineer, also leaves a wife and three children. Donovan, the fireman, was a single man, but an aged father and several sisters depended on him for support. Daniel Boyle, a plumber, in the employ of Peter Smith & Sons, was badly scalded, blown into the river, but was rescued from drowning. His arm was broke. The Evening Journal learns, from Dr. Cox, that Boyle appears to be in a fair way of recovering. His back is injured, ribs broken and is slightly burned. Phelix McCaffrey was, also, badly scalded.

Thomas Powell, of Newburgh, Orange Co., died in that place on the 12th, at the advanced age of 87 years. Mr Powell was one of the oldest residents of the county, and had the reputation of being the wealthiest man in that section. The Daily Times says:—"He was a native of Ireland, came early to this country, began life with fair prospects but little money, worked hard, early and late, and by his indomitable enterprise and business energy made himself a name which will not soon be forgotten in Newburgh. The steamboat and freighting business in that place owes much of its present prosperity to him. He was concerned in many financial enterprises, was a leading stockholder in the Erie Company, founded the Powell Bank in Newburgh, and until within a few days of his death, was still engaged in active pursuits. His partner in business, Homer Ramsdell, Esq., President of the Erie Railroad Company, was also his son-in-law.

William Mitchell, who for many years was manager of the Olympic Theatre in Broadway, died on the 12th, in the 57th year of his age. Mr. Mitchell came to New-York from England nearly twenty years ago, and was a member of the National Theatre in Church street, under the management of James Wallack. He was an eccentric comedian, of decided talent, and managed the Olympic Theatre with great success. He has been suffering from paralysis the past 6 or 7 years, and, though at one time in independent circumstances, he has latterly fallen into poverty, and at the time of his death his friends were making arrangements to give him a benefit. He leaves a widow.

The St. Anthony Express gives the following estimate of the number of feet of logs that will probably be floated down from the pineries during the present Spring :

	Feet.
From Rum River	120,000,000
From the Mississippi	40,000,000
From the St. Croix	160,000,000
From Chippewa	75,000,000
Total	395,000,000

Our merchants, says the Indianola (Texas) Bulletin of the 2d inst., are doing a brisk business. Cotton wool, hides, &c., come in lively, and wagons are hauling large quantities of freight up the country. The same authority says—a large train of new wagons left Powderhorn last Wednesday for El Paso. They were all loaded heavily with merchandize, which is on private account. This will, without doubt, be the centre of the Santa Fe and El Paso trade.

The accommodation train from Albany while entering Boston, on the evening of the 15th, came in collision with a carriage, in which were Mr. McFarland, his wife and Miss Heustis. The two ladies were instantly killed, and Mr. McFarland, is dangerously if not fatally injured. He is a resident of Newton. On the same day, John Buchan, an engineer, was run over by a baggage-car in the Hudson River depot and instantly killed.

A company have recently purchased one hundred and fifty acres of land, at $4000 per acre, at Chicago, through which will be constructed seven canals, 100 feet in width, with a street through the same eighty feet wide, with the privilege of putting down a railroad track in each street. This improvement is looked upon as of great importance to the city, as the water front will be increased to the length of the canals.

The Palmyra Whig of the 8th, says : The spring thus far is backward, the weather being favorable to the growth of the wheat and grass crops. But little planting of corn or hemp so far, owing to the perfectly saturated condition of the ground. The smaller streams are very much swollen, and the Mississippi, for the past few days, has been entirely out of its banks, and is still rising.

The commissioners appointed to select a site for the future capital of Iowa, have selected "a beautiful hill on the east side of the Des Moines river." It is "within the two mile radius of the junction of the Raccoon and Des Moines rivers." There has been a donation to the state of two hundred and sixty thousand dollars in lots and lands to secure the present location.

Padre Vijil presented his credentials, and was received by the President as Minister from the Walker Government in Nicaragua. The usual courteous speeches were interchanged. The President, in his remarks, significantly said he would enforce the Neutrality Laws. Senor Marcoleta is greatly disgusted. Secretary Marcy acquiesces in the result.

The Comptroller of Syracuse reports the floating debt of that city reaches the aggregate of $40,000 ; to offset which there are less than $20,000 of assets. To meet this deficiency, he recommends a temporary loan, to be paid out of the fund of $53,000, which the charter authorizes the Common Council to raise for general purposes.

The Erie Railroad, judging from the mammoth passenger and freight trains that pass through here, must be doing an unprecedented heavy business this Spring. A train containing 700 passengers, emigrants for the Great Salt Lake City, passed through here, says the Goshen Democrat, on Monday morning last.

Miss Julia J. Field, of Charlestown, aged 20 years, a beautiful young lady, says the Boston Transcript, has suddenly disappeared, under very mysterious circumstances. It is supposed that she committed suicide by drowning. She had lately complained of meeting with several disappointments.

The Boston Advertiser is correcting the inelegant expressions that vulgar people employ ; the last ban is laid upon the use of the phrase "our midst," to express the idea of a company of persons. The Advertiser says it is dreadfully low—positively shocking—and is in no well-bred mouth.

On hearing of the death of Claisborne Rorer, who was killed at the battle of Rivas, in Nicaragua, the members of the Burlington Bar, Ia., called a meeting and passed resolutions of sympathy with Judge Rorer and family who reside in that city.

Two hooped young ladies came in collision on Washington street, Boston, Tuesday, and from hard words they went to blows, scratches, tears and torn bonnets. Many and great are the perils of the hoop.

The Tallahassee Sentinel of the 29th ult., states that Gov. Brooke, since his return from the seat of the general government, has fully committed himself to the removal of the Indians by force.

An editor describing a lecture to the fair sex, exclaims with enthusiasm. "Three thousand ladies hanging on the lips of one man!" This is rather too much of a very good thing.

Governor Briggs, of Massachusetts, has been appointed President of the American Temperance Union, in place of Chief Justice Savage, and has accepted the appointment.

Dr. Graham, recently pardoned out of State Prison, by Gov. Cark, on the representation that he was about to die of consumption, has resumed practice in New Orleans.

A set of silver instruments, costing $1200, has been completed for the brass band, in Lawrence, Mass. It is suggested that they call themselves the Lawrence Silver Band.

It appears from the message of Gov. Minor, of Connecticut, that, in one year of know-nothing rule in that State, the expenses have exceeded the income $41,000.

An Express Company has suffered to the tune of $2,700 in Providence, because one of its wagons injured the mental faculties of a girl by breaking her head.

Dr. Orville Dewey has donated the earnings of his last Winters lectures to his native village, to be expended in planting shade trees along the streets.

The Cincinnati Gazette states that the whole expense of the Gaines Slave Case, to the people of the United States, is thirty to forty thousand dollars.

The City Hospital of St. Louis was destroyed by fire on the 15th, several of the inmates were burned to death, and others seriously injured.

Ale is much loved in Boston : the Post notices the arrival of four schooners, with upwards of 3,000 barrels of "prime Albany" on board.

Dr. Porcher of Charleston, S. C., has cut a horn seven inches long and like to a ram's horn, from the head of a good looking negress.

The catalogue of Randolph Macon College, for the collegiate year, 1855-56, shows a total of one hundred and thirty-four students.

Common schools are rapidly increasing in North Carolina, and were attended last year by 120,000 scholars, against 19,000 in 1840.

At a recent town meeting in Somerville, (Mass.) the office of Superintendent of Public Schools was established at a salary of $500.

The Kentucky American says "the whiskey crop" will be greater the coming season than it has been for years in Kentucky.

In Boston there are 3,200 grogshops, and in the County in which Boston is (Suffolk) there are 1,003 Justices of the Peace.

General G. Sargent, of Davenport, Iowa, has donated $500 to the Young Men's Library Association of that city.

James Walker, the father of Gen. Walker, of Nicaraguan notoriety, is a resident of Nashville.

Four of Dupont's Powder Mills, at Wilmington, were blown up on the 15th and three men killed.

Counterfeit two-dollar bills on the Manufacturers' Bank of Providence are in circulation.

The small-pox has broken out in Nashville, though not in a very malignant form.

A young men's Christian Association has been incorporated at Burlington Iowa.

The Straits of Mackinaw are open, and commerce on the great Lakes has begun.

ANNIVERSARIES.

The Destitute Children of Seamen.—The tenth anniversary of the Institution on Staten Island, near the Seamen's Home, established for the purpose of affording relief and protection to the destitute children of seamen in the city of New-York and vicinity, took place to-day. The Chairman read the annual report of Miss Julia Cuthbertson, the treasurer. The payments during the year amount to $4,437.87 ; salaries and wages to $923.87. The receipts are as follows :—

By balance forward	$20 04
Donations	3,936 05
Annual Subscriptions	732 50
Board money from relatives of children	289 50
Interest on $5,000 Bonds Harlem Railroad	350 00
Interest 12 months on $2,000 Fresel Fund	140 00
Proportion of Orphan's Fund from Comptroller's Fund, Albany	1,875 70
Total	$7,343 86
By Balance	$1,982 12

As a set-off to this balance the Chairman stated that up to this date the Institution owes, in the shape of interest and ground rent, $2,525. The expenditure of the past year had been $800 less than that of the previous one. During the year there have been 82 children admitted, 60 of whom have left and 2 died, leaving 111 pupils in it at present.

Central American Education Society.—The Thirty-eighth Anniversary of the above Society was celebrated in the Church of the Puritans, Union Square. During the past year this Society has rendered aid to 101 young men, who are engaged in a course of study preparatory to their entering upon the work of the Ministry of the Gospel. The number under patronage at the close of the Society's year, April 30, 1856, was 72, and they are pursuing their studies in eight different Institutions, and in all the stages of their preparatory course. The amounts of money which have been received into the Treasury during the year have been as follows ;

From collections in the churches	$4,541,20
From donations by individuals	685,00
From loans to former beneficiaries, returned	173,00
From legacies	3,362,85
Total receipts	$8,762,05

Which is about double the amount received during the preceding year. The amount expended in appropriations to the young men under the patronage of the Society has been $7,005. The church relations of the 101 beneficiaries reported is as follows : 57 Presbyterians, 37 Congregationalists, 4 Old School Presbyterians, 2 Reformed Presbyterians, and 1 Lutheran.

American Women's Educational Association—The Anniversary of this Association was celebrated on Saturday at the residence of Prof. Webster, No. 14 Lexington avenue. There was a good attendance on the occasion. The chair was occupied by B. W. Bonney. The Treasurer's Report showed a balance on hand of $1,350, and subscriptions to the amount of $5,100. The report of the Corresponding Secretary was read. It represented the following facts : That there is a calling for woman as an educator worthy to be dignified with the title of a profession, and to take rank with the highest and most commanding professions of the other sex. This institution is not designed to depart from the true idea and work of female education, but shall do that work better than it has been wont to be done.

American Baptist Missionary Union.—The Board of the American Baptist Union convened in the Oliver-street Church, on the 13th inst. Hon. Anthony Colby, of New-Hampshire, presiding. The business of the first day was chiefly of a routine character. Yesterday, the attention of all the members was greatly impressed by a report, submitted by Rev. Dr. Bailey, of Indiana, from a Committee of Reference, appointed last year to inquire into matters of difference between the Executive Committee at Boston and certain missionaries, which have caused considerable agitation since the return of a Deputation to the missions some two years since, and growing out of the transference of missionaries to new stations, restrictions concerning schools, and especially a council called in the case of Rev. Mr. Vinton. The Committee, in their report, on the whole, and after some 27 sittings, vindicated the course of the Committee and the Deputation, except in the matter of the council named. Rev. Dr. Brown, from Assam, protested against some of its statements. Rev. Dr. Wayland desired to know whether new rules had been adopted. Dr. Brown, in reply, stated the missionaries did not dispute the right of the Committee to make appropriations as they pleased. A long discussion ensued in which Dr. Hague offered a brilliant defence in favor of the Missionaries.

American Baptist Home Mission Society.—The twenty-fourth anniversary of the above society was continued at the Oliver street Baptist Church.

The annual report shows the following to be the state of the Treasury, and the progress of the society during the year :

Balance from last year's account	$140 48
Receipts from all other resources	51,401 40
Total amount of receipts during the year ending March 31, 1856	$51,541 88
Total amount disbursed same period	50,948 95
Balance in the Treasury March 31	$592 93
Add Brooklyn City Bond	500 00
Total amount of resources April 1, 1856	$1,092 93
The amount due Missionaries April 1, 1856, and liable to immediate demand	$4,874 17
Deduct amount of resources above	1,092 92
Shows a deficiency of	$3,781 24
Amount of available resources less than last year.	5,204 45
Amount of contributions and legacy only, less than last year, not including the legacies of G. N. Bleecker in 1854, which was for a special purpose	$1,616 86

Of the amount contributed, $6,809 90 did not reach the treasury until the last week in March, which occasioned very serious delay.

The number of missionaries employed by the Society for a part or the whole of the year is 113. Of this number 109 were under appointment on the 1st of April, 1855. A few new appointments were made in the course of the year, but only four became permanent arrangements, and only 52 missionaries remained in commission at the close of the year. Nine collecting agents have also been employed.

The missionaries were distributed as follows : in Canada East, 7 ; Canada West, 1 ; New-York, 2 ; Pennsylvania, 4 ; Ohio, 8 ; Michigan 5 ; Indiana, 10 ; Illinois, 17 ; Wisconsin, 25 ; Iowa, 12 ; Minnesota, 7 ; Oregon, 3 ; California 4 ; New Mexico, 5 ; Kansas, 2 ; and New Granada, 1. Making the number of States and Territories occupied, 15

Of the number of missionaries employed, 19 have preached the Gospel in foreign languages, viz.: German, Swedish, Danish, Norwegian, Dutch, French, Spanish, Pueblo and Navajo Indian. Nearly all of the 19 are of themselves of foreign nativity.

It appears from the reports received from missionaries, that 196 stations and out stations have been supplied, and the aggregate of time bestowed upon the field is equal to that of one man for 87 years. The missionaries report also the baptism of 542 persons, the hopeful conversion of 194 others, the organization of 21 churches, the ordination of 15 ministers, the completion of 9 church edifices ; progress in building 4 others.

The missionares also report the following : sermons preached, 11,269 ; lectures and addresses, 848 ; pastoral visits, 24,060 ; prayer and other meetings attended, 6,403 ; miles traveled in discharge of duty, 137,220 ; schools visited, 311 ; Sunday Schools in the churches, 145 ; Bible classes, 86 ; number of teachers, 929 ; number of scholars, 6,817 ; volumes in Sunday School libraries, 20,003 ; stations where prayer is observed, 56 ; preparing for the ministry, 16.

The churches, aided by the Society, contributed during the year, to the usual objects of Christian benevolence, $3,361,87, besides about $14,000 for the support of the cause of Christ among themselves.

Eighteen churches, recently aided by the Society, have determined to sustain their pastors hereafter without further drafts upon the treasury.

Mercantile Library Association.—This Association held its annual meeting at Clinton Hall, Astor place, Wilson G. Hunt, Esq., in the chair. From the Treasurer's Report, it appears that the receipts have been $17,007 27, and the expenditures about the same. The Report of the Board of Managers makes the following statement :—

The number of volumes in the Library on the 1st of January, 1855, was	42,795
Since added by purchase	3,004
Since added by donation	584
Total number, 1st May, 1856	46,383

To this should be added about 400 volumes ordered from London, and not yet received, and for which $400 has been remitted. The additional number of volumes may be classified as follows :—Theology, 104 ; Mental and Moral Philosophy, 810 ; Political Science, Law, &c., 487 ; History, Biography and Travels, 780 ; Mathematics, 10 ; Natural Sciences, 88 ; Medicine, 39 ; Technology, 126 ; Encyclopedia, 30 ; Fiction, 1,134.

Of which 201 are folios and quartos, 1,425 octavos, and 1,962 duodecimos. There have been 147,980 visitors to the reading-room, and 160,274 volumes given out.

Number of members, 1st May, 1856	4,925
To which add stockholders of Clinton Hall Association	1,005
Honorary members	105
Life members	9
Subscribers to Reading Room	20
Total number of persons entitled to privileges of the Library, April 30, 1856	6,064
Of these there are members paying annually $2	4,444
Subscribers paying annually $5	481—4,925

MARRIED,

On Monday evening, May 12, at the residence of the bride's father, 113 Avenue B, by the Rev. Thomas McLoughlin, of New Rochelle, brother to the groom, John McLoughlin to Mary F. McSweeney, second daughter of Callaghan McSweeney, all of this city.

I. E. Tate's Pannus Corrium Boot and Shoe store, for tender feet. A large stock of Boots, Shoes and Gaiters always on hand, in great variety, and made to order at the shortest notice, for Gentlemen, Boys and Youths—wholesale and retail, at the lowest Cash prices. Particular attention is requested to the Pannus Corrium or Leather Cloth Boots and Shoes, for those troubled with corns, bunions or tenderness of the feet. Its qualities for summer boots or shoes, surpass anything ever got up in this country for real comfort, as it keeps the feet perfectly cool, and at the same time is susceptible of the finest polish ; for a dress boot more so than any French calfskin, with one half the labor. [my 24, 3 mos.] ISAAC E. TATE.

City News.

A meeting of the Homeless Newsboys who have voluntarily placed themselves under the care and instruction of Mr. Tracy, the Superintendent of the Newsboys' Lodging House, was lately held at the North Dutch Church. About fifty newsboys were present in the front seats, while the rest of the church was filled with a highly respectable congregation. Mr. Tracy gave a history of the rise and progress of the Newsboys' Lodging House. It was opened in March, 1854. During the winter they accommodate about 35 boys a night—during summer, about 20 boys. About 400 boys are annually under their care. Many boys had been sent away to learn trades, or live with farmers, and they had prospered well. A collection was taken up which amounted to $55. The direct object of the meeting was to procure funds for the purchase of a melodeon for the Lodging House, for the use of the boys in learning to sing.

An encounter took place on the 12th, between Hon. Thomas J. Munday and Mr. Theodore S. Nims, at Keefe's Saloon, in Broadway. The quarrel was afterwards continued on the side-walk, and Munday struck Nims a blow in the face; whereupon Nims drew a pistol upon his opponent, but was prevented from doing any harm by the bystanders. The whole affair grew out of an investigation before a Special Committee of the Board of Councilmen relative to the alleged attempt at bribery, in connection with the opening of Reade street.

The society for the aid of the Cape de Verde sufferers have appointed—President, George W. Edwards; Treasurer, H. W. Smith; Secretary, Peter Rice. Only seven of the committee reported progress at the meeting on the 15th, and their united collections amounted to nearly four thousand dollars. Lieut. Bartlett announced that Archbishop Hughes had subscribed fifty dollars towards the fund now being collected to purchase food and promptly ship it to the famishing islanders.

Lieut. G. L. Willard, U. S. A., in whose case a Court of Inquiry sat about a month since in this city to examine into charges of alienation of the public funds, preferred against him by Mr. Horace Haldeman, has been honorably acquitted by the Court, and the Department of War has confirmed the finding.

A new Club, called "The Knickerbocker Club," was inaugurated, on the evening of the 15th inst., at 620 Broadway. President, Junius T. Stagg; Vice-President, John Brougham; Secretary and Proprietor, George H. Andrews.

The Commissioners of Emigration held their regular meeting on the 14th. The number of emigrants that arrived for the week, was 3,162—total for the year 24,901. To the same period last year the number was 37,100. There were remaining in the institution last week 1,647.

Daniel Burgess, Esq., of the well-known publishing house of Daniel Burgess & Co., died very suddenly on the evening of the 13th, of congestion of the lungs. Mr. Burgess was an estimable and useful man.

John Foley, the manufacturer of those celebrated gold pens so highly praised by the extensive list of competent judges subscribed to the circular to be found in our advertising columns, has removed from his rooms 167 Broadway, and elegantly fitted up a store two doors lower down town.

The Turnverein Festival.

The Turners of our city celebrated their Maifest, or Spring Festival, on the 12th. The Turners, as most of our readers are doubtless aware, are a company of German gymnasts—not professionals, but amateurs, and the word Turnverein means simply the Turner's Association. For years past they have celebrated their national custom of holding a Spring Festival in one of the suburbs of the city. The day usually chosen is the second day of Pentecost, called Whitmonday, and accordingly, the weather being fine, and yesterday being Whitmonday, the Festival was held, and the Turners and their friends were out in full force. Women included, there could not have been less than ten thousand holiday makers among the German population of this and the neighboring cities, in Harlem Garden.

The Saengerbunde of New-York, numbering 500 members, with about 300 Saengers, not included in the Bunde, were the invited guests of the Turners. So were the Turners of Brooklyn, Staten Island, Morrisania, Newark, and Paterson. We condense the day's doings from the report in the Times:—"At Harlem they were met by the Turners of Morrisania, and the procession being re-formed, they at once proceeded to the Garden. The procession was in the following order: First, 100 policemen, to preserve order and quell a disturbance if there should be any, as there was five years ago at Hoboken. Next, the Committee of Arrangements; then a band of music; afterwards two Companies of the Tenth Regiment, commanded by Captains Fauth and Nickel; then, the New-York Saengerbunde, and six Societies of Saengers not included in the Bunde; after another band came the invited Turners from other cities; then a Rifle Company, commanded by Captain Pratz; then the New-York Turnverein and their band, followed by the 11th Regiment, commanded by Captain Sanger, and a German company of Artillery, commanded by Captain Diehl. A salute of 24 guns was fired on their arrival on the ground, and at intervals throughout the day, and on their departure the cannonading was resumed. The Marshals of the day were Gen. Siegel and Ludwig Semler. Messrs. Fritz and Wetzel were the Adjutants.

To be admitted within the garden a ticket was necessary, for which 25 cents were charged. At least eight thousand persons availed themselves of these tickets, while from fifteen hundred to two thousand remained outside. That there was lager bier in abundance, enough to drown in, enough to swim in, a perfect Hellespont of it, will not be doubted by those who know how necessary that beverage is to the existence of our Teutonic friends. It was sold out of carts and wagons, out of buggies, at stalls, in booths. Barrels were mounted in the forked branches of stumpy trees, and there yielded the cooling, yeasty fluid, that not only whiskered men, but their wives, their children, and even their infants drank. They drank it out of glasses, and out of horns, long horns, big as the cornuted ornaments of the heads of buffaloes, mounted with silver and adorned with brilliant cords and tassels. The polite invitation to 'take a horn' was no metaphor, only there was a difficulty in 'taking the horn' gracefully, if one was a novice. Unless you knew how to graduate the convolutions of it, you got the beer in your bosom instead of in your mouth. We heard it said that nearly six hundred barrels of lager bier were emptied, and still the cry was for more, when, alas, no more was to be had. In revenge for the disappointment, the excursionists filled the lager bier houses on their return to the city in the evening. The gardens, during the whole festival, presented a brilliant spectacle. From the numerous shade trees, overhanging the pond, in which disported countless gold fish, the various silk banners of the Saengerbunde were suspended. The lower boughs were drooping with the variegated bonnets of the ladies. The turf beneath, moist from the late rains, and strongly suggestive of ague and rheumatism, was almost hidden by the ladies themselves—seated, recumbent, or crumpled up. These were nourishing the inner woman on viands brought from home. Their husbands or sweethearts cheered them with lager-bier. The Saengers gathered into parties and sang beautiful songs, which were totally unintelligible to the policemen gathered around; who, however, consoled themselves with apple-cakes, sausages, head-cheese, and hard-boiled eggs. Processions were formed with the parapharnalia of flags and banners, and the accessories of music and guns and bayonets, and marched round the grounds. Gymnasts achieved wonderful feats at the swing and climbing poles. Men stood on each others shoulders in pyramids. When the enjoyment was at its height, Isaac C. Barker, the acting Mayor, and George W. Matsell arrived in a carriage and drove round the grounds. They afterwards alighted and talked freely with the Turners. At 6 o'clock the immense assemblage left the garden and returned to the city by the Harlem Railroad, and by the Second and Third avenue cars. Owing to the vast number requiring conveyance, many could not find standing-room in the cars, and it was at a very late hour that many families reached their homes."

News from Buenos Ayres.

We have dates from Buenos Ayres to the 20th of March. There is little news of interest to report.

A band of military emigrants, under the command of Colonel Olivieri, had started to colonize Patagonia. News had been received of their arrival at Bahia Blanca, and they had encountered some difficulties. Change of climate, diet and habit, resulted in a bowel distemper, that commenced during their short passage, and, strange to say, after their landing extended even to the resident population. Several deaths had taken place, which naturally cast a gloom over the enterprise. It appears also, that there had been some symptoms of mutiny and insubordination, that were energetically suppressed.

There is not much intelligence concerning the expedition against the Indians on the Southern frontier. According to the latest reports the Governor was residing in the town of Azul, and General Hornos encamped with his force at the distance of about half a league. Of the movements of the Indians nothing was positively known.

It was rumored in Buenos Ayres that there were better hopes of an understanding with the Indians. Despite of this the money market has shown a slight upward tendency—the cause or causes of which we are unable to assign.

The Governor was supposed to have under his command about 200 militia men and about 1,200 horses.

The British Packet, of the 15th of March, says: President Urquiza has returned to the Parana and resumed the reins of Government on the 23d ultimo. No other news of general interest.

Of affairs in Montevideo, the British Packet says, that "the measures of the new President (Pereyra) continue to give increased satisfaction to all parties. All political emigrants are not only invited to return, but a public subscription has been raised, to aid those whose means are deficient. This is sound policy and genuine patriotism, and gives a hope of brighter days for the republic. The President, it is said, is engaged in an important administrative reform. A Council of State has been appointed, and the members selected are admitted to be good men and true, without any indication of party bias.

MARRIAGES.

At St. Mary's Church, Dublin, Francis Frederick Collins, 16th Queen's Lancers, to Miss Anna Maria Brophy.

At the Church of SS Michael and John, Hugh, son of the late Sylvester Coolahan, to Jane, relict of Thomas Moylan, Dublin.

At Henley-on-Thames, Valentine Dudley Henry Cary Elwes, to Henrietta Catharine, second daughter of Charles Lane, of Dudgmore, Co. Oxford.

At Limerick, Frederick, son of the late Samuel Evans, of South-hill, to Anna, daughter of the late William Dodd, of Annefield, Co. Clare.

At New-Zealand, William J. Warburton Hamilton, Comptroller of Customs, grandnephew of the Right Hon. Anthony Malone, to Teresa, daughter of J. Townsend, of New-Zealand.

At St. Bride's Church, Liverpool, Wm. Milward Jones, second son of Philip Jones, Bolton Hall, Co. Dublin, to Margaret, daughter of the late John Walton, of Algburth, Liverpool.

At Gonville, Jersey, Capt. Astley Cooper Key, R. N., C. B., of H. M. S. Sanspareil, son of the late Aston Key, to Charlotte Lavinia, daughter of Edmund A. McNeill, of Cushendun, Antrim.

At Clonmel, Samuel Malcolmson, of Belfast, to Margaret, daughter of the late dohn M. Murphy, of Clonmel.

At Hillsborough Church, Thomas M'Seavey, Fruit-hill, Ballinderry, to Jane, daughter of Thomas Scandrett, of Lisadian House, Hillsborough.

At Carrigaline, Richard W. Roberts, of Ardmore, Co. Cork, to Henrietta Sarah Dorman, daughter of R. Hedges Eyre White, of Glengarriffe Castle.

At Melbourne, Victoria, Jan. 9, Richard, son of the late John Snow, of Larkfield, Kilkenny, to Lucinda, daughter of the late John Alcock Dixon, of Burnley, Lancashire.

At St. Thomas's Church, by the Rev. Henry Halpin, Frederick Willington, late 18th Regiment Royal Irish, to Catharine Cambie, only daughter of Mrs. Berry, Lisduane House, Limerick.

DEATHS.

At 29 Westmoreland street, Martisa, wife of William Andrews, aged 19, and their infant daughter.

At Kilmore, P. Boyle, father of the Rev. P. Boyle, parish priest of Sligo.

At Balla, James Brown, M. D.

At Liverpool, Charles Burke, son of the late T. Burke, Esq., of Milltown, Roscommon.

At Newbermingham, aged 75, Mrs. Cashin, relict of Laurence Cashin.

At Torquay, Devonshire, John H. Clutterbuck, Esq., brother of the late Lorenzo Clutterbuck, of Killenly, Tipperary.

At Woodford Cottage, Killarney, Catherine, relict of Daniel Courtayne.

At Queen street, Derry, Mary Anne, relict of William Crawford, of Ballyarnett.

At the Rectory, Kells, county Kilkenny, Jonathan Darby, barrister-at-law.

Suddenly, Mrs. Dawson, of 27 Mountjoy square, aged 57 years.

At Atholl Crescent, Edinburgh, Lady Dundas, of Dunira.

At Eyrecourt, county Galway, Maria, relict of Capt. Robert Eyre.

At Brighton Barracks, Michael Fogarty, late master bootmaker 17th Lancers.

At St. Leonard's-on-Seo, Richard Maxwell Fox, M. P. for the county of Longford, aged 40.

April 30, at 27 Grenville street, Dublin, Ellen, wife of Wm. Hanrick.

At Douglas, Isle of Man, Frederick Wm. Hutton, aged 40.

At Oscott College, James, son of P. J. Kearney, of Milltown House, Meath.

At Chatham row, Dublin, Maurice Kelly.

At Pearmount, Donnycarney, Miss Elizabeth B. M'Aulay, aged 82.

At Mosside, Charlotte Whiteside M'Cay, relict of John M'Cay.

At Ashgrove Lodge, Kingstown, on the 29th ultimo, Bargemy M'Cullagh.

Harriette, daughter of T. M'Donald, Figginstown, Kildare.

At Clonhela, in the King's county, D. Molloy.

At Kells, Mrs. Nelson, at the advanoed age of 100 years.

April 26, at Carlow, Eliza, daughter of the late David Scott.

At Prospect Hill, Reading, Mrs. Stephens, relict of Wm. Stephens.

Elizabeth, relict of Charles Tarrant, late of Rathmines.

At Torquay, Devonshire, Benj. J. Telford, of Dublin.

At Pau, Basses, Pyrenees, Thomas Vance, barrister-at-law.

At 46 Lower Mount street, Wm. Webb.

In London, aged 78 years, Dowager Lady Wharncliffe, and mother of the Marchioness of Drogheda.

Catherine, the beloved wife of M. E. White, M. D., J. P., of Carlow, and of Ashford, county Wicklow.

At 44 Lower Mount street, Dublin, Margaret, wife of Wm. Whitsitt.

At 16 Windsor terrace, Kingstown, Winifred, wife of George Wyse, brother to the Right. Hon. Thomas Wyse, H. M.'s Minister at Athens.

Special Notices.

NEW SPLENDID MAP OF THE WORLD.

WELLS'

NEW MAP OF THE WORLD,

COMBINING THE

WORLD ON THE EQUATORIAL PROJECTION,

AND THE

WORLD ON MERCATOR'S PROJECTION.

SHOWING the principal Routes of Ocean Steamers, and KANE'S ROUTE TO THE ARCTIC REGIONS, and delineating the Route from Europe to China and Japan through the United States. With charts showing the proportions of rain on the earth, distribution of winds, scale of education, and tables of mountains, rivers, cities, &c., together with engravings exhibiting the costumes of all nations, and national standards; making a chart of the world exactly adapted to the wants of schools and academies, and the universal public. Size, 3 feet by 3 feet 9 inches, handsomely mounted on rollers. Price $8. Address J. G. WELLS, Publishing Agent, 140 Nassau street, N. Y.

Also now ready,

WELLS' NEW UNIVERSAL CHART,

World at a Glance.

Showing the World on the Equatorial Projection, Costumes of all Nations, Dial Plate, giving the relative time in all sections of the world at the same moment, Flags of all Nations, together with numerous useful Tables. The whole combined making a superb sheet 28 by 36 inches, on fine heavy paper, highly colored. Price 87½ cents. Address J. G. WELLS, Publishing Agent, 140 Nassau street, N. Y.

Also now ready,

A NEW MAGNIFICENT LITHOGRAPHIC

MAP OF KANSAS AND NEBRASKA,

INCLUDING

ARKANSAS, MISSOURI, ILLINOIS, WISCONSIN, IOWA AND MINNESOTA.

This map was executed from the very latest surveys, and can be relied upon as the most correct map published. Price 25 cents.

Also now ready,

A NEW LITHOGRAPHIC MAP OF

NICARAGUA AND CENTRAL AMERICA,

From the latest authentic surveys. Price 25 cents.

Also now ready,

A COMPLETE

HISTORY OF THE RUSSIAN WAR,

From its commencement to its close. Beautifully illustrated with two splendid Maps, and sixteen full-page Engravings. 8vo., beautifully bound in cloth. Price $1. Address J. G. WELLS, Publishing Agent, 140 Nassau street N. Y.

HOW TO RAISE BREAD WITHOUT EXPENSE—A NEW ERA IN BREAD MAKING.

Also now ready,

THE VEGETABLE AND YEAST BREAD MAKER,

OR, EVERY WOMAN HER OWN BAKER.

BY J. W. WORTHEN,

Fifteen years a practical Baker.

In this work is shown the disadvantages of using unfermented Bread, and the advantages of using fermented Bread, and that twenty-five cents is sufficient to make a barrel of flour into good wholesome bread, while the ordinary cost is from two to three dollars. This little book, which costs only 12½ cents, is worth its weight in gold to every family that will follow its directions. Price 12½ cents. J. G. WELLS, Publishing Agent, 140 Nassau street.

In Press, and will be ready May 25th,

A BOOK THAT SHOULD BE IN THE HANDS OF EVERY MAN!

WELLS'

EVERY MAN HIS OWN LAWYER,

AND UNITED STATES FORM BOOK.

Being a complete guide in all matters of law, and business negotiations, for Merchants, Manufacturers, Mechanics, Inventors, Farmers, Artists, and all men who wish to do their own Legal Business, and save themselves expense, anxiety, and LOSS OF TIME. Containing legal forms of Deeds, Mortgages, Leases, Affidavits, Depositions, Bonds, Orders, Contracts, Powers of Attorney, Certificates of Citizenship, Agreements, Assignments, Awards, Declarations, States of Demand, Demands, Letters of Credit, Arbitration Bonds, Partnership Articles, Releases, Administrators and Executors Deeds and Instructions, Orders, Wills, Codicils, Apprenticeship Indentures, Submissions, Land Jointures, Tenant's and Landlord's Agreements, Receipts, Pensions, Public Lands, Land Warrants, Composition with Creditors, Oaths, Satisfaction of Mortgages, Preemption Laws, Patent Laws, giving full instructions to Inventors. With full and complete instructions for proceeding, without legal assistance, in suits, and business transactions, of every description. Also, containing list of Property Exempt from Execution, Lien Law, Law of Limitations, Law of Contracts, Usury Laws, Guide for Proceedings in Cases of Divorce, Constitution of the United States, a Complete System of Book-Keeping, Interest Tables, Gold and Silver Coin Tables, State Seals, &c., &c., &c. 12mo. 300 pages. Price, $1.00.

No labor or expense has been spared in the preparation of this book, to make it every way fully adapted to the wants of every business man, in every State in the Union, and the Publisher has entire confidence in its superiority over any Form Book published, as a

☞ BUSINESS MAN'S COMPANION. ☜

Energetic and reliable agents wanted to sell the above publications in all parts of the United States and the Canadas.

Any of the above publications sent to any part of the country (postage paid) on receipt of the price in stamps or money. Address

J. G. Wells, Publishing Agent, 140 Nassau street, New-York.

Depot for Maps, Charts and Books especially adapted to the wants of Travelling Agents. my24

P. L. ROGERS,

FOUNDER OF THE ONE PRICE SYSTEM,

invites an inspection of the extensive

SPRING STOCK OF FASHIONABLE CLOTHING,

at his great central wholesale and retail warehouse,

CORNER OF FULTON AND NASSAU STREETS,

[opposite the Herald office.

There any gentleman can procure an elegant outfit in twenty minutes Every garment is warranted of the newest cut and of good workmanship.

Parents can fit out a family of boys with equal dispatch from a stock that includes every style, size, color, material and quality.

The selling prices, which are guaranteed to be 25 per cent. under market average, are all affixed in plain figures to the articles, and NO DEVIATION can be made.

The Order Department is stocked with the finest CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, etc., and the Clothing made to measure cannot be excelled in the world, although the prices are far lower than at other establishments.

my24tf P. L. Rogers.

Irish Potatoes.—1,000 bags of Irish POTATOES, per bark Samuel Moxley, from Belfast, in prime condition, adapted for family use; $2perbag. For sale by JOHN FARRELL, 198 Broadway, up stairs, and at STIMSON & SWIFT'S, No. 162 Fulton street, and at No. 8 Broadway, (opposite Bowling green.) my24 1t

Furniture.—F. FITZSIMMONS respectfully calls the attention of his customers and the public to his stock of elegant and substantial FURNITURE, (not made for the auction room) consisting of rich Parlor Suites in rosewood; oak Dining and Chamber Sets of every description; Upholstery in all its branches executed in the best mechanical manner. Prices unexceptionable. Warerooms No. 8 Astor place, near Broadway. my24 3m

To Military Companies and Civic Societies.

OLD MONTGOMERY HALL, 76 Prince Street.—The Subscriber, having taken a lease of the above well known popular concern, begs to inform the Members of Military Companies and Civic Trades Bodies, and Managers of Balls, that he is ready to treat for the letting of spacious and well-lighted rooms, suited for meetings, &c.

The Bar attached to the Hall is always supplied with the best imported and domestic Liquors, Brandys, Wines, Ales, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, and choicest brands of Havana Cigars. JOHN DOLAN.

Special Notices.

A CIRCULAR.

TO those engaged in Mercantile pursuits, any invention that will facilitate their labors is highly worthy of notice as well as extensive patronage. One of the most important inventions of the present age is that of a pen which possesses the necessary qualities of fineness in mark and durability in use. Those of John Foley, manufacturer Gold Pens and Pencils, 168 Broadway, New-York, stand pre-eminent. Their superior value is tested by the long time he has been engaged in our city in their manufacture.

We, the subscribers who know the value of these pens, from long use of them, cheerfully recommend them to those who wish for the most convenient article in the counting room. Signed by the following and many other parties:

Geo. S. Coe, Vice-President American Exchange Bank.
B. Murray, Assistant Cashier do. do. do.
J. Seymour, Cashier Bank of North America.
F. A. Platt, Cashier Corn Exchange Bank.
B. T. Hoogland, Cashier National Bank.
W. T. Hooker, President Continental Bank.
James McCall, President Metropolitan Bank.
H. Meigs, Jr., Cashier do do.
J. C. Beach, Cashier Marine Bank.
G. R. Conover, Cashier Importers' and Traders' Bank.
R. H. Lowery, Cashier Bank of the Republic.
W. B. Meeker, Assistant Cashier Bank of New-York.
T. D. Meiggs, Teller Bank of America.
Charles Windsor, Teller Mereantile Bank.
D. Randall, do. do. do.
J. M. Crane, Teller Shoe and Leather Bank.
J. E. Southwick, President Atlantic Bank.
George D. Arthur, Cashier do. do.
P. S. Henderson, Cashier Brooklyn Bank.
Constant W. Brown, Merchants' Bank.
Joseph W. Corlies, President St. Nicholas Bank.
George Ellis, Cashier Bank of the Commonwealth.
R. A. Tooker, Cashier Nassau Bank.
Samuel B. White, Cashier Grocers' Bank.
Edwin Ludlow, Cashier Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co.
H. W. Cheeseman, Teller Market Bank.
Samuel H. Kissam, Teller Bank of Commerce.
William F. Brown, do. do. do.
S. K. Raymond, Teller Mechanics' Bank.
George D. Lyman, Manager New-York Clearing House.
Charles Dennis, Vice-President Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co.
A. B. Neilson, President Sun Mutual Insurance Co.
Elwood Walter, President Mercantile Mutual Insurance Co.
E. Russell Hinckley, President Atlas Mutual Insurance Co.
Daniel Drake Smith, President Commercial Mutual Insurance Co.
John P. Paulison, Vice-President Astor Mutual Insurance Co.
J. F. Cox, Vice-President Great Western Insurance Co.
William Le Coney, Vice-President Pacific Mutual Insurance Co.
William K. Ackerman, Secretary Illinois Central Railroad Co.
Wm. Bement, Treasurer New-York and New-Haven Railroad Co.
E. B. Litchfield, Treasurer Cleveland and Toledo Railroad Co.
R. B. Turner, Register do. do. do.
J. M. Hopkins, Sec'y. Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana R. R. Co.
G. H. Ford, Dep. Treas. do. do. do.
J. F. Davenport, Treasurer Hudson River Railroad Co.
Edward Thompson, Agent Long Island Railroad Co.
James Rowe, Cashier New-York Herald.
A. Gordon, Bookkeeper New-York Herald.
Henry L. Meech, Cashier Daily Times.
Richard B. Connelly, County Clerk.
T. M. Wigham, of Jacob Little & Co.
J. H. Stebbins, of N. R. Cobb & Co.
Jesse Payne, of Wells, Fargo & Co.
Winslow, Lanter & Co.
R. W. Clarke, Dodge & Co.
Carpenter & Vermilye.
Meigs and Greenleaf.
H. T. Morgan & Co.
Condit, Jenkins & Co.
Quick L'Hommedieu.
Atwood & Co.
G. S. Robbins & Co.
T. Ketcham & Co.
Drake & Bradford.
E. S. Munro & Co.
Wetmore & Robert.
Stevens, Wallace & Morris.
Wells, Butterfield & Co.
S. B. Chittenden & Co.
W. Carpenter, Ide & Co.
C. E. & W. J. Babcock.
Sheldon, Hoyt & Co.
Bird & Neilson.
Barclay & Livingston.
E. W. Tiers & Co.
Brown & De Rosset.
Coolidge & Young.
Shepard & Nelson.
Spies, Christ & Jay.
H. M. Schieffelin & Fowler.
Fairchild & Fanshawe.
Beale, Melick & De Witt.
Carhart, Bacon, Clark & Co.
Brewer & Caldwell.
American Express Co.
Hall, Dana & Co.
Gage, Sloans & Dater.
Afwater, Knapp & Woodruff.
Richards & McHarg.
Johnson & Higgins.
James & Henry McBride.
Moody and Telfair.
L. Roberts & Co.
Waldo, Barey & Co.
Jewell, Harrison & Co.

These Pens vary in size and price, viz., $1, $1 25, $2, $3 and $4 each, with complete silver extension cases, new style pencil, &c., attached are $2, $2 50, $3, $3 50, and $4 each. The undersigned is manufacturer of the celebrated "John Foley's bank pen," price $3 and $4 for the large size, including holder. All pens of my manufacture are made of fine gold, finished in the best manner; points warranted not to come off, and guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction; if not, will exchange them or return the money. Any of the above pens will be sent by mail on receipt of the price. Pens and cases made to order for trade, on the most advantageous terms.

JOHN FOLEY, Gold Pen Manufacturer,
1mo 168 Broadway, New-York.

GREENWOOD LAKE HOTEL,

Orange Co., (near Chester,) State of New-York.

THE proprietor of the Parquette Saloon, under the Broadway Theatre, respectfully informs the public that he has leased the above fashionable watering place which has been carried on for years by Col. Felter, and trusts from the manner in which he has treated his city friends to the best the market could afford, to merit the continuance of their favors during the Summer months. The Hotel has all the advantages necessary for a summer residence—a copious lake furnishing sport for gentlemen addicted to piscatorial pursuits; carriages suitable for invalids; woods and shady groves for lovers—in fact, everything conducing to pleasure and health during the warm weather now approaching. The Hotel is easy of access, Stages meeting each train of the New-York and Erie Railroad at Chester.

All applications for Rooms, to be addressed to George Mellon, as above, or at 826 Broadway, N. Y.
Reference—S. Cauldwell, 5 and 7 Dey street. my8 3m

STATEN ISLAND
FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dy and re-finished with great success.

Also ladies and gentlemen's garments, Shawls, &c., &c.
BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 3 John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

DRY GOODS AND EMBROIDERIES.

H. MAGEE, has removed to 140 Atlantic street, Brooklyn, where he has opened a large stock of Spring and Summer Goods, which he will sell at very low prices. my8 1m

Lumber and Timber for Export and City Trade.—THOS. RIGNEY & Co. offer for sale at their yard foot of thirtieth-street, North River, a general assortment of Lumber and Timber, suitable for export and the city trade. Shippers And Builders will find it to their advantage to examine their stock previous to buying. Apply as above, or to J. Pickard, Agent, 26 Bridge street. my17

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE for Servants, 129 Waverley Place, two doors from Sixth avenue, New-York.—A large number of competent help can be suited with good situations, in city and country, without delay. Employers in the city and country supplied with the best of female help. [my17 3m] WM. O'BRIEN, Proprietor.

KNOX'S
OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 Beekman street, Up Stairs.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and Single counting-room Desks, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office Desks from 3 to 6 ft., of Mahogany, blackwalnut and oak; cases for Books and pigeon-holes. Office chairs, cushions, lounges and Office Tables of every description. my17 tf

REMOVAL.

McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

Special Notices.

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.
Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my3 3m

"TERRA COTTA"
CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental. Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture, lowest rates. Long Island Pottery. Depot, 82 Nassau street, New-York. my10 3m

HERRING'S
PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as Bonds, Mortgages, Deeds, Notes, and Books of Account than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded Medals as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
Green Block, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,
No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6¼ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $80 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

Pianos and Music.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durab quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

Information is wanted of Henry Murray and Margaret his wife,—before her marriage, Margaret Donegan,—of Ireland, they can hear of something very greatly to their advantage on addressing, (post paid,) Alexander P. Garesche, St. Louis, Mo. my10 3t

Information Wanted—Of Richard, Michael, and James Healy, formerly of Mountmellery, county of Waterford, Ireland, by their mother, the Widow Healy, at E. Connolly's, 229 West 39th street, N. Y. my17 1t

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

THE GREATEST WONDER OF THE AGE!

A REMEDY WHICH CURES IN FIVE MINUTES.—M. LEROUX'S French Cholera Cognac Bitters.—This wonderful and scientific compound is recommended by the most eminent and learned physicians of all Europe and America, and enjoys the best reputation of anything similar ever offered. It is without doubt the best, most efficient and generally acknowledged remedy against Cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, and complaints of the stomach in general. The numerous patients who have tried it according to directions, have invariably found relief in a very short time, and the best proof of it is, that since this standard remedy was introducee in the armies of the allies in the Crimea, the mortality of the soldiers from Cholera and similar diseases was reduced by over 75 per cent.; in consideration of which, the inventor was presented by the French and English governments with a gold medal, bearing the inscription, "Hail! M. Leroux, the great Chemist and inventor, by whose knowledge our armies are preserved from Cholera."

This invaluable preparation is also a remedy for biliousness, indigestion, weakness, and general derangement of the stomach. Upon being taken, it creates appetite, and prevents the heaviness attendant upon eating, by persons who are dyspeptic.

In this city, also, this remedy has been tried with the most undoubted success, and the undersigned can produce the best testimonials of our most celebrated physicians, as to its immediate and complete success, which he will be happy at any time to show to any that may wish to see them. S. Steinfeld, sole agent for the United States, No. 70 Nassau street, corner of John.

P. S.—Those not having money to pay, may call at my place from 8 to 5 P. M. and receive this remedy gratis. my17 3m

Medical.

DRS. GILBERT AND KENNEDY,

TREAT

CANCERS, TUMORS, ULCERS, &c.,

WITHOUT SURGICAL OPERATIONS.

Office 746 Broadway, cor. Astor Place, N. Y.

CERTIFICATES FROM

Ex. Gov. T. M. Tucker.	Hon. T. Butler King.	Judge Alex. Walker.
Judge F. W. Hugling.	Gen. Narcisso Lopez.	Col. Maunsel White.
Capt. Isaiah Sellers.	Capt. Wm. Leathers.	Thos. E. Bond, M. D.
A. S. Baldwin, M. D.	W. P. Allison, M. D.	J. S. Peacocke, M. D.

PERMISSION TO REFER TO

Ex. Gov. Jas. C. Jones. Hon. Fred. B. Stanton.
B. F. Palmer, Inventor of "Palmer's Artificial Leg."
Francis Grice, Naval Constructor, Navy Yard, Phila.
Proprietors of the Girard House, Philadelphia. my24 1m

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

Redding's Russian Salve is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

"Eye and Ear."—Doctor Henderson, Oculist and Aurist, 419 Broadway, corner of Canal street, treats all diseases of the eye and ear, without cupping, leeching, blistering or the use of calomel. Within the past two years upwards of thirty cases of blindness from inflamation have been restored to sight, to whom reference can be given, (hundreds of which can be seen in my circular,) by inclosing three postage stamps. Electro-chemical Medicated Vapor and Sulphur, hot and cold water baths. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Sundays and evenings by appointment. 419 Broadway, corner of Canal st., New-York. my17 3m

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

DR. J. ALLEN, (late Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery,) invites attention to his improved method of constructing Artificial Dentistry, which combine the following advantages:

1st,—There are no seams or crevices for the lodgement of food, to vitiate the saliva, or infect the breath. The interstices are all filled with a silicious compound, which is so applied as to form an artificial gum; this is fused at a high heat, which unites the Teeth firmly to each other, and to the plate upon which tney are set, thus imparting great strength and lifelike appearance to the denture.

2d,—The Teeth for this style of work are made perfectly natural in form and shade, and when properly set with the artificial gum as above, exhibits that harmony with the other features which characterize the natural organs.

3d,—The original form and expression of the mouth and face can be restored. This is done by having the denture so constructed as to bring out the sunken portions and sustain them in their proper position; this is an important feature in this style of work, to which the author devotes special attention.

4th,—A clear and distinct articulation of speech is restored. This is effected by having the inside of the teeth, and artificial gum, of a natural form, to which the tongue is readily adapted; this prevents the hissing or muffled sounds so often observed in speaking or singing, in persons wearing artificial teeth.

The Rooms are at No. 30 Bond Street, New-York. A Pamphlet containing more full particulars, sent free, to those who desire it. ap26 3m

H. G. LUTHER,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST,

No. 698 Broadway, Second House above Fourth st.

HAVING enjoyed an extensive practice during the last twelve years, feels confident of his ability to give perfect satisfaction to all who may honor him with their preference. He is prepared to perform all operations connected with his profession, in the most faithful manner, and in strict accordance with scientific principles, embracing all the recent improvements of the day.

References of the most respectable character given if desired. Patronage respectfully solicited.

☞ N. B. Teeth extracted without pain. my17 3m

New School of Medicine and Pharmacy, the last unfolding of the art of healing. Before any disease can be treated successfully, its effect upon every part of the body—either directly or sympathetically—its character and the cause of its presence in the system must be perfectly understood. But this can be truly done only by the power of the internal vision. By it the Psychical Physician has at command an instrument compounding the perfected microscope and telescope, by which he can, on one side, not only resolve the pretended simple atom of the chemist, but those of light, heat, electricity, magnetism, etc., and on the other, see those atoms at thousands of miles. He can, therefore, at any distance, dissect each particle of your being, with unerring glance. With equal facility and clearness he can select the remedies, and apply them in the manner best suited to your state and condition.

I frequently find, in examining patients who suppose themselves far gone in consumption, or hopelessly affected with heart disease, that no such disease existed, or if either of the organs be deranged, that the difficulty is slight and easy to be removed, but that their fears have magnified a trifling disturbance into a fatal malady. Again, there are those whose life hangs upon a thread, and they scarcely feel that they need help. This comes from the fact that their vitality is so far exhausted that they have not the power to feel that they are rapidly passing away, and that unless a speedy change is wrought, their days are numbered.

It is particularly designed that all supposed hopeless cases should try this new method of cure. It is very easy, the medicines purely vegetable, and very palatable. When electricity or magnetism is used, it is done in the mildest way. No one can fail to be relieved if (as in some cases) it is not possible to effect a cure. Generally, the sufferer of years' standing is relieved in a few hours, and cured in a few weeks.

For the nervously debilitated female, this practice is a boon not to be hastily thrown aside. Thousands may be made well and happy who have long since despaired of health and life.

Diseases of the Lungs, in their varied forms and most advanced states, Heart, Liver, and Kidney diseases, with the worst cases of Dyspepsia and Cancerous affections of the Stomach, are all curable.

Dropsy, Paralysis, Palsy, Spinal affections, and Fits, speedily relieved and almost always cured.

The worst cases of Diarrhœa, Cholera, and Small-pox cured in a few hours. Mrs. M. J. MABIN, M.D.,
37 Lafayette Place, (first st. east of Broadway, bet. 4th and 8th sts.

Office hours from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., exclusively for ladies, and from 2 to 5 P. M. for gentlemen—Wednesdays excepted. All other hours by appointment.

Persons applying by letter must state the name, sex, and age of the patient, together with the leading features of the case.

Terms:—For first examination and prescription, $5, if the patient is present, and $10 if absent. All subsequent examinations, $5.

Sunday for the poor, without charge. my24,1t

Dr. J. J. McGowan, Physician and Surgeon, Graduate of Harvard University, Fellow of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Medical Societies, etc., has removed to No. 69 Canal street, New-York, a few doors from Broadway, where he will attend to calls in every branch of the medical profession. Dr. McG. will devote particular attention to chronic diseases, and those of women and children. m10 1t

A Retired Clergyman, restored to health in a few days, after many years of great nervous suffering, is anxious to make known the means of cure. Will send (free) the prescriptions used. Direct to
Rev. JOHN M. DAGNALL,
my10 3m No. 59 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

All eye-diseases cured by Dr. C. W. Upham, Oculist, Successor to Dr. Roehrig, 334 Fourth street, near Broadway. No cupping, bleeding, or salivating. Cataract cured in many cases without operating. Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M. References given. Persons residing in any part of the country, can be treated by correspondence. my17 4t

Wanted.—Good hands to embroider on linen. Apply at Gehin's Bazaar (under St. Nicholas Hotel,) 513 Broadway. my17 3m

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

☞ Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	3s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 3s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap198m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap263m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

IRISH, ENGLISH, AND SCOTCH LINEN GOODS.

THE subscribers who are exclusive dealers in LINEN GOODS, would invite the attention of housekeepers and others to their complete stock of

Shirting Linens,	Towelings,
Sheeting Linens,	Diapers,
Pillow-case Linens,	Lawns,
Table Linens,	Linen C. Handkerchiefs;

or, Linen goods of any description, which they offer for sale at very low prices.

J. C. Milliken & Co., 748 Broadway, ap26 above Astor place.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap263m

---

LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY,

EGAN & CO.,

THE proprietors take leave to inform their customers and the public, that they have moved their entire stock of Linen Goods to the above store, where they will from this time forward continue the wholesale together with the retail, of

Linens and Dry Goods,

of all kinds, at the lowest cash price. They are all of their own importation, and in order to make a permanent trade, they will retail them at the importer's prices. Their stock consists of Linen Sheeting, all widths and qualities; Damask Table Cloths, white and brown; Damask Table Linens, Diapers, Hucks, Back Towelings, Napkins, D'Oylies, White and Brown Drills, Checks and Stripes, all warranted pure linen, together with a large lot of

New Silks,

from 4s. to 12s. per yard; Stripes and Plaids, a splendid lot of Black Silks.

There are no damaged or bankrupt's goods included in this list, and they will sell lower than any other house having the same articles. Having a buyer always in Ireland, they are in a position and determined to sell low, and establish their house on the same principle as the "Old Linen Hall," in Dublin. Ladies are respectfully requested to examine the above stock, as affording a large assortment in variety and value. Amongst them will be found a splendid lot of 5-8 Damask and Snowdrop Napkins, from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, tickings and bleached muslins, cheap by the piece.

Striped Poplins,

A large asssrtment, from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per yard, with all other kinds of Dry Goods, to meet the wants of Spring and Summer purchasers.

ap261m EGAN & CO., Linen Hall, 332 Bowery.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9ih Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap193m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

THE undersigned have formed a Copartnership, under the name and firm of Foot, Cole & Co., for the transaction of the Paper Commission Business, at 32 Beekman street.

FOOT, COLE & CO.

JOEL W. FOOT,	C. D. HARMAN,
CHAS. COLE,	CARLTON LE SAGE.

Mr. H. C. Goodwin, has no further connection with us. ap19

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 193 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap198m

---

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists', Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, Oils, Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather Belting.

☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON all CONSIGNMENTS.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.

ap198m*

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 252 BROADWAY.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co.,	Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co.,
C. Meletta,	James Cook & Co. 6m

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

ROBERT IRWIN,

CHEAP BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

my10 156 Chatham street, opposite James' st., New-York. 3m

R. HOGAN,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

UMBRELLA AND PARASOL MANUFACTURER,

374 BOWERY, NEAR FOURTH STREET.

Repairing neatly executed. my17 3m*

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

OFFICE, 23½ SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK,
ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my31y

---

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street,
ap263mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this conntry, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN, ANDREW McSHANE, JAMES DOWLING. } NEW-YORK. 3m

---

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

☞ Office 138 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap263m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap263m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

HOSEY & RILEY,

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,

600 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

Private entrance on the first floor, 134 Crosby street.

☞ Hosey & Riley invite their friends to give them a call.

my24 3m HOSEY & RILEY.

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

The Best Hair Dye.—DR. O. M. BALLARD'S new article received the highest premium at the World's Fair and American Institute, where it was examined by the distinguished Chemists, Dr. Chilton, and Prof. John Torrey, and pronounced the best. For sale by the best Druggists. Principal office and store, 498 Broadway, New-York. my17 3m

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES 6 CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 31, 1856. NO. 8.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. VIII.

Editorial.

SMITH O'BRIEN.
GENERAL CASS AND NICARAGUA—GREAT GUNS IN THE PARK.
IRISH REPRESENTATIVES—PAST AND PRESENT.
MILITARY MEMOIRS—The Meagher Guard, Philadelphia; St. Louis Washington Guard.

Literature.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY—Irish Memories—their Significance and Beauty—their Harmony with the Republic—Part II.
SPANISH CONQUEST IN AMERICA.
MR. HELP'S HISTORY.
NOTES FROM ELKANAH WATSON'S DIARY.
AN APOLOGY FOR THE PEOPLE.
HARPERS' MAGAZINE, &c.

Poetry.

SONG FOR THE TIMES—By Mister Blake.

Miscellaneous.

Nicaraguan Meeting in the Park—European Summary—Presidential Facts and Rumors—Congressional News—American News—Irish News—Debate in Parliament on the Evictions in Galway—English News—Important from Kansas—General Miscellany.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. MAHONY, Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. P. WALSH, Cincinnati, Ohio.
—— COURTNEY, Charleston, South Carolina.
BRICE, 100 Exchange Place, New Orleans.
JOHN PLASTO, 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me. ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O. DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y. MORRISEY, " "
McGOWANS, Portland, Me. DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.
JOHN C. CLARKE, 38 Newark avenue, Jersey City.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.
POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOTS, SHOES AND GAITERS,

Wholesale and Retail,

MADE TO ORDER BY

FLORIN BROOKS,

188 Fulton street, New-York, opposite Church street, West of Broadway.
my10 1m

GEO. McDONNELL,

BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURER,

32 PARK ROW, NEXT DOOR TO LOVEJOY'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK.

☞ Boots, Shoes, and Gaiters of the best quality made to order.

3m.my10 Geo. McDonnell.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 34 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 300 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from EDWARD H. DIXON, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, FROM THE CRADLE TO THE GRAVE;" Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above. ap26tf

Publications.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL. 4 vols., very scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
HAYES' BALLADS OF IRELAND. 2 vols. in one, 12mo. cloth, $1.
IRELAND ILLUSTRATED. By Petrie, Bartlett and Baynes. 4to, morocco, gilt edges.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornelian. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his Son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.
O'BRIEN'S ROUND TOWERS. Scarce.
MUSGRAVE'S IRISH REBELLIONS. 2 vols., 8vo.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Burke's Speeches, 1 25. Griffin's Adventures of an Irish Giant, 18mo., cloth, 25 cents. Wild Irish Girl, 12mo., cloth, 50 cents.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory, By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE.

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

(JAMES B. KIRKER,)

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK,

PUBLISH the largest and finest assortment of Catholic Bibles, Testaments, Prayer Books, Tales, School Books, and other works, to be found in the United States.

An extensive supply of all other Catholic articles always on hand.
Catalogues of their publications sent free of postage.

E. D. & BROTHER HAVE JUST ISSUED

1. THE LOVE OF MARY. Devotions for the month of May. 38c.
2. THE YOUNG CRUSADERS. A tale. 38c.
3. HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR; or Meditations on the Blessed Sacrament. 25c.
4. THE CONVERSION OF RATISBONNE. 25c.
5. CONSCIENCE, or the Trials of May Brooke, a tale by Mrs. A. H. Dorsey. 2 vols; each 38c.

4t May 24

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth,	$0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth,	0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assisciun. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl.,	0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each,	0 37½
Edma and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth,	0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to	4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to	12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to	12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to	25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled. JOHN HAMILTON, tf S. W. JOHNSON.

LECTURE

BY

MOST REV. ARCHBISHOP HUGHES,

IN THE

ACADEMY OF MUSIC, FOURTEENTH STREET,

On THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 12th 1856.

The proceeds to be applied to the Church ofthe Immaculate Conception, Fourteenth street, now in progress of erection.

The Lecture will commence at 8 o'clock Tickets One Dollar. my31 3t

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Bpom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1yr R. J. TODD'S, 86 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

Publications.

A BOOK FOR EVERY FAMILY.

Now Ready,

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES,

In their Distinctive Characters, Associations, Missions, Labors, Transformations and Ultimate Rewards,

PERSONIFIED AND EXHIBITED AS A DIVINE FAMILY.

AN ILLUSTRATED ALLEGORY.

By the Rev. D. D. BUCK.

Truth, Liberty, Faith, Hope, Charity, Mercy, Justice, Contemplation, Impulse, Zeal, Enterprise, Industry, Patience, Humility, Virtue, and Temperance, are each distinctly personated, and the beauty and loveliness of their characters and conduct so forcibly exhibited, as to render the work, it is believed, not only interesting to the general reader, but an especially welcome visitant in Christian families.

In 1 vol. 290 pp. 12mo. extra cloth, gilt. Price $1.25.

Single copies sent, post paid, on receipt of price.  Booksellers and Agents supplied upon liberal terms. Address

MILLER, ORTON & MULLIGAN, Publishers,
No. 25 Park Row, New-York, or No. 107 Genesee street, Auburn.

In Press, Ready May 28th.

THE STATES AND TERRITORIES OF THE GREAT WEST,

INCLUDING OHIO, INDIANA, ILLINOIS, MISSOURI, MICHIGAN, WISCONSIN, MINNESOTA, IOWA, KANSAS AND NEBRASKA;

Their Geography, History, Advantages, Resources and Prospects—comprising their Local History, Institutions and Laws. Giving a Table of Distances, and the most Direct Routes and Modes of Conveyance; also, pointing out the Best Districts for Agricultural, Commercial, Lumbering and Mining Operations,

By JACOB FERRIS.

In one volume, with a new and accurate Map, embracing each of the above States and Territories, and numerous Illustrations. About 352 pp. 12mo. cloth. Price $1.25.

For sale by all Booksellers, News and Travelling Agents, to whom liberal terms are given. Address

Miller, Orton & Mulligan, Publishers,
my31 2t] No. 25 Park Row, New-York, or No. 107 Genesee street, Auburn.

"A PHENOMENON IN LITERATURE."

NOW READY.

PAUL FERROLL;

A TALE.

From the Fourth London Edition. 12mo, Cloth, $1.

NOTICES OF THE ENGLISH PRESS.

PAUL Ferroll is a most strikingly original production. It may be regarded as a phenomenon in literature—a book that must be read and cannot be forgotten.—Morning Post.

The fruit of much thoughtful investigation is presented to us in the character of Paul Ferroll. * * We do not need to be told how he felt and why he acted thus and thus; it will be obvious to most minds from the very opening pages; but the power of the story is not weakened by this early knowledge; rather is it heightened, since the artistic force of contrast is grand and fearful in the two figures who cling so closely together in their fond human love.—Morning Chronicle.

Paul Ferroll is a book that will be very much read, talked about, and marvelled at.—Globe.

The art displayed in presenting Paul Ferroll throughout the story is beyond all praise.—Examiner.

The incidents of the book are extremely well managed.—Athenæum.

It is one of the most singular and striking works we have ever read.—Economist.

To all the elements of powerful effect, the story adds the merit of being ably and forcibly written.—John Bull.

We have seldom read so powerful a romance. We can find no fault in it as a work of art. It leaves us in admiration, almost in awe of the powers of its author.—New Quarterly.

Published by J. S. Redfield,
1t may 31 34 Beekman street, New-York.

THE BALLADS OF IRELAND;

COLLECTED BY

EDWARD HAYES,

Containing Selections from all the Irish Poets.

They are Ballads of the Affections, Fairy Ballads, Legendary Ballads, Miscellaneous Ballads, Translated Ballads, &c., &c.

THE following are among the Authors:—Banim, Ansty, Barry, Beamish, Blacker, Brown, Callanan, Carleton, Charlotte Clarke, Croker, Croly, Thos. Davis, Francis Davis, De Vere, Dowling, Downing, Drennan, Dufferin, Duffy, Ferguson, Forrest, Fox, Frazer, Gallaher, Goldsmith, Griffin, Halpin, Hill, Hoey, Irwin, Keegan, Kelly, Kenealy, Kennedy, Knowles, Lane, Lover, Lynch, Madden, Maginn, Mahony, Mangan, McCarthy, McDermott, McDavitt, Meehan, McGee, Moore, Mulchinock, Rev. Dr. Murray, John Fisher Murray, Norton, O'Connell, Parnell, Ryan, Simmons, Smythe, Starkey, Sterling, Supple, Waller, Walsh, Wilde, Williams, Wolfe, &c.

The whole comprising 725 closely printed pages, making the most remarkable and interesting book ever presented to the people of this country.

Price—in one volume, $1. In two volumes, $1.25. The price of the Irisi edition is $2.50.

☞ For sale by all booksellers.

The book will be sent to any part of the U. S., postage free, on receipt of the above prices. Published by my17 tf PATRICK DONAHOE, 23 Franklin-st., Boston, Mass.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,
ap196m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

JOHN FOLEY,

MANUFACTURER OF FINE GOLD PENS,

BEST QUALITY ONLY.

GOLD AND SILVER PENCIL CASES.

my24tf No. 163 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

E. M. A.

☞ A Meeting of the E. M. A. will be held at Hibernian Hall, on Sunday, June 1, at 3 o'clock P. M. The Council will assemble at 1½ o'clock P. M. same day and place. EDWARD BUTLER, President.

JAMES GIBBONS, Secretary.

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $180; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
88 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,

OLD LINE PACKETS,

Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap26 3m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

Shipping.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP LINE.

CITY OF BALTIMORE....CITY OF WASHINGTON.
CITY OF MANCHESTER...KANGAROO.

THE magnificent new steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Leitch, 2,367 tons, 500 horse power, will sail from Philadelphia on the 26th June, and from Liverpool on the 16th July. Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including cooked provisions. Persons wishing to send for their friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—F. S. Saxton.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—————.....Toronto, C. W.—D. K. Feehan.

BLACK BALL LINE

OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 8m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, ARTHUR M'AVOY, } Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." —— KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Brookes' Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. GEO. B. MAGRATH, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (—— ——,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. M. KEATING, Com'dt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White st. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (—— ——) drill each —— at ——. —— NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G, (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (Edward Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." MICH'L. FLOOD NAGLE, Capt.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 88 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 104 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. PATRICK O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa. M. W. MORRISS, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

8mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

European News.

BY THE CANADA AND FULTON.

The English steamship Canada, Capt. Long, from Liverpool, May 10, arrived at Halifax 20th inst. The United States steamship, Fulton, Capt. Wotten, from Havre, via Southampton, 7th inst., arrived at this port 21st.

The most important feature in the news is the appearance in the London papers of Lord Clarendon's latest dispatch on the Enlistment question, embodying the views of the British Government.

The Peace was absorbing all attention. The treaty has been discussed in the English Houses of Parliament. Both Houses voted a congatulatory address to the Crown, but not without opposition. An adjournment of the debate took place in the Commons, but the address was voted without a division.

The Queen held a court at Buckingham Palace, on Thursday, the 7th inst., for the purpose of receiving the addresses on the peace from the House of Lords, the House of Commons and the city of London. The deputations came in great state and numbered nearly a hundred persons. The Queen briefly acknowledged the addresses, and expressed her satisfaction that peace was re-established on a basis that affords security for its permanence.

Both Houses of Parliament have recorded a vote of thanks to the army and navy. Lord Panmure moved the resolution and was seconded by Earl Derby in the Lords. In the Commons, Lord Palmerston made the motion and Mr. Disraeli seconded it.

A pension of £1,000 sterling for life is to be settled on Gen. Williams, who is also created a Baronet, by the title of Sir William F. Williams of Kars.

Lord Elgin postponed his motion of inquiry respecting the troops ordered to North America until after the holidays.

Lord Colchester gave notice of a motion requiring Parliament to express its approval of the policy of abandoning the maritime rights so long held, as the Congress of Paris had pledged Great Britain to do.

To celebrate the peace, the Queen has granted amnesty to all political offenders; consequently Smith O'Brien, Frost, Jones, and others, may return home. Special exception, however, is made against those who escaped to the United States.

The Lord Mayor of London had given the usual banquet to the Ministry. The whole tone of the speeches on the occasion was congratulatory respecting the peace. Count Persigny, the French Ambassador, said nothing could sever the alliance between France and England. Lord Palmerston replied, reciprocating the sentiment and complimenting the Ministers present of Sardinia and Turkey. Lord Clarendon then spoke, glorifying the peace and complimenting Russia. The usual toasts followed, and the company separated early. The American Minister was not present, being engaged at the annual dinner of the Literary Fund, where he made a speech.

Mr. Dallas, with his family and Secretaries of Legation, also assisted at the Queen's state ball and levee.

The Crimean Board of Inquiry continues its sessions, but they have lost all their interest, Col. Tulloch being sick.

May 29th is to be a holiday throughout Great Britain to celebrate the Peace.

A regiment of the German yagers, at Plymouth, had mutinied. The ringleaders were arrested. They complained that the drill was too severe, and that the only enlisted till the end of the war.

France.

A bill was introduced into the Legislature granting 400,000f. for the baptism of the Imperial Prince in June. The Moniteur publishes the monthly account of the Bank of France, and the balance was satisfactory.

A son of the King of Sweden, the King of Wurtemberg, and Maximillian, brother of the Emperor of Austria, are visiting Louis Napoleon.

Count Edgar Ney is to be the bearer of Napoleon's letter in reply to the Czar's notification of his accession to the throne of Russia.

Count Morny has been appointed Minister to St. Petersburg, and Count Orloff has taken for him the Woronzoff Palace on a three year's lease.

Speculation on the Paris Bourse had reached a great height, and English commercial papers were warning British capitalists against it.

The weather in France for several days previous to the sailing of the steamer had been very severe.

Russia.

Advices from St. Petersburg state that a circular has been issued by the Minister of the Interior, exhorting the serfs to obedience to their owners under penalty of the Emperor's displeasure and a severe punishment.

The Minister of the Interior has also addressed a circular to the Marshals of the various Governments and provincial colleges of nobility, invoking their patriotism and calling upon them to assist the Emperor and his Government in healing the wounds that the war has inflicted, by increasing the general welfare of the people.

A reduction of the Russian fleet has been effected. Three divisions will be stationed in the Baltic. The Pontus fleet will resume the denomination of the fleet of the Black Sea.

The Russians had commenced the evacuation of the fortresses of Reine and Ismail. The journals of St. Petersburg publish a circular addressed to the Heads of Governments, and to the marshals of the nobility, recommending them to seek out new branches of industry, at the same time that they maintain the serfs in obedience to the nobles.

The treaty of peace had been published at St. Petersburg. Gen. Soakhozanet has been gazetted Minister of War, and Prince Gorchakoff, Minister of Foreign Affairs, with M. Tolstoi as his adjoint. An Imperial Manifesto announces that the coronation of the Emperor will take place at Moscow in August.

Prussia.

The Prussian Chambers were closed on the 3d inst. by the King in person. In the course of his speech His Majesty said:

"When, five months back, I bid you welcome from this place, European relations were still involved in the gravest complications. Their issue was still involved in the obscurity of the future; and it was not impossible that dangers and sacrifices, which the gracious providence of God had till then averted from our country, might have been in store for us. Since then, in consequence of the wise moderation of the belligerent Powers, the long-desired work of peace has been happily brought to a conclusion, with the co-operation and common consent of my Government."

The Prussian army is to be reduced to 114,402 men, from 227,212, its strength on the war footing.

The following is the published account of the evacuation of the French in the Crimea, as regulated by Marshal Pelissier: 1. The Zouaves, who are going to Africa. 2. The second corps, under the orders of Gen. Bosquet, and the divisions of Generals Know, Camus, Espinasse, and Mottrionjes. 3. The first corps, commanded by Gen. Salles, consisting of Autemarre's, Levaillant's, Pate's, and Banat's divisions. 4. The third corps, commanded by Gen. Macmahon, consisting of Herbillon's, Aurelle's, and Chapeloup-Leubat's divisions. The cavalry will return in the following order: 5. The Kamiesch troops, Sol's brigade. 6. The Constantinople troops, Bosquet's brigade.

The Evening Express says:—"We learn that the Governments of England and France have resolved to lay such representations before the King of Naples as will, it is confidently expected, lead to an amnesty for all political offences, and liberate from their loathsome dungeons the long-tortured victims of his vindictive wrath, and restore to their homes and families hundreds of exiles whose only fault has been loving and daring to serve their country. This determination on the part of France and England has roused Austrian intervention, not, however, this time, to prolong or exasperate the state of cruelty and repression against which the Allied Cabinets are prepared to raise their voices, but, if possible, to render their interference in the affairs of Naples unnecessary. The Cabinet of Vienna has, in short, determined, if we are correctly informed, to urge King Ferdinand at once to grant an amnesty, and thus avoid the appearance of yielding to the pressure of England and France."

Advices from Spain state that Valencia was tranquil, and at Malaga, where disturbances were apprehended, the drawing of the conscription took place with perfect order.

There was a report at Berlin that Austria intended to ask a pecuniary grant from the Germanic Diet, towards the expense of its army of occupation in the Danubian Principalities. The plea will be that the occupation was mainly with a view to the safety and tranquillity of Germany.

By a telegraphic message from Berlin, there appeared to be a probability of Queen Victoria paying that city a visit. It was said that Prince Frederick William would carry a pressing invitation to Her Majesty to be present at the marriage of the Princess Louisa with the Prince Regent of Baden in September next.

M. Von Richthofen, the Prussian Minister to Mexico, is now at Berlin on leave, has been appointed to represent Prussia in the Commission on the affairs of the Danubian Principalities.

Belgium.

The Senate was convocated for Wednesday, the 14th inst. Count Walewski's demand to muzzle the press of Belgium created intense excitement.

A dispatch from Brussels says: "In the Chambers on Wednesday the Foreigh Minister in answering an interrogatory in regard to the speech of Count Walewski on the press of Belgium, replied that that speech had not been officially communicated to Government. When that communication should be made the answer would be ready and would be communicated to all the Governments, and would formally maintain the rights of a constitutional and independent country."

It was asked further whether any power had asked for any modification of the laws relating to the Press in Belgium. The Minister said he would answer in one word—"Never." The meeting broke up amid immense cheering and enthusiasm.

Sardinia.

Questions relative to the Conferences have been put to the Count Cavour in the Sardinian Chambers, He replied that; pending the negotiations concerning Italy, he could not speak fully. With respect to the treaty of peace, he believed it would insure great moral and material advantages.

The Sardinian view of the Italian question was adopted, while that of Austria was rejected—hence the questihn of Italy is and must continue to be an European matter. He added that the relations of Austria and Piedmont are not ameliorated by any thing that has occurred, and that the Sardinian government may rely on the people to meet every contingency.

A later dispatch from Turin says the memorandum presented by Count de Cavour and the Marquis of Willimarina to the Chambers, shows that Austria, having at the Conference refused to discuss the condition of Italy, Sardinia is the only state which offers a barrier to revolution, and demands the cooperation of England and France in carrying out reforms. It shows that the Austrian occupation is opposed to the interest of Italy and Europe, and contrary to the treaty, to humanity and justice. Finally, the memorandum calls on England and France to unite with Sardinia in the application of an efficacious remedy.

Turkey.

Disturbances continued in Turkish Asiatic territory, and there had been some excesses near Sumatra. There is nothing additional as to the troubles at Nazareth.

Accounts from Constantinople to the 24th ult, state that the Sheriff of Mecca, having been recalled, refused to give up his post. Fifty thousand Arabs in arms sustained his resistance, and are said to have refused to permit the pilgrims to enter the city, under the pretext that the Ottoman Empire was defiled. The Porte was preparing to send troops to abate this rebellion.

The Crimea.

The correspondence from the Crimea is up to April 26. It merely records the preparations for the departure, with the drilling and the furnishing of the men with clothes to make a good appearance on their return. Two regiments of English cavalry have already embarked at Scutari for home.

The other Nations.

ITALY.—It is said that a collective note of the Powers that signed the treaty of peace, is about ready to be forwarded to the Governments of Rome and Naples, recommending the reforms by Italian people. It is also said that the Pope's Legatee at Paris, has formally protested against Count Walewski's language in the Congress, and that the Papal Government is preparing a detailed reply there to. It is still further rumored that Naples will anticipate the Power's remonstrance, by granting an amnesty on an extensive scale.

HOLLAND.—A treaty of commerce and navigation, based on the principle of reciprocity, has been concluded between Austria and Holland.

DENMARK.—The Hanse Towns have refused to adhere to the capitalization forced by Denmark in the question of the Dues. Considerable excitement was caused by an announcement that an American fleet was on the way to Copenhagen.

AUSTRIA.—The Synod of Austrian Bishops, held at Vienna, is about adjourning without having accomplished its objects.

SPAIN.—Arrests of suspected persons continued at Barcelona. The conscription had passed off quietly throughout the country.

A letter from Brussels says: "The colony of Russians who have passed the last two winters here about to disperse. A great number of them will leave for Paris, where their strength will be increased by reinforcements direct from Russia."

Notwithstanding the general return of the inhabitants to the city of Odessa, the present population does not exceed 70,000, or about the half of that which existed there at the commencement of the war.

Central American Affairs in Parliament.

In the House of Commons, May 5,

Sir E. B. Lytton said he had already given notice of a motion with respect to the correspondence recently laid before the House, connected with Central America. Before, however, he moved the resolution on this subject which was at present on the paper, he would ask the noble lord at the head of the government, first, whether any answer had been received to the proposal of arbitration submitted to the government of the United States; and, secondly, if that answer had not been received, whether the noble lord was of opinion that the discussion of the question next Friday night be premature, or in any way prejudicial to the progress of negotiations. (Hear, hear.) It would depend upon the answer of the noble lord whether he would go on with his motion on Friday, or, in order to give greater time for the reply of the United States government, postpone the discussion until after Whitsuntide.

Lord Palmerston said, in reply—Her Majesty's government have not received any reply to the proposal made to the United States government, that the questions connected with Central America should be referred to arbitration, though I should hope that an answer will very shortly be received, of her consenting, or giving reasons for declining that proposal. Of course, it is not for me to presume to throw out any suggestions in order to influence honorable members in the performance of their Parliamentary duty; but still, as the honorable baronet has had the goodness to submit his views, I am bound to say that I think, with a view to national interests in a question pending between this country and the government of another country, that while a proposition, such as that of referring the dispute to arbitration is yet unanswered, those national interests will be best consulted if this House abstains from entering into a discussion of a question of this delicate nature until the answer of the United States government one way or the other has been received. If, therefore, the honorable baronet, in the exercise of his discretion, should postpone his motion to a later period after the holidays, I confess I think he would be exercising a sound judgment in the matter. (Cheers.)

Sir E. B. Lytton then said that after the observations of the noble lord, he should postpone his motion until after the Whitsuntide holidays, but he earnestly hoped that no very great delay would take place in the discussion of the question.

Return of the Nuns from the Crimea.

[From the Special Correspondent of the Lamp.]

The following most important letter has reached us [Lamp] from our watchful correspondent in the Crimea. If the reports which we receive be correct, the good nuns have been badly treated by Miss Nightingale, whose greatest glory consists in being their imitator. At present we cannot publish all the facts, but we will do our best to aid towards justice being rendered to the good nuns, no matter what popular idol we may help deprive of admiration, which (if what we hear be correct) is undeserved:

"CAMP, near Sebastopol, April 5th, 1856.

"I have to report the intended immediate departure from the Crimea of the Nuns, who have been so laudably and usefully employed at the General Hospital, Balaklava. This step, which I regret to say has been rendered imperative, owing to what has occurred here, may be truly deemed a great calamity to the poor soldiers of this army, whose prayers and blessings they have well earned. The retirement from the scene of their useful and angelic labors of these ladies, has caused quite a sensation here amongst all classes and creeds, and the question naturally arises, why is it that they leave a position where, according to the unanimous, concurrent testimony of all ranks and persuasions, their usefulness was so distinguished? The circumstances connected with the whole affair are painful (not as regards the nuns, who are blameless), and will, no doubt, come before the public at an early period. It is, I am sure, superfluous to say that these estimable ladies would not have given up their sacred charge had they not been compelled to do so by a sense of what they owe to religion, to their vows, and to themselves. The readers of the Lamp need not be assured that these good nuns have only consented to leave the Crimea because they have found their remaining in it, under the circumstances, incompatible with their profession as religieuses. Willing and ready to obey the lawful order of the principal medical officers here, these ladies cannot consistently consent to the dictation of any lay lady, however she may be supported by worldly authority, or however extolled by popular opinion in England. The system of nursing, too, practiced by the nuns, differs essentially (and for the better) from that of the lady placed at the head of the nursing department in this army, and the two systems clash. The system of the nuns is nursing in the true sense of the word, and leaves nothing to be desired. They have earned the warmest commendations of the medical officers of the army, and Sir J Hall's sentiments (favorable in the extreme to them) are well known. It is said that Sir J. Hall has forwarded home to the Minister at War his strong sense of the services done those by ladies, and expressed himself entirely satisfied with their system of nursing, &c. The nuns leave the Crimea bearing with them the respect and admiration of officers of all ranks of the army, and with the affectionate regards and cordial blessings of the poor soldiers, both Catholic and Protestant. In the departure of Mrs. Bridgman and her sisters, they have indeed sustained an irreparable loss. More of this subject again.

"Apropos to the General Hospital at Balaklava, the Catholic chapel there is indeed a gem. It is easy to see that the hands of the good nuns have been busy in in its adornment. The coup d'œil of the altar, &c., is really beautiful, and the entire is characterised by exquisite taste, and a true perception of the graceful and the picturesque. The Rev. Mr. Gleeson, as your readers are aware, is the officiating chaplain. The Rev. Father Woollett, S.J., is now fairly convalescent from his very dangerous attack of illness, and proceeds to England immediately, for the restoration of his health. He leaves the Crimea after a long and useful service in this mission, amidst the affectionate regrets and cordial good wishes of all for his temporal and eternal happiness. The Rev. Mr. Morgan, Catholic chaplain, joined the staff of the army at Scutari on the 25th ult."

Foreign Miscellany.

The Moniteur contains the monthly return of trade and navigation for the month ending 31st March. The total of customs duties paid during the month of March, of the present year, is 14,382,224f. against 15,149,671f. paid during March, 1855. The total paid during the first quarter of the present year is 38,518,400f. against 38,358,628f. paid during the first quarter of 1855. In the course of the first quarter of the present year, 4,950 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 796,356, were entered inwards in the French ports; the number entered inwards in the corresponding quarter of 1855, was 4,307 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 655,342. The number entered outwards during the first quarter of the present year, was 3,193 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 537,966; the number entered outwards in the corresponding quarter of 1855, was 2,778 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 428,524.

A sad affair occurred in Paris on the 28th ult. A speculator on the Bourse, named Pelot, having become embarrassed, called on his brother-in-law, a M. Niquet, living in the Rue Laffette, just opposite Rothschild's Bank, to advance him funds; M. Niquet thought fit to refuse in very decided terms. Pelot having a pistol in his pocket, said that he would shoot him if he would not comply. Niquet again refused, and Pelot, true to his word, discharged his pistol at Niquet's head, causing instant death. The wretched murderer then discharged a pistol at his own head, and injured himself dreadfully, if not mortally. The terrible event was the general topic of conversation at the Bourse, and naturally caused a most painful impression.

A dispatch from Odessa mentions that the arrival of foreign vessels has solved in a practical manner the question of the removal of the blockade. First arrived an Austrian vessel, which was received with extraordinary joy by the merchants. It was soon followed by two other vessels, but it is not probable that they will be able to obtain a cargo beyond 20,000 tchetwerts of corn, which are on forage account. Odessa contains no stock on hand, and the price is likely to be high. It is probable, however, that the exportations will be very large from the ports of the Sea of Azoff, which possess important supplies.

The English papers are very severe on the Imperial edict, which refuses the Normandy nurse, a healthy peasant woman, the right to kiss Louis Napoleon's child, though she is paid to suckle it. Douglas Jerrold says that the same rule is adopted in the case of France herself—the wet-nurse of Louis Napoleon—because, though she was a soft-bosomed nurse to his ambition, she is forbidden all familiarity, and dare not touch him with a loving kiss. She may give him the milk from which power and greatness spring, but she must not kiss him!

A grand feast of horse flesh took place lately at Vervins, (Aisne), and, as at Alfort, Lyons, Toulouse, Perigeux, &c., proved quite successful. In order to be prepared for any delicate stomachs which might not find the staple commodity of the repast to their taste, a second service was prepared with game, truffled fowls, and other dainties: but it is asserted not a single article so made ready was touched by the guests.

It is the law in France, that men drawn for the military service, must either serve themselves, procure a substitute, or pay a certain amount to the government. The sum paid into the treasury in this way amounted during the continuance of the late war, to 62,400,000 francs, representing 22,285 substitutes.

A correspondent of the Bengal Hurkaru states that a Suttee has occurred in the Sontal Pergunnahs. The pile was prepared by the wretched woman herself, apparently without assistance, and the body was discovered only half burnt. The Deputy Commissioner had commenced an investigation.

The Countess de Montijo, mother of the Empress of the French, and the Duke and Duchess d'Alba, her brother-in-law and sister, are expected at Madrid in the beginning of May. The latter intends to give a series of banquets, balls, concerts, fetès champétres, and theatrical performances.

The Universal German Gazette states from Vienna—"It is affirmed that Russia has the intention of founding journals in the different capitals of Europe for the purpose of defending her interests, and enabling her to obtain the prestige which the late war in great part took from her."

The Debats says that Sardinia has addressed to the Cabinets of Paris and London a note exposing the condition of Italy, and inviting France and Sardinia to consult with Sardinia as to the means of providing an efficacious remedy for the evils at present existing in that country.

The Trieste Journal says that the new fast steamers put on between that place and Constantinople, will, it is expected, run the distance in less than six days, and thence materially shorten the time of communication, when compared with the Marseilles route.

We learn from Heligoland that the Anglo-German Legion, which was still in that island, had received orders to embark, it was thought for England. Only 72 quitted, it is said, the island spontaneously.

An important commercial house, Reinhardt, at Mannheim, has just suspended payment. Its liabilities amount to 2,000,000 francs; its losses have been principally caused by speculation in corn.

The Grand Duke of Tuscany, who is now at Naples, purposes visiting the Pope, to consult with his Holiness on the present prospects of Italian rulers.

Count Morny's suite at Moscow will be exceedingly numerous, the sum of a million having, it is said, been placed at his disposal to defray the expense.

There was a report at Berlin on the 23d ult. that the Council of War had condemned M. De Rochow to three years' imprisonment in a fortress.

The Court of Rome is sedulously endeavoring to obtain from the government of Tuscany a concordat similar to that lately granted by Austria.

An ultramontane journal of Vienna has been confiscated for abusing the Bureaucracy and accusing it of lukewarmness in religious matters.

It is said that Turkey will be represented at the approaching coronation of the Emperor Alexander, by Reschid Pacha.

None of the copper money of France stamped with the head of Liberty will be legal tender after the first of October.

Out of the 89 deputies just elected to the Grand Council of Neufchatel, 68 are defenders of the republican principle.

The late speech attributed to the Czar at Moscow, is stated by the Presse to have been of fraudulent manufacture.

The Sultan Abdul Medjid has just entered on his 34th year, having been born on the 23rd April, 1823.

Kuplesty Mehemed is spoken of as likely to be sent as ambassador from Turkey to St. Petersburg.

The general appearance of the crops throughout France is described as most promising.

Gavan Duffy at Melbourne.

The Ocean Chief, after a voyage of eighty days, reached its destination on the 26th of January, with Mr. Duffy safe and well on board. Mrs Duffy and her children also reached the new country in perfect health. Wilson Gray, who sailed in the same ship, also reached Melbourne in safety and in good health and spirits.

The Melbourne papers all contain liberal reports of Mr. Duffy's reception, which was most enthusiatic. Preparations had been already made on a magnificent scale to receive him in both the Australian colonies. Addresses and Deputations had been organized on behalf of the citizens, both of Melbourne and Sydney—in which the principal citizens, as well of Australian, English, American, and Scotch, as of Irish birth, united. The Deputations were headed by John O'Shanassy, Esq., Member of the Legislative Council for the city of Melbourne, and Leader of the Opposition in that assembly, and the Address is signed by the other Members. Immediately on the ship dropping anchor to offer him a welcome and present addresses of congratulation from Melbourne and Sydney. The deputation was very numerous, consisting of about eighty gentlemen.

The deputation were introduced to the saloon, but as it was found too small to contain them they adjourned to the quarter deck, where Mr. O'Shanassy, M L C, introduced them individually to Mr. Duffy.

Mr. O'Shanassy then said that he had been honored with the task of presenting an address from his fellow-colonists to Mr. Duffy, which would, he had no doubt, be the more aceeptable that it came from a mixed community, who united in bidding him welcome to their shores.

After handing the document to Mr. Duffy, Mr. O'Shanassy said he had received an address from Sydney also, and he felt bound to state that it was the first adopted, so that his friends in that city were entitled to the credit of being the first to welcome him.

Mr. Gavan Duffy, after the applause which followed the reading of the addresses had terminated, said he feared he could not honestly plead inexperience in public speaking or public affairs; but though, for the last twenty years, he had stood in some memorable and critical positions, he did not think there was any event of his life which would dwell longer or more pleasantly in his memory than this generous welcome, which, not content to grasp his hand when he came and proffered it, sprang forward to meet him before he set foot upon their shores. It gave a keen relish and piquancy to this pleasure to see among those who surrounded him, not only some old familiar faces, with which he had made acquaintance in his own land, but so many new ones on whom he had no claims of friendship, or even, as he understood, in many instances, of race or country. And first, among the new friends, he rejoiced to stand face to face with the best and most gifted Irishman in the new world, John O'Shanassy. If Irishmen were denied a career in Ireland, it was a satisfaction to know, that in almost every other civilized country they had been among the most useful, faithful, and honored servants of the State. The histories of France, Spain, Austria, Prussia, Belgium and the United States were illuminated with great Irish names. Even at this hour look at the place they held. In the European commotion of '48 many distinguished names had arisen above the horizon; the greatest in compass and magnitude was that of Cavaignac. And who is he? A grandson of one of the Cavanaghs of Leinster. In proud, jealous Spain who held the foremost place? One of the old race of Tyrconnell; a man not only Irish in blood, name, and sympathies, but who had the advantage, he feared, over many of the most Irish of his present audience in an intimate familiarity with the old tongue of the Gael. Who led the army of France in the Crimea? The second in command, and not the second in renown, was a scion of the M'Mahons, of his (Mr. Duffy's) native county of Monaghan. In Belgium the statesman most potent in councils of King Leopold was an Irishman, one generation in exile. In the United States the senator who till recently was Chairman of the Committee of Military Affairs, equivalent to the position of an English peer who is Minister of War, was General Shields, one of the old clan of Donegal, and born in the old land. In Canada, New Brunswick, and Newfoundland, Irishmen had won high position and performed distinguished services, and he rejoiced that Australia Felix was entitled to claim a place on the roll. He believed no race upon earth were more faithful to the laws, institutions, and interests of their adopted country than his countrymen. And long might it be a point of honor with them to love, honor and obey the laws which gave them protection, and the land which gave them a home. In the generous address which Mr. O'Shanassy had read he was welcome without the preliminary question, which they had a right to put to him—Why was he here instead of being in Ireland? A little while ago if he had been told that the Rock of Cashel would make a journey to Australia it would not have appeared more incredible than that he should do so. But there were reverses which none could withstand; and there were positions from which it became an imperative duty to retire, where there was responsibility without power, and ends without means.

When Mr. Duffy had concluded the deputation greeted him with long and repeated cheers.

The mail sailed upon the 29th of January, a few days after Mr. Duffy's landing, during which his reception continued to excite the greatest enthusiasm; and he had been waited upon by the principal public characters of the colony, by the Right Rev. the Bishop of Melbourne, and the Roman Catholic Clergy, and the chief citizens of the capital of Western Australia.

Presidential Facts and Rumors.

The N. Y. Daily News is opposed to having a double presidential term, by electing the same incumbent for two consecutive terms. It believes that the efforts made by Mr. Pierce to secure the nomination of the Democratic party, "have so far lowered us in the sight of the world as to expose us to the accusation, that the Administration is willing to adopt the most miserable expedients, merely to give Mr. Pierce a better chance for the Presidential nomination.

"We have, however, far graver evidence of the demoralizing effects of this unprincipled lust for power upon our public men, more especially upon those of the calibre of Pierce, Marcy and Cushing. We have witnessed for the last three years that the legitimate business of the Government has been neglected in the one absorbing pursuit of their unhallowed thirst for place. We have seen the Central American, the Cuban, the foreign enlistment questions treated with the most culpable negligence, or what is still worse, the deliberate postponement of their settlement in order to suit the exigencies of the Presidential campaign—thus sacrificing the interests of humanity as well as those of the Republic to the baneful ambition of a selfish incumbent."

Hon. Jerry Clemens of Alabama writes a letter to say that in the opinion of the said Jerry, no one of the prominent candidates before the Cincinnati National Convention can be trusted on the slavery question by the South five minutes after the votes of the South are given to him. "Sagacious Jerry," writes the Daily News. "What would have been his opinion had the name of Mr. Dickinson been proposed to him as the Cincinnati nominee? We think even Jerry would have been compelled to confess a confidence in him."

The Portsmouth (New Hampshire) Ballot states that in all parts of the State the opponents of the administration are almost unanimously in favor of Col. Fremont as the candidate for the Presidency. At the State Council at Plymouth, all the speakers expressed their preference for him, and the opinion that his nomination would be the most popular with the people, of any that could be made. All the delegates to the New-York Convention elected by the Council, will give their influence and votes in his behalf.

James A. Seddon, of Powhatan, formerly member of Congress from Richmond, Va., and Henry L. Hopkins, of Chesterfield, have been appointed delegates to Cincinnati. Seddon is for the Hunter, and Hopkins for the Buchanan convention.

A despatch to the New York Evening Post from Columbus says: Ohio is undoubtedly in favor of Chase as the most available candidate for President.

Ex-Governor Lumpkin of Georgia writes a letter in favor of Mr. Pierce's re-nomination. It is now thought that Pierce will get the vote of Georgia.

Gov. Wise writes that two-thirds of the Virginia delegation is secured for Mr. Buchanan.

Kansas Intelligence.

A telegraph, dated, St. Louis, May 23d, states that a dispatch from Westport of the 20th gave an account of an encounter on the road between Lecompton and Franklin. It says:—Mr. Cosgrove and Dr. Branson while going from Lecompton to Franklin, were hailed by a party of free State men, who demanded their names and destination. Being answered, the commander of the party turned to his men, asking their motto. They replied "Sharpe's Rifles," and immediately fired on Cosgrove and Branson. Branson was wounded, when Cosgrove shot the leader of the party through the head, and the remainder fled. A free State man was shot at Blanton's Bridge on the 19th. Particulars not given. It was reported at Kansas City that the inhabitants of Lawrence were preparing to evacuate the place, and had called upon Col. Sumner to protect their property. The towns of Kickapoo, Leavenworth, Doniphan and Atchison were almost deserted. A gentleman who arrived from Jefferson city yesterday, informs the editor of the St. Louis Democrat that a despatch had been received from Lawrence stating that a battle had been fought at Lawrence, and a number of persons killed on both sides.

The Democrat has further information from Kickapoo, stating that a meeting had been held there, at which it was resolved to sack the Kansas hotel at Kansas City. It was understood to be owned by Massachusetts men. The citizens of Kickapoo have offered a reward of $200 for the arrest of Gen. Pomeroy, and parties have gone in seach of him.

Mr F. Conway, a writer for the Democrat, and Gen. Schuyler, while en route for St. Louis from Leavenworth, were arrested at Parkville, Mo., on the charge of being fugitives. They were detained until information could be received from Lecompton. Governor Shannon had been notified of their arrest, but at last accounts no reply had been received from him. The arrest was made on the 8th inst.

ST. LOUIS, May 24, 1856.

A despatch from Boonville to the Republican says:—Lawrence was destroyed on Wednesday. The hotel and printing office in Kansas City were also demolished; but few lives were lost.

The correspondent of the Democrat, at Leavenworth, writes:—Since Messrs. Robinson, Reeder, Lane and other leaders are absent, the Committee of Public Safety at Lawrence have determined to offer no assistance to the United States Marshal entering the city. Immediate measures were taken to hide all the arms and ammunition in the town; as soon as this determination was made known, the crowds of people commenced leaving. It is said the free State men are gathering at Topeka, and will attack the invaders if they dare to execute their threats on Lawrence. Settlers at Van Bonsa, recently from New Haven, will send one hundred men to aid them, and Manhattan about the same number.

WASHINGTON, May 24, 1856.

A telegraphic despatch was received here to-day which states that a collision had taken place between the United States authorities and the free State men, by which the town of Lawrence was destroyed and a number of persons killed. It has caused the most intense excitement.

WASHINGTON, May 25, 1856.

There is a rumor here that Lawrence and Kansas City have been destroyed, and several hundred lives lost, but it is not believed. President Pierce had received no despatch on the subject. Rumor gives no particulars.

On last Saturday evening, several members of the Police Department assembled at Delmonico's Hotel for the purpose of presenting Senator Sickles with a service of plate, in acknowledgment of his action in the State Senate in regard to the Police Bill, about a hundred individuals sat down to an excellent dinner, His Honor the Mayor presiding, supported on the right by Mr. Sickles, the guest of the evening, and ex-Recorder Tillou, and on the left by Capt. Leonard, and Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. The service of plate, which cost $1,300, consisted of a tea urn, tea pot, coffee pot, cream jug, sugar basin and bowl, pitcher and tray; each piece of which bore a suitable inscription. They were presented by the Mayor in a neat speech Mr. Sickles responded and proposed a toast to the press. The health of George W. Matsell, Ex-Recorder Tillou, T. F. Meagher, Recorder Smith, Judge Capron, the Captains of Police, the Lieutenants, the Medical staff, and the privates followed in rapid succession, and were duly responded to. Dr. Bradford then, in a speech overflowing with gallantry and enthusiasm, proposed the health of Mrs. Thomas Francis Meagher, to which Dr. Shelton McKenzie responded on behalf of that lady. This closed the proceedings, and the party separated in great harmony.

The last Sermon in the Brick Church was preached on Sunday, By Rev. Dr. Spring, who has for nearly fifty years been pastor of the Parish. The occasion was very interesting and attracted a large congregation.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, April 30th, 1856.

CONTENTS:—Peace Rejoicings—Tom Reynolds—Prince Napoleon—Visit to Ireland—French Warships—Archbishop Cullen—Catholic University—Tenant-Right—Catholic Telegraph—Repeal of the Union—John Reynolds again—Death of Rev. Dr. Flanagan, Dublin—The Tablet, its Ingratitude and Cowardice—Tommy Moore's Diary, his opinion of O'Connell, &c.

You remember Tom Reynolds, John's eloquent brother? You remember him occasionally on a Monday, in Conciliation Hall, in his brown breeches—the pair which had been in a hundred political campaigns—standing in the little niche on the right of the chair? You remember him on the day of O'Connell's Levee, in the Rotunda, mounted on a big bay brewer's horse, in his polished jack-boots, white doeskin breeches, blue military frock, cocked hat and truncheon, as Marshal of the City, prancing about, backing into carriages, rearing in front of the tall iron railings of the Lying-in Hospital, shouting and sweating, doing his best to keep order—you remember all this? Well, he's been in his jack-boots and doeskin breeches again.

The day the Peace was proclaimed, my bould Tom was in the saddle as usual. Paul Rooney, among the Cossacks, singing the "Cruiskeen Lawn" in presence of Marshal Blucher, the Emperor Alexander, and the rest of the allied snobs in the Hotel de Kilmainham, wasn't a lovelier sight. It would have been well worth to you a trip over in the Persia, to have seen the Marshal shying, and balking, and plunging down Dawson street, Nassau street, Grafton street, into College Green, and then up to the Castle, with Lancers, and heavy Dragoons before and behind him, and he himself at the head of the Kettle Drums and Trumpets, trying to keep aisy in his seat, but getting the devil's own shaking in his attempts to be be quiet. 'Twas a beautiful sight, and a proud one for Ireland.

He may thank O'Connell for his ride. 'Twas ould Dan, the first year he was Lord Mayor, got him the jack-boots and white leather breeches. The next Monday after his appointment as Marshal of the City, he went down, with his hat on the side of his head, to the usual weekly Repeal meeting at the Corn Exchange. Two hundred coal-porters greeted their old friend in his new capacity with a hurricane of cheers.

"I move that Marshal Reynolds," solemnly exclaimed the Liberator, "do take the chair—Marshal Saxe was a joke to him!"

That was the last time Tom took the chair at a public meeting. He retired with his laurels, and has lived ever since on the joke.

Prince Napoleon—formerly Prince of the Mountain—and famous in the war-bulletins for his cholic in the Crimea—is to visit us shortly. A number of French gentlemen and noblemen, among whom are mentioned, Bixio, Arago, Barthelemy St. Hilaire, and Dr. Yoan, will accompany him. So there's another great day in store for Ireland. Besides that, we're to have fireworks.

A letter, which has been going the rounds of the papers informs us, that "it appears to be decided on, that Cardinal Patricci will proceed immediately from Rome for the baptism of the Prince Imperial, the King of Algiers." People say here, the Cardinal must be an Irishman. His name is half Irish, and that's quite enough to satisfy a nation who say that Pelissier is one of the Palassers, from the county Waterford, and Odillon Barrôt a naturalized Frenchman, from the neighborhood of Ballina.

J. F. Eyre Fitzgerald, of Glin Castle, county Limerick, better known as the Knight of Glin, figures in the Insolvent list. More's the pity, for the Knight was one of the ould stock, and as dacent a gintleman as St. Patrick himself.

The Artemise and Agile, French ships of war, the former mounting 24 guns, and the last named, 12, are now lying in Kingstown Harbor. Thousands are running out to see them. The little railroad between Westland Row and the Harbor, is shovelling up piles of silver, as quick as steam can work. Archbishop Cullen, in the full dress of a Roman Prelate, accompanied by the Rev. Drs. Ennis, Gaffney, and Forde, paid them a visit a few days ago. Conducted by the chaplain of the Artemise, his Grace took his seat in a fully-manned barge, bearing the French flag at the prow, under the command of one of the lieutenants of the corvette. The Freeman's Journal thus minutely describes the visit:

On arriving at the ship, the boatwain's whistle and the trumpets sounded the men to quarters; his Grace was received most courteously by the commander, and conducted with the naval and military honors usual on such occasions to the quarter-deck, where the Archbishop presented severally to the commander the clergymen who accompanied his grace. The naval chapel, neatly constructed at the extremity of the 'tween decks, near the entrance to the commander's cabin, was first visited. Here the entire ships equipage was paraded, and received on bended knees the archiepiscopal benediction pronounced from the altar. In the commander's cabin, to which the Archbishop was the conducted, the company partook of some refreshments, and the toast of their imperial majesties and the prince was duly honored. On ascending to the deck, the marine guard was again paraded, arms presented to the sound of drum, and his Grace, having thanked the excellent commander for the cordiality and urbanity of his reception, and expressed his pleasure in having an opportunity of testifying his respect for the French navy, was again conducted to the gangway, blessed the men, and taking his place in the barge, retired under a salute of thirteen guns.

After that, we may all sing—

The French are on the sea,
Says the Shan van vocht.

The opening of the new church of the Catholic University, Stephen's Green, took place the day after. It is a most beautiful little structure. The ceremony attracted thousands. The place was crowded to suffocation. The Lord Mayor was there, on his velvet-bottomed chair, with his gold chain-cable round his neck. The Archbishop sat on a purple throne, under a superb canopy, on the right of the altar. Eight or ten other Bishops were present, and no end of Doctors of Divinity, Parish-Priests, and Curates. The Very Rev. Dr. Newman, the Lord Rector of the University, occupied his official seat. The secretary and professors attended in academic costume, and the students in their collegiate gowns, filled a large portion of the church. The Right Rev. Dr. Leahy, coadjutor Bishop of the Diocese of Dromore, the high-mass being concluded, delivered a most eloquent and national sermon.

The cry for Tenant-right is still upon the wind. My impression is, 'twill remain there. It's all nonsense and rottenness, this petitioning, and chair-taking, and resolution-moving, and separating with three cheers.

"My brudders," said a colored preacher one day to his congregation, "in all infliction, dar is one place you can always find sympathy."

"Whar—whar?" shouted the congregation.

"In de dictionary, my brudders," the holy man replied rolling his eyes to the roof.

Tenant-right is to be found in the same place. Or rather, I should say, it's not to be found even there, but only in newspapers. The people have some time since become convinced, of this fact, and no longer lose their time, their money, and their reputation for plain straight-forward common sense, by crowding up to ricketty platforms, where the grievances of Ireland are hammered upon by perspiring spouters, like old women battering clothes in a stream, until the're only fit to be mangled.

A correspondent of the Telegraph suggests, that it would be advisable for that newspaper to adorn its first page with a Sunburst. "This picture," writes the poetical donkey, "emblazoned the national flag of ancient Ireland when she held a place among the nations, and was Catholic, united and respected." A mighty lot he knows about the Sunburst! One thing sure enough, he hasn't much reverence for it when he'd plaster it in printers ink on the head and front of that windy nuisance, than which, to all men of decency, truth, and patriotism, nothing could be more foul. The heavy smelling Averrus was eau de Cologne to it.

The hangman who choked the life out of Robert Emmet in Thomas street, and gave his gallant blood to the dogs, might as well stick a shamrock in his hat, as for that truculent Telegraph to have its sheets spread before the public with the magnificent crest of a martial race, with a sickening profanation stamped upon it.

And then, again, a queer chap, who signs himself Daniel O'Neill, and purports to write from Belfast, enthusiastically proposes the revival of the Repeal agitation. He, too, enumerates the grievances of Ireland, with the drone of a patched bag-pipe. Foremost among them, he alleges the overwhelming fact, that there's not a Catholic carpenter in the the ship-yard!

"And as for myself," says Daniel, "I have borne a deal of oppression these forty years from an Orange confederacy, encouraged by men in high places, and receiving large emoluments."

Then Daniel proposes for all these grievances a beautiful remedy, never thought of before:—

"What think you," says he, "of Dr. Cahill, and other patriots meeting once a week in Dublin? Dr. Grattan, and many others, are calling for what is right—for all Irishmen to be unanimous, and pull together, to meet weekly in Dublin to agitate, as our lamented Liberator said—to have 'a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether'—which being done, there will be no doubt of obtaining the desired end. That end should be to seek a Repeal of 'the Act of Union,' so falsely named."

Wouldn't there be a resurrection of the dead, if the hat was sent round again? That's just the thing. Another Daniel come to judgment!

Fox, the Member for Longford, is dead. His blood is hardly cold in his veins, before there's a rush for his seat in the Commons. Harman King, a wealthy Conservative, Hughes, the Queen's Counsel, a prudent and prosperous Catholic, are pelting away as hard as they can for it. There's a third, too. Who do you think? A new man—some one no one ever heard of before—an elegant gentleman, one John Reynolds, from Dublin. Yes, it's a fact. Beaten a hundred times—the hero of a hundred fights and failures—the veteran of more kicks tnan half-pence—the humorsome old rascal is up to the mark for another battle with the tongue. And what a tongue he has! I'll never forget seeing him the day of Lord Besborough's funeral. It was a few days after this well-conducted, benevolent Earl had tasted Soyer's mysterious soup—that panacea for Ireland's wrongs—in the model kitchen in the parade-ground of the Royal Barracks. His Lordship caught cold there, drove back to the Castle, and never left it alive. The day he was buried, I had a chair in one of the drawing-room windows of Luke Dillon's, the patriotic dealer in Irish broad-cloth and vestings. The procession, with the corpse wrapped up in velvet and satin, passed by. Just at the tail of it, in a yellow chaise, worked by a pair of rheumatic white horses, sat Alderman Reynolds, with his red gown about him, and his hard copper face fringed with the dingiest gray whiskers.

The very Rev. Dr. Flanagan, parish priest of St. Nicholas, Dublin, is gone. On Monday last, he was laid to rest in the parochial church of Francis street. His death is deeply and widely felt. A pious, arduous, eloquent priest—a gentleman of the finest nature, manner, and attainments—a patriot of sterling metal and practical capacity—in every sense he was a good and valuable citizen. His long-continued exertions at the Irish Board of Trade, to have native manufactures substituted for foreign, will not, for many years to come, be forgotten. To the erection of the splendid Church of St. Nicholas he contributed, out of his private means, the sum of £1,000; at an expense of £800, he built the great bell-tower which surmounts it; whilst he headed the subscription for the Catholic University with £100, and has, as his last act, bequeathed to it his noble library.

The Tablet is acting with a miserable cowardice towards Mr. Moore, the Member for Mayo. Moore came out gallantly and brilliantly in defence of the Tablet, and the rest of the supporters of Frederick Lucas' independent, bold policy. The Tablet thinks him too strong, and, with the most abject poltroonery, takes exception to a batch of his phrases. All to recover lost ground with Dr. Cullen, and the other Anglo-Irish dignitaries of the Irish national Church. All to look orthodox, devout, and Christianly correct. Pah! The poor imbecile who now sits at the desk of that dead sturdy Saxon—the brave Frederick Lucas—has neither his heart, nor his brain, nor his arm, though he may handle his pen. Handle it, indeed! I have seen a dwarf of an old woman—nothing but parched skin and the brittlest of bone—with a squeak instead of a voice—at the keep of Warwick Castle, take down the two-handed sword, with which the glorious tradition of the place represents the great Guy, Earl of Warwick, to have slain the portentous Dun cow. What that speck of a dwarf, fumbling with that sword, was to the huge Earl, the present editor of the Tablet is to his predecessor. Give us a Runnemyde Baron to battle for the right, not some milk-and-water Bob Acres, whose ink oozes out in cold sweat at his fingers' ends.

A very amusing paragraph has been flying about from newspaper to newspaper, the last three weeks. I hate to be perpetually talking about Tablets and Telegraphs, Tenant-right phantoms, and the rest of the political wreck and disorder of Ireland. So I give you—by way of a sniff at a smelling-bottle—the following well-peppered bit:

"A quantity of Russian shot and shell was being landed at Marseilles, the other day, when one of the latter exploded, wounding several persons very severely."

We sometimes hear people saying—"It's as cold as blazes." That anecdote suggests a comparison equally appropriate. It reminds me of a Winter's Tale. Baron Munchausen one day travelling to Moscow, his postillion blew the horn. Not a note came from it. Every note was frozen up before it came to the bell. Having arrived at the next stage, and stopping there for supper, the postillion hung up the horn on a wooden peg close to the kitchen fire. In an hour and a half after, out came the flourish which was frozen up on the road.

Your readers, especially the very patriotic ones, will ask—what on earth has this to do with Irish news? Just as much, I'll answer, as a bit of cloth had to do with music, when the blind man being asked—

"What does this scarlet thing look like?"

"Like a trumpet," says he.

The seventh and eighth volumes of Tommy Moore's diary, edited by Lord John Russell, are out. The Nation has a sparkling and searching review of them. Alluding to the fact, that not a word relative to Irish affairs of late years—to the famine, &c.—appears, the writer of the review gives vent to his suspicion that Lord John has been robbing the dead of some jewels:

"For more than ten years before his death, every single syllable touching Irish politics is expunged. It is not likely that Moore, who, throughout his day continually refers, from time to time, to the state of affairs in his country, would have been constantly silent during the great national revival which was at its height in 1843, and of which many of his melodies contained the prediction. Here, however, the Journal is expurgated by his Lordship, of any trace of an Irish sentiment; and we are expected to suppose that Moore never once thought of the Irish cause during the Repeal agitation, or the Famine, or in '48. Which is simply incredible."

Mean dogs, these Whigs are!

The portions which give us Moore's opinions about O'Connell will be specially interesting to the readers of the News. Here are two or three sentences which all Irishmen, conscientiously estimating the political worth of O'Connell would do well to read slowly, and slowly meditate upon—

"In a great degree by the predominance of his talents, but, at least, in an equal degree by other qualities, he has cleared away from around him all independent and really public spirited co-operators, and stands alone, the mighty Unit of a Legion of Cyphers; as, without meaning any offence to him, I must consider the great majority of those who now support him in Parliament. This alone is in itself sufficient to lower the standard of public men in Ireland."

Is there not a volume of very serious truth in these few lines? The question, suggested by them, forces itself sternly on us—but for this huge preponderance of O'Connell—but for the enormous monopoly of political influence he possessed, and which none dared dispute with him—would there have been now such a dearth of gifted true men, or rather such a heap of rank rubbish which people now-a-days mistake for the Hill of Tara?

The work I quote is very expensive, and wholly beyond the reach of those it might peculiarly delight and instruct. But why not take the best parts out of it, set them in order, and get Haverty, who has plenty of brain and pluck for the enterprise, to circulate them in clear type and stout binding? Just think the matter over, like a good fellow, and gratify,

KILMAINHAM.

THE MURDERER HERBERT.

The Willards, of Washington, have employed Reverdy Johnson, formerly Attorney-General of the United States, and Chas. May, of Baltimore, an eminent criminal lawyer, to prosecute Philomen T. Herbert for the murder of Keating. The boarders of the hotel have made up $500, which they presented to the widow, and $5000 could be raised in a week if necessary; but no present action to that effect has taken place. The District Attorney, Mr. Key, we learn from a most reliable source, will leave nothing undone to satisfy in this case the ends of justice. Pending the trial we withhold further observations upon the matter.

We have this moment been handed the above, from our true-hearted friend, Patrick Lynch, of the Irish American. We heartily thank him for his thoughtful good kindness in bringing it to us, and we pledge ourselves, hand and heart, to support the prosecution against Herbert, the murderer of our poor countryman. Whilst we live, no Irish blood shall be spilled here without a sharp question, and, if God wills it, without the severest vengeance.

Irish News.

Evictions in Ireland.—"Rights of Property."

House of Commons—Tuesday, April 29.—Mr. M'Mahon rose to call the attention of the house to the subject matter of a petition from certain inhabitants of the parishes of Kilbegnet and Ballynakill, in the county of Galway, presented on the 26th of March last year, and to move for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the allegations of such petition, and to consider the means of avoiding the wholesale depopulation of rural districts in Ireland. It was not his wish to cause any delay in proceeding to the adjourned debate, with regard to which so much interest existed, and he trusted that the government would consent either to the appointment of a committee, or would give him another day for bringing on the motion. (hear, hear.) The facts were these :—On the 26th of March last year he presented a petition from the inhabitants of Kilbegnet and Ballynakill, in the county of Galway, signed by 1,400 persons, which stated that a Mr. Aaron Pollock and Margaret, his wife, had purchased in the Incumbered Estates Court a property of the extent of 7,414 statute acres, on which were 500 tenants, and about 2,500 souls ; that although the tenants did not owe a penny for rent, and were prepared to lodge their rent in advance in some bank, and although in conversation Mr. Pollock had promised not to evict a single man, Mr. Pollock had suddenly proceeded to eject the whole 500 tenants and their families ; that no district was more free from outrage of every description, yet the constabulary had been increased and appeared to be under the control and direction of one of the sons of Mr. Pollock ; that on the 12th of February a large police force marched upon the property, and a process-officer served indiscriminately notices of ejectment, in some instances by nailing them to the doors of the houses. The petitioners prayed the House to take the matter into consideration, and save from ruin and certain death so many inoffensive and loyal subjects. There was no gentleman in the west of Ireland who did not regard with abhorrence these proceedings of Mr. Pollock, as tending to depreciate the general character of Irish landlords, to disturb the peace, and to depopulate the country, (hear, hear.) The statements in the petition were substantially confessed, and a brother or friend of Mr. Pollock defended his conduct upon vague grounds of political economy—that he desired to have tenants possessed of capital, who would improve the property and do good to themselves as well as to the owner. Such conduct was altogether indefensible, and he asked the House to grant a committee to consider whether some means ought not to be adopted for the suppression of proceedings of this kind. There were few members on either side of the House who had not condemned the practice of wholesale eviction. During a discussion upon the crime and outrage bill of 1847, Mr. Horsman was reported to have said that if a hundredth part of such injustice were done in this country he did not believe that England would be governable for a week, (hear.) Again, in 1850, upon a motion for a special commission to inquire into the state of the Kilrush Union, the Right Honorable gentleman said—

"He had visited the union during the recess, and he believed that if any person had travelled through Europe during his whole lifetime, he would never have witnessed so much misery arising from the same cause as he saw concentrated there in the course of a single week. . . . . It was all very well to speak of the 'rights of property,' but were there no rights of humanity or rights of life? If they went to first principles, who would deny that property was for the benefit of all, not the few? There was no law which told human beings they should die in hundreds. Under the circumstances in which they were placed, then, he thought they were justified in asking whether the cause of such misery as was described should not be traced." (Hear.) When, therefore, the right hon. gentleman was on the Opposition side of the House it was his opinion that these extraordinary circumstances ought to be made the subject of investigation. He would also refer to the authority of the Devon Commissioners in support of his proposition. When a gentleman purchased property in the Incumbered Estates Court, and found that a few tenants were unable to pay rent, no doubt he was entitled to exercise the usual rights of property in dealing with them ; but he had no right to depopulate whole districts—to clear away thousands of her Majesty's subjects (hear, hear.) But this gentleman had already evicted about 5,000 people, and he now intended to depopulate upwards of 7,000 acres. In the reign of Henry VII. an act was passed against eviction, which was then being carried to as great extent in England as at the present time in Ireland, and it was followed by other statutes to the same effect in the reigns of Henry VIII., Mary, and Edward VI. All those statutes had however been repealed, except that of the 4th of Henry VII., which was, therefore, still applicable to Ireland. It had for centuries been part of the general policy of the country that landlords could not clear off the population for their own special benefit. Sir Matthew Hale declared that diminishing the subjects of the crown was a capital felony, and the same view was taken by Sir Edward Coke. In 1635, when the judges were going circuit, the Chancellor recommended that the offence of depopulation should be brought under the notice of the grand juries, and that the penalties provided by the law should be strictly enforced. But the system was checked in England when the law of settlement was adopted. In the reign of Charles II., if a landlord cleared off his tenantry, the law of settlement obliged him to maintain them at his own expense ; and from that time to the present there had been in England no such system of extermination as that which now existed in Ireland. He had no doubt that means might easily be devised to put an end to the practice in Ireland as well as in England. If the English law of settlement were extended to Ireland, and gentlemen like Mr. Allen Pollock compelled to provide, by means of a poor-rate, for the maintenance of their evicted tenantry, they would hesitate before resorting to so harsh and cruel a measure. At present, when a district was laid waste, the inhabitants were driven into a distant workhouse, and the evictor did not pay a sixpence of poor-rate ; but he could not so escape if some provision were made that a poor-rate should be levied upon the wasted district, whether it contained inhabitants or not, or whether the person who pretended to be the owner was the real proprietor or not. There was another mode in which the system of extermination might be checked. In England, if a manufacturer required a number of policemen to protect his property, he was obliged to pay and clothe them at his own expense ; but in Ireland the police was a military force, maintained out of the national revenue. Why should gentlemen like Mr. Allen Pollock not be placed in the same situation as the English manufacturer? Various other means might be devised for putting a stop to evictions, and therefore he hoped the government would not object to the institution of an inquiry. He concluded by moving for a sect committee to investigate the allegations of such petitions, and to consider the expediency of devising means for restraining the wholesale depopulation of rural districts in Ireland.

Mr. Bellew, in rising to second the motion, said he was induced to do so partly because the petition to which allusion had been made proceeded from a portion of his constituents, and partly because, as an Irish landlord, he was anxious to state the opinions and feelings of the greater number, if not the whole, of his brother proprietors. He rose as much to vindicate the cause of the Irish landlords as to advocate that of the Irish people ; because he did not believe that as a rule the landlords acted from any ill-feeling or want of consideration towards the people ; but rather from some misconception or other which it was difficult to explain. In the county of Galway one lady, for example, evicted a large number of tenants because she believed them to be guilty of rank ribbonism. These tenants having been evicted, again took forcible possession, and they were sent for trial at the assizes ; when the lady declared, owing to the mode in which the proceedings were conducted, that the law officers of the Crown were conniving at ribbonism. Now, if this lady allowed her mind to be so warped with respect to the law officers of the Crown, she might be in equal error with regard to her tenantry (hear). Then, again, as to Mr. Pollock, he believed that that gentleman was not so much an ill-conditioned, hard-hearted man as he was the the victim, so to speak, of a misconceived passion for evictions, for Mr. Pollock evicted all alike, rich and poor, and not only allowed them the full value of everything upon the land, even to the poultry, but gave them something additional upon quitting. Still he (Mr. Bellew) thought that the system of evictions could be supported by none but such as were ignorant of the resources of the country. All experience was decidedly opposed to it, and in Greece, Rome, and England, in former days, it had been deemed to be not only prejudicial in the highest degree to the well-being of the country, but also strongly provocative of crime. He hoped that there would proceed from both sides of the house such an expression of opinion as would induce the government to grant the committee which was asked for (hear, hear) He could not forget the anxious faces of wives and mothers, who had walked twenty or thirty miles to the assize to obtain a few hours' earlier possession of the fact—whether they were destitute before Heaven, or for six months longer had a roof to cover them. In the name of humanity he appealed to the House and to the government to grant this inquiry (hear).

Lord Palmerston said he would not enter into the detailed arguments why, if the motion was persisted in, he should feel it his duty not to consent to the appointment of the committee. But he would shortly state that he thought it neither consistent with the usual practice of parliament, nor with expediency, that the House should appoint committees of inquiry into matters of this nature (hear, hear). He begged, however, not to be understood as, in any degree, differing from the opinions expressed by hon. gentlemen as to the class affected by this motion. He hoped the hon. gentlemen who made and seconded the motion would not think him wanting in courtesy, or underrating the interest of the question they had brought before the house, if he moved that the house pass to the orders of the day.

The amendment having been put,

Mr. G. H. Moore said that, after the expression of opinion which they had just heard from the noble lord, it would be unnecessary for him to make the speech which he had intended to make (hear, hear). He would suggest that the following amendment be substituted and agreed to by the House of Commons : "That in the opinion of the house the system of wholesale evictions, without cause or necessity, alleged to be attempted in some parts of Ireland, was inconsistent with the best interests of society, and to be deprecated by that house."

Mr. E. Ellice regretted that the gentleman whose name had been prominently brought before the house as promoting this system of eviction was a Scotchman, and further that that system had long been known in Scotland, and was a curse to the country. He hoped that the members for those remote parts of Ireland, in which alone they were likely to take place, would not hesitate on every occasion to denounce in that house by name the authors of such atrocious measures (hear, hear).

After some further discussion, the amendment of the "noble lord" was agreed to, and the house proceeded "to the orders of the day."

The protracted investigation relating to the Murder of Mrs. Kelly has been resumed. Mrs. Kelly's maid, and coachman, Ellen Bryan, one of the girls in the field at the time of the murder, and who was examined at the coroner's inquest, and one of the constabulary who had searched and found articles supposed to be part of the disguise of the murderers, were examined at considerable length. The only evidence material was that the girl Bryan proved that the veils which the murderers wore were brown, and that the veil which was found in the house of one of the parties accused did not resemble that which the murderers wore. It was produced and was black. Two pieces of earth with the impression of knees and stocking marks were produced to the bench. The magistrate, at a quarter to seven o'clock, decided upon discharging from custody Owen Waters, the brother of Biddy Dolan, whose name has been mentioned in the progress of the inquiry, remanding Kinahan for eight days, and committing for trial Mr. George Stevens and James Bannon, leaving the parties to apply for bail to the Court of Queen's Bench. Mr. Heron intimated his intention of applying to the Court of Queen's Bench at once for Mr. Stevens's discharge on bail.

An appendix to the second report of the Postmaster-General, gives the amount of postage, &c., collected (including stamps sold by the department, and by the inland revenue office and its agents,) in thirty-nine cities and towns of the United Kingdom, —twenty-six in England, seven in Ireland, and six in Scotland. The return is for 1854 and 1855. Excluding the metropolis, there are seven places where the receipts exceed $20,000, viz. :

	1854.	1855.
Dublin	£53,676	£48,499
Birmingham	36,812	35,695
Bristol	29,479	28,510
Liverpool	91,909	92,842
Manchester	74,736	78,121
Edinburgh	41,612	41,922
Glasgow	58,136	57,788

In four of these places there was a decrease, and in three increase last year—the largest increase (£3,385) being in Manchester, and the largest decrease (£5,177) in Dublin. The amounts received in the metropolis were £822,985, in 1854, and £817,338 in 1855—including £173,451 and £159,906 for "postage charged to government departments."

On 21st ult., an Act of Parliament was passed, by which the office of the Poor Law Secretary in Ireland is abolished.

As with everything Irish, says the Waterford Chronicle, we find that we are going to be done a further injustice, in the disbandment of our Militia. Having been called together for five years—its Officers going to large expense in outfit, School, Band, &c.—they are now, after being but a short time enrolled, about to be dispersed and sent to their homes. It may be said that having Peace, we do not require the Militia ; but it would be far better to keep it up yet for a time, than send fifteen or twenty thousand adrift on the Country, having no particular aim before them, and having no employment to keep them from crime. If the government really desire to keep crime and rioting from amongst us, they will be slow in disbanding the Militia. In justice to the Body itself, they should, until the time expires, refrain from doing so—and for the sake of the Country, they should hesitate being the instruments of again throwing it into pauperism and misery.

The steam company of Limerick have started one of their vessels from that city to Liverpool, and they are preparing another to sail regularly from Limerick to Glasgow. The freights are low. These boats will not serve the Waterford boats ; neither will they serve the railway. With opposition in Limerick, and daily as well as cheap accommodation from Dublin, we are not surprised that our quays are so scantily supplied this year with goods and passengers. Mr. Malcomson will want to bestir himself a little ; for if not, his own port of Waterford will suffer in her trade and commerce, and when once trade leaves a place it is no eary matter to get it back again. Dublin, Limerick, Cork and Wexford, are now vieing hard with Waterford. Malcomson is well able to combat each and all of them if he but once prepared himself for the struggle. Has not Waterford a prior claim upon him, and should he not therefore extend to it all the facilities and accommodation within his reach?

The abolition of ministers' money being agitated in various parts of Ireland, a circular, says the Waterford News, with a form of petition adopted and signed by the citizens and town council, has been forwarded by the Mayor of this city to the several chief magistrates and chairmen of boards of guardians of the cities and towns subject to "ministers' money tax," urging their adoption of the petition, or a similar one, before the 6th of May, in favor of the passing of Mr. Fagan's resolutions against the continuance of the tax in the eight towns subject to it. The circular from his Worship thus concludes :

"Under all circumstances, however, I feel that I can venture to guarantee that the body whom I have the honor to represent will never suffer themselves, cost what it may, to be made the instruments of enforcing it (the ministers' money tax) ; and I think I may add with equal confidence, that the very great majority of those of the inhabitants subject to it will evince equal determination, even at considerable sacrifice, in resisting the payment by every legitimate means, should it unfortunately be sought to be enforced."

Mr. John O'Connell presented a petition in the Commons from the Clonmel corporation against ministers' money.

The Derry Standard gives the following as an instance of Crimean economy in the militia : "The Derry militia, we understand, have been ordered to remove from Enniskillen to Belfast, and on this order being made known, the managers of the railway company agreed to take the men to Belfast in a single day at six shillings per head. This offer was not accepted, and the plan adopted instead is to march on foot from Enniskillen to Armagh—a journey occupying three days—and from Armagh to Belfast by rail ; the charge is 2s. 6d. per man! This, on a small scale, is a sample of economy not unworthy of Crimean fame. Besides the fatigue occasioned to the men, the expense of three days' march will surely amount to more than the money difference above stated, while, in regard to the modes of travelling, no comparison can be instituted.

We have just heard with deep regret, says the Dublin Freeman, of the death of Mr. Fox, member for Longford. The death of Mr. Fox creates a vacancy in the representation of the county, and already three names are mentioned as candidates : Mr. Harman King, as the Conservative candidate ; Mr. John Reynolds, as the Sadleirite candidate ; and Mr. Hughes, Q.C., as the Whig candidate. The electors may find a candidate more suited to their views and tastes than the Orange, the Sadleir-Whig, or the Whig Q.C. ; and the local men of the popular party will doubtless look out for such a man. Mr. Sadleir's principles are not very acceptable to the people of Longford, and the public voice of the country will sustain them in repudiating all identification with his political representative.

Of the late Mr. John Sadleir's "Doings" with the Royal Swedish Railway Company.—The report of the committee of investigation which has just been published, states that the forged shares amount to £20,000, which will, of course, be withheld from circulation. The shares wrongfully issued in duplicate are stated to be 19,700, the over-issued obligations amount to $12,263 ; but of these latter a large proportion is held in deposit merely. The nominal value of the shares originally, and duplicates over-issued by Mr. Sadleir, is £275,591, for which the company did not receive any consideration. The gross total of Mr. J. Sadleir's liabilities to the company are estimated at the enormous sum of £346,413.

The London Press (D'Israeli's paper) gives the following names as those "of the bright, if not the particular stars of the Radical list," the "choice dozen who came down to remodel the constitution :"—Mr. Apsley Pellatt!! Captain Scobell! Mr. William Williams!! Mr. James Kershaw! Mr. Thomas Meagher! Mr. W. A. Wilkinson!! Mr. George Hadfield!! Mr. J. Maguire! Mr. William Ewart! Mr. J. Brotherton! Mr. Henry Berkeley!! Sir Joshua Walmsley!!!

During the year from the 10th of October, 1854, to the 30th of September, 1855, 4,513,718 quarters of malt were made, and 3,843,941 quarters used by brewers and retail dealers in beer. Of this quantity 3,464,160 quarters were sold to brewers and victuallers, 379,771 quarters by retail brewers. 3,557,074 qrs. of malt were used in England, 114,839 quarters in Scotland, and 172,018 quarters in Ireland.

In passing through Rutland square, says the Dublin Telegraph, we observed with surprise, opposite No. 15, the office of the Irish Church Mission Society, a placard to the following effect :

"Under the Patronage of his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant!—Bazaar for the four Ragged Schools!!!"

Surely there must be some imposture or mistake in this announcement. It cannot be possible that her Majesty's representative would insult the feelings of six millions of Catholics by patronising schools instituted for the purpose of robbing their children of the true faith.

The party of Revenue Police under Lieut. Irvine, stationed at Malin, county Donegal, seized within the past week, in the neighborhood of Malinhead, three distilleries, four tin stills, three tin heads, two copper worms, twenty-eight vessels, fifty bushels of malt, twelve gallons of singlings, 325 gallons of pot ale, and one prisoner.

Four women are now lying under sentence of death for infanticide. One is awaiting her confinement before she is led out to execution, according to that strange legal mercy which will not destroy the unborn child; the rest wait only on time. One of these four women, Emma Musset, was a married woman, who destroyed her new-born infant, without any other assignable cause than that of madness.

Mr. Tottenham, Member for New Ross, in reference to the divisions on the Maynooth grant, says, in a letter to the Wexford Guardian, that he voted twice for the grant and once against it; the latter occurring through a mistake, from his ignorance of the forms of the House, which led him to cross into a wrong gallery. Mr. Tottenham's explanation must be felt as perfectly satisfactory on that point. In conclusion, he says:

"On the 7th of May, when Spooner's bill comes on again, I can answer for it, as far as I am concerned, there will not be any mistake."

We regret to state, says the Democrat of the 3d, that one of the Dundalk pilots, named James Townley, an old man 80 years of age, was drowned this morning, after leaving a vessel called the Ellen over the bar. He leaves a large family to deplore his loss. We wonder the Harbor Commissioners would keep pilots so old in their service. This poor man should have got a retiring pension long since.

A foot-race, distance 100 yards, came off at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning, in the new barrack yard, between Ensign Newbigging, 89th Regiment, and private T. O'Conner, of the some corps. O'Connor cut out the work at a slashing pace, and won a most exciting struggle by a couple of yards. A considerable sum changed hands on the occasion.—Limerick Chronicle.

The Mars steamer, says the Waterford Chronicle, sailed on Friday, 25th ult, from our quay to Liverpool, bearing a large cargo of provisions and cattle, as well as 150 of the bone and sinew of our country and towns' population, bound to the United States. Many of them seemed to be able to live respectably at home, had they been inclined.

The Waterford Mail prints a note from John Francis Maguire correcting a statement which appeared in that paper. Mr. Maguire has no intentions (as stated) to give up the representation of Dungarvan and that of Cork.

Miss Victoria Fowler, daughter of Mr. Fowler, of Newry, has been appointed by the Commissioners of the National Board of Education, Dublin, to take charge of the National School at Melbourne, at a salary of £250 a year.

The amount of duty paid at the Belfast Custom-house, for the week ending April 21, was £6,229 2s. 5d., against £7,362 18s. 6d. the previous week, and £11,278 9s. 1d. the corresponding period of last year.

J. F. Eyre Fitzgerald, of Glin Castle, in the county of Limerick, better known as the Knight of Glin, figures in the Irish insolvent list; his petition is to be heard at Limerick on the 7th of June.

Had there been at the great Munster Fairs twice the quantity of stock on sale, all would have been bought up, so numerous were the purchasers.—Limerick Chronicle.

An Irish corn merchant, largely concerned in forestalling of bread-stuffs, is stated to be a loser by £2,000, owing to the change from war to peace.

There are about 50 prisoners of all classes in Dundalk goal, only one or two of whom are committed for trial at the next quarter sessions.

The Kilkenny Journal states that Mrs. Lloyd, wife of Henry Lloyd, Esq., late of this city, and mother to Lady Rossmore, has been received into the Catholic Church.

Sir John Sutton, son of the late Sir Richard Sutton, has been received into the Roman Catholic Church.

Spirit of the Irish Press.

Speaking of the recent proceedings in Paris, the Waterford Chronicle has the following:

The Conferences have terminated their labors, and we are now beginning to taste—as we are informed—the blessings of Peace. We only know that the War has ceased, and that no longer are we to call Russia our enemy. But then comes the consideration—how can we satisfy ourselves we have a Peace that will be lasting!

If we look to Italy, we see the insecure state of parties there—we find Austria pushing herself everywhere she can—we find Sardinia pushing herself in opposition to her wherever she can make a resting place. England, guided by France, would despise and thwart Austria, if she dared, but from her unhappy state of mismanagement she is forced to "play second fiddle," and she must now follow, where hitherto she has lead.

Looking at this state of things, and seeing a war only recently ended, the whole of Europe in an unsettled state, we cannot flatter ourselves that the Congress have ended their labors with permanent results.

The same paper, writing of the Tenant League, says:

That in noticing this body, we have to say, that the longer it is in existence, the more is it getting itself into disfavor, and the more is it exhibiting its utter inutility for any practical purposes. No doubt that there are intellectual men it—men really desirous to serve their country—but they are taking the wrong policy. Whether they feel so, or not, we do not know; but the effect of their present conduct is, not to advance the great cause for which they joined themselves together, but to hold up to ridicule our Holy Church, and to give our enemies a fruitful source of invective against its revered ministers.

With reference to the Tipperary Bank, the Leinster Express observes:

Some recent proceedings in one of the law courts have called prominent attention to Mr. Sadleir's connection with the London and County Bank; and from other circumstances it is tolerably certain that Mr. Sadleir made up his liabilities to that establishment at the expense of the Irish concern. His position as chairman of the two companies, at one and the same time, has raised the point as to whether the London and County Bank cannot be compelled to disgorge certain securities which it became possessed of at the eleventh hour, and which were ostensibly purchased for the Tipperary Bank, and with its cash.

The Dublin Evening Mail favors us with a spirited and useful exposé of the Peace Rejoicings in Dublin:

On Friday last an experiment of a novel kind was tried in our city, and the result was, we are happy to say—although somewhat mortifying to the experimenters—highly gratifying to every independent and right-minded citizen. The problem to be solved was the following:—Whether it was possible to get up an official and governmental peace-rejoicing in Dublin or not, quite irrespective of the opinions and wishes of the citizens. The trial had been previously made in London, and proved an utter failure; the unleavened mass which insists on thinking and judging for itself in that great capital was too vast to yield to the stimulus of a few red coats and discordant militia bands, and consequently the peace demonstration in England's capital was unsuccessful; the Frenchman's peace was deservedly unpopular, and the good citizens of London refused to lend tawdry show, got up in honor of it, their approbation and sanction. On the well-known principle, experimentum fiat corpore vili, it was considered by the authorities that Dublin might prove a fitter field for the exercise of their skill. The long continued and systematic corruption of all classes of society in the Irish capital, by Castle jobbing and underhand influence, and the large and powerful body of place-hunters and waiters upon Providence, gave the Irish Executive a hope that a peace-rejoicing in Dublin might prove more attractive than in London. Accordingly the troops in garrison, amounting to 7,000 men, the police force, the militia bands, the French sea captains, the illustrious City Marshal, and the authorities of Trinity College, were invited to be at their respective posts at or before eleven in the forenoon. It was confidently expected that the spectators would be surprised into some outward expressions of joy at the sight of such an imposing array, and would give vent to their feelings in loud and long continued cheering, to signify their approbation of the paternal authors of this ill-omened peace. Such expectations were doomed to disappointment; the cheering and hilarity, such as they were, were not directed to the objects laid down in the official programme; the grunts and howls that were elicited in the Castle-yard from the idle spectators of the show, by the oft repeated demand of three cheers for the peace, were highly unsatisfactory to official ears, and proved to demonstration that even a Dublin mob cannot be made to rejoice without knowing the reason why, nor be dragooned into the expression of joy they do not feel. Quite different were the hearty gratulations that saluted their own City Marshal, as he advanced proudly on his roan gelding, with Field Marshal's baton in hand, into Sackville-street. The cheers that greeted him were from the heart. It is not to be wondered at, that from his cocked hat, white feather, and martial aspect, he was mistaken for H. R. H. P. A., and supposed to command the troops he was only competent to look at. The scene that presented itself as the cavalcade emerged from Crafton-street into College green was more curious than edifying. In obedience to the Viceregal command, it was thought fit by the College authorities to get up a classical imitation of the closing of the gates of the temple of Janus, represented on this occasion by the old iron door that swings in front of the Irish Alma Mater. The part of Janitor was undertaken, for this occasion only, by a complaisant and expectant divine, high in office, who performed his task to admiration, and closed the rusty gates with a bang which resounded loud above the cheers of the silent populace. At this juncture a rush of boys and College skips took place, and the view of the cavalcade was obstructed by the masses which clustered like bees upon the iron railings. To remedy the pressing danger of losing sight of the procession, and the greater danger of having their services unrecognised by a Viceregal smile, the learned divines betook themselves to a kitchen table, upon which they were mounted with much difficulty and some loss of leather, in time to receive the gracious bow, which more than recompensed their precious trials. When the last horseman of the peace procession had passed, the College authorities retired from their anomalous position and betook themselves, refreshed and edified, to the renewed instruction of their India classes.

On the whole, Dublin enjoyed a holiday, cheered cordially the French naval officers and the Tipperary Artillery, but did not bestow a thought, save of regret and shame, on the peace her citizens were ordered to rejoice in. The experiment was a failure, although tried in a city which presented more chances of success than any other in the kingdom.

Of the "improved condition" of Ireland, the Wexford Independent furnishes us with the subjoined evidence, and on a subject lately of so much fictitious congratulation in Parliament, offers some sensible and feeling comments:

The wholesale eviction of 2,500 human beings from the homes of their childhood, in the county of Galway, by a Scotch merchant, named Pollock, was brought under the notice of the House of Commons on Tuesday, by Mr. McMahon. The propery, which was lately purchased in the Incumbered Estates Court, exceeded 7,000 acres, and was occupied by about five hundred tenants, not one of whom owed a shilling rent; yet all have been indiscriminately served with notice to quit. It was well expressed by several of the speakers, that although Mr. Pollock was a stranger in the land, and unacquainted with the feelings, sympathies, and habits of our people, his conduct was calculated to bring disgrace on the character of landlords generally, as well as ruin on the numerous victims of his caprice and cruelty; that such men should be made pay out of their own pockets the expenses of the additional Constabulary force necessary to preserve the peace where such violations of the laws of humanity and conventional rule were perpetrated. Mr. D'Israeli well observed, that it was not an Irish landlord, or one of the native gentry, but a chance new resident proprietor, that perpetrated the outrages so justly complained of; and the Prime Minister added, that such conduct was ill-calculated to advance the prosperity of the country, or the welfare of the people. Notwithstanding this strong expression of the prevailing indignation, there must be some special legislation on the subject, to preserve our fellow-creatures from the repetition of the Pollock savagery, now and for all time to come.

The Kilkenny Journal declares it's

Amusing to observe with what reluctance the enlightened Great Briton resigns himself to the conviction that he has really been the witness of a great historical incident, and that it is necessary for him to fall into exstacies upon so memorable an occasion. The most real of his impressions, however, is an intense conviction that Louis Napoleon is chuckling joyously over all his mishaps. It is impossible to conceal this very well, by any amount of official affectation; for accident is perpetually revealing the hereditary feud between the two nations.

And in illustration of this delightful propensity, the Journal quotes a paragraph from the Presse d'Orient:

The day before the Thabor left the Crimea, an unfortunate circumstance occurred at the point of the bay where there was a closed barrier guarded by a French post of four men and a corporal. Some Englishmen introduced themselves into the battery to steal some fowls, according to the account of the sentinel, but according to their own account to kill rats. The sentinel ordered them off, and threatened to fire if they did not obey. They went away, but in a quarter of an hour returned with a reinforcement and seemed inclined to force an entrance. The sentinel fired, but in a manner so as not to injure them. They decamped, and the post thought they had finally departed, when some time after about thirty English, some of them on horseback, returned, when the French fired and knocked over two of the party.

The sisters of the late Lieut. Bellot have just received with gratitude, the last instalment of the sum of £1,050, collected in England, as a tribute to the memory of the gallant dedeased,

English News.

The peasants of Huntingdonshire are proverbial for their boorishness. One day a lady riding through the grounds of a friend to whom she was on a visit, found the gate closed which was the outlet from the fields to the high road; a peasant boy stepped forward and bowing, opened the gate that she might pass. "What is your name?" asked the lady. "Tummas," said the boy (with another bow.) "Ah!" said the lady, giving him a shilling, "I see you are not a Huntingdonshire boy—you are so civil;" to which the urchin rejoined—"Thee'rt a liar, I be."

The Plymouth Journal says:—At Bodmin, on the 10th ult., Mr. Edward Cocks was married to Miss Maria Lord. During the day one of the gentlemen of the wedding party kissed the bride; an event which caused some unpleasantness and jealousy to the bridegroom. At length a quarrel ensued, and the bride in the height of passion, took off her wedding ring, threw it at the bridegroom, and then left him; and up to this time they have not met.

A parliamentary return shows that the gross amount received by the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt on account of Saving's banks and friendly Societies, from their appointment on August 6th, 1817, to Nov. 20, 1855, was £62,689,404 2s., while they paid, including interest, £36,238,363 2s. The amount received on account of the military savings, banks fund, from Sept. 19, 1844, to January 5, 1856, was £216,668.

A poor man passing through a field at Montpelier, Bristol, picked up a pocketbook containing £95 in gold, notes and banker's drafts. He discovered on some of the memoranda the name of the owner, and immediately hastened to restore the lost property to him. This person who had the same morning lost the pocketbook, received it and its contents with joy, and rewarded the finder's honesty with—three pence!

At the Court of Appeal, London, on the 28th ult., the Lords Justices decided that Palmer, the Rugely surgeon, was liable to the bankrupt laws, and had been, though lying in prison, guilty of an act of bankruptcy. The matter will be accordingly remitted to the Commissioner of bankruptcy, who had previously, in doubt of his jurisdiction, declined to adjudicate.

It is reported that the Committee of the House of Lords on Judicial Appeals will recommend the establishment of a Court of Appeal, consisting of the Lord Chancellor, and four law peers, who are to be peers for life. There will be no mention of Scotch judges being raised to that dignity, the constitution of the Court being left an open one.

A correspondent of the Bristol Times states that on his withdrawal from the Mormon body he was publicly anathemised in the following language:—"May his eyes sink in their sockets; his flesh rot and fall from his bones; may he wish to die but not be able; may his right arm wither; may he beg his bread, but none be given him."

At the Darlington Court, Dr. Jackson obtained a verdict for £16 2s. 6d. against Mr. Wooler. On hearing the verdict, Mr. Wooler declared he would not pay a farthing—it was his wife's blood-money. Mr. Jackson was drawn home in a carriage by a multitude, amidst shouts of triumph.

The Bury Post states that the report of the firing of the mighty engines of war at the naval review at Spithead was distinctly heard in the neighborhood of Newmarket, causing slight but palpable tremor of the earth, and many fancied it was distant thunder.

Among other contributions forwarded for the intended bazaar in aid of the building fund of the Royal Naval Female School, an officer has sent a lock of hair from the head of the hero of Trafalgar, enclosed in a frame of wood taken from the Victory.

The Queen will lay the foundation stone of the military hospital about to be erected between the Netley Abbey and Hamble Cliff, on the north side of Southampton Water. The buildings will cost nearly a quarter of a million of money.

Several new iron works are about to be commenced in Derbyshire. A number of gentlemen in Lancashire have formed themselves ino a company for the purpose of obtaining the ore and smelting it on a large scale.

On Sunday, Mrs Phin, wife of Edward Phin, a guard in the service of the North Western Company, Birmingham, was safely delivered of five children—three boys born alive and doing well, and two girls born dead.

General Vivian, of the Madras army, lately in command of the Anglo-Turkish contingent, has been nominated by government a Director of the East India Company, in room of Mr. Leslie Melville, deceased.

Four hundred men, employed in the carriage department at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, have received the usual notice to leave. This will make the reduction since the Peace about 900.

The Queen has appointed Mr. James Clerk Maxwell, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, to be Professor of Natural Philosophy at the University of Marischal College, Aberdeen.

The ship-painters of Liverpool have been on strke since the 7th inst., claiming the wages at 5 shillings instead of 4s. 4d. a-day. Some of the masters have given the advance.

The operative stone-masons of York have struck for an advance of wages, demanding 27s. per week, instead of 22s. The master masons are determined to resist the advance.

In the county of Durham, the number of miners is nearly double that of the laborers employed in the cultivation of the surface.

The Presse d'Orient contains the following paragraph:—"The day before the Thabor left the Crimea, an unfortunate circumstance occurred at the point of the bay where there was a closed battery guarded by a French post of four men and a corporal. Some Englishmen introduced themselves into the battery to steal some fowls, according to the account of the sentinel, but according to their own account to kill rats. The sentinel ordered them off, and threatened to fire if they did not obey. They went away, but in a quarter of an hour they returned with a reinforcement, and seemed inclined to force an entrance. The sentinel fired, but in a manner so as not to injure them. They decamped, and the post thought they had finally departed, when some time after about thirty English, some of them on horseback, returned, when the French fired and knocked over two of the party. Fortunately an officer of the Didon came down to the spot with some men, and persuaded the English, who said they had only come to explain matters to the sentinel, to retire."

The Paris papers, in briefly noticing the naval review at Spithead, are delighted with the attention and respect paid by the chief officers of the fleet to Admiral de la Graviere, of the French navy, who was present on that occasion.

Answers to Correspondents.

From our friend, R. D. Williams—so long known as the "Shamrock" of the Dublin Nation—we have this morning received a delightful letter. It is dated Jackson, Mississippi, and accompanies a racy and sparkling, though most grotesque contribution, which shall, without fail, appear in our next. Shamrock purposes writing frequently to the News. Before very long we expect to have most of the old hands of the Nation, United Irishman, and Tribune, clustered round our desk, and heaping it with treasures. Shamrock, as all the world knows, was the author of the famous Misadventures of a Medical Student. But his Sister of Charity alone would have crowned him with imperishable bays. Read on his trial for sedition, by Sam Ferguson, his counsel, it saved him from transportation.

A Monaghan Man asks us about our gallant friend McManus. McManus is still in California. The last letter we had from him is dated March 19th. He had just returned from a long trip up the Sacramento valley, through Marysville, Rough and Ready, and Grass Valley, to Nevada. His spirits are as fresh and high as ever, and he concludes with this truly agreeable promise: "Be good enough to present my warmest regards to ——, and say that I hope to have the pleasure of paying him my personal respects at New-York within a year from this date." Hundreds on hundreds will be delighted to hear this, for McManus is a brave generous fellow, and every one who has known him, loves him.

The following is the correspondence we promised in our last. It gives us sincere pleasure to insert it. The crowded state of our columns compels us to enshrine it in the Poet's corner:—

New-York, May 16, 1856.

Dear Sir,—Your many friends in this city have learned with pleasure, of your return from a visit to your native land, and of your complete recovery from the indisposition which (together with the natural desire to visit well-remembered scenes and renew old associations) induced you to undertake it. They have also been deeply gratified at the reception which you met, and the many manifestations of prolonged friendship which you experienced from your former associates in business and companions in the social circle. These expressions of appreciation give them more satisfaction than is usually felt on hearing that worth has received its merit—they feel that the high estimation in which they hold your quality of head and heart, has been approved by the best and most accurate mint-masters in the world—a business man's early friends, in the most appropriate of all places—that of his birth; and in the scenes of his first struggles to gain confidence, and of his first efforts to amass the noble capital of golden opinions.

As an earnest that your friends in this city do not wish to be outdone in giving testimony to your virtues, of their joy at your safe return and complete convalescence, they have desired us to request the favor of your presence at a public dinner which they respectfully tender to you—the day to be named by you in your reply, which we shall expect at your very earliest convenience.

Respectfully,
Edward Downes Connery, M. D.,
Michael Peppard,
James Dowling,
John C. Byrne,
Jas. McCormick.
} Committee.

181 Madison Street, New-York, 16th May, 1856.

To Messrs. E. D. Connery, M. D.; Michael Peppard, James Dowling, J. C. Byrne, and Jas. McCormick.

Gentlemen,—I received your note of yesterday "inviting me to a public dinner." To decline a compliment tendered in such warm and friendly terms, gives me pain; but I know that you will appreciate my feelings when I inform you that no entertainment could be more acceptable than the expression of your friendship—nothing more grateful to my heart than the welcome received from each of you. If I fail in expressing a proper sense of your kindness, think at least that I shall never forget your generous purpose; and when we meet at our own firesides, "Auld Lang Syne" will keep bright the chain of our friendship. I remain, with the sincerest respect, your most ob't.

Joseph Purcell.

An individual, signing himself "Mister Blake," sends a long rigmarole, of which the two following are the opening stanzas. We object, as critics of poetry, to the use of the metre in a production of as great length as the "Lay of the Last Minstrel." It would be impossible to read much more to sing it, at the one sitting. Moreover, we abjure personality, and only give the following as a specimen of the indefatigability of Blake's muse:

A SONG FOR THE TIMES.

[Air—"The Bowld Soldier Boy."]

I.

"Och! there's not a trade that's going
Like that from glory growing!"
Said Clarendon, so knowing,
To his bowld Cramp-ton.

"Between you and me, avick,
We are getting it right slick,
Thick and quick from this ould Nick.
So, my dear Cramp-ton,

"I want, in your meridian,
To 'scare up' a foreign legion,
To save us in that region,
For you know, my dear Cramp-ton,

"That as for us, we're in the 'muss,'
And can't let France get all the chance,
And volunteers ain't plenty;
'Make a raise,' Cramp-ton."

II.

"Och, though Sam is mighty cute,
I'll be bound I'll recruit,
And—humbug him to boot,"
Says the bowld Crampton.

"It is then owld Marcy may,
Scratch his head, night and day,
'Till his nails or skull gives way—
Says the dear Cramp-ton:

"Sure, Pierce I'll toady greatly,
And Marcy flatter nately—
Jeff. Davis blind complately—
Says the cunning dog Cramp-ton:

"In all the land, none can withstand
A wholesome drink—troth, so I think,
Besides, ain't they 'our cousins!'"—
Laughed the sly Cramp-ton.

We must, with all due respect to Mr. Blake's Irish-Americanism, cut out his thorough annihilation of the "bowld Crampton;" his dissection of Lord Clarendon, (Dr. Carnochan couldn't do up a "subject" better,) his expansive view of the flight of the American Eagle, and his magnificent apostrophe to the "Big Gun," with which he appropriately concludes: it may

"Thundher through the elms
Of the Park, like little realms
When its lightning over-whelms
The crown of owlder worlds."

It may blaze away—its noise is a little too much for the placidity of our sanctum. The remainder of Mr. Blake's MS. is at our office. We break our rule in this one instance in consideration of his industry in making so much waste paper.

MR. TIMOTHY EDWARD HUGHES, has received our written authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "Irish News," throughout the New-England States.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 31, 1856.

SMITH O'BRIEN.

It is now close on seven years—it wants but eight weeks of it—since her Brunswick Majesty's sloop-of-war, the Swift, lifted anchor in Kingstown harbor, with this gallant Irish gentleman on board. After twelve months' confinement in the prisons of Kilmainham, Clonmel, and Richmond, under strong military guard, the wise men of Downing street thought fit to remove him sixteen thousand miles off, from the land he had risked his life to liberate.

A wearying and sickening voyage, relieved only by the occasional courtesies of the officers of the ship, ended in a stupefying imprisonment upon a small island, peopled exclusively by the saddest miscreants and their overseers. Released from this torture, he was sent with a Queen's passport to the mainland, there to meditate, in a solitary nook, miles away from his family, upon the sacrilege of disputing the rule of England in Ireland, and the profitless insanity of patriotism.

For five years, did the snow on the summit of Mount Wellington deepen and then melt off—did the brown hues of the Tasmanian forest-lands grow browner, and then light up afresh—and still by the lonely banks of the Derwent, or those of the South Esk, in the shadow of St. Paul's, did this noble exile, with a kinglier pedigree than that of the Queen who banished him, wear out his days, sorrowful and desolate, companionless and homeless. What, besides this sterile weariness and solitude, he had in that dull and downcast captivity to endure, now that he is on his way home again, we shall not soil the bright beauty of the picture to introduce. The annoyances and cruelties with which, time upon time, day after day, he was harrowed and wounded—the vermin who beset his path, coiled themselves about him day and night, wormed themselves into his books, his purse, and letters, and made his very life a plague, these we leave to the obscurity in which they were basely born.

Not a sentiment of resentfulness ever mingled, we deeply believe, in the chivalrous, pure nature of our friend, and to the chastisement that has overtaken and overwhelmed the deadliest of his enemies, now, surely, with the gates of his old domain opening to receive him, and the trees of Chairmoyle waving their aged arms in joy for his return, he must be indifferent. But to us, and all his friends, and his race and people, it is a glad event, flashing with the most scathing vengeance, that the foul goaler—Hampton, the Comptroller-General of Convicts—he who left no thorn unplucked with which he could vex his prisoner—he who pursued, dogged, and worried him until on Maria Island he brought him, with a stifled heart, to the very edge of the grave he had there shovelled out for him—is now a branded fugitive, a convicted swindler, leaving behind him in his dastard flight, a name which, even the vilest criminal he scourged, spits upon with loathing.

Nor shall we here set forth the insolent and cowardly aspersions, with which, when his brave hands were tied, the London press, and notorious men in Parliament, sought to disparage his grand character, career, and sacrifice. His intrepid, uncompromising, relentless honesty was too much for these diplomatists and dodgers, these splendid schemers and blasphemous believers in duplicity and lies, to tolerate. They hated him, for he was a Christian. They ostracized him, for he was more than an Aristides. They gibbetted his name, and lolled their noisome tongues against it, and spattered it with the garbage and offal of their market-places, when his neck was beyond their reach, and his spotless memory, shining forth, a mirror of purity in the darkened sky, recalled their ebbing consciences, and shamed them with the reflection of their dwarfishnes and guilt.

It is always the way with that British press, and the lordliest and loudest of their orators and pamphleteers, in and out of the Gothic crypts and galleries of Westminster. Ever prompt to pounce upon those, the proudest prey, whom Fate has crippled, or stripped off any of their branching honors, they are just as eager and impatient, impetuous and tumultuous, in their riotous recognition of success, no matter what crimes may have swelled the purple tide. It was so when Hungary—when the black Eagle of Austria was down in Buda-Pesth, and the cuirassiers of Windisgratz broke like glass under the sabre blows of Klapka at Kompolt, and our dashing countryman, Guyon, cut his way with a squadron of hussars through a forest of grenadiers and artillery to the relief of Comorn, and the noble ladies, who invoke St. Stephen, and wear his relics and call their children after him, with their soft white hands threw up—rough, huge soldiers aiding them—intrenchments at Raab, in the depth of frost and sleet, against that young lily-livered Xerxes of Vienna, and his countless Hosts. Then, all through England, there were the lustiest cheers for Hungary; and the Lord Mayor of London, at one of the sumptuous spreads in the Guildhall sat Pulzky in a gilt chair beside him; and when Kossuth landed at Southampton, the town went frantic, and, lighting the first candle of the illumination which all through England, from the Chops of the Channel to the Chimneys of Birmingham, welcomed him to the land of Magna Charta, Cromwell, and the Four Georges.

How quickly this illumination darkened and went out, the World knows. Kossuth is now the loneliest of outcasts in the suburbs of that superb city, which once, when his star was high and radiant in the firmament, in its Egyptian Hall, feasted his representative. Circled and clogged by spies, he lives the life of a noble victim, driven to bay, shut out from pure air in the narrowest and blackest crevice of the cavern which England generously leases him as a home, he moves not, hardly breathes, under the glare and hissings of the snakes that watch him in the wilderness. Not a word for him, when a word would have been to him resurrection, liberty and glory to him. Not a word for him, when that word would have been, a flood of light to the darkness of his dungeon, the strength of armies to his weaponless arm, and the lightnings of Sinai to his commandment of freedom.

An Englishman never strikes a man when he's down. That's the phrase they dash out, from day to day, in Parliament, amid uproarious cheers. The Devil quotes Scripture for his purpose. An Englishman ever and always strikes those who are down, and are too far off, or too disabled, to return the blow. On this earth, there is not a meaner, more sensual worshipper of success than this corpulent nation, which wears the Union Jack for its waistcoat. On this earth, there is not a more truculent satirist and spurner of misfortune—not a more brutal giber and scoffer at the imprisoned, crucified, or beggared nobilities of this shifting, struggling, sacrificing world—than this same full-blooded, beef-eating, fog-brained nation, whose Generals have neither the vitality nor the solemnity of gray-haired women, and retires from a contest into which it threw, into the stony bed of the Alma, the red bright flower of its army, with an irrecoverable result—a splintered shield and a trampled crest.

As with Hungary, so it was with France. When Paris was startled from its slumbers; when grim savages in cocked hats pointed their pistols to Lamoriciere, Cavaignac, and others; when, all along the beautiful Boulevards, came Lancers and Carbineers, in white cloaks, carrying loaded pistols with the finger on the trigger; when from the Porte St. Denis to the Place Vendome, there flew a storm of musket balls and grape-shots, and the Republic reeled under the murderous volley, shook its hand above the crimson flood, and sunk with a shriek, prophesying that it would one day appear—then had we sweeping adjectives against Napoleon, the perjurer, the cut-throat, and usurper.

The Times, with its ponderous magnificence of diction assaulted him. The Morning Post, as a velvet-breeched footman might do, scrutinized his cards, lifted up his linen, and looked to his finger-nails, the test of true gentility. And then did Punch, who assumes to be a noble fellow, but is a very mean old crabbed chap, with all his heart upon his back, come out, and in his rich, coarse cartoons lampoon the Herod of December—the Slaughterer of the Enfants de Paris—the Grisettes, innocent loafers, ball-goers, Chiffoniers and Literati of the columned and fort-girthed city of the Seine. So they wrote, and so they pencilled, whilst villainy was in the balance. So they wrote, and so they pencilled, so they moralized, and so they satirized, until Republicanism was fairly choked—until the bayonet was into every heart which had a throb for freedom—until the Truth was crucified, or manacled, or swamped, and the Pilate of the Coup d'Etat called for a golden basin, and washed his hands of the murder he had deliberately done.

But when this had come to pass—when Napoleon by the grace of Beelzebub, had proved himself a terrestrial power—we beheld an instantaneous change.

Newspapers can't afford to give history consecutively. We must leap over great spaces. Here we pass from the bivouac of the Zouaves, and other favorite corps in red breeches on the steps of the rifled Assembly, gulping cheap brandy over the body of the people, till we come to the Castle of Windsor, where, a few months ago, Napoleon the Third dictated a message to his Army. These two great facts realize and precipitate themselves upon the world. The pale head, under the pavement of the Invalides, receives back the crown that was betrayed, forfeited, and crushed upon the red mud of Waterloo. The spirit of Republicanism has the weight of two hundred sceptres thrust across and locked upon her breast. All know how this man, Napoleon, was there received, in London. All know how the Times, and Post, and Punch, lifted up their voices, clapped their hands, waved their hats, and flourished their pens, to do him honor. All know how he that was most lowly was exalted, and how Barabbas was preferred. Even coal-porters cried—Vive l'Empereur!

And so it was with William Smith O'Brien. When he was down, they kicked him When he was close within their grim walls, and could return no answer, they poured out their ribaldry, their contemptuous pity, their jeers, their jokes, their cockney fables about cabbage-gardens—that's what they laughed, and drank, and turned many a bright penny on for weeks and months—and even when the sharp claw of death was on him, there came to us, across those miles of sea, reaching and striking us like arrows, in the deep lonely forests where we built our rough home of bark and spars—derisions the most ribald—and gibes and jeers such as fat fiends alone, one would imagine, would have the obscene malignity to utter.

Yet the world has turned over. Napoleon, from being a beggared gentleman-on-town in London, keeps sumptuous house in the Tuilleries, dictates war messages from Windsor, initiates a Conference which, for the present, regulates the affairs of Europe, gives liberty, like an Olympian God, to the slaves of Cayenne; and England—utterly powerless without him—following, like a headless rabble, in the glare of his victories—obedient to him in the Camp and Council-room—through the lips of two Roués—Palmerston and Duncombe—the latter conspicuously known as the stipendiary bed-fellow of Madame Vestris, when George the Fourth had flung her off upon her purple velvet couch, the sapless, parched, and painted weed of his polluted Regent Widowhood.

But, as we have said, it is the beautiful bright features of Smith O'Brien's return to Ireland—his noble old native country—which invites our sympathies and congratulations at this moment, and as that event opens out to us a wide field of memories and hopes—hopes the more distinctly evoked by the defiant warning, and warlike attitude and tone of the kingless and reckless Democracy of America—we here, in a current sweeping us forcibly along, pull up, throw a line ashore, fasten ourselves for a week, and with—three cheers for Smith O'Brien and Ireland—lie by, to congratulate him, and the land he returns to vitalize and ennoble by his presence, upon his proud appearance.

He left that land haughtily—in the Swift—an Irish Rebel against the English Crown. He returns to it the same. Truth is eternal. There is hope for Ireland yet.

NICARAGUA—GENERAL CASS.

Ten thousand citizens in the Park—the Congress of New-York Democracy—have ratified the progress of Republican faith and courage by rendering an unqualified, though discriminating, approval of General Walker's conduct in Nicaragua; and as it were by putting the popular seal to the more official and documentary recognition of the representative of the Central American Republic at present in our city.

The people are always the best judges of a people's faith. They understand it, and are fraternal. They behold its sufferings, and are generous. Manliness, courage and vitality, are the truest keys to a nation's welfare; they are also the surest means to its heart. Thus the Nicaraguan patriots, struggling manfully, fighting heroically—aspiring much and proving worthy to aspire; enduring much and showing the world how endurance can lead to victory; have inspired an enthusiasm in their behalf in the United States, that at present supersedes all other foreign events and even tinges with its influence the necessities expected within the heart and brain of the embryo president to be nominated at Cincinnati.

The meeting at the Park was significant, not only as regards the recognition of Nicaragua, under the Walker-Rivas achievements, but was a telling, timely, and unequivocal ebullition of the insulted pride and outraged individuality of American nationality and right, that levelled the British flag at Saratoga, and smothered it beneath the cotton bales of New-Orleans.

The so-called "Fillibuster" character of Central American affairs is beheld alone, and rightfully so, in the interference of the British flag; and the voice of the stalwart and the invincible army that acknowledged the blue and white stripes waving from the hickory staff in the Park, thundered an undeniable warning to the leprosied old standard that from Oude to San Juan—from Ireland to New-Zealand, shakes its heavy folds as though bowed with the weight of chains that fringe its gaudy quarterings.

This feeling of the multitude is not less than the sympathy with Nicaragua which called them together. It is important.

Every speaker dwelt with bitter emphasis upon it. Every statesman who could not attend, wrote and characterized it with words of fire. The resolutions passed at the meeting, in view of this British interference, called for a repeal, "at least, of some portions of the neutrality laws, and the full and practical enforcement of the Monroe doctrine." The presiding officer declared that he should "not care for the neutrality laws, for they have been broken by the English government, and are no longer binding upon us," and the words were echoed through the multitudes. Senator Cass, in the same spirit, believed that were we true to ourselves and Nicaragua, "we and it would soon be free from all European interference, and have a security against the ambitious designs of England far better than Clayton-Bulwer treaties."

Ex-Governor Smith, of Virginia, convinced of the British influence, which has been creeping stealthily over Central America, hailed the meeting as of the greatest importance, as a means of counteracting it, "especially as Britain has refused to observe her treaty with us." Governor Price, of New Jersey, believed in England's antagonism to General Walker; an enmity and trepidation growing from the thought that he was going to produce the American results of a democratic government. Gen. Cazneau, Minister of War in the Texan Republic, and lately American Agent at St. Domingo, knew well, from experience, of the "double-faced intrigues and bold deceits practised by England" to defeat the progress of America. The other speakers were equally bold, true, and decisive. Major Heiss' spirited letter is almost entirely directed against the audacious encroachments and "religious" investments of John Bull wherever he can throw down a Bible or load a rifle. After peace was established in Nicaragua, American capital was there to give it life, vigor, and stability; but it was checked by Costa Rica, as Major Heiss states, "through the intrigues of the British government, and the unfortunate delay of our own government in recognizing Nicaragua."

Every word uttered in speech or letter by those gentlemen, representing, as they do, every phase of American society and influence—is thoroughly true. They are uncontroverted and incontrovertible. They speak more eloquently than any remarks could do, so we shall conclude this article with the letter in full from the venerable and able Senator from Michigan.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday Evening, May 21, 1856.

Sir: Your telegraphic dispatch inviting me to attend the meeting in the Park on Friday evening, has just reached me. I cannot be there in person, but my feelings and sympathies are with you in this demonstration of public satisfaction at the wise and just measure of the Administration, by which the existing Government of Nicaragua is recognized and will be encouraged to go on with its good work. I trust it will meet the cordial approbation of the American people. It cannot fail to do so if they are true to the faith of their fathers. Since the commencement of our National existence it has been our principle to consider every foreign Government a legitimate one which is received as such in its own country. This is the condition of the present rulers of Nicaragua, and it is no less our duty than it ought to be our desire, to lend them the moral support they can derive from our recognition. I am free to confess that the heroic effort of our countrymen in Nicaragua excites my admiration while it engages all my solicitude. I am not to be deterred from the expression of these feelings by sneers, or reproaches, or hard words. He who doesn't sympathize with such an enterprise has little in common with me.

The difficulties which General Walker has encountered and overcome will place his name high on the roll of the distinguished men of his age. He has conciliated the people he went to aid, the Government of which he makes part is performing its functions without opposition, and internal tranquility marks the wisdom of its policy. That magnificent region, for which God has done so much and man so little, needed some renovating process, some transfusion by which new life may be imparted to it. Our countrymen will plant there the seeds of our institutions, and God grant they may grow up into an abundant harvest of industry, enterprise and prosperity. A new day, I hope, is opening upon the States of Central America. If we are true to our duty they will soon be freed from all danger of European interference, and will have a security in their own power against the ambitious designs of England far better than Clayton-Bulwer treaties, or any other diplomatic machinery by which a spirit of aggression is sought to be concealed till circumstances are ready for active operation.

I am, Sir, respectfully, your obedient servant.

LEWIS CASS.

THE IRISH REPRESENTATIVES—PAST AND PRESENT.

A distinguished American visiting Europe some few years since, in speaking on an occasion half public, half private, told with a touching effect, as a proof of the deep love which Irishmen, however distant, bear their father country—that he had watched one evening, a band of immigrants returning from a day's labor, in the West, and as they broke into one of those wild, melancholy songs, which belong to the national music, never, though he had travelled in many regions, had the softest strains that floated round the revels of the East, thrilled the heart with such mingled agony and rapture, as did that simple song—a memento, perhaps, of want and poverty and toil, and of a land so poor as to drive away her children, but still a memento of their native land!

And so it is. Though driven from the native forest, and scattered to pasture over every portion of the earth, the deer ever turn to the fountain from which they first drank, and catch every echo that comes from the old places, softened and sweetened by the distance. It is this feeling which prompts us from time to time to present on our page a reflection of things in our own dear land, as they pass.

Both Bacon and Talleyrand, wise men in their way, have a maxim that—the friend who is faithfully fast to his first friend, may be relied on by his second. Irishmen will not love America the less that they love Ireland more. It is well, too, that Irishmen should really understand how politics at home, clouded from clear vision by the dust which personal and party prejudice and conflict have thrown up—really stand. With this view, we purpose to present, by way of opening, a series of pictures of the present representation of Ireland, which—drawn by a hand cunning in the subject and unsteadied by a quiver of personal or party predilection, may be relied on—as, if not glowing, at least truthful photographs.

Those who have visited the beautiful churches abroad, in an hour when the sacred Host is absent, and the ever wakeful lamp which stands its sentinel is extinguished, must have marked the lonely and melancholy air that hangs around the place. The rapture of adoration, the consolation of sorrow which its inspiring presence imparts, is lost—and a dreary, chilling coldness is over all. So is Ireland, with that Parliament, which gave her life, and from whose presence her children gathered inspiration, borne to another land. It would need, indeed, a cold heart to look without emotion on that spot where Grattan stood and Curran spoke, and Plunkett threw his thunders with a giant arm. Money-changers now violate a nation's temple, and the deserted city of Bruges, with its nobles fled—its trade gone—its streets dripping and mouldy, presents not a more cheerless look than the wasted city which whines and cowers around that temple. Ireland's glories are those of the past, and its beauty that of a monument. Its occasional wretched fits of gaiety sound like convivial enjoyments in a poor-house or a sepulchre.

In the absence of that which in every country gives it sustenance, Irish Parliamentary eloquence has been gradually growing dimmer, until it may now be said to be wholly extinguished. With the elevation of Mr. Keogh to the Bench, and the departure of Mr. Duffy, who, though not an orator, had a national love and enthusiasm which supplied its place, the last scintillations which had even the material of growing into a light, have gone out. The ablest Parliamentary speaker of the Irish representatives now in the House of Commons is Mr. Cairns, of Belfast, and he is an English lawyer, with English legal aspirations, and more remarkable for his compact accumulation of facts and closeness and vigor of their application, than for any more shining order of eloquence.

For some time after the plunder of the Irish Parliament, Plunket and Grattan sustained in the British House the Irish reputation for eloquence; but no effort of theirs, in the soil to which they were transplanted, was equal to those which sprung from them on the parent earth. The trees still stood proudly alongside their tallest fellows in the forest to which they were conveyed, but they lacked, once uprooted, that sap and vigor which gave strength to their trunk, and beauty to their bough. The wild, dishevelled glory of Grattan, and the prophet-like air and attitude with which he threw forth his inspirations the first time he stood in the British Parliament, are most graphically pictured by Pitt, upon whom his eloquence produced an electrifying impresion. And Plunket's speech on Catholic Emancipation, in reply to Peel, with its sentence upon sentence sweeping over the ground, close and crushing as a rush of cannon balls, was a giant piece of Parliamentary artillery. But neither of these efforts were equal to the splendid struggle of both for the life of that parent, upon whose bosom they had drank the inspiring theme. The one died broken and dejected; the other, like so many anti-English Hannibals, found a Capua in the British treasury, and subdued his sinew in soft recline upon the rosy cushion of the Bench.

Scarcely had these two lights been extinguished, when there arose above the Parliamentary horizon two other Irish luminaries of scarce lesser brilliancy, though of different order, who claim a column in this brief preliminary sketch of the decline and fall of the Irish representation to its present stricken state.

MILITARY MEMOIRS.

MEAGHER GUARDS, PHILADELPHIA, PENN.

The First Company of Meagher Guard, attached to the Second Regiment and Second Brigade 1st Division of the Pennsylvania Volunteers, was organized on the 28th of January, 1853, was commanded by Lieut. A. C. McManns until the September of the same year, when Edward W. Power was elected Captain, and held his commission until the 1st of April of the present year, and then resigned. The Company is at present commanded by Patrick O'Connor, 2d Lieut., which leaves a vacancy for Captain and First Lieutenant. Uniform: coat, dark green cloth dress coat, single-breasted, with two slashes of gold lace on each end of the collar, three slashes of gold lace on the end of each sleeve, and three slashes of gold lace on each skirt, with buff facings. Pantaloons, dark blue cloth, with gold lace stripe two inches in width, down the side. Cap, black silk body with gold mounting, black patent leather peak, with a gold cord dropping from the centre of the cap at each side of the front, two gold tassels dropping to the left side; the harp and the shamrock on the front of the cap, with a white plume tipped with green on the top.

Black patent leather cartridge-box, with M. G. in brass letters on the centre; black patent leather bayonet-scabbard and body-belt, with a brass body-plate.

The Company have on their muster-roll 47 active members, and parade 32 muskets; drill from 20 to 25 men each Tuesday evening at their Armory, 404 Market. Target, 9th of October. Their annual Ball takes place about the latter part of November. Their ranks are now opened to all respectable young men.

ST. LOUIS WASHINGTON GUARDS.

This fine and exclusively Irish regiment was formed under Captain D. M. Frost, graduate of West Point academy, in August, 1853. It at present numbers 95 muskets, with a cornet band of 12 performers, and some 50 honorary members. Captain Frost served as lieutenant during the Mexican campaign with distinction. It is the first regiment of the St. Louis legion, under command of Colonel Renick. Officered by Capt. D. M. Frost; 1st Lieut., Patrick Gorman, Tipperary; 2nd Lieut. and acting Adjutant, Joseph Kelly, Cavan; 3d Lieut., Francis P. Burke, Kings County; 4th Lieut., Patrick O'Connor, Kerry; 1st Sergeant, Thos. Wall, Kilkenny; 2nd Sergeant and Color bearer, Richard King, Dundrum, Co. Down; 3d Sergeant, Michael Somers, Kilkenny.

Uniform—blue dress coat, buff facings, gold lace; cap device, a harp surmounted by an eagle; plume, white tipped with green, (occasionally wear a cylindrical pompon of same colors,) sky blue pants, with buff stripe; epaulettes buff; white pants in summer. Fatigue dress—U. S. frock and regular uniform pants; cloth cap, oil-skin cover, letters W. G. in front; cross and waist belt, letters W. G. on waist belt. Colors of the regiment—blue ground, fringed with gold; on one side old Irish harp surmounted by American eagle, and resting in a wreath of laurel and shamrock, and on an open music book on the right page of which is "Patrick's Day," and on the left "Hail Columbia." Motto on scroll, "FREEDOM IS HARMONY." On the reverse is a bust of Washington enwreathed by shamrocks. Drill, 7 1-2 o'clock, P. M., on Tuesday evening. Flag presented by the ladies of St. Louis, at Varieties Theatre, February 22nd, 1853. Annual ball, February 22nd.

In appearance, and evolution on parade, this regiment will compare favorably with any in the Union, and the "esprit du corps" existing among the members promise to make it one of our largest regiments.

Literature.

An Address Delivered for the Benefit of the Roman Catholic Orphans of New-York.

St. Patrick's Day—Irish Memories—Their Significance and Beauty—Their Harmony with the Republic. Part II.

I might here stop to inquire—if a respectful consideration for my audience did not prompt me to conclude—I might here stop to inquire, if these anniversaries and memories were incompatible with the integrity of the Republic? Some grave gentlemen say they are. But these gentlemen—flying away from the sight of a green coat—ignorant of the fact, that, a few years ago, so late as 1836, it happened to be the uniform of the United States marines—scared at a shamrock, as if it were a thistle—yelling with fright if Shelton or Dodworth strikes up Garryowen—and rushing along a plank-road of Live Oak into a Philadelphia nomination, crying out that the Republic is about to fall upon them—these men remind me of the story told of one of the O'Grady's of Limerick. In the neighborhood of Castle-Connell, just above the town, there are the ruins of an old castle, which a tradition amongst the peasantry predicts will fall upon the wisest person who passes under them. The O'Grady I speak of fancied he was the doomed one, and, as often as he could, contrived to keep out of the way. But business sometimes compelled him to go by the road running close to the ruins, and whenever this happened, as he approached them, he put spurs to his horse, and passing them at a thundering gallop, never pulled bridle until a mile or two past them.

This levity may be inconsiderate where such terror is expressed. But to me, the terror arising in the minds of these wise men who fancy the Republic, loosened by these Irish memories, is about to precipitate itself upon them; to me this terror resembles that of the galloping O'Grady too strongly, for me to do otherwise than regard it as a joke. If, however, a more serious treatment conduces to their sanity, I would ask them if that monument to Kosciusko spoils the scenery of the Hudson? I would ask them, if that commemorative stone casts a treasonable shadow—something in the shape of Arnold—on the waters which in the rich sunshine of each August, reflect from the cliffs of West Point the bayonets and white canvas of the youth of the Republic—they who are the perpetual flower of the armies of America? And yet, who that gazes on it does not think of Warsaw, and Cracow, and the wrongs, the martyrdoms, and hopes of Poland?

Beneath the portico of St. Pauls', in Broadway, there is a funeral urn in white marble. On the slab immediately below the urn is this inscription:—

THIS MONUMENT is erected by the order of Congress 25th Jan. 1776 to transmit to Posterity a grateful remembrance of the Patriotism conduct Enterprise and Perseverance of MAJOR GENERAL RICHARD MONTGOMERY, who after a series of successes, amidst the most discouraging Difficulties Fell in the attack on Quebec 31 Decr. 1775. Aged 37 years

On a lower slab we read these words:—

The State of New York caused the Remains of MAJOR GENERAL RICHARD MONTGOMERY to be conveyed from Quebec and Deposited beneath this Monument the 8th day of July 1818.

In this inscription, is there a programme of revolt—a dissolution of the Union? In that urn, are there ashes which may yet explode into a calamitous vitality? And yet, does not both urn and inscription remind us of the young soldier, to whom I have before alluded, who, nursed by an Irish mother in the wilds of Donnegal, died with his feet to the foe, on the threshold of the strongest citadel he held? And with this memory, evoked by the sculptured evidence of the piety of this City and the gratitude of Congress, does not a crowd of memories, of kindred brilliancy, arise?

Do we not see on the walls of the Salle des Victoires at Versailles, in letters of gold, the names of Patrick Sarsfield, and O'Brien, Earl of Clare? And as these names strike us, are we not reminded, that as the thunders died away, as the lightnings ceased to flash, as the storm cleared off, as the curses of the conflict gave way to the cheers of victory—above the wounded, above the dying, above the dead—above the piles of dismounted cannon—above the dismantled earth-works—high above the sea, the plain, the steppes—on the summit of the huge tower, which in the blaze of triumph seemed to lift itself higher and grow vaster still—on the summit of this huge tower, which it took tons of treasure and cataracts of blood to capture—the exulting armies of France, the baffled brigades of England, the retreating legions of Russia, the allied navies in the sea below, the last war-ship of Sebastopol sinking in the harbor—Europe, America, the World—beheld the Tricolor, and, beside it, with his lifted sword announcing victory, the son of the Irish Rebel who had planted it on the topmost stone of the humbled Malakoff!

Do the gentlemen who reprobate these memories require further satisfaction, or have they had enough? The illustrious soldier who conducted the young battalions of the American republic over the same road, to the same gates, but to meet an enemy far more formidable than Cortes had to face, strict a disciplinarian as he is, unimpassioned, matured, and conservative as his nature is, felt no reluctance in speaking as we ourselves might do.

In answer to an invitation addressed to him by Robert Tyler, of Phladelphia, requesting the honor of his presence at a dinner in celebration of St. Patrick's Day, the illustrious soldier to whom I have alluded, wrote this letter:—

Washington, March 17, 1852.

Gentlemen:—I have received your note, inviting me to join you at Philadelphia in the celebration at the approaching St. Patrick's Day—an honor which I regret the press of business obliges me to decline.

You do me but justice in supposing me to feel a lively interest in Ireland and her sons. Perhaps no man, certainly no American, owes so much to the valor and blood of Irishmen as myself. Many of them marched and fought under my command in the war of 1812—15, and many more thousands in the recent war with Mexico—not one of whom was ever known to turn his back upon an enemy or friend.

I salute you, gentlemen, with my cordial respects.

Winfield Scott.

To Robert Tyler, Esq., and others of the committee.

To my friend, the editor of the Irish-American, I am indebted for the following facts:—

In 1771, in the city of Philadelphia, a social and convivial club was formed, called 'the Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick,' composed of Irish-born and the sons of Irishmen. By a rule of the association, ten honorary members, without the qualification of Irish descent, were received. To that figure the number was limited.

When the Revolutionary struggle intervened, the majority of the Society took up arms in the cause of liberty; and they not only gave their personal services as volunteer soldiers, but their property, to sustain the conflict for independence. Six years afterwards—in 1777—they were honorably discharged from further duty. The Commander-in-chief—Washington—on that interesting occasion, returned thanks for the many essential services they had rendered to the country, and to himself personally during the course of that severe campaign. Tho' composed (he said) of gentlemen of fortune, they had exhibited a noble example of discipline and subordination which would ever do them honor, and would ever be gratefully remembered by him.

The bye-laws of the Friendly Sons being observed with strictness, and the number of ten having been previously filled, the Body resolved, that as they (Irishmen) had become adopted citizens of America, it was plainly open to them, and a most agreeable duty, to make George Washington an Irishman by adoption.

And the Father of his country was accordingly "adopted" with peals of acclamation, and duly christened an "Irishman." This baptism took place on the 16th December, 1781. The Resolution was presented in due form by the President of the Society, George Campbell, Esq. The illustrious hero of the Republic replied to the address (in which the resolution was conveyed) most graciously. He said he "accepted, with singular pleasure, the ensign of so worthy a fraternity as that of the Sons of St. Patrick of Philadelphia—a Society distinguished for the firm adherence of its members to the glorious cause in which he and they were alike embarked."

He was entertained at a splendid dinner on the occasion, and gave a banquet in return to his "Brother Irishmen" at the City Tavern. He frequently, afterwards, met his "fellow-countrymen," and more than once dined with them at their anniversary celebrations, always wearing the medal of the Society.

Much more I shall not add. In the presence of the mighty shade that name evokes, and which in its sublimity now fills this temple and captivates all hearts, it becomes me to retire respectfully from the scene. I do so, repeating what I have advanced. These memories, these festivities, these anniversaries, such as that of the 17th of March, are natural, and just beautiful and sacred. Irrepressible, they do not conflict, but harmonize, with our obligations to the commonwealth, its spirit, its institutions, the opinions of its elder statesmen, and the genius of its origin.

They not only thus concur with the loyalty which citizenship inspires, but, permit me to add, they contribute to the intellectual life and historic opulence of the country. The stateliest house which the wealthiest merchant in this city of countless private palaces may erect, with all the modern improvements, will not be impaired, but improved and enriched a little, by a few pictures from the old masters. Or to use an illustration more commensurate with the grandeur of the subject, let me cite a word from the noblest student of God's great works that as yet has walked the earth and been the chronicler of its glories. In the Andes of Quito, Humboldt says, mankind have the privilege of contemplating all the varieties of vegetable life, and of seeing all the stars in the firmament at once. There, he says, the fruitful bosom of the earth, and both hemispheres of the heavens, display at once the whole stores of their phenomena, their endless variety of forms and features. There are all the climates of the globe, and all the vegetable zones they severally determine. What the Andes of Quito are to the material world, this Republic is to the political. Here may be seen all the varieties of social life, all the varieties of race, temperament, religion, adaptability, and intelligence, which separately parceled off, remain so, in different portions of the old world, but here congregate, and in a spacious sphere adapted for them all, harmonize and propagate. Exhibiting endless individualizations of heart, memory, susceptibility, and genius, they thrive in different pursuits, attain to different elevations, put forth different hues, but from their diversities a magnificent aggregate emerges, expands, and towers, which, like the Andes of Quito, until the moon turns to blood, no storm storm shall overthrow!

A lady thus sketches Alice Carey, the poetess of America:—"To my partial eyes, in all this brilliant company, no woman looked better than Alice Carey. She wore no flowers in her hair, no jewels on her arms; but a pale, gray, lustrous satin dress, the sleeves and skirt of which were trimmed with broad folds of crimson velvet. I believe that the habitual colors which a person wears are indicative of the character; and I thought that this dress of Alice Carey's was like her heart, with its pale, sad ground, and a brilliant bordering of gorgeous dreams. Her portraits do her no manner of justice. She is not old and homely, as they would make us believe. She has one of those sad, sweet faces at which I love to look. Her face is a history, not a prophecy. There I read the records of suffering—there I behold the lingering light of many a departing dream. Sorrow's touch has not frosted her waiving hair; and though its shadow lingers in her clear, brown eyes, they still are lustrous with all a poet's inspiration. All literary women are not frights; all are not pedants; all are not bores—although these charming characteristics are often ascribed to them as a class. Any one who knows Alice Carey will never again dislike a literary woman simply because she is literary."

Messrs. Ticknor & Fields have nearly ready for publication the late Professor Channing's Lectures on Rhetoric and Oratory, read before the Seniors in Harvard College, with a Biography of the Author by Richard H. Dana, Jr., Esq.; Washington Allston's fine story of Monaldi; a beautiful pocket volume containing the whole of Tennyson's Poems, a delightful book for summer travellers; the Espousals, by the author of the "Angel in the House;" Charles Reade's new novel; Matthew Arnold's Poems; the Life and Explorations of Colonel Fremont, by Upham; and a Physician's Vacation, by Dr. Walter Channing.

SPANISH CONQUEST IN AMERICA.

The Spanish Conquest in America, and its relation to the History of Slavery, and to the Government of Colonies. By Arthur Helps. 2 vols. Harper & Brothers.

The present work is an elongation of a previous one—"The Conquerors of the New World and their Bondsmen," by the same author, published some seven years ago. It is the same subject, on larger canvas; some new accessories—in the shape of disquisition—forcing themselves in, naturally enough, to fill up the spaces; for as the principal characters are not much enlarged, there consequently arose with the necessity which appeared in the author's mind for the re-casting of his composition, in this day of India-rubber, also the necessity of filling-in with whatever colors the canvas which the portraiture of his chief men men and scenes did not originally cover.

Transplanting his figures thus, Mr. Helps needed suitable background to throw them out in the relief his mind desired. Some earthly, or elementary accessories were necessary, and both have been used freely, and sometimes with strange admixture, by our author. His earthly illustrations of the subject are in general more grateful to the eye, more useful, than the aërial; inasmuch as from a man of Mr. Helps' caste of mind, however benevolent and sincere, the relation of an historical fact, or something actually done, is much more acceptable than any pseudo-philosophical speculation, or any wearisome wandering or pondering through realms which have no end; being of the clouds, cloudy.

That an historian, in the widest sense of the term, should be a philosopher, one will readily admit; but that one should write history in the belief that he is a philosopher, is a different affair; and in view of which we are inclined to say of this work what Talleyrand said to a young author, who requested an opinion on his manuscript: "There is much that is good, and much that is new in it," said the Frenchman; whereat the poor young devil of a scribe was near choked with vain delight; "But," quoth his disgustingly-candid critic, "what is good is not new, what is new is not good."

In point of fact, Mr. Helps has helped his readers to two distinct works—the one good, the other new. The one, which gives its name to both, is a history of the discoveries of the Spanish and Portuguese adventurers, their subsequent conquests, to the fall of Mexico into the hands of Spain. The other is a discursive disquisition, wherein Mr. Helps' philosophical strong points, or weaknesses, if you please, metaphysical and ethical, are as prominent as the doings of Ovando or Cortez, and plead as assiduously as did Columbus to the monarchs of Spain and the junta of old fogy cosmographers who "sat" upon his great idea.

There are plenty of readers who would delight to read either, or probably both of Mr. Helps' works separately; but as they are at present interwoven, one cannot attempt either without making up his mind to fight through both. Like Colman's two single gentleman, they are rolled into one.

With the author's avowed motive for writing such a book, the modus operandi adopted was perhaps the best he could have used; but for the desire and patience of every-day readers, all but the worst.

A truce, however, to fault-finding. We are aware that in reading, as in writing and everything else, there is sectionality. Some readers devour history as some smokers inhale the full broad flavor of "the thought-inspiring weed," by means of a heavily-laden pipe-bowl; other "readers" think history heavy, and dawdle over a new novel, as some "smokers," having a genteel horror of the pipe, "make believe" enjoyment over a flimsy cigarette. For such sectionalists—for those who always need a particular dish for dinner, a particular wine at it, and a particular speech after it—who, winter and summer, want bouquets made of a particular set of flowers—for those who, like Gradgrind, only breathe facts, or, like Micawber, live on a fiction—for those, and they are numerous, who desire all mankind to be black, and those, also numerous, who are insane on the superiority of white, as a humanitarian hue—for all such sectionalists our remarks were made. To those, however, who are not so dogmatic in their dinners, or conventional as to color; who can eat all they can get, and admire all they can see; who can read and think—we say, read this book by all means. It is interesting from the facts which form the basis of it; and will aid to refresh the memory on topics which, either as students or Americans, as deeply command our respect and attention, as our temporary wonder.

The struggles of a great idea, incarnate in a great man, must for ever shake us up to thoughtful though startled admiration: even as the effect of that man's idea—the America of to-day!—shakes up the thinking portion of the world. The expeditions, the adventures that followed in the wake of that idea, as stars in the tail of a comet, at once evidence the greatness of the path laid open and illustrate it.

Robed in the chivalry and proud savagery of the period—standing out as gorgeous idol-worshippers, and knightly iconoclasts, fighting as stone-worshippers and filibustiero Christians, as sun-templars and monks, the rival actors in the romantic and bloody drama, hold not alone the reasoning faculties that throb after the progress of the idea; but capture the imagination by a hundred links, born of the manners, customs, and history of the era, the new region into which the old-world cavaliers were thrown, the modes of warfare indicated by their necessities, and the haughty valor by which they were met. Every incident of such a life and enterprise suggests a history; and every victim gives a victory.

In the narrative, the author of the present work is copious; and not seldom usefully, as well as graphically, so; leading the reader with a vigorous will and an eye for the picturesque, which is always appreciable, if not always appreciated. The second volume, to a great extent, is the most interesting. The tenth book is devoted to a most graphic and stirring recital of the deeds and adventures of Hernando Cortez, the hero and cavalier par excellence of the South American conquest.

His black banner, with the colored cross on it, and the blue and white flames folding about it, vividly indicates the career of the man who bore it. It was a programme of the work he laid out for himself, and remains the significant symbol of the manner in which he performed it. It is the key to his history.

Ojeda, the companion of Columbus, who, under the patronage of the Bishops of Burgos, had added some laurels to his brow as a discoverer in Terra Firma, had died in obscurity. The coadjutor of his latter and more disastrous expedition, Nicuesa, also perished "miserably." Bachiller Enciso had brought out Vasco Nuñez de Balboa, who, taking refuge from his creditors in the hold of a vessel, became a noted pioneer in the path of empire, discovering the South Sea, beholding a superior savage civilization near Darien; and hearing, for the first time, tempting whispers of the dazzling Peruvian country. In time he falls before the enmity of powerful rivals, and is superseded. Pedrarias, with "the most splendid and well-equipped armament that had left Spain," takes his place and does nothing. His cavaliers and soldiers, tired of idleness, beg off, and are received in a friendly way by Velasquez, the Governor of Cuba, who promised to give them encomiendas of Indians whenever there should be vacancies. The patience of the Spaniards was tested, however, for "as these vacancies would only occur from the death of the proprietors, or the confiscation of their property (for the island of Cuba was already pacified, to use the phrase of that day), encomiendas of Indians fell vacant but slowly.'

Three wretched years of incertitude and expectation rolled over since the gallant and gorgeous pageant left Spain. The Soldiers were hungry for spoils and the persistently healthy Indians would not die. Disease and disaster, quietness and discontent preyed on the adventurers, until at last, putting the wealthy Francisco Hernandez de Cordova at their head, and being aided by Velasquez, they determined to go and discover some Eldorado for themselves. An expedition consisting of one hundred and ten men was projected, and Anton Alaminos, who as a boy had sailed with the great Columbus, took the helm. They found land at Cotoche, at the north of Yucatan, saw great towns and "buildings made of stone and mortar," and were puzzled, as their descendants have continued to be, at the signs and relics of a past civilization abounding in the locality. They were soon at war with the Indians, whom some ingenious minds were ready to declare "must be the descendants of those Jews whom Titus and Vespasian had driven into exile," and after undergoing many hardships, returned to Havana.

The fame of De Cordova spread, and another expedition under the leadership of Juan de Grijalva was formed, Pedro de Alvarado command ed one of the vessels; Alaminos again was chief pilot, and with them went Bernal Diaz del Castillo, who was a "simple soldier," and the author of a "narrative of considerable authority."

Grijalva discovered New Spain, and sent home Alvarado with the sick and wounded, and—what Velasquez liked better—gold! Grijalva, however, not returning himself as soon as his relative, the Governor, expected, and the latter being anxious that his share of the plunder should be accounted for, prepared a larger fleet than before, and placed Hernando Cortez at the head of it, with the intention of sending him in search of Grijalva, when lo! the latter returned.

Great news of gold was brought, and the Governor was rather fearful of allowing Cortez to head the expedition, for already Hernando was whispered to be "an Estremaduran full of high, crafty and ambitious thoughts." But these crafty thoughts were well able to take care of their master. He was determined to go. The sneers of his rivals were distanced by more defiant sneers. He had pledged his means, credit and all that he was possessed of, to add a picturesqe importance to his new position. He altered his dress, and for the first time donned a plume of feathers, which added a romantic effect to his handsome face and the carriage of his head. He was not going to take down his plume, even though it brushed the daylight out of the eyes of more niggardly rivals. At all events, Cortez was confirmed in his appointment, at least he led the expedition—tradition, the truth of which, however, Mr. Helps seems to doubt, telling us that as the Governor became uncertain, the Estremaduran devoted all his energies to get his fleet equipped, and having done so, slipped away by night.

"There is a story," says Mr. Helps, "which doubtless is true, as Las Casas had it from the mouth of Cortez himself, that he laid hold of all the cattle which a certain butcher had in his possession, who was bound under penalty to supply the town of Santiago, and that Cortez paid for what he seized by a gold chain, which he took off of his own neck and gave to the butcher."

Thus was Cortez fairly afloat. To follow him, the reader must seek the book itself, from which we take leave with this vivid miniature of the conqueror of Montezuma. He was—

"A thorough adventurer, a very politic statesman, and an admirable soldier. He was cruel at times in conduct, but not in disposition; he was sincerely religious, profoundly dissembling, courteous, liberal, amorous, decisive. There was a certain grandeur in all his proceedings. He was very fertile in resources, and while he loooked far forward, he was at the same time almost madly audacious in his enterprises. This strange mixture of valor, religion, policy, and craft, was a peculiar product of that century"

Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, of London, have just executed for the Earl of Stamford and Warrington a superb piece of ornamental plate. The design consists of a group of deer, ten in number, surrounding two stags joined in combat. Rocks, trees, and shrubs are interspersed amongst the animals, the combatants occupying the centre and most elevated portion of the composition. The plate weighs nearly 2000 ounces, and the composition measures about 3 feet in height.

"The Waterford Mechanic's Institute has just purchased an excellent library of over 1,000 volumes, to be added to their library."

Notes from Elkanah Watson's Diary.

The Dunkers—Not even a Fig-leaf—The First Canal—Dr. Williamson—Virginia Elections, "King's Curse"—Specimen Farmers—The French Theatre—French Wedding Frolic.

On the 4th October, 1777, Elkanah was in Euphrates, Pennsylvania, within sound of the thunder of Washington's artillery at Germantown, and there made note of an eccentric sect of fanatics, named Dunkers, who had, some forty years previous, founded the village. They numbered about one hundred, and "professed abstraction from the rest of the human family," and "moved among etherial spirits:"

"They dressed in long tunics, reaching to the heels, girded with a sash, and with woollen caps falling over their shoulders. They baptized by immersion. They believed in a future state, and that salvation is attained only by penance and the mortification of the flesh. They never shave. The sexes have no intercourse, living in separate habitations, and even occupying different places of public worship. They sleep in apartments of only sufficient size to hold them, occupied by a wooden bench, a little inclining, on which they sleep. In the place of pillows, they rest the head on wooden blocks, so prepared as to receive it up to the ears. They carry on quite important manufactures, and amuse themselves in rudely painting scripture scenes, which are suspended in their chapel. They subsist exclusively on vegetables and roots, except at their occasional love-feasts. Rumor with her thousand tongues, is, of course, not sparing of their reputation. As we were taking our departure, we heard the brethren chaunting their melodious hymns in plaintive notes that thrilled our souls."

On entering Virginia a couple of days afterwards, Elkanah was highly shocked at seeing, in a "respectable house, young negroes, of both sexes, from twelve even to fifteen years old, not only running about the house, but absolutely tending table, as naked as they came into the world; not having even the poor apology of a fig-leaf to save modesty a blush." "I find, adds the philosophic youth, "custom will almost reconcile us to everything."

At Williamsburgh—which then consisted of "three hundred and twenty dwelling-houses," chiefly of wood—he learned that the "first canal commenced in America was then constructing from Waltham to Richmond, a distance of seven miles."

In North Carolina he availed himself "of that hospitality so characteristic of Southern manners," and at Edenton met the celebrated Dr. Williamson, who, the Editor informs us, was the identical person that obtained possession of the celebrated letters of Governor Hutchinson to the British ministry:

"Dr. Williamson, having heard that letters were deposited in London, at a place different from that in which they ought regularly to have been filed, and having understood that there was little exactness in the business of that office, he repaired to it, and stated that he had come for the last letters received from Governor Hutchinson and Mr. Oliver; mentioning, at the same time, the office in which they should have been placed. The letters were delivered to him, which he carried to Dr. Franklin, and left the next day for Holland. These treacherous and malignant letters were the approximate cause of the Revolution. They instigated the British government to adopt those harsh measures, which goaded a brave people to a resistance which resulted in their independence. The publication of the letters in Boston was a torch applied to the revolutionary train."

Here is an election scene in Virginia, during the time that tried men's souls. It is graphic:

"In passing Hanover Court-house, Virginia, we found the whole county assembled at an election. The moment I alighted, a wretched, pug-nosed fellow assailed me to swap watches. I had hardly shaken him off, when I was attacked by a wild Irishman, who insisted on my 'swapping horses' with him, and in a minute ran up the pedigree of his horse to the grand-dam. Treating his importunity with little respect, I became near involved in a boxing-match, the Irishman swearing that I did not 'trate him like a gintleman.' I had hardly escaped this dilemma when my attention was attracted by a fight between two very unwieldy fat men, until one succeeded in twisting a forefinger in a side-lock of the other's hair, and in the act of thrusting, by this purchase, his thumb into the latter's eye, he bawled out 'King's cruse,' equivalent in technical language to 'enough.'"

Here is a sketch of a "specimen" Pennsylvania farmer of those days;—

"On our journey to Valley Forge, a heavy storm and roads almost impassable compelled us to seek shelter at the house of an opulent farmer. Here we were received with the kindest hospitality, and found our host an intelligent, sensible man. He had a fine library, and was well informed on most subjects. His house was spacious and neat, and well supplied with the comforts and substantials of life. Independence, wealth and contentment were conspicuous in everything, within and without the house. This man was but a specimen of his class—virtuous, affluent and intelligent republican freemen."

Watson's notes in Europe are excessively picturesque; the effect being entirely produced by the clearness with which he jots down the observations of an inquiring mind and a restless eye. He was enraptured "with the ease and freedom exhibited in the table intercourse in France," which formed a great contrast to "the cold ceremony and formal compliments, to which he was accustomed." He adds:—"I trust that an alliance and intercourse with France may enable us, as a nation, to shake off the leading strings of Britain." He visited the theatre, for the first time, in Paris.

"Doctor Franklin, however, (he says) assured me that the English excel in tragedy, whilst the French surpass them in opera, comedy, farce, and pantomime. * * * When I had become able to observe and understand the gross double entendre and shameful indecencies, which characterized their performances, I confess they shocked my American modesty."

"Custom," however, came again to reconcile him. He again sighed, and said it "disguises and tolerates all things." The Palais Royal he found to be "a mass of moral corruption." With a "good Abbé friend" he went to a country wedding at Anciens:

"We entered the cottage at the verge of evening, and joined the wooden-shoe gentry collected, and merrily dancing, and singing as a substitute for the violin, with light hearts and heavy heels. The Abbé and myself soon figured in the dancing circle, composed of old and young, indiscriminately mixed. Madame bride, in sabots or wooden shoes, was only distinguished by a bouquet, which her swain in great gallantry placed over her heart. Their manner of dancing is much like that of the Indians of America, but more animated. We stamped around, hand in hand, all singing a dancing tune, advancing and retiring, and at the close of every cadence giving a general yell, their wooden shoes clattering the while in concert."

Such pleasant and well-told pictures of life, high and low, meet us at almost every page—but we must bring our marginal memoranda to a close.

An Apology for the People.

[The following letter has been sent us from French Creek, Iowa. We gladly publish it; for it evidently comes from a truthful and well-furnished mind, and, whilst it contains some things in which we do not concur, it throws out much matter for reflection. The quotation from Mackintosh is excellent.]

"Was it not written in water? Oblivion has become, as it were, a national compact:—

> 'Who put in popularity their trust,
> But write in water and but limn the dust.'

Indeed, every trace of him seems to have been studiously obliterated. Even his library, the favorite volumes with his autograph annotations, which, it might be presumed, Roman Catholic gratitude would have prized as so many relics, were depreciated and dispersed."—Curran and his Contemporaries, by Phillips.

The above is said in allusion to O'Connell, the once all but crowned King of the Irish people, and of whom Phillips said, not five pages from where the foregoing remark is made, that, "In 1829 he reached the summit of his glory. Every subsequent step was downward. Having obtained the Emancipation Act, "he should have died."

Though I admire O'Connell, and always shall continue to do so, yet I see nothing very odd in the fact that a starving nation, with what remnant of love they still bore him, in its sullen despair, was indifferent to the memory of one who, at one time, possessed all their confidence; nay more, who were ready to rise at his bidding, and assert the right which all nations have to govern themselves and throw off the yoke of oppression—which they had expected, under his guidance, to do—when their hopes in him, and their faith in their cause, were so high! Nay, contrary to the belief of nations and the results of experience from the time of Adam to the present, he promulgated the doctrine that wonders could be worked without the sword; in fact, that Ireland could have her own Parliament in spite of England and Scotland—two to one, at best; that trade, industry, and commerce, would flourish as it had done in the palmy days before the Union. Such a desirable, easy way of getting liberty, pleased some, but could not convince what may be termed the majority of the people. After O'Connell's new and pleasing doctrine began to be understood by the Irish people, those who had believed him sincere in what he said, began to lose confidence in him. They above all people, had known too well the fable of "the old man, the boys, and the apple-tree," both by precept and sad experience. And to crown all, as if fate were not satisfied, in his lifetime they drained the bitter cup of experience to the dregs! Starvation came and swept them off by the million!—a twentieth part of whom would have freed Ireland and made her a nation among nations, instead of a laughing-stock and a reproach for the unfeeling, and, what is still worse, to themselves a starving, unthrifty home—a home which is emphatically no home!

Surely, if our patriots have suffered from neglect or fickleness, as some will have it, the people have suffered with a vengeance from a good-natured, credulous temper. What a blasphemy must it have been to those who were starving "that all the liberty in the world, was" said not to be—"worth one drop of human blood?"

With regard to what confidence he could place in the Reformers and Tories of Great Britain, hear what he says in his "Memoir Native and Saxon." "It is admitted that without the aid of the Irish members, Reform could not have been carried. Even the most malignant of our enemies, Stanley, has admitted that fact. To the Irish, therefore, a deep debt of gratitude was due from the British Reformers. But how have we been requited?

1st. That the Irish Representatives turned the scale of victory and carried the English Parliamentary Reform Bill. 2nd. They equally, and by the same act, carried the Scotch Reform Bill. 3d. They equally and by inevitable consequence, carried the English Reform Bill. 4th. They equally carried the Scotch Municipal Reform Bill."

Indeed, the most that Irishmen need expect from that quarter is, that the best natured and most philanthropic among them will remain silent with regard to Ireland. Thackeray, whom critics say has a deep vein of observation and satire, and whom I take to be a good-natured man, asks that, even if England does oppress Ireland, does she say that they are to be so dirty, and if England is to be expected to send over charwomen to wash out the dirty halls of Maynooth? As well might he ask why Ireland did not produce more wool in the days when they were not allowed either to sell it in a foreign market, or even to manufacture it for Irish consumption. "They have large quantities of excellent wool, which is not of so great advantage to them as it would be if they were allowed to manufacture it; however, by a late Act of Parliament, they are permitted to send their woolen-yarn into England; but it is to be feared that will not prevent them from selling their wool to the French in time of peace, as they have done hitherto, which enables them to sell their woolen manufactures cheaper than us in the foreign markets."* As reasonably might he ask why the Irish Catholic people were not so well educated when English penal laws prohibited it!—as the Scotch, who had a national school establishment. Or why John was a dull boy?—or some such entertaining question.

There is a good time coming, but not while the British Lion keeps watch and ward over Irish thrift, industry, frugality, and cleanliness, which is crushed out by every means possible the Lion can bring to bear upon it. Fielding says, in his time—"No nation produces so many drunken quarrels, especially among the lower people, as England." According to Miss Strickland's Queens of England, the Spanish Ministers speak of the dirt and want of cleanliness among the English. From all this England has arisen, and she is tolerably clean and passingly fraternal. And so, too, will the Irish, with such a notable example next door. But never while the beast of prey is her gaoler.

* See Article "Ireland," General Gazetteer, edited and compiled by Brooks, Guthrie, and Jones.

Indeed, to go back to the theme from whence I started, O'Connell put more faith in physical force than a careless observer would imagine from his peace doctrine, although no more than the Irish people gave him credit for. Of this he gave a striking instance in his bet or wager with an English gentleman, "that he could warn all Ireland in twenty-four hours," which he won. Now, if by this act he did not want to convince the English of what physical force he had at his command, it looked so like it that a person may be pardoned for mistaking it. It is also to be presumed England mistook it too, for more was granted on the strength of that than to his eloquence, though it were never so great. His eloquence moved the Irish people, but not the English Parliament—what moved that body was the thought, amounting almost to certainty, that the Irish people would do O'Connell's bidding, should they exasperate him to outbreak or rebellion. But the English never understand any argument but physical force, and consequently never yield to any other,—as Davis says:

Remember still through good and ill,
How vain were prayers and tears—
How vain were words till flashed the swords
Of the Irish Volunteers.
By arms we've got the rights we sought
Through long and wretched years.

If British statesmen have the badness of heart attributed to Bacon, "the wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind!" they also have a genius, which, if not equal to his, is sufficient for their wants in the particular of negotiating and governing to their advantage in most cases—to be sure not in all—but in none more than in unhappy Ireland, whose most powerful patriots, Grattan and O'Connell, countenanced them with too much leniency for that perfect independence which is so essential in the free movements of a thorough patriot, such as Emmett.

O'Connell's peace doctrine never got a hearty support from the people at large—many believed it to be a cloak of hypocrisy to lull the fears of our enemy. The Irish believed, what O'Connell might have known, that if peace did sometimes get a quiet reform, it was the prolific source of tyrannical corruption and abuse: as Mackintosh says, in his splendid article on The French Revolution: "But it is objected, these institutions might have been gradually reformed: the spirit of freedom would have silently entered; the progressive wisdom of an enlightened nation would have remedied, in process of time, their defects, without convulsion. To this argument I confidently answer; that these institutions would have destroyed liberty before Liberty had corrected their spirit."

Harper's Magazine for June is probably one of the best numbers ever issued. It exhibits, in the great variety of matter, renewed exertion on the part of the publishers, and is intended, no doubt, as a specimen number, and as a guarranty of the more than well-sustained character of the work which this month (June) enters on the thirteenth volume, and the 7th year of its remarkable career. The circulation of Harper at present is one hundred and sixty thousand copies monthly. Notwithstanding that a considerable portion of the Magazine has been re-printed from foreign periodicals, it is undeniable the most attractive papers for American readers have been of home produce. These have been profusely and elegantly illustrated, and otherwise tended to convey much useful instruction. In the present number, the paper on the "Astronomical Observatories of the United States," by Dr. Loomis, is an evidence of this, containing 29 illustrations; views of observatories, interiors, ground-plains, elevations, and sections, and of the instruments, &c. "The Sulphur Springs of New York" is timely to the season, giving a descriptive and chemical hand-book to the localities, as well as fifteen pictures of the same. The admirable review of Motley's "Dutch Republic" is concluded, "Little Dorrit" continued, and with these, which may be regarded as the solid of the number, are several other interesting papers, among which "The Bear and the Basket-maker," "Wanted—A Healthy Wife," and "The Great Epidemics," are especially noteworthy. The Editor's Easy-chair is tip-top, the writer being justly severe on the chatty propensities of those fashionable lovers of concert rooms who, by their frivolity, prevent the real lovers of the divine art from hearing the music. We have also to acknowledge from the "Editor's Table" a commendable notice of Mr. Savage's "'98 and '48."

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Maginn's Miscellanies. Edited by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. Homeric Ballads and Comedies, of Lucian.....Redfield.
Paul Ferroll: a Tale by the Author of "IX Poems by V." " "
The Christian Virtues: personified and exhibited as a Divine Family, &c. An Illustrated Allegory. By Rev. D. D. Buck.....Miller, Orton & Mulligan.
The States and Territories of the Great West, &c., with Table of Distances, Map, and numerous illustrations. By Jacob Ferris..... "
Some Account of the Life of Spencer Haughton Cone; a Baptist Preacher in America.....Livermore & Rudd.
Harper's Magazine, June; Harper's Story Books, for June. The Engineer.....Harper & Brothers.
Public Documents, from.....Hon. Lewis Cass.

A bronze equestrian statue of Washington will be placed at the junction of the Bowery and Fourth Avenue next month. It was cast from a mold made by Mr. H. K. Brown, the American Artist, by the Chicopee Company, at springfield, Mass. Its cost will be between $25,000 and $30,000, all obtained by subscriptions. The base will consist of immense blocks of Quincy granite, weighing some sixty-five tons. The pedestal will be fourteen feet high, and the statue about the same height.

Mr. Samuel Phillip's successor, as literary critic for the Times, is Mr. Lucas, a barrister in the Temple. Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Ruth," "Mary Barton," and "North and South," in Household Words, is writing a life of Charlotte Bronte. Mr. G. A. Sala, Mr. Dickens's literary double in Household Words, is about, we believe, to make a tour in Russia.

NICARAGUA.

GREAT RECOGNITION MEETING IN THE PARK.

An open air mass meeting was held on the evening of Friday, the 23d, in the Park, to ratify the recognition of Nicaragua and to sustain by sympathy, and it is hoped "material aid," General Walker in his gallant propagandism of Republican principles. A large stand was erected in the Park, and an excellent band of music stationed upon it. A posse of police kept the stand free for officers of the meeting, orators, reporters and and committee-men. Over the stand, from a tall hickory pole, floated the flag of Nicaragua, two blue stripes and one white, with the Coat of Arms—the sun rising behind the seven volcanoes. Two banners were also hung forth, with the following inscriptions:—

ENLARGE THE BORDERS OF FREEDOM.

NO BRITISH INTERFERENCE ON THE CONTINENT OF AMERICA.

At the appointed hour the meeting was called to order.

Elijah F. Purdy, on taking the chair, stated the objects of the meeting and trusted a hearty expression would be met by the people, and closed by returning thanks for being appointed chairman.

Mr. Oaksmith then read the following resolutions which were adopted unanimously:

Whereas, In all times of national emergency, whenever the Administration of this Government feel called upon to adopt any prompt or extraordinary measure, either regarding the internal or external policy of this country, it is the right and duty of the citizens of this Republic to meet together and in a firm, manly and open manner to make known their opinions. And whereas, the recent events in Central America have rendered it necessary that this Government should take prompt and decided steps for the protection of the lives of American citizens in that quarter, and for the vindication of our national honor; therefore—

Resolved, That we heartily and earnestly approve of the recognition of the existing Government in Nicaragua, by our Administration, believing it to be right in itself, an act of national duty and justice, in accordance with the established practice of our Government, and a true response to the patriotic pulse of our countrymen.

Resolved, That while our people were few and our Government feeble, it was the humane and philanthropic policy of our fathers to make our country an asylum for the oppressed of all lands; so also, now that our people are many and our Government strong, it has become the duty of this generation to make our influence felt in aid of the oppressed of all lands, by firm and resolute remonstrance with oppressors, by sympathy and active aid to the oppressed, where a broad and enlightened philanthropy requires it, and to make our high example before the world correspond with our national power, and the spirit of the free institutions founded by our fathers.

Resolved, That any and every citizen of our Republic, whose sympathies are stirred by the cry of help from a people struggling to be free, has a sacred right to respond to such appeal, by his personal services, and by such material aid as he can afford.

Resolved, That it was in accordance with such right, and in response to such call, that the gallant Gen. Walker went to the aid of the Democratic masses in Nicaragua, and helped them to construct a stable Government.

Resolved, That we have seen with regret the forcible detention of some of our fellow-citizens who were disposed to go, in a like gallant and generous spirit, to aid a patriotic cause.

Resolved, That the inhuman and savage butchery of our fellow-citizens by the barbarous Costa Ricans in their unjust war upon Nicaragua—butchery of American citizens, not in arms but employed in peaceful industrious pursuits—calls loudly for retribution from our Government.

Resolved, That a free and safe transit from ocean to ocean over the several routes across Central America has become an absolute necessity to our country and our people, and must be secured at all hazards.

Resolved, That the surest and readiest means of accomplishing this great object is to sustain the existing Government in Nicaragua.

Resolved, In view of late reported movements and actions of British, French and Spanish authorities, that we believe a due regard for our national welfare calls for a repeal of, at least, some portions of our neutrality laws, and the full and practical enforcement of the Monroe doctrine.

Resolved, That the present momentous crisis in Nicaragua, and the imminent perils to which many of our fellow-countrymen are exposed, who are there pursuing peaceful occupations, surrounded as they are by a hostile and almost savage people, cut off from retreat and openly threatened with absolute extermination, without quarter, present a most solemn appeal to our citizens here and everywhere throughout the country for prompt, liberal and efficient aid.

Resolved, That our fellow-countrymen in Nicaragua must and shall have that aid; and that the citizens of New-York will sustain this Administration or any Administration, in any steps which they may be called on to take for the protection of American citizens in Central America, and to put a stop, once and for ever, to all foreign interference with the affairs of this continent.

A letter was read from Gen. Cass, amid great applause.

A letter from Ex-Governor Smith of Virginia, was then read. He said "his recognition as a means of counteracting British influence, which has been creeping stealthily over Central America, is of the greatest importance, especially as Britain has refused to observe her treaty with us, demonstrating that in her late effort to show to the world that we are a fool, she has clearly demonstrated to all that she herself is a knave. Let the Clayton-Bulwer treaty be abolished—let Britain keep what she has got of Central America and get what she can, and leave to the elastic and expensive energies of our people the means of obtaining those rights and interests necessary to our growth and power."

A letter from the Hon. Hiram Walbridge, was then read as follows:

New York, Thursday, May 22, 1856.

Gentlemen: I cordially thank you for the generous invitation you have extended to me to address my fellow-citizens, at your mass meeting on the 24th inst., to commemorate the recognition of Nicaraguan Independence by our General Government.

From the first solid establishment of order and regularity by the present Government of Nicaragua, under Gen. Walker, I have cherished the most intense solicitude for her political recognition into the great brotherhood of Sovereign States by the Administration of our own Government.

It having been accomplished, I congratulate you on the triumphant result achieved, in a great degree, by your own patriotic exertions.

A measure responsive to the generous impulses of the whole American people, and demanded by the highest commercial and political considerations.

It is therefore with sincere regret that I have to advise you of a previous engagement, which calls me from home at that time, and will prevent me from being with you except in my earnest desires for whatever may advance the laudable objects you have in view. Sincerely yours.

Hiram Walbridge.

Governor Rodmin Price, of New Jersey, was then introduced, and after the applause which greeted his appearance had subsided, said he came to interchange sympathies with the men of New-York for the Democratic Republican Government of Nicaragua. He had watched with deep anxiety and solicitude the progress of events in that country; and he felt that the presence of General Walker would hasten the time when this Government would control it (cheers).

I saw (said he) the people of Nicaragua satisfied with the government of General Walker. But what did I witness after the lapse of two or three peaceable months? War declared by Costa Rica, a miserable little province that could not muster twenty-five hundred fighting men. I ask you how this war was brought about by Costa Rica?

A voice—By England.

Gov. Price—Yes, my friends, by France and England, who were opposed to General Walker because they knew he was an American, and they thought that he was going to produce the American results of a democratic government there (cheers). Now, gentlemen, those who have advocated these views have been called "filibusters," and I am delighted to find so many here who sympathize with that name (cheers). The term "filibuster" has no fears for me. I am an American citizen, I look upon the interests of this country for myself, and judge of its wants and necessities; and the name of "filibuster," or anything else, does not intimidate me (loud cheers). I believe it right that we should have the Isthmus of Nicaragua, and I would boldly and frankly declare to England that such is our intention (a voice, "that's the talk.") I would do as the American Congress did in 1811, in reference to Florida, when it declared by resolution that that Territory was necessary to the United States, and they authorized the President to take possession of that Territory. Now I have this resolution, and I am going to show you that there were "filibusters" in 1811, as there were in '76 (cheers.) That the same spirit which animated our fathers animates Americans now in Nicaragua, fighting that the liberty which they enjoyed may be extended to that country. Here is the resolution passed by Congress in 1811:

"Taking into view the peculiar situation of Spain, and of her American provinces, and considering the influence which the destiny of the territory adjoining the southern borders of the United States may have upon their security, tranquillity and commerce—therefore,

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled, That the United States under the peculiar circumstances of the existing crisis, cannot, without serious inquietude, see any portion of the said Territory pass into the hands of any foreign Power, and that a due regard to their own safety compels them to provide, under certain contingencies, for the temporary occupation of said Territory, they at the same time declare that the said Territory shall remain subject to future negotiation. Approved January 15, 1811, by President Madison."

Well, but Congress did a little more than that. I find an act of Congress passed that very day, entitled "An Act to enable the President of the United States, under certain contingencies, to take possession of the country lying east of the Perdido river, and south of the State of Georgia and the Mississippi Territory, and for other purposes," which authorized President Madison to take possession of that territory, and to employ any part of the army and navy for that purpose, in the event of any attempt being made to occupy it by any foreign government. The necessary appropriation was made to carry that act into effect, and a further authority was given to the President to establish a temporary government, and to appoint persons ro exercise under his direction the military, civil and judicial powers, for the protection and maintenance of the inhabitants in the full enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion (hear, and loud cheers). This act was also approved by President Madison; so that it would appear from these circumstances that President Madison was a little more of a filibuster than President Pierce. (Cheers and laughter.) It would appear, too, that the Congress of 1811 was more aggressive than the Congress of 1856, although that admission is contrary to the doctrine of progression. On this subject we do not seem to have been a progressive people, but, on the contrary, to have been going backward. We do not seem to find the Congress of 1856 as ready to maintain the principle as that of 1811. (Cheers.) It was my fortune gentlemen, to serve in the American navy during the last war. I was in California at an early date. I was there when the "stars and stripes" were raised; and I tell you the handful of men who raised that flag were very inconsiderable when compared with the number it would require to take it down. (Cheers.) I then saw the conduct of Great Britain. I saw her squadrons dodging and watching the American squadron. I know that it was her intention to colonize California; and I know she did all she could, without open hostility, to prevent our acquiring that Territory. I know what her conduct was in regard to Texas, and her conduct now is the same in regard to Nicaragua. (Cheers.) Therefore, I say the policy of this country is to deal boldly with England, and say at once that we will have Nicaragua. (Renewed cheers.) Gentlemen, my sympathies are with the Rivas-Walker government.

Captain Pollard of California, was then introduced to the meeting, and received with cheers. He said that it was a notorious fact that Clatfield was engaged in a conspiracy for the defeat of Mosarri, the great bulwark of Central American Independence, and who has been called the Washington of Central America. Britain has not closed her interference in the politics of the country. She had resisted and defeated every attempt at a reunion of the Central American States and a reconstruction of the Central American confederacy. Gentlemen, we must not forget that we have a treaty upon this subject, and that Great Britain has not only violated the obligations of her national honor, but she has also violated the written letter of the treaty. That treaty, in the consideration of the American side was an abandonment by the British of their dominion in Central America. What are the facts in the case? Great Britain still maintains her imposture of an administration in the Mosquito territory. She has been encroaching for years upon the territorial limits of Honduras, and she still retains her hold over the Bay Islands. No later than 1852, two years after the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, those islands were erected into a British colony by the Queen's warrant; who ever heard of such impudence before? Gentlemen, I say this in conclusion, as my voice is failing, that this government should hold it to be a solemn duty they owe to Walker to exclude any British interference in Central America to prevent British muskets from spilling American blood. (Tremendous applause.) If the government will come to that determination to exclude, at all peril and all cost, British interference in Central American affairs, there are thousands of our fellow citizens who will seal that determination in behalf of Walker with the life blood of their hearts. (Great cheering and applause.) It is time for the American eagle to strike down the British serpent. Shall we call it a mere poetic fancy, or shall we adopt it as a national emblem, that beautiful description by the poet Shelley, of the eagle snatching from the earth in its beak, and bearing into the skies a glittering serpent, and as she sails onward and upward, with a loud scream of exultation, she is seen to tear it in pieces with her talons and the glittering scales are falling in the sunshine? (Great applause.)

Hon. George W. Peck, member of Congress, from Michigan, was introduced. He regarded the recognition of the government of General Walker as a great event in the history of the American people, and one which would exercise great influence upon her future destinies. He defended the right of the people of America to endeavor to enlarge their boundaries. It was not only their right but their duty. We have gone on adding territory to territory, until from a small beginning we now present a spectacle of a land of more magnificent proportions than has ever existed. We need the additional area of Nicaragua to give room for the incoming millions who are helping to build up the temple of liberty, and as fast as we make room the additional forces will come. No discordancy shall disturb us, for though the great republics of the old world have crumbled in the dust, fallen of their own weight, they were not cemented with that compactness of principle, that recognition of the great principles of liberty, which characterize the American republic. Each man is a pillar of the State, and all are working together for the good of the whole. The more men the more workers, and the firmer stands the temple. True, there were at Washington some old fogies in petticoats, as old women in breeches (laughter), who were opponents of all progress, but that could make no impediment in the advancement of the great principles of human freedom.

Capt. Rynders spoke in favor of the objects of the meeting, and he trusted that the country would not be backward in giving Walker aid. Walker is struggling for the liberties of that country, and but for English interference that government would now be firmly and prosperously established. Every man there who is known to come from the United States is murdered if he falls into the hands of the Costa Ricans. Who put that into their head? Certainly England. No other nation on earth but England has ever attempted to crush us, and that is the reason why you all with one voice denounce England. England has shown her love of this country, by murdering in the last war, American women and children. And yet they talk of humanity. God help our country when she depends on English humanity. I do not wish for war, but I prefer it to national degradation. Of all the nations on the earth England has the least love for us. But we will not be insulted by her with impunity. The English Government must retract or it must fight. And if it will provoke war and have war, who can doubt the result? He concluded by reading the following letter from Thomas Francis Meagher, which was received with unbounded enthusiasm:—

"Irish News" Office, No. 29 Ann street, May 23, 1856.

My Dear Sir: At the last moment I find myself unable to attend the meeting in the Park.

This I sincerely regret, since my sympathies with the cause, in the name of which you are assembled, are deep and earnest.

Generous, brilliant, chivalrous—involving the great principles for which the best men have in all climes and ages stripped their swords to the fight—involving, moreover, the highest interests of the American people—it is worthy of the promptest aid and proudest homage.

Any influence I possess—any effort I can make—any service I can render—shall be heartily devoted to the support of Gen. Walker and the independence of Nicaragua.

Poland, in 1846, had my heart, and the best words it could utter.

Sicily, rising up from her vineyards and cornfields in her beauty, and from the white summit of Ætna waving the torch which signalled all the young European nationalities to freedom, —Sicily, in 1848, had my enthusiastic prayer.

So, too, had Hungary and Italy, and the glorious cities of the Rhine.

What I was in the first blush of manhood, I am now, and ever shall be.

Republicanism, whether in the dungeon, in the field, on the scaffold, or triumphant in the Capitol, shall be the worship of my life.

Fought for most gallantly at this hour, upon the great high road of American commerce, you do not meanly wait to hear of a victory to determine the measure of your sympathy in favor of the freedom of the beautiful country which binds the two oceans together with a link of gold and silver.

Your cheers are not the faint echoes of a triumph already won. They anticipate the glorious issue, and become its prophecies.

The shouts in the Park to-day announce that the flag of Costa Rica is torn down—the massacre of Virgin Bay avenged—the treachery and defeat of Santa Rosa effaced in a flood of military glory—and that the bells of Granada proclaim through her sapphire skies, and all over her noble inland waters, and through her gorgeous forests, that Nicaragua is free, forever, from the native Serviles and the foreign butchers in their pay.

I am, my dear sir, most faithfully,

Your friend, Thomas Francis Meagher.

To the Chairman of the Meeting, &c.

At the close of the reading there were three cheers given for Mr. Meagher.

A letter was read from Gen. W. L. Cazneau of Texas. Indisposition prevented him from attending. He deeply and ardently sympathised with Nicaraguan liberty; and dwelt at some length on the evils of British interference. He writes:—

Under the deceitful pretext of suppressing the slave trade, England has contrived the introduction of an overwhelming army of African negroes into Cuba, who are in effect, her wards, and will be used as her soldiers whenever she and Spain choose to execute their standing threat of giving Cuba over to the blacks.

While England is colonizing Cuba and ruling St. Domingo by means of the blacks, while she is plundering Honduras of the Ruatan Islands, and Nicaragua of the port of San Juan, only because they command our American transits and are invaluable to American commerce; while she is sending arms to the Costa Ricans, and inciting them to slaughter our kindred at Nicaragua and Panama, she and her sycophants dare not say all this is not our business, and that it is a felony in Americans to go to the rescue of our own blood and free institutions in Nicaragua. No true man will accept this monstrous doctrine, and no brave man will act upon it.

Hon. Judge A. A. Phillips, R. Busteed, Wm. I. Rose, (N.Y. Daily News), Hon. Chas. T. Mills, of the Assembly, H. N. Wild, Alderman John Clancy, addressed the meeting much to the purpose.

After the meeting had adjourned a procession was formed, comprising several thousand persons, who proceeded first to the Astor House, attended by Shelton's band. There a serenade and three cheers were given for Gov. Price of New Jersey. From this the multitude marched up Broadway to the St. Nicholas Hotel, where huzzas were given for Padre Vijil, who appeared and introduced Capt. A. Oaksmith, who in a few brief remarks returned thanks on behalf of the Minister of Nicaragua. He said that the People of the United States recognized the Minister of the Rivas-Walker Government and would sustain it. [Tremendous cheering.] From this the procession repaired to the St. Charles Hotel on Broadway, were a glorious symposium added to the pleasure of the evening. Meanwhile, the Committee of Invitation had assembled at the Astor House to do honor to Gov. Price. Several speeches were made and the best feeling prevailed. While there the band serenaded, and an immense multitude outside added their applause.

Thus terminated the most magnificent demonstration our city ever witnessed!

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL,

596 BROADWAY,

TWO DOORS ABOVE THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL.

MONDAY EVENING, MAY 26,

AND EVERY NIGHT DURING THE WEEK.

Programme.

PART I.

Overture.....By the Orchestra
Hunter's Song.....By the Quartette Club.....Mozart

FIRST TABLEAU,

NEPTUNE AND AMPHITRIDE,

With Ærial Figures.—New Composition by Mr. Keller.

Trumpet Solo—"The Soldier Tired,".....By Mme. Lovarny

SECOND TABLEAU,

FAMINE.

By particular desire—composed by L. Keller.

Schniederlied—"The Sailor's Song".....By the Quartette Club

THIRD TABLEAU,

SHOWER OF GOLD.

By Mme. Keller.

Ballad—"The Swiss Girl,".....By Mme. Lovarny

FOURTH TABLEAU,

VICTORY.

A beautiful new allegorical picture, composed and dedicated to the Ladies of New-York, by Mme. Keller. (The ship was built and rigged by Messrs. Fish & Morton, 404 Water street.

The performance of

HERZ FKANZ STOEPEL

ON THE WOOD AND STRAW INSTRUMENT.

Intermission.

PART II.

Overture.....By the orchestra

FIRST TABLEAU.

THE FOUNTAIN OF FLOWERS,

The New Grand Double Tableau, composed and dedicated to the Ladies of New-York, by Madame Keller.

Quartette—"The Bill of Fare,".....By the Quartette Club

SECOND TABLEAU,

TRIUMPH OF RELIGION,

Composed by M. Keller.

Solo (Baritone) "In the Distance,".....By Mr. F. Klebs

THIRD TABLEAU,

"Suffer little Children to come unto me,"

Ballad—"Why our Wandering,".....Mme. Lovarny

FOURTH TABLEAU

NAPOLEON CROSSING MT. ST. BERNARD.

In compliance with numerous requests, MR. KELLER has consented to give a representation of BIBLICAL PICTURES, on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

Doors open at 7½ o'clock. Performances to begin at 8 o'clock. Tickets 50 cents. Private boxes $5. Single seats in Private boxes $1.

Arrangements can be made for the admission of Schools and Societies, by application at the Hall, between the hours of 10 and 4 o'clock.

Information wanted of John Duffy, a native of Castleblaney, county Monaghan, Ireland, by trade a carpenter, who arrived in this city about five years ago, and when last heard from was living at Staten Island. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, will be thankfully received by his wife Alice Duffy.

Mayor's Office, New-York, May 23, 1856.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Complaint Book, opened at this office on the 1st of January, 1855, is still open for the reception of complaints of municipal abuses of all kinds. So far as the Mayor has the power, he will continue to exercise it for the abatement of any such evils, when brought to his attention through the Complaint Book, or otherwise. The Mayor invites all persons to take this method of reporting to him all violations of corporation ordinances, nuisances, or dereliction of duty upon the part of the officers of the Corporation, and he will, as heretofore, use all the legal means at his command to see the laws enforced, and the interests of the public protected. By order of the Mayor. ALEXANDER MING, Chief Clerk.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

Special Notices.

THE CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

BRONCHITIS.—WHAT PRODUCES BRONCHITIS?

FIRST STAGE OF DISEASE.

COSTIVENESS is the first link that connects disease in the System. It c reates, induces, feeds and supports Bronchitis; and is slightly or indifferently treated, as though it was of no serious tendency: nevertheless, it has laid the fonndation of that destroying disease, without the knowledge of the sufferers, undermining and sapping the very vitals of their constitutions.

Among the numerous class of diseases which afflict man, there is none more silent or treacherous in its approaches or more certain to triumph over its slowly consuming victim, than that formidable and insidious leveller of humanity—Bronchitis, which is produced by catching cold, through a neglect of regulating the state of the bowels when arriving to adult age. It seldom excites attention or alarm in the mind of any person, until it has sown the seed of disease and suffering in the human system, by checking the circulation of the blood; and it is to this source alone that we attribute the awful mortality of Consumption.

The following is a simple but correct illustration, namely:—If the culverts and sewers of the city were choked or clogged up, accidentally or otherwise, what would be the result? An overflow of accumulated filth and slush on the surface of the earth in its neighborhood, until it fills every hole, corner and crevice. This is quite similar to the human body, when the channel or sewer of life, as I may term it, which is the bowels, is checked or confined through constipation or some unnatural obstruction, which prevents the blood from circulating through the general system.

What, then, is the consequence? An accumulation of diseased matter and bile. Where will this bile and poisonous substance go to when it is prevented from taking its natural exit, through the bowels? It must surge itself back again into the blood, to be infused through the entire frame by the agency of the blood, bringing in its passage disease and suffering, and exhibiting itself by pain, nervous sensations and irritation all over the body—producing a bad feeling at the stomach, sourness of the food, a rush of blood to the head, catarrh, bronchitis, a short dry cough, dizziness, pain in the shoulders, and through or under the shonlder blades, cold feet, a peevish and irritable temper, aanoyed by this hacking cough, and then gradually begins the expectorating from the throat of a lightish phlegm, resembling boiled starch or tough jelly of various colors, from a light to a darkish substance, and hawked up like a string.

SECOND STAGE.

From this period the patient is aware of some unusual and disagreeable feeling, though he seldom takes the hint till it goes from bad to worse. Catching cold from the slightest exposure, which he cannot avoid in consequence of the blood being in a diseased and corrupt condition for a long time previous to the appearance of those troublous symptoms, through the impure state of the blood, that at every breath the patient draws he inhales a similar quantity of fresh air by the nostrils and mouth, which keeps the tickling that exists in the throat and bronchial tubes in a ferment of irritation—this is the reason why some people complain of catching cold, even when confined to their room. Hence the sufferer is hacking, hawking, or expectorating a little at a time, with the impression that there is something in his throat that wants to come out; and which he desires to get out. There is a frequent desire for heavy sighing, with a dryness of the nostrils, which inclines the patient to pick or scratch them; sleepy, drowsy, dull, and heavy loss of appetite, and confused memory; a stuffing, tightness, and oppression of the chest, with a rawness and soreness of the gullet of the throat. This is caused by the silent enemy that has lurked in the system for months, and even years, and has at last aroused your fears, and well it might; for out of one hundred persons who die of Consumption ninety-nine are owing to disease of the throat alone, though simply called Bronchitis; and wretchedly treated by this self-pretended and dignified class of sheepskin physicians termed M. D.'s, who have proved a curse to the human family. They treat their patient on the following abusive principle, by cutting the tonsols and palate from the throat, as you might cut the gills out of a fish—next comes the solution or wash of nitrate of silver or caustic, and the whalebone swab, to wash and burn away the disease that has occupied the throat. Then comes the application of blister, and Croton oil externally to the throat and neck, to draw out the inflammation, as the physicians suppose (what blind philosophy.) Then comes the quack sheet of their MATERIA MEDICA—Calomel, Antimony, Morphine and Opium, to salivate and lull the feelings of the pafient, which adds to the disease and increases the suffering, by giving the disease an opporiunity of triumphing over nature. What a delusive idea to think the above treatment would be available in having recourse to those debilitating and irritating remedies of cutting, burning, blistering, purging and starving, which is of itself sufficient to lower and reduce the constitution of an ox.

THE THIRD STAGE

Confirms the above remarks. While undergoing this torturing treatment, the constitution is gradually failing and giving away, in giving rise to more alarming symptoms, evidently preparing its victim for the shroud, while the physician and friends fail to see the cause until those confirmed symptoms of consumption set in, but foolishly assign the cause to some other besides the genuine one, till the disease has reached its meridian, with a complication of fresh symptoms, breathing short and hurried, cough frequent, with an accumulation of corrupted matter, sometimes streaked with blood; profuse night sweats, emaciation and debility; cold chills in the forenoon, with a burning fever after; flesh soft and flabby, the limbs scarcely able to support the body; a susceptibility of catching cold on the least exposure, attended with a hoarseness and loss of voice, with a very heavy expectoration in the forenoon; flying pains in the chest, sides and shoulders, with a severe fit of coughing in the morning, or awaking from sleep. The painful crisis is fast approaching, with a swelling and puffing of the feet and ankles, and frequent attacks of diarrhœa. In females, the symptoms are more distressing at an earlier period than in the male, with a weakness in the back and loins, a sinking and exhausted feeling at the stomach, nervous and excitable, with gradual and frequent interruptions of the monthly flow, and as the disease progresses, a total or final cessation of it, with the harbinger of a broken down constitution which is a discharge of whites, a symptom that proves very debilitating and irritating to females.

All the above symptoms and sufferings are the fruits of costiveness at an early period, accruing to the sufferer through neglect of keeping the bowels in gentle operation, which would circulate the blood, and prove as ventilation to the general system, from the age of 18 to 26, when this disease creeps on and grows on, until every organ in the body is totally disorganized.

My long experience and observations, and my unprecedented success in treating consumption, inclines me to devote the remainder of my life to the cause of suffering humanity. I have cured more consumptive patients in the last ten years than any other doctor in the world in that time, and not by steam, smoke or vapor, nor by smelling medicine through an India rubber or glass tube, but through the selection I make from the forest and verdant meadows. I can always determine on examination whether I can be successful or not, and I speak accordingly. I have made it a rule to treat no disease longer than three weeks. If I cannot check the fatal progress of the disease in that time, I give up the patient as lost, and lead the sufferer to no further expense.

☞ In compliance with the repeated solicitations of consumptive patients living in remote parts of the country, I have opened an hospital at No. 173 Bowery, for the exclusive treatment of those laboring under any species of the above disease, where I can bestow on them the unremitted attention which the seriousness of their cases require; where I can be able to regulate their diet and regimen according to circumstances. Three weeks under the supervision of my especial care is worth four months at a distance.

All persons desirous of medical information can obtain it by enclosing one dollar, when all information and communication will be forwarded on receipt.

D. Durkin, Chronic and Consumptive Doctor,
my31 No. 173 Bowery, New-York.

NEW AND EXCLUSIVE—FASHIONS FROM INDIA.

GENIN

THIS DAY INTRODUCES HIS

EAST INDIA SUMMER HAT,

A Straw Fabric of unequalled Beauty, of which he has secured the monopoly for the present season. The East India Hat possesses marked advantages over all other Hats of vegetable material which have ever been imported into the United States.

In point of lightness it stands alone. Placed in the scales against the finest leghorn, chip, or grass fabric, it would "kick the beam." In fact, its weight is scarcely perceptible either in the hand or on the head. The texture of the braid is fine and delicate, and the ventilation perfect. No one who sees the Hat can doubt that it is the beau ideal of coolness. Fragile as it is, raiu will not destroy its shape. In order to suit all taste and all ages, the East India Hat has been made up in a variety of shapes. The crown varies in hight so as to assimilate with the features of boyhood, youth, maturity and old age. Although the stock of the East India Hats in this country is exclusively in the possession of the undersigned, and not a single specimen can be obtained outside of his establishment, the prices in accordance with his proverbial policy, will be found exTremely moderate.

Genin, No. 214 Broadway.

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE FOR SERVANTS.

275 BOWERY, NEW-YORK.

MALE and Female Servants can be promptly suited at the above number, with any situation in the city or country, at good wages, in first-rate families, without delay.

N. B. Employers quickly supplied.
8m may 31 ALEXANDER B. RUNGE, Agent.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, via Southampton and Havre, per U. S. steamer Fulton, will close at this office on Saturday the 31st day of May, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

my17 Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster

Congressional.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

May 19;—two messages were received from the President, vetoing the bills for the improvement of the mouth of the Mississippi and the St. Clair Flats. Mr. Cass gave notice that he should ask leave to show that he had been misunderstood by Mr. Crampton on the Central American question. Mr. Sumner then commenced speaking on Kansas affairs, and continued until the adjournment.

May 20.—Mr. Seward tried to get through the House resolution in reference to the Cape de Verde sufferers, but did not succeed. The bill making appropriations for Consular and Diplomatic expenses was passed. Mr. Sumner then resumed his speech on Kansas, saying that as he had already treated of the crime committed against Kansas, and of the apologies for that crime, he would now speak of the various remedies proposed, and show which was the only true remedy. Gen. Cass denounced Mr. Sumner's speech as unpatriotic. Mr. Douglas characterized it as malignant, and Mr. Mason as an infliction which would not be borne out of doors. Mr. Sumner replied with spirit. Adjourned.

May 21.—A bill was introduced to test the value of the Atmospheric Telegraph; also a bill to permit the Iowa Legislature to determine for that State the application for a grant of land for the construction of railroads. Mr. Mason discussed the action of the Naval Board. M. Benjamin spoke in favor of an appropriation for the removal of obstructions at the mouth of the Mississippi. Mr. Toombs took the opposite view, and complimented the President upon his fidelity to the Constitution in vetoing these improvement bills. Additional documents on the Recruiting business were sent in by the President.

May 22.—A joint resolution, allowing Dr. Kane and the officers associated with him in the late Arctic expedition in the search of Sir John Franklin, to accept such token of acknowledgment from the British Government as it may please to present, was passed, by yeas, 33; nays, 4. Those who voted in the negative were Messrs. Biggs, Iverson, Reid and Toombs. A message was then received from the House, announcing the death of Mr. Miller of Missouri. Mr. Geyer pronounced a enlogy upon him. The usual resolutions were then passed and the Senate adjourned.

May 23.—After a statement by Gen. Wilson, on motion of Mr. Seward, it was resolved to raise a Select Committee on the outrage perpetrated by Mr. Brooks of S. C., on Mr. Sumner, which is composed of Messrs. Cass of Mich., Allen, of R. I., Dodge, of Wis., Pearce of Md., and Geyer, of Mo. Several of these are moderate and generally fair men.

House of Representatives.

May 19.—The joint resolution authorizing the Secratary of the Navy to dispatch a vessel with provisions, privately contributed, for the Cape de Verde sufferers, was adopted. Leave was asked to introduce a resolution asking information of the President in relation to the "Kansas murders," but it was refused. The House also refused to suspend the rules to allow Mr. Keitt to offer a resolution for the adjournment of Congress on the 5th of August.

May 20.—The Public Lands Committee reported a bill granting one million and forty-eight thousand acres of land in Wisconsin for the construction of three railroads therein, embracing 500 miles. A motion was made to table the bill, but the House refused by a vote of 69 against 86. Before disposing of the matter, the House adjourned.

May 21.—The Wisconsin Railroad Land Bill was passed by a vote of 81 to 67. A bill was reported granting a million of acres to Alabama for the construction of five railroads connecting with the Georgia and Tennessee lines, and was adopted by 13 majority. Mr. Bliss made a speech against the extension of slavery, and then the house adjourned.

May 22.—Mr. Miller announced the recent death of his colleague, Mr. Miller, of Missouri, who on account of sickness had not taken his seat this session. He spoke in exalted terms of his public and private character. Mr. Humphrey pronounced a most glowing and eloquent eulogy on the life and character of the deceased, who, he said, was the companion of his childhood. The usual resolutions were then passed, and the House adjourned.

May 23.—Mr. L. D. Campbell of Ohio moved a preamble and resolution reciting the reported facts in regard to the attack on Mr. Sumner, and moved an investigation. The Southern members resisted, and raised the point of order, which the Speaker ruled against them, and the House, on appeal, sustained the Chair. The preamble was then so modified as to omit the name of Mr. Keitt, and passed under the Previous Question—Yeas, 93; Nays, 68. The Speaker appointed Messrs. Campbell of Ohio, Alison of Pa. [who declined, and Mr. Pennington of N. J. was substituted], Cobb of Ga., Greenwood of Ark., and Spinner of N.Y., such Committee. Adjourned to Monday.

Immediately after the adjournment of Congress, on Thursday, the 21st inst., Preston S. Brooks, of South Carolina, a Member of the Lower House, entered the Senate Chamber, and approaching the seat of Mr. Sumner, struck him a powerful blow with a cane, at the time accusing him of libeling South Carolina and his gray-headed relative, Senator Butler. Mr. Sumner fell from the effects of the blow, and Brooks continued beating him. Mr. Sumner soon recovered sufficiently to call for help, but no one interposed, and Brooks repeated the blows until Mr. Sumner was deprived of the power of speech. He was sitting in an arm-chair when the assault was made, and had no opportunity to defend himself. After his assailant desisted, he was carried to his room. When the attack was made there were probably fifteen or twenty persons present, including Messrs. Crittenden, Foster, Toombs, Fitzpatrick, Murray, Morgan, and other Members of Congress, together with Governor Gorman, several officers of the Senate, and some strangers. The attack was so sudden and so unexpected that Mr. Sumner had no opportunity whatever to place himself in defensive attitude. The cane used by Brooks was shattered to pieces by the blows.

It is stated, says the Daily News, that Mayor Wood's late eulogy at Richmond on Alexander Hamilton, contains twenty pages copied from Hammond's History of New York—omiting the conclusions. Mayor Wood holds up Alexander Hamilton as a Democrat, which Hammond nor nobody else ever did before. We supposed, and so did all the rest of mankind—till Wood enlightened us—that Hamilton was a Federalist, and advocated a sort of limited monarchy.

American News.

Proud of every incident which redounds to the credit of our noble old country, we gladly transfer to our columns the following notice from the Evening Post, of Saturday, the 24th:

There died at Philadelphia, on Monday, one of those worthies whose memory connects us with the past—John Keating, of an Irish family some time settled in France. He was a major in the French army when Napoleon Bonaparte was captain. Stationed in the West Indies at the time of the French revolution, he was the only officer in his regiment elected by his men to serve the republic. He replied, that "having entered the army to serve the monarchy, he declined to serve under the republic." He resigned his commission and settled in Philadelphia, where few men have lived more universally respected, or died more truly lamented at the mature age of 94.

Never has it been our good fortune to know one who so fully combined in one character the chivalry of the past with the purity of later generations.

Mr. Keating was, we believe, the earliest manufacturer of cotton at the rising town of Manayunk, in Pennsylvania.

There was a great excitement in the State of Massachusetts, on the intelligence of the attack on Senator Summer. A public meeting was held in Boston, at Chapman Hall, on the 23d. The crowd increasing, the meeting adjourned to Tremont Temple.

Speeches were made by the Rev. W. Freeman Clark, Wendell Phillips, Judge Russell, Rev. Theodore Parker, J. M. S. Williams, of Cambridge, the Rev. Lyman Beecher, John L. Swift, and W. B. Spooner, of Boston.

The speeches of Messrs. Phillips and Parker were almost purely political, with many references to the object of the meeting.

On the 24th, a mass meeting was held in Faneuil Hall.

The Cleveland papers notice the arrival there of the 400 Mormons who recently arrived from England on the ship Enoch Train, which, it will be remembered, was followed to sea from Liverpool (see Irish News, May 10th, editorial) by a distracted father, who succeeded in recovering and carrying back, on a steam-tug, a portion of his family. Two daughters who remained with the Mormons are among this party, and are noticed by the Clevelander as beautiful girls. The party was closely watched, one of the faithful being constantly stationed outside each car to prevent their communication with the worldly-minded.

A Boston paper states that a few weeks since, the late Dr. John C. Warren disinterred from the family tomb under St. Paul's Church the remains of his uncle, Gen. Josesph Warren, who fell in the fight of Bunker's Hill. The remains were placed in a stone urn, upon which an appropriate epitaph had been engraved. The skull was quite perfect, the chin still remaining. Behind one of the ears was seen an aperture, which indicated the place where the fatal ball entered which ended his brief but glorious career. The remains, with those of other members of the family, were placed in Forest Hills Cemetery.

Nine years ago a man died of dropsy, and was buried in Middlesex, Vt., and it being desirable to remove the body to Pomfret, recently, the corpse was disinterred, and found to have become perfect stone, as hard as marble and not the least altered from the appearance of the man at his death. The corpse weighed 550lbs. What is more remarkable, the body of a girl, buried by his side, was wholly consumed, only a few of the principal bones remaining.

M. D'Alembert, a Frenchman, has just published a book of travels in the United States. He is an extravagant admirer of the ladies of America, and has demonstrated his sincerity by marrying one of them—a Miss Phillips, of Philadelphia. In dilating upon the fearful frequency of duels in the United States, he asserts that the following placard is to be seen over an editor's office out West: "Subscriptions received from 9 to 4; Challenges from 11 to 12 only. Wipe your feet, if you please."

During tha ensuing summer vacation of Harvard and Dartmouth Colleges, the students of those institutions will have a grand trial at football and other games, to test the question whether physical superiorty is best cultivated among the mountains or on the seaboard. The place of meeting will probably be in the city of Concord, N. H., and the exhibition will be public.

The Richmond Enquirer says of Mayor Wood, "of all the public men of this country, he enjoys the most substantial and genuine reputation—a reputation which he has won by the display of an extraordinary talent for administration." Apropos of this, the Daily Times says, "'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view"

The Ohio State Fair for 1856, to be held at Cleveland, commencing on Tuesday, the 23d of September next, will take place at the same spot where the State Fair was held in 1852. It is a very convenient locality, being within the city limits of Cleveland, and only a short distance from the business centre.

The imports of cotton into Boston from January 1 to May 3, were 164,013 bales; same time in 1855, 123,028 bales. The total receipts of cotton at the different ports of the country, from Sept. 1, 1855, to the latest dates, have been 3,143,152 bales; same period last year, 2,230,182 bales.

The Chicago Tribune says that for the past three weeks the arrivals over each of the Michigan railroads—the Central and Southern—have been not less than fifteen hundred, and often they have averaged two thousand daily. The climax of emigration will not be reached until June.

There is an old hunter, residing on Broad Top Mountain, Pa., who says that in the last 50 years he has killed 200 deer, 30 wolves, 20 bears, 100 foxes, and 30 wild cats. Among other exploits, he killed 6 wild turkeys at 3 single shots, and 2 deer, at 1 shot, with a bullet.

The mean temperature of the month of April was 46.76 or three-fifths (0.61) of a degree above the average of April in the same time. The mean temperature of the first eight days in May, was 42.27, or six and a quarter degrees below the average in the last 32 years.

The first ground has been broken for the projected railroad between Port Monmouth and Cape May, N. J.

A woman in Chicago left her children in a room in which was varnish. The larger ones besmeared each other with varnish, and also a baby of six months. The varnish took fire in some way, and the baby was burned to death, while the others were badly injured.

The Kentucky Statesman learns from a private letter, received by a gentleman in Lexington that —— inst. there were 600 southern emigrants at Wilmington, Mo., en route for Kansas. The pro-slavery party were much encouraged and in high spirits.

The Schooner Seaman, which went ashore at Copper Harbor, Lake Superior, last December, has been got safely off, and together with the Freeman and Ford, are ready to sail when the ice will permit.

Marcus P. Norton, of Tinmouth, Vt., has issued a circular inviting a Convention of Inventors, at the Crystal Palace in this city some time next Fall. He solicits responses from inventors.

A highway robbery was committed on a man named McDonald, in Troy, N. Y., on Tuesday, when a wallet worth $90, and a pocket-book containing $250, were taken from him.

On the 12th ult., at Galveston, Texas, Rev. Arthur Cleveland Coke was unanimous elected Bishop of Texas, by the Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of that diocese.

A man named Lendem was arrested in Washington on Monday, charged with obtaining goods from Messrs. Barber and Royston, of Baltimore, amounting to near $2,000.

A two-story brick schoolhouse sn the easterly part of Lynn. Mass., was destroyed by an incendiary fire about 4 o'clock on Thursday morning. Loss about $2,000.

The body of a colored man, supposed to be one of the victims at the burning of the steamboat New Jersey, was found floating in the Delaware on Wednesday.

Two horses, attached to a carriage, while passing down a street in Albany, on last Wednesday, were attacked by a ferocious bulldog and badly bitten.

The Dayton (O.) Journal says that the excessive cold of last winter has killed the last year's wood of many vines in the vineyards in that vincinity.

Mr. A. Gordon McGrath, of Charleston, was commissioned as Judge of the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina.

Cincinnati has seven steam fire-engines, which can force water, if necessary, through 2,000 feet of hose.

Another Nicaraguan meeting was held in New Orleans, on the 21st. at which the enthusiasm ran high.

Messrs. Estlin & Cuddy, merchants of New-Orleans, fought a duel yesterday morning at Pass Christian.

The steamer Daniel Webster took a load of recruits for Walker on the 23d.

Large quantities of ice are reported as still remaining in Lake Superior.

MARRIAGES.

At Monkstown Church, Henry S. T. Baldwin, late of Cork, to Emily Sophia Bacon, daughter of Job Dickson, late of Tipperary.

At Swords, Patrick H. Bowden, of Oldtown, to Kate, daughter of the late John M'Owen, of Castlemoate, Cioghran.

At the British embassy, Paris, J. W. M. Boyd, M. P., to Albertine Louise Alphonse, daughter of the late Frederick Shannahan, of Paris.

At Adelaide, Australia, Frederick Simeon Carus Driffield, to Jane, daughter of Joseph M'Minn, formerly of Newry.

At the parish church, Monkstown, James H. Freme, late of the 79th Cameronians, to the Lady Anna Maria Isabella, daughter of the Earl of Monntcashel.

At St. Paul's church, Dublin, Joseph Hunt, Mountjoy street, to Jane, daughter of the late Sir Alexander Childs.

At Melbourne, Victoria, George M'Cleverty, of Ballarat, to Mary, daughter of Edward Gill, of Dublin.

At St. Peter's church, Dublin, David Ross, M. D., of Warrenpoint, to Mary, daughter of Col. Edwards, of Raveagh, Tyrone.

At St. Peter's church, Dublin, James Peter Rutledge, of Beechgrove, to Julia Mary, daughter of the late John Gray, of Claremorris.

At St. Mark's church, Dublin, George Marshal Trulock, to Rosetta Sarah Corri.

James Peter Rutledge, of Beechgrove, County Mayo, son of George Rutledge (Togher), to Julia Mary, daughter of the late John Gray, of Claremorris.

At Cartown Chapel, Patrick Sheridan, brother to the Rev. Edward Sheridan C. C., Bohermeen,) of Bellewstown, to Mary Mulvany, Valverstown House.

At Cheltenham, Major Edward Kelly, of the Madras Army, to Eliza, daughter of the late Rev. E. Cronym, and granddaughter of the late George Cronym, of Hebron, Kilkenny.

DEATHS.

At 30 Upper Gloucester street, Edward Anderson, barrister-at-law, in the 82d year of his age, and the 58th from his call to the bar.

At Durrow, of Typhus Fever, George Wm. Anderson, late of Carlow.

Mrs. Barry, wife of David Barry, Railway and Family Hotel, Enniskillen.

At Lower Camden street, Maryanne, relict of Martin Brady, aged 60 years.

At Bridgewater, aged 72 years, George Browne, Captain in the Royal Navy, and the last of the lieutenants who fought on board the Victory at Trafalgar, under the flag of Lord Nelson.

At the Cocos Islands, a few hours after having gone on board the Ida, in which vessel he had taken his passage for Europe, Wm. Buchanan, C. E., son of the late John Buchanan, Omagh.

At Dundalk, Richard Joseph, son of L. Cahil.

At Youghal, Susan, Relict of Rd Carey, of Brandon.

In Durham street, Belfast, Mrs. Craig, late of Londonderry.

At 57 Cambrsssil street, Dublin, Miss Catherine Doyle.

Aged 68, Maryann, wife of Wm. Ewart, Glenbank.

At Newberry, Grace Mary, wife of Col. Fraser, of the Royal Artillery.

At Marino, Dublin, Wm. Gordon, late of H. M.'s 16th Lancers. He served at Maharaljapore, and at the battle of Aliwall.

At Hallsville, Meagheragal, Jane, relict of Joseph Hall, aged 90.

At 35 Lower Baggot street, Dublin, Frances Anne, wife of Major-General Hamilton.

At Waterford, Edward Joseph O'Neil Power, of Newton House, Tramore.

At Thurmaston Lodge, Leicestershirs, aged 88, William Heyrick, H. M.'s Constable of the Castle of Leicester, and for many years Deputy Chairman of the Quarter Sessions.

At Carbury House, Kildare, Samuel Holt, aged 70 years.

At Hermitage, Clare, William, son of Francis Keane.

At Headford, County Galway, John Gelling Kennan, formerly chief bookkeeper in the Bank of Ireland, aged 76 years.

At 86 Newington Terrace, Rathmines, Margaretta Rose, wife of John Lyons.

At Smithfield, Belfast, Alexander Mackenzie.

At Dunshaughlin, Eneas Magrath, aged 70.

At No. 10 Cambridge Terrace, Rathgar, Isaac Maione, in his 82d year.

At the patriarchal age of 86 years, at Meagheralane, Randalstown, Bernard Mulholland.

At Tulla, Clare, aged 87 years, James O'Halloran.

On board the bark Elizabeth, near Calabar, west coast of Africa, Charles O'Reilly jr., son of Charles O'Reilly, M. D., of Lower Dominick street.

At Youghal, Mary, daughter of the late R. Roper.

Frances Theresa, relict of Patrick Henry Russel, of Killough, Down.

At Bellville, Dremore West, Sligo, W. O. Rutledge, Solicitor.

Eleanor, wife of James Wallace, High street, Newtownards.

Book of Men, Women and Babies. By Dr. Porter, of New-York.—Such is the title of a book of real practical utility, and which contains more sound philosophy and good sense, than we have ever seen in a book of the kind before. No parent will ever regret putting it into the hands of his wife, sons, and daughters. Married or single, should hasten to possess it. Every mother will find the instructions in this book promotive of health and contentment in her household.—Jersey Tribune, Elizabeth City, New-Jersey.

In paper covers, 50 cents, postage free. Address Dr. Porter, 216 Fulton-st. Twelve copies to one address, $5. my17 3m

Special Notices.

Reed's Celebrated London Cordial Gin, having gained much popularity in this country, being distilled the same as that in London, as he was formerly a distiller of the same kind of Gin in England, under the EXCISE LAWS.

This article is used in every hospital in and out of England's great metropolis. Its medicinal properties are invaluable.

☞ This Gin is not an imitation or a mixture of raw materials, of which much is sold in this city, under the name of London Cordial Gin, but a genuine and pure article, equal to any imported.

W. R. takes the opportunity of thanking the public for their liberal support, support, and begs a continuance of the same.

DISTILLERY,
118 East 29th st., New-York, between 2d and 3d avenues.

LABORATORY AND CHEMICAL OFFICE,
18 Exchange Place, N. Y., March 4, 1856.

MR. REED: Sir—I have submitted to close examination two samples of London Cordial Gin, manufactured by you, and purporting to equal the English article. I find on comparison with samples of Hodges' and Burnett's previously examined by me, and which I know to have been imported direct, that the quality of yours is by no means inferior to their celebrated compounds, while the perfect method you posess of rectifying, insures an article of a higher degree of purity and flavor, when it has the equal advantage of time to soften it, than much of the so-called imported London gin. As a medicinal agent and cordial, under proper advice, it may be depended upon, from the care with which you select the essential oils combined with it in the distillation.

Yours, respectfully,
ISAIAH DECK, M. D.,
Consulting and Analytical Chemist.

Mr. REED'S Distillery, 118 East Twenty-ninth st., New-York. [my31 3m

Information Wanted—Of MICHAEL BOODEN, a native of the Parish of Urlingford, near Johnstown, County Kilkenny, Ireland, who left his residence in Ireland for New-York last December. Amy information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, N. Y., will be thankfully received by his wife. my31 1t

"Hereditary bondsmen, know ye not
Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow?"

RICHARD KAVANAGH,

182 and 184 FEDERAL STREET, BOSTON.

THANKFUL to his numerous patrons for past favors, is desirous of letting them know that he has given up the Grocery and Provision trade, and intends in future to devote his untiring exertions to promote their terrestrial happiness in the shape of good Liquors, Segars, to say nothing of a Free Lunch every day at 11 o'clock. Attached is a very handsome Sitting Room, and a splendid Room for Committee Meetings. my31 4t

Smiles many a long, bright sunny day,
When heaven puts on the blue of May.

Ladies, if you wish Gaiter and Button Boots, of all the fashionable styles, at 12s. to 20s., or if you wish slippers, ties and buskins, from 6s. to 10s. per pair, with boys', misses' and children's boots and shoes of all kinds and prices, patronize J. B MILLER & CO., 134 Canal street. [my31 4t

"Hair Dye and Wig Manufactory Buchanan" informs his friends and the public that he can warrant his Dye will give every satisfaction. Sold wholesale and retail at 395 Broadway, near Walker street, New York city. May24 4t

Sewing Machine Depot.—Sewing Machines of all kinds improved and repaired, on reasonable terms, an in the most substantial manner. Superior Machine Oils for sale. A large assortment of Machine Silk Twist and Needles for sale at reduces prices.
my 24, 3 mos. F. S. COATES & Co., 345 Broadway, New-York.

The Best Hair Dye.—DR. O. M. BALLARD'S new article received the highest premium at the World's Fair and American Institute, where it was examined by the distinguished Chemists, Dr. Chilton, and Prof. John Torrey, and pronounced the best. For sale by the best Druggists. Principal office and store, 498 Broadway, New-York. my17 3m

Furniture.—F. FITZSIMMONS respectfully calls the attention of his customers and the public to his stock of elegant and substantial FURNITURE, (not made for the auction room) consisting of rich Parlor Suites in rosewood; oak Dining and Chamber Sets of every description; Upholstery in all its branches executed in the best mechanical manner. Prices unexceptionable. Warerooms No. 8 Astor place, near Broadway. my24 3m

Mrs. Luby's Classes for Dancing, Calisthenics, &c., Greenwich Hall, 275 Bleecker street, open until the 1st June. Admission 50 cents. Mrs. Luby gives lessons on the Pianoforte on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

STATEN ISLAND
FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.

Also ladies and gentlemen's garments, Shawls, &c., &c.
BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 3 John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

DRY GOODS AND EMBROIDERIES.

H. MAGEE, has removed to 140 Atlantic street, Brooklyn, where he has opened a large stock of SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS, which he will sell at very low prices. my3 1m

Lumber and Timber for Export and City Trade.—THOS. RIGNEY & Co. offer for sale AT THEIR YARD FOOT OF THIRTIETH-STREET, North River, a general assortment of LUMBER AND TIMBER, suitable for export and the city trade. SHIPPERS AND BUILDERS will find it to their advantage to examine their stock previous to buying. Apply as above, or to J. PICKARD, Agent, 26 Bridge street. my17 3m*

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE for Servants, 129 Waverley Place, two doors from Sixth avenue, New-York.—A large number of competent help can be suited with good situations, in city and country, without delay. Employers in the city and country supplied with the best of female help. [my17 3m] WM. O'BRIEN, Proprietor.

KNOX'S
OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,
59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.
DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and Single counting-room DESKS, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office Desks from 3 to 6 ft., of Mahogany, blackwalnut and oak; cases for books and pigeon-holes. Office chairs, cushions, lounges and Office Tables of every description. my17 tf

REMOVAL.

McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

TO NERVOUS SUFFERERS.

A Retired Clergyman, restored to health in a few days, after many years of great nervous suffering, is anxious to make known the means of cure. Will send (free) the prescriptions used. Direct to
Rev. JOHN M. DAGNALL,
my10 3m No. 59 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

I. E. Tate's Pannus Corrium Boot and Shoe store, for tender feet. A large stock of Boots, Shoes and Gaiters always on hand, in great variety, and made to order at the shortest notice, for Gentlemen, Boys and Youths—wholesale and retail, at the lowest Cash prices. Particular attention is requested to the Pannus Corrium or Leather Cloth Boots and Shoes, for those troubled with corns, bunions or tenderness of the feet. Its qualities for summer boots or shoes, surpass anything ever got up in this country for real comfort, as it keeps the feet perfectly cool, and at the same time is susceptible of the finest polish; for a dress boot more so than any French calfskin, with one half the labor. [my 24, 3 mos.] ISAAC E. TATE.

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.
Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my8 3m

Wanted.—Good hands to embroider on linen. Apply at GENIN'S Bazaar (late St. Nicholas Hotel,) 513 Broadway. my17 3m

Special Notices.

HERRING'S
PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS,) which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 185, 187 and 188 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,
No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6¼ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,
WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,
SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,
OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and, Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durab quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

TO THE LADIES—MILLINERY.

A large and beautiful assortment of Ladies' and Misses'

BONNETS, STRAW TRIMMINGS, RIBBONS, FLOWERS, AND MANTILLAS,

At William S. Irvine's No. 112 Canal street.
my31 1mo

Analytical and Metallurgical Chemistry and Mining Geology.
DR. ISAIAH DECK,
No. 18 EXCHANGE PLACE, NEW-YORK.

MAY be consulted on all subjects relating to Practical Chemistry, Mining and Metallurgy. Assays of Ores, Analyses of Minerals, and Mining Products in general carefully and expeditiously conducted, and sound opinions delivered upon the most economical methods of working them, based on the latest chemical discoveries. Geological and Mining Surveys undertaken in any part of the world—Dr. DECK having had had considerable experience in this branch of his profession. my31 3m

THE GREATEST WONDER OF THE AGE!

A REMEDY WHICH CURES IN FIVE MINUTES.—M. LEROUX'S FRENCH CHOLERA COGNAC BITTERS.—This wonderful and scientific compound is recommended by the most eminent and learned physicians of all Europe and America, and enjoys the best reputation of anything similar ever offered. It is without doubt the best, most efficient and generally acknowledged remedy against Cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, and complaints of the stomach in general. The numerous patients who have tried it according to directions, have invariably found relief in a very short time, and the best proof of it is, that since this standard remedy was introducee in the armies of the allies in the Crimea, the mortality of the soldiers from Cholera and similar diseases was reduced by over 75 per cent.; in consideration of which, the inventor was presented by the French and English governments with a gold medal, bearing the inscription, "Hail! M. LEROUX, the great Chemist and inventor, by whose knowledge our armies are preserved from Cholera."

This invaluable preparation is also a remedy for biliousness, indigestion, weakness, and general derangement of the stomach. Upon being taken, it creates appetite, and prevents the heaviness attendant upon eating, by persons who are dyspeptic.

In this city, also, this remedy has been tried with the most undoubted success, and the undersigned can produce the best testimonials of our most celebrated physicians, as to its immediate and complete success, which he will be happy at any time to show to any that may wish to see them. S. STEINFELD, sole agent for the United States, No. 70 Nassau street, corner of John.

P. S.—Those not having money to pay, may call at my place from 3 to 5 P. M. and receive this remedy gratis. my17 3m

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

Medical.

DRS. GILBERT AND KENNEDY,
TREAT
CANCERS, TUMORS, ULCERS, &c.,
WITHOUT SURGICAL OPERATIONS.

OFFICE 746 BROADWAY, COR. ASTOR PLACE, N. Y.

CERTIFICATES FROM

Ex. Gov. T. M. Tucker.	Hon. T. Butler King.	Judge Alex. Walker.
Judge F. W. Huling.	Gen. Narcisso Lopez.	Col. Maunsel White.
Capt. Isaiah Sellers.	Capt. Wm. Leathers.	Thos. E. Bond, M. D.
A. S. Baldwin, M. D.	W. P. Allison, M. D.	J. S. Peacocke, M. D.

PERMISSION TO REFER TO

Ex. Gov. Jas. C. Jones. Hon. Fred. B. Stanton.
B. F. Palmer, Inventor of "Palmer's Artificial Leg."
Francis Grice, Naval Constructor, Navy Yard, Phila.
Proprietors of the Girard House, Philadelphia. my24 1m

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.
ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st, Boston.

"Eye and Ear."—DOCTOR HENDERSON, Oculist and Aurist, 419 Broadway, corner of Canal street, treats all diseases of the eye and ear, without cupping, leeching, blistering or the use of calomel. Within the past two years upwards of thirty cases of blindness from inflamation have been restored to sight, to whom reference can be given, (hundreds of which can be seen in my circular,) by inclosing three postage stamps. Electro-chemical Medicated Vapor and Sulphur, hot and cold water BATHS. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Sundays and evenings by appointment. 419 Broadway, corner of Canal st., New-York. my17 3m

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

DR. J. ALLEN, (late Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery,) invites attention to his improved method of constructing Artificial Dentistry, which combine the following advantages:

1st,—There are no seams or crevices for the lodgement of food, to vitiate the saliva, or infect the breath. The interstices are all filled with a silicious compound, which is so applied as to form an artificial gum; this is fused at a high heat, which unites the Teeth firmly to each other, and to the plate upon which tney are set, thus imparting great strength and lifelike appearance to the denture.

2d,—The Teeth for this style of work are made perfectly natural in form and shade, and when properly set with the artificial gum as above, exhibits that harmony with the other features which characterize the natural organs.

3d,—The original form and expression of the mouth and face can be restored. This is done by having the denture so constructed as to bring out the sunken portions and sustain them in their proper position; this is an important feature in this style of work, to which the author devotes special attention.

4th,—A clear and distinct articulation of speech is restored. This is effected by having the inside of the teeth, and artificial gum, of a natural form, to which the tongue is readily adapted; this prevents the hissing or muffled sounds so often observed in speaking or singing, in persons wearing artificial teeth.

The Rooms are at No. 30 BOND STREET, New-York. A Pamphlet containing more full particulars, sent free, to those who desire it. ap263m

H. G. LUTHER,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST,

No. 698 BROADWAY, Second House above Fourth st.

HAVING enjoyed an extensive practice during the last twelve years, feels confident of his ability to give perfect satisfaction to all who may honor him with their preference. He is prepared to perform all operations connected with his profession, in the most faithful manner, and in strict accordance with scientific principles, embracing all the recent improvements of the day.

References of the most respectable character given if desired. Patronage respectfully solicited.

☞ N. B. Teeth extracted without pain. my17 3m

New School of Medicine and Pharmacy, the last unfolding of the art of healing. Before any disease can be treated successfully, its effect upon every part of the body—either directly or sympathetically—its character and the cause of its presence in the system must be perfectly understood. But this can be truly done only by the power of the internal vision. By it the Psychical Physician has at command an instrument compounding the perfected microscope and telescope, by which he can, on one side, not only resolve the pretended simple atom of the chemist, but those of light, heat, electricity, magnetism, etc., and on the other, see those atoms at thousands of miles. He can, therefore, at any distance, dissect each particle of your being, with unerring glance. With equal facility and clearness he can select the remedies, and apply them in the manner best suited to your state and condition.

I frequently find, in examining patients who suppose themselves far gone in consumption, or hopelessly affected with heart disease, that no such disease existed, or if either of the organs be deranged, that the difficulty is slight and easy to be removed, but that their fears have magnified a trifling disturbance into a fatal malady. Again, there are those whose life hangs upon a thread, and they scarcely feel that they need help. This comes from the fact that their vitality is so far exhausted that they have not the power to feel that they are rapidly passing away, and that unless a speedy change is wrought, their days are numbered.

It is particularly designed that all supposed hopeless cases should try this new method of cure. It is very easy, the medicines purely vegetable, and very palatable. When electricity or magnetism is used, it is done in the mildest way. No one can fail to be relieved if (as in some cases) it is not possible to effect a cure. Generally, the sufferer of years' standing is relieved in a few hours, and cured in a few weeks.

For the nervously debilitated female, this practice is a boon not to be hastily thrown aside. Thousands may be made well and happy who have long since despaired of health and life.

Diseases of the Lungs, in their varied forms and most advanced states, Heart, Liver, and Kidney diseases, with the worst cases of Dyspepsia and Cancerous affections of the Stomach, are all curable.

Dropsy, Paralysis, Palsy, Spinal affections, and Fits, speedily relieved and almost always cured.

The worst cases of Diarrhœa, Cholera, and Small-pox cured in a few hours. Mrs. M. J. MABIN, M.D.,
37 Lafayette Place, (first st. east of Broadway, bet. 4th and 8th sts.

Office hours from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., exclusively for ladies, and from 2 to 5 P. M. for gentlemen—Wednesdays excepted. All other hours by appointment.

Persons applying by letter must state the name, sex, and age of the patient, together with the leading features of the case.

TERMS:—For first examination and prescription, $5, if the patient is present, and $10 if absent. All subsequent examinations, $5.

Sunday for the poor, without charge. my24,1t

Dr. J. J. McGowan, Physician and Surgeon, Graduate of Harvard University, Fellow of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Medical Societies, etc., has removed to No. 69 Canal street, New-York, a few doors from Broadway, where he will attend to calls in every branch of the medical profession. Dr. McG. will devote particular attention to chronic diseases, and those of women and children. m10 1t

All eye-diseases cured by Dr. C. W. Upham, Oculist, Successor to Dr. Roehrig, 334 Fourth street, near Broadway. No cupping, bleeding, or salivating. Cataract cured in many cases without operating. Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M. References given. Persons residing in any part of the country, can be treated by correspondence. my17 4t

New School of Medicine and Pharmacy. The last Unfolding of the Art of Healing. My daily practice proves that I CURE CONSUMPTION, in all its varied forms and most advanced states, as readily as any other disease. Therefore I desire to treat all Consumptives, but particularly those who have tried all other physicians without relief. Mrs. M. J. MABIN, M.D., No. 37. Lafayette place, N. Y. (First street east of Broadway, between 4th and 8th sts.) Office hours: from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., exclusively for Ladies; and from 2 to 5 P. M., for Gentlemen, Wednesdays excepted. All other hours by appointment. my31 3m

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	8s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 8s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap193m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap263m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

P. L. ROGERS,

FOUNDER OF THE ONE PRICE SYSTEM,

invites an inspection of the extensive

SPRING STOCK OF FASHIONABLE CLOTHING,

at his great central wholesale and retail warehouse,

CORNER OF FULTON AND NASSAU STREETS,

opposite the Herald office.

There any gentleman can procure an elegant outfit in twenty minutes Every garment is warranted of the newest cut and of good workmanship.

Parents can fit out a family of boys with equal dispatch from a stock that includes every style, size, color, material and quality.

The selling prices, which are guaranteed to be 25 per cent. under market average, are all affixed in plain figures to the articles, and NO DEVIATION can be made.

The Order Department is stocked with the finest CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, etc., and the Clothing made to measure cannot be excelled in the world, although the prices are far lower than at other establishments.

my24tf P. L. Rogers.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap263m

---

LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY,

EGAN & CO.,

THE proprietors take leave to inform their customers and the public, that they have moved their entire stock of Linen Goods to the above store, where they will from this time forward continue the wholesale together with the retail, of

Linens and Dry Goods,

of all kinds, at the lowest cash price. They are all of their own importation, and in order to make a permanent trade, they will retail them at the importer's prices. Their stock consists of Linen Sheeting, all widths and qualities; Damask Table Cloths, white and brown; Damask Table Linens, Diapers, Hucks, Back Towelings, Napkins, D'Oylies, White and Brown Drills, Checks and Stripes, all warranted pure linen, together with a large lot of

New Silks,

from 4s. to 12s. per yard; Stripes and Plaids, a splendid lot of Black Silks.

There are no damaged or bankrupt's goods included in this list, and they will sell lower than any other house having the same articles. Having a buyer always in Ireland, they are in a position and determined to sell low, and establish their house on the same principle as the "Old Linen Hall," in Dublin. Ladies are respectfully requested to examine the above stock, as affording a large assortment in variety and value. Amongst them will be found a splendid lot of 5-8 Damask and Snowdrop Napkins, from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, tickings and bleached muslins, cheap by the piece.

Striped Poplins,

A large assortment, from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per yard, with all other kinds of Dry Goods, to meet the wants of Spring and Summer purchasers.

ap261m EGAN & CO., Linen Hall, 332 Bowery.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap198m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

THE undersigned have formed a Copartnership, under the name and firm of Foot, Cole & Co., for the transaction of the Paper Commission Business, at 82 Beekman street.

JOEL W. FOOT,	FOOT, COLE & CO.
CHAS. COLE,	C. D. HARMAN,
	CARLTON LE SAGE.

Mr. H. C. Goodwin, has no further connection with us. ap19

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 193 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap198m

---

"TERRA COTTA"

CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental. Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture, lowest rates. LONG ISLAND POTTERY. Depot, 82 Nassau street, New-York. my10 3m

---

Business Directory.

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 252 BROADWAY.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co.,	Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co.,
C. Meletta,	James Cook & Co. 6m

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

ROBERT IRWIN,

CHEAP BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

my10 156 Chatham street, opposite James' st., New-York. 8m

R. HOGAN,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

UMBRELLA AND PARASOL MANUFACTURER,

374 BOWERY, NEAR FOURTH STREET.

Repairing neatly executed. my17 3m*

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

OFFICE, 23½ SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK,
ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my31y

---

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street,
ap263mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

Business Directory.

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this conntry, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN, ANDREW McSHANE, JAMES DOWLINO. } NEW-YORK.

8m

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

8mos (near Broadway.)

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,

at 333 Broadway,

tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

☞ Office 138 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap263m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap263m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

HOSEY & RILEY,

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,

600 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

Private entrance on the first floor, 134 Crosby street.

☞ Hosey & Riley invite their friends to give them a call.

my24 3m HOSEY & RILEY.

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists', Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, Oils, Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather belting.

☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON all CONSIGNMENTS.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.

ap198m*

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES 6 CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1856. NO. 9.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. IX.

Editorial.

IRELAND AND O'BRIEN—WHAT IS—WHAT WILL BE.
BRAVO BELGIUM!
JOHN BROUGHAM'S BENEFIT.
GOOD LUCK TO FREEDOM!—NEWS FROM NICARAGUA.
ARCHBISHOP HUGHES—TO LECTURE.
THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Literature.

ROBERT EMMETT AND THOMAS MOORE—Original Letters from Moore to Dr. Mackenzie.
HIBERNIAN STRANGFORD.
A BED OF 'SPARAGUS:—The Sparrowgrass Papers.
MAGAZINES FOR JUNE:—Putnam, Knickerbocker, Household Words, Schoolfellow, &c. Literary and Art Items.

Poetry.

MISADVENTURES OF A MEDICAL STUDENT:—By "Shamrock."

Correspondence.

Dublin Letter, by "Kilmainham;" Letter from "Out West;" Letter from Oliver Byrne; Military Intelligence; Funeral of Ex-Adjutant Downs.

Miscellaneous.

Answers to Correspondents; Latest European, American, and Irish News.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. MAHONY, Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. P. WALSH, Cincinnati, Ohio.
—— COURTNEY, Charleston, South Carolina.
BRICE, 100 Exchange Place, New Orleans.
JOHN PLASTO, 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y.
McGOWANS, Portland, Me.
ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
MORRISEY, " "
DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.
JOHN C. CLARKE, 88 Newark avenue, Jersey City.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.
POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

BOOTS, SHOES AND GAITERS,

Wholesale and Retail,

MADE TO ORDER BY

LORIN BROOKS,

188 Fulton street, New-York, opposite Church street, West of Broadway.
my10 1m

GEO. McDONNELL,

BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURER,

32 PARK ROW, NEXT DOOR TO LOVEJOY'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK.

☞ Boots, Shoes, and Gaiters of the best quality made to order.

3m.my10 Geo. McDonnell.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 34 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 300 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from EDWARD H. DIXON, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, FROM THE CRADLE TO THE GRAVE." Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above. ap26tf

Publications.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL. 4 vols., very scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
HAYES' BALLADS OF IRELAND. 2 vols. in one, 12mo. cloth, $1.
IRELAND ILLUSTRATED. By Petrie, Bartlett and Baynes. 4to, morocco, gilt edges.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornellan. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his Son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.
O'BRIEN'S ROUND TOWERS. Scarce.
MUSGRAVE'S IRISH REBELLIONS. 2 vols., 8vo.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Burke's Speeches, 1 25. Griffin's Adventures of an Irish Giant, 18mo., cloth, 25 cents. Wild Irish Girl, 12mo., cloth, 50 cents.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,
By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to
A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE.

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

(JAMES B. KIRKER,)

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK,

PUBLISH the largest and finest assortment of Catholic Bibles, Testaments, Prayer Books, Tales, School Books, and other works, to be found in the United States.

An extensive supply of all other Catholic articles always on hand.
Catalogues of their publications sent free of postage.

E. D. & BROTHER HAVE JUST ISSUED

1. THE LOVE OF MARY. Devotions for the month of May. 38c.
2. THE YOUNG CRUSADERS. A tale. 38c.
3. HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR; or Meditations on the Blessed Sacrament. 25c.
4. THE CONVERSION OF RATISBONNE. 25c.
5. CONSCIENCE, or the Trials of May Brooke, a tale by Mrs. A. H. Dorsey. 2 vols; each 38c. 4t May 24

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth,	$0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth,	0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assisium. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl.,	0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each,	0 37½
Edna and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth,	0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to	4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to	12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to	12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to	25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

8mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

BROOKLYN.

LECTURE,

BY

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

FOR

THE BENEFIT OF THE SCHOOLS

ATTACHED TO

ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH,

AT THE

"ATHENÆUM,"

ON

Tuesday Evening, June 10th.

SUBJECT,

"RICHARD LALOR SHIEL, AND CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION."

Tickets 50 cents. For sale at the Catholic churches, at the bookstores of Messrs. Nevin, Swain, Jos. W. Hayes, Brooklyn, Haverty, Dunigan and Sadlier, New-York, and Wm. H. Hogan, 160 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

Doors open at 7—Lecture at 8 o'clock.

Publications.

SYDNEY SMITH.

Published this day,

WIT AND WISDOM OF REV. SYDNEY SMITH.

Being selections from his Writings and Passages of his Letters and Table-Talk. With Notes and a Biographical Memoir, by Evert A. Duychinck; a Portrait on Steel, after G. Stewart Newton; and an Autograph Letter. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

The most important of Sydney Smith's Writings will here be found given entire; while the selection generally presents the most characteristic passages of his "Wit and Wisdom" from the whole. Numerous Miscellanies, of much interest, are included, which are not to be met with in any previous collection of the author's works.

CONTENTS:

Biographical Memoir, by the Editor.
Articles from the "Edinburgh Review" (including the Papers on Female Education, Professional Education, Notices of America, &c., &c.)
Sketches of Moral Philosophy, (including the Essays on the Conduct of the Understanding; on Wit and Humor, &c., &c.)
The Peter Plymley Letters.
Passages from Sermons.
Speeches on the Reform Bill. The Ballot.
Letters on American Debts.
Passages from Letters on the Ecclesiastical Commission.
A Fragment on the Irish Roman Catholic Church.
Letters on Railway Management.
Character of Sir James Mackintosh and of Francis Horner.
Practical Essays, &c.
Passages from Letters.
Table Talk, Personal, &c., &c.

je 7 J. S. REDFIELD, 34 Beekman street, N. Y.

A BOOK FOR EVERY FAMILY.

Now Ready,

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES,

In their Distinctive Characters, Associations, Missions, Labors, Transformations and Ultimate Rewards,

PERSONIFIED AND EXHIBITED AS A DIVINE FAMILY.

AN ILLUSTRATED ALLEGORY.

By the Rev. D. D. BUCK.

Truth, Liberty, Faith, Hope, Charity, Mercy, Justice, Contemplation, Impulse, Zeal, Enterprise, Industry, Patience, Humility, Virtue, and Temperance, are each distinctly personated, and the beauty and loveliness of their characters and conduct so forcibly exhibited, as to render the work, it is believed, not only interesting to the general reader, but an especially welcome visitant in Christian families.

In 1 vol. 290 pp. 12mo. extra cloth, gilt. Price $1.25.

Single copies sent, post paid, on receipt of price.  Booksellers and Agents supplied upon liberal terms. Address

MILLER, ORTON & MULLIGAN, Publishers,
No. 25 Park Row, New-York, or No. 107 Genesee street, Auburn.

In Press, Ready May 28th.

THE STATES AND TERRITORIES OF

THE GREAT WEST,

INCLUDING OHIO, INDIANA, ILLINOIS, MISSOURI, MICHIGAN, WISCONSIN, MINNESOTA, IOWA, KANSAS AND NEBRASKA;

Their Geography, History, Advantages, Resources and Prospects—comprising their Local History, Institutions and Laws. Giving a Table of Distances, and the most Direct Routes and Modes of Conveyance; also, pointing out the Best Districts for Agricultural, Commercial, Lumbering and Mining Operations,

By JACOB FERRIS.

In one volume, with a new and accurate Map, embracing each of the above States and Territories, and numerous Illustrations. About 852 pp. 12mo. cloth. Price $1.25.

For sale by all Booksellers, News and Travelling Agents, to whom liberal terms are given. Address

Miller, Orton & Mulligan, Publishers,
my31 2t] No. 25 Park Row, New-York, or No. 107 Genesee street, Auburn.

THE BALLADS OF IRELAND;

COLLECTED BY

EDWARD HAYES,

Containing Selections from all the Irish Poets.

They are Ballads of the Affections, Fairy Ballads, Legendary Ballads, Miscellaneous Ballads, Translated Ballads, &c., &c.

THE following are among the Authors:—Banim, Ansty, Barry, Beamish, Blacker, Brown, Callanan, Carleton, Charlotte Clarke, Croker, Croly, Thos. Davis, Francis Davis, De Vere, Dowling, Downing, Drennan, Dufferin, Duffy, Ferguson, Forrest, Fox, Frazer, Gallaher, Goldsmith, Griffin, Halpin, Hill, Hoey, Irwin, Keegan, Kelly, Kenealy, Kennedy, Knowles, Lane, Lover, Lynch, Madden, Maginn, Mahony, Mangan, McCarthy, McDermott, McDavitt, Meehan, McGee, Moore, Mulchinock, Rev. Dr. Murray, John Fisher Murray, Norton, O'Connell, Parnell, Ryan, Simmons, Smythe, Starkey, Sterling, Supple, Waller, Walsh, Wilde, Williams, Wolfe, &c.

The whole comprising 725 closely printed pages, making the most remarkable and interesting book ever presented to the people of this country.

Price—in one volume, $1. In two volumes, $1.25. The price of the Irish edition is $2.50.

☞ For sale by all booksellers.

The book will be sent to any part of the U. S., postage free, on receipt of the above prices. Published by my17 tf PATRICK DONAHOE, 23 Franklin-st., Boston, Mass.

Book of Men, Women and Babies By DR. PORTER, of New-York.—Such is the title of a book of real practical utility, and which contains more sound philosophy and good sense, than we have ever seen in a book of the kind before. No parent will ever regret putting it into the hands of his wife, sons, and daughters. Married or single, should hasten to possess it. Every mother will find the instructions in this book promotive of health and contentment in her household.—Jersey Tribune, Elizabeth City, New-Jersey.

In paper covers, 50 cents, postage free. Address DR. PORTER, 216 Fulton-st. Twelve copies to one address, $5. my17 3m

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL,

596 BROADWAY,

TWO DOORS ABOVE THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL.

GREAT ATTRACTION.

TABLEAUX AND MUSICAL SOIREES.

First week of
DR. VALENTINE AND MR. A. STOEPEL.
Third week of
MADAME LOVARNEY AND MR. F. STOEPEL.

Three new Grand Tableaux, every night this week.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY AFTERNOONS,

BIBLICAL PICTURES.

LECTURE

BY

MOST REV. ARCHBISHOP HUGHES,

IN THE

ACADEMY OF MUSIC, FOURTEENTH STREET,

ON THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 12th 1856.

The proceeds to be applied to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Fourteenth street, now in progress of erection.

The Lecture will commence at 8 o'clock. Tickets One Dollar. my31 3t

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $180; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
88 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,

OLD LINE PACKETS,

Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 13th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap26 3m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

Shipping.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP LINE.

CITY OF BALTIMORE....CITY OF WASHINGTON.
CITY OF MANCHESTER...KANGAROO.

THE magnificent new steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Leitch, 2,867 tons, 500 horse power, will sail from Philadelphia on the 26th June, and from Liverpool on the 16th July. Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $80; from Liverpool, $40, including cooked provisions. Persons wishing to send for their friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—F. S. Saxton.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—————.....Toronto, C. W.—D. K. Feehan.

BLACK BALL LINE

OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remitcance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING,
ROBERT J. DILLON,
HUGH KELLY,
} Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN,
ARTHUR M'AVOY,
} Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." —— KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. GEO. B. MAGRATH, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (——— ———,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. M. KEATING, Com'dt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White st. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each ——— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each ——— at ———. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each ——— at ———. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 88 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 104 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. PATRICK O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa. M. W. MORRISS, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE MCBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender. 8mo

GEORGE MCBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

European News.

The United States' steamer Baltic, from Liverpool 14th ult., arrived at this port on the morning of the 27th.

There is considerable news of interest by this arrival. It is stated from Constantinople that a defensive alliance had been concluded at Teheran between Persia and the United States, and that the text of it had arrived at Constantinople, where it is kept very secret. [A commercial treaty must be meant.] It is reported from Hamburgh that an American squadron is expected soon to enter the Baltic. On Friday, the 9th inst., Russia, Sweden and Oldenberg signed a protocol at Copenhagen, agreeing to adopt the last proposition of Denmark for the capitalization of the Sound Dues, provided all other States interested do the same. Russia is reported to have demanded explanations respecting the joint treaty secretly concluded between France, England and Austria, guaranteeing the independence of Turkey. As the rumor has not affected the Stock Exchange, it cannot be considered dangerous. Russia is about to commence another campaign, under Gen. Mouravieff, against the Circassians. Considerable excitement yet reigns in Belgium on the subject of the attempt of France to coerce the Press; and an ovation had been offered by the Belgian editors to Count Vilain for his expressed determination to uphold the liberty of type. Paris correspondence, however, says that the French and Belgic Governments have come to an understanding in the matter; that Belgium will take more active measures to prevent the publication of appeals to assassination, and France will take an early opportunity of expressing satisfaction therewith. The affairs of Italy continue to excite a large share of attention. Count Cavour has presented two important notes to the Sardinian Chambers, which will be found in our columns.

The news of Gen. Walker's battle at Rivas attracted some, but not much, attention in England.

The French Government is stated to have its vigilance particularly awakened toward the movements of the secret societies, which are becoming dangerous. At a meeting of capitalists at the Treasury Office, on the 13th, the Chancellor of the Exchequer stated, that the proposed loan of five millions sterling was calculated to cover the whole service of the year, except two millions, for which he should propose to issue Exchequer Bonds, but the two millions would not be required until the end of the present year, or, perhaps, not until the first quarter of 1857.

Russia.

The Emperor of Russia has issued the following manifesto on the subject of his approaching coronation:

"We, Alexander II, Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russias, King of Poland, &c., make known by these presents:

"When we ascended our ancestral throne of Russia, and grand duchy of Finland, and the throne of Poland, which is inseparable from it, in the midst of severe trials, both for us and our country, we resolved in our heart to defer our coronation so long as the thunder of arms was not silenced within the limits of our realm, and the blood of our glorious Christian warriors, who signalised themselves both by deeds of rare courage and by self-sacrifices, had not ceased to flow. Now that beneficent peace is restoring to Russia her former tranquillity, we intend, in conformity with the example of the former pious Emperors, our predecessors, to be crowned, and to receive the prescribed anointment, and at the same time to have our dearly beloved consort, the Empress Maria Alexandrowna, participate in the same. While we thus make known to our faithful subjects this our intention, which, with God's help, shall be carried into execution in the month of August of this year, we invite them at the same time to join their prayers to ours, that God's blessing may descend on us and our Government; that God may help us, while placing on our head the imperial crown, to take upon us the oath and vow to live solely and alone for the good of the nations that are put under our rule; and may Almighty God enlighten all our thoughts, and inspire all our acts by the bestowal on us of His holy spirit.

"ALEXANDER.

"St. Petersburg, April 29, 1856."

All the marshals and nobility of the empire have been summoned to Moscow.

In his recent speech to the nobility at Moscow, the Czar alluded to the report which had been spread of his intention to emancipate the serfs, and said that was a change which could by no means be effected in a hurry. The present state of things, however, was one that could not last. It would therefore be very agreeable to him if the nobility itself would take into mature deliberation in what way a change could be gradually prepared for; and any propositions they might make on the subject would always be welcome to him.

The Czar, of Warsaw, announces that Russia is to commence a campaign this summer against the Caucasus. General Chruleff will have the command of the expedition, under the superior direction of General Mouravieff. The expedition will extend to Daghestan, (the country of Schamyl,) a distance of about sixty miles from the Black Sea coast.

Of all the official changes which have recently taken place, that of the removal of the Senator Puschkin from his post in the Educational Administration of St. Petersburgh, seems to have created the greatest sensation in that capital. He stood at the head of the Upper Committee of Censorship, and it is believed that the intended innovations in the Ministry of Public Enlightenment, as it is called in Russia, were thought incompatible with his principles, as a member of the strictest old Russian party, and the forms in which those principles exhibited themselves. He is represented as a man of high honor, and one of the most intelligent and enlightened among the superior officers of the state service, but at the same time as one who opposed fanatically what he thought the irruption of foreign ideas of civilization, and was most successful in keeping them at bay. Without going to the full extent in which some persons sanguinely hope that the whole oppressive system of censorship is now to be dropped in Russia, it may be safe to conclude that this removal of Puschkin by the Emperor is the evidence of a change for the better as regards the application of liberal principles in the field of literature and the press.

France.

The frost with which certain localities of the east and south-east of France were visited in the nights of the 5th and 6th inst. has done much injury to the vines. In the Niévre they have irretrievably suffered. In the neighborhood of Grenoble the vines, as well as the mulberry and walnut trees, and even the crops in the ground, which presented the most luxurious appearance, were seriously damaged. The results were also disastrous in many of the wine districts of the Herault and Var. In Franche Comté the loss sustained is considered irreparable on many points, and in Burgundy this late frost proved fatal to most of the younger vines. The fall in the price of wine has been of course checked in the southern markets.

REMARKABLE INTERVIEW BETWEEN COUNT ORLOFF AND THE EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH.—Count Orloff recently had an audience of the Emperor, to ask for explanations on the subject of the treaty of April 15, between England, France, and Austria. The Russian plenipotentiary represented to his majesty that the treaty, unexplained, was construed by his government as a symptom of want of confidence in the good faith of Russia. The Emperor Napoleon protested against any such interpretation, and assured Count Orloff that he had only signed this treaty in compliance with the wishes of England and Austria, who desired to have a pledge of his good feeling towards them.

Count Orloff replied with as much vivacity as it was possible for a diplomatist to exhibit in presence of a reigning monarch, that the treaty of peace of March 30 effectually secured the independence and integrity of the Ottoman Empire, that the Emperor Napoleon had, before the signing of that treaty, given strong assurances of his desire to cultivate intimate relations with Russia, and that the unexpected step which had been taken was calculated to sow doubt and distrust in the mind of his Imperial master. During this remarkable interview, the Emperor Napoleon III. preserved that calm and impenetrable demeanor for which he is remarkable, while Count Orloff scarcely concealed the excitement and surprise which the new situation had produced in his mind.

A new sect, half political and half religious, has formed itself in France. Its tenets strange to say, are those of Druidism, the national doctrine of the ancient Gauls, combined with the principles of the Revolution of 1791. This Revolution the sectarians assert, delivered the nation of the Gauls from their oppressors, the Franks (represented by the clergy and the aristocracy), and France must maintain that delivery by returning altogether to the past—by reviving the traditions and the rites of the golden sickle and the sacred hatchets. The sect is headed by men of some consequence, as, for instance, by M. Henri Martin, the historian, by M. Carnot, formerly Minister of Public Instruction, by M. Jean Renaud, the philosopher, and by M. Dumesnil, son-in-law to M. Michelet. M. Michelet himself, though considered by the new party as a Druid, has not yet formally joined the sect.

Spain.

FRENCH INTERFERENCE IN SPANISH MATTERS.—No little irritation has been caused in Madrid by the publication, in the Journal de Madrid, a French paper established there, and supposed to be the mouth-piece of the French government, of an article advocating French intervention in Spanish affairs. The article appeared, by a strange coincidence, on the 2d of May, the day that the army, the population, and the government were celebrating the anniversary of the rising of the Spanish people against their invaders and oppressors. Its dictatorial tone was still more irritating, and the sensations produced by it were more painful from the fact of the writer selecting such a day, whilst thousands were gathered around the monument of Daoiz and Vilarde, who gave the signal of that glorious insurrection, to declare that French intervention in Spain was even a contingency. The correspondent of the London Times adds:—"It is curious that while the French government complains of the hostility of a portion of the Belgian press, it should not disavow any connection with a paper published in their language in in Madrid containing articles offensive to the independence of the Spanish people, and contemplating in the capital which witnessed the struggle of the 2d of May, the contingency of a French invasion. I am assured that the Spanish government continue to express themselves perfectly satisfied with that of France, and particularly with the Emperor."

Belgium.

PROSECUTION OF THE "NATION" BY THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT.—On Thursday evening, the 8th, although the weather was wet, a body of about 1,200 persons walked in procession to the hotel of the Belgian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and left there an address, thanking Count Vilain XIV, for the noble language which he had employed in the famous discussion relative to the Belgian press. The demonstration was got up by the Nation of Brussels, and the principal editors of the Brussels papers were present. One correspondent in recording this event, remarks that the lesson of Count Walewski will, nevertheless, not be lost; "It will have for effect to force the bad press within the limits of a more decorous discussion, and, especially less outrageous to the Emperor of the French."

This opinion seems to be likely; and we see that the Belgian Minister of the Interior has stated, in reply to a question in the Chamber of Representatives, that a prosecution has been already commenced against the "Nation" for an article containing an attack upon the Duchess of Brabant, and the announcement was received by the Chamber with loud marks of approbation. The Duchess of Brabant, wife to the heir presumptive to the throne of Belgium, is a daughter of the House of Hapsburg; and the incriminated article asserts that the Duchess is the most active instrument of the Austrian pressure on the Belgian government, and that "this infamous government of Austria believed that by supporting the brutal Napoleonic pressure on the Belgian government" it would divert public attention from the Italian question. The Paris Moniteur, under the guise of a letter from Brussels, characterizes the spirited speech of Count Vilain as deficient in moderation and statesmanlike reserve, and as having been spoken merely for effect.

INTENTIONS OF THE BELGIAN CABINET.—The Moniteur Belge publishes a communicated article distinguishing between what the Minister, Count Vilain, really said in the Chamber, and what has been loosely interpreted as his meaning. The Moniteur Belge says:—"The Minister of Foreign Affairs has declared that the cabinet of which he is a member will never propose any change in the constitution. He was not further questioned, and therefore was not called upon to declare the intentions of ministers respecting the laws that regulate the press. Had such questions been put, the government would have had only one answer to make, which is that it meant to reserve to itself, within the pale of the constitution, its full liberty of action, so as to be able to submit to the Chambers, when it should deem that the proper time had arrived, such modifications as might seem to it proper to be introduced into the laws concerning the press."

The Paris Moniteur reprints the note of the Moniteur Belge, and adds:—"We felicitate the Belgian government on the care it takes to guard its intentions from misapprehension. The part of the French government has been simply to point out the evil and its consequences; it is for the cabinet of Brussels alone to seek to find, and to apply the remedy. The government of the Emperor concerns itself with the efficacy and not with the nature of the remedy."

The correspondent of the Daily News says: "The affair between Belgium and France begins to assume an unpleasant aspect, though from what I can learn this government has no desire to push matters to an extreme. The excesses of a portion of the Belgian press is not, it appears, the only cause of displeasure. It is complained that the King of the Belgians forgot a little his usual sagacity in hastening to give to the Czar the Grand Cross of Leopold, and in making a display of it in the Belgian Moniteur. It is not usual, it appears, to publish the name of the recipient of such honors in the official organ of the government when the recipient is a crowned head. Kings and subjects cannot, of course be put on a level."

On the other hand, it declared that there was no intention of bravado in the act. The Order of Leopold could not be given to the Czar so long as he had not recognized the government of King Leopold, and that recognition coming late was all but coincident with the political situation which preceded the war. Moreover, the decoration could not have been given without offence to England and France while Russia was at war with those Powers. Now, as the Emperor Alexander appears to prize the Belgian order beyond measure, King Leopold took the first favorable opportunity of gratifying his intense longing—but nothing disrespectful, or anything approaching it, was intended by the act.

Denmark.

CAPITALIZATION OF THE SOUND DUES.—In a protocol signed at Copenhagen on the 9th inst., Russia and Sweden formally adhered to the mode of capitalizing the Sound dues proposed by the Danish government. The Copenhagen correspondent of the Times is somewhat surprised that England, "whose interest it seems to be to watch over the independence of Denmark," should have declined to accede to the proposed capitalization, which is declared to be the only practicable solution; and he intimates that the sympathies of the Danish nation, who are great admirers of British institutions, "would be considerably impaired if Denmark's moderate and reasonable proposals should meet with opposition from the very country which has the solution of the question in its hands, and which, of all States, is the one best qualified to prepare a transition from the existing state of things to another state more consistent with the exigencies of the time, without violently making away with old traditions."

Italy.

IMPORTANT NOTES FROM COUNT CAVOUR—THE STATE OF ITALY—RIOT AT MALTA.—We subjoin the important Note which the Sardinian Plenipotentiaries, under date of the 16th of April, 1856, addressed to Lord Clarendon and Count Walewski:

"The undersigned, plenipotentiaries of H. M. the King of Sardinia, full of confidence in the sense of justice which animates the rulers of France and England, and in the friendship they profess for Piedmont, have not ceased to hope, since the opening of the conferences, that the Congress of Paris would not separate without taking into serious consideration the state of Italy, and arriving at some means for the re-establishment of the political equilibrium now disturbed by the occupation of many of the provinces of the peninsula by foreign troops.

"Assured of the aid of their allies, they can hardly believe that another power, after having displayed so lively and generous an interest in the welfare of the eastern nations of Sclavonic and Greek race, would refuse to attend to the interests of the Latin people, who are still more unfortunate, inasmuch as their higher degree of civilization renders them more sensitive to the evils of oppressive governments. This hope, however, they have now lost. In spite of the good will of England and France, notwithstanding their kindly efforts, the persistency of Austria in demanding that no subject should be introduced into the conferences foreign to the matters they were especially called to discuss, has induced that assembly, upon which the anxious eyes of all Europe were turned, to dissolve, not only without having effected the slightest alleviation in the sufferings of Italy, but without having cast beyond the Alps a solitary gleam of hope in the future to calm men's minds, and so induce the Italians to support yet awhile the present with resignation.

"The peculiar position that Austria held in the late Congress rendered, perhaps, this deplorable result inevitable. This the undersigned are ready to admit. But without in the least reproaching their allies, they think they may justly call attention to the serious consequences which may arise in Europe; in Italy, and, above all, in Sardinia. It would be unnecessary to describe the actual condition of Italy. What has occurred in that country for some years past is already too notorious. The system of repression and of violent reaction, that might have some justification in the troubled times of 1848 and 1849, is now continued without mitigation, and even, with a few exceptions, with redoubled vigor. Never, at any period, have the dungeons and the galleys been more crowded with political offenders. Never has the number of exiles been more considerable, the surveillance of the police more strict, or the political state of the people more distressing. What is now passing in Parma is beyond belief. Such a system of rule necessarily engenders in the population a constant feeling of irritation and disaffection. This has been the case with Italy for the last seven years. Latterly, indeed, the popular agitation seems to have somewhat calmed.

"The Italians, seeing one of their own national monarchs coalesced with the great western powers in their combat for the principles of right and justice, and for the benefit of their co-religionists in the east, entertained the hope that peace would not have been concluded without some efforts being made to mitigate their own sufferings. This hope rendered them calm and resigned. But when they discover the negative results of the Paris Congress—when it shall become known to them that Austria, in spite of the good offices and amicable intervention of France and England, has objected to all discussion on the subject of Italy—that she would not even countenance the examination of measures calculated to remedy so sad a state of affairs—it is not to be doubted that their temporarily suppressed irritation will become more violent than ever. Convinced that they have nothing more to expect from diplomacy, nor from the powers who take an interest in their fate, the Italians will range themselves in the ranks of the revolutionary and subversive party with renewed ardor, and Italy will again become the hotbed of conspiracies and of disorder, that perchance may be restrained for a time by yet more vigorous compression, but which the least commotion abroad will cause to burst forth with unprecedented violence.

"This disastrous state of things, if it engages the attention of England and France, interested equally in the maintenance of order and the steady progress of civilization, ought naturally to occupy most seriously the government of the King of Sardinia. The stir of revolutionary passions in the countries contiguous to Piedmont, the effect of a cause of a nature calculated to excite the liveliest popular sympathy, exposed her to dangers of the gravest kind, that might possibly compromise the firm and moderate policy which, to her, has been so fertile in excellent results, and that has long attracted the admiration of enlightened Europe.

"But this is not the only danger that menaces Sardinia. A greater one still exists in the consequences of the means Austria may employ to repress the revolutionary tendencies in Italy. Responding to the call of the sovereigns of the insignificant Italian states, who are unable to restrain their own discontented subjects; this power holds military occupation of the greater part of the valley of the Po and of Central Italy. And her influence in fact extends in an irresistible manner to those provinces where even she may not happen to have soldiers. Resting on one side on Ferrara and Bologna, her troops are ranged as far as Ancona, the whole length of the Adriatic, which is now in some respects an Austrian Lake; on the other side resting on Placenza, which, contrary to the spirit if not to the letter of the treaty of Vienna, she exerts herself to transform into a first-class fortress. She has a garrison at Parma, and can deploy her forces the whole length of the Sardinian frontier from the Po to the summit of the Appenines. The permanent occupation by Austria of territories that do not belong to her renders her the absolute mistress of the whole of Italy, destroying the equilibrium established by the treaty of Vienna, and constitutes a continual menace to Piedmont.

"Surrounded in a measure on all sides by the Austrians, completely beset on her eastern frontier by the forces of this power, who looks on her with no benevolent eye, Piedmont is kept in a continued state of apprehension, that obliges her to be ever armed, and to preserve a defensible attitude. This draws heavily on her finances, already deranged by the events of 1848 and 1849, and by the war in which she has lately participated.

"These facts, which the undersigned have just set forth, will be sufficient to make plain the perils of the position in which the Sardinian government finds itself placed.

"Troubled in domestic affairs by the action of revolutionary passions that are communicated from neighboring states, where these evils are engendered by a violent system of oppression, and by foreign occupation—menaced by the extension of the power of Austria, it may, from one moment to another, be forced by an inevitable necessity to adopt extreme remedies, the results of which it is impossible to foretell.

"The undersigned do not doubt that this state of affairs will awaken the solicitude of the governments of France and England, not only on account of the friendship and the real sympathy they profess for the sovereign who, alone amongst all, when success was most uncertain, dared to declare in their favor, but above all, because it is a veritable danger, that threatens the peace of the whole of Europe.

"Sardinia is the only state of Italy that can erect a permanent barrier to the revolutionary spirit, and at the same time be independent of Austria, to whose invading influence she is also the only counterpoise.

"If Sardinia, exhausted internally, abandoned by her allies, was obliged to succumb to superior force, if she fell under the dominion of Austria, then the conquest of Italy by this power would at once be achieved. And Austria, after having obtained in the east, without the slightest sacrifice, the immense benefit of the free navigation of the Danube, and the neutralization of the Black Sea, would then acquire also a preponderance in the West. This would be what France and England cannot wish—what they can never permit.

"But the undersigned are convinced that the Cabinets of Paris and London, taking into serious consideration the state of Italy, will advise, in concert with Sardinia, as to the means of applying an efficacious remedy. [Signed]

"C. Cavour,

"Paris, 16th April. "De Villemarina.

The Opinione of Turin, which reached Paris on Monday, contains a second note on the affairs of Italy, presented by Count Cavour to Lord Clarendon and Count Walewski, and given to the Chambers of Turin on the 7th of May. It points out that, since 1845, the Legations have been in a state of siege under Austrian occupation. The pontifical government exists only in name. The civil as well as military government is entirely in the hands of the Austrian army. Austria desires to render her occupation permanent. The memorandum then takes a historical view of the events connected with the Legations. Three times Austria has intervened, and always against the wish of the people. France, on the occasion of the second occupation, balanced the intervention by sending troops to Ancona.

The memorandum of 1831 showed the deplorable state of the Pontifical dominions, and the same evils were brought forward in the Gaeta correspondence during the exile of Pius IX. But these representations entirely failed; the Vatican would not adopt any reforms. The Emperor Napoleon, with that perception which is his characteristic, perfectly understood and clearly indicated the state of affairs in his letter to Col. Ney, by proposing "secularization and the application of the Code Napoleon." But Rome will evidently to the last oppose these suggestions. The memorandum then points out distinctly the views of the Sardinian plenipotentiaries in the following articles, and finally argues that unless such reforms are applied the foreign occupation of the legations can never cease. The propositions are as follows:

"1. The provinces of the Roman States situated between the Po, the Adriatic, the Apeninnes, and the province of Cremona, as far as Ferrara, being left under the dominions of the Holy See, should be completely secularized and organized under the judicial, administrative, military and financial report, in a manner entirely separate and independent from the rest of the State. Still, all diplomatic and religious relations should be exclusively left under the jurisdiction of Rome.

"2. The territorial organization and administration of this apostolic principality, should be established in conformity to the one existing under Napoleon I. up to the year 1814. The Code Napoleon should be established and promulgated, with the necessary modifications concerning the relations between Church and State.

"3. A lay representative of the Pope should govern these provinces, aided by ministers and a council of state. The lay representative of the Pope should be established for not less than ten years. The ministers, councillors of state, and all subordinates, are to be appointed by the lay representative of the Pope. Their legislative power is not to be extended over religious matters or mixed legislation; and, finally, to nothing which has reference to international politics.

"4. These provinces shall contribute in a just proportion to the maintenance of the Court of Rome, and to the national debt.

"5. A native army should be formed immediately, by means of recruiting. Beyond the communal and provincial councils, a general council of state should be formed, to examine and control the finance."

This is the "memorandum" which Austria refused to recommend at the Congress at Paris, and the existence of which has been denied by some continental journals.

Disturbances occurred at Malta on the evening of the 6th ult., when a number of the Italian legion paraded through the streets of Valetta, singing songs of liberty, and using insulting expressions towards the natives. The inspector of police, while endeavoring to pacify them, was mortally stabbed, and only survived a few minutes. On the afternoon of the 8th the disturbances were renewed, and a very mutinous spirit having manifested itself, their stock of ammunition had been removed, and late in the afternoon the Hannibal ship of the line, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir Houston Stewart, was towed into Marsamusetto harbor, and took up a position in front of the Fort Manoel encampment. Nearly all the shops were closed throughout the day, and much consternation prevailed when the mail left.

Turkey, the Crimea, &c.

The Treaty—Revolt in Arabia—Review in the Crimea.—The accounts from Constantinople are to the 1st inst. The exchange of the ratifications of the treaty of the 30th of March was known in the Turkish capital. The Sultan has requested, it is said, several Anglo-French divisions to remain for some time at Constantinople. It is thought this request has been caused by the state of things in the interior of Turkey. The grand revolt which has broken out in Arabia, is the theme of general conversation; Egyptian troops are to be employed in repressing it. The journals are silent on the subject. The Smyrna papers state that the fanatics in Syria have massacred the English consular agent in Maraschi, and his family. Suleyman Pasha has put down the revolt in Magnesia, and arrested the ringleaders.

Letters to April 28 inclusive have arrived from the Crimea. A review of the whole of the British infantry went off exceedingly well on the 25th. Marshal Pelissier and many Russian officers were present. The weather was remarkably fine, but rain was required.

General Luders has authorized the cavalry division of General d'Allonville to proceed from Eupatoria to Kamiesch, by land, passing along the coast. The Tartars of Eupatoria were emigrating and establishing themselves in the Dobrutscha. A body of 9,000 English troops has embarked at Balaklava. Trade continued to improve at Kamiesch.

India.—Bombay papers to the 16th April have arrived. Profound peace continued to prevail throughout India. The Governor-General was at Calcutta. The pressure in the money market had given way. The banks had reduced their rate of interest 2 per cent. all round; and, as bullion in quantity was arriving both from England and China, a further reduction was looked for.

PERSIA.

The Treaty with the United States.—The following curious statement is from the Constantinople correspondence of the London Times:

"I told you in my last that a treaty had been concluded between the United States and Persia. It was concluded under the auspices of the Russian Mission, and its spirit is directed against England. It pretends to be a commercial treaty, and so it would be were it not for three articles. The first of these says that the Persians not being a maritime nation the Americans will be obliged, for the advantages which the treaty grants to their commerce, to have a fleet in the Persian Gulf, in order to defend Persia against the enterprises of whatever maritime nation should attack her. The second gives the Americans the right to have their ships of war in the Shatt-ul-Arab, the mouth of the Tigris; and the third of the articles allow them to have a factory at Kurnah."

"Such is then the result of our late mistaken policy with Persia. We have a competitor on the Persian gulf. The most curious thing is that the Americans are to have Kumah as a factory; one of the places which we persuaded the Turks to give up to the Persians in the Frontier Convention."—London Times, 16th.

From the late Seat of War.

The London Times correspondence makes a feature of the enormous losses sustained by the Russians in the Crimea, and argues therefrom the Russians would not have been able to sustain themselves many days longer had not peace been declared. Their losses in and around Sebastopol are set down at 86,000 men, while 100,000 perished of fatigue and disease. After all, this is no more than the allies lost.

Correspondence continues to describe Syria as in a very unsatisfactory state. The Sultan's decree of religious equality pleases neither Mussulmen nor Christians; the Moslem rebel against the concessions to the infidels, and the latter would rather pay a tax than be compelled to serve in the army. The rioters at Naplous, (Nazareth), have become alarmed at the consequences of their indiscretion, and are attempting to pacify the Pasha of Jerusalem, who threatens them with punishment. A shocking outrage has been committed at Marash, near Aleppo. An English horse-dealer having been shot and his house set on fire, his wife and two children perished in the flames. The Holy Fire was exhibited in the Church of the Sepulchre at Jerusalem, on Saturday, April 25th, and the ceremony was attended with scenes of fanatic rowdyism—the worshippers being eventually beaten out of the sanctuary by the Turkish police.

Lord Stratford de Redcliffe has applied for and obtained leave of absence. The London papers infer that he has been recalled.

Hostilities have recommenced between the Russians and Circassians.

Fifteen hundred families of Tartars are sabandoning the Crimea, and intend to colonize the Dobradsha.

The barracks at Daood, near Constantinople, have been accidentally burned down.

Further by the Africa.

The British mail steamer from Liverpool (17th ult.) arrived with four days later news on the evening of the 28th ult.; the news is of little importance. Parliament not being in session there is little of political import, excepting the repeated reports that the Conservatives are employed in weeding out the lukewarm and disaffected of their party. Very little has been said or written regarding the battles in Costa Rica. One influential journal in the Government interest, explains Lord Clarendon's letter respecting the 2,000 rifles, by saying that the British Government have quantities of old muskets on sale, and will be glad to meet with other customers beside the Costa Ricans! Italian affairs continue prominently before the public. From other parts of the continent there is nothing new.

France.—The Empress appeared in public for the first time since her accouchment, on Sunday the 11th, and on one or two subsequent days rode in a carriage, accompanied by the Emperor. She was everywhere cordially received by the crowd. The great cattle show was to open at Paris on the 26th instant (May).

Gen. de Failly succeeds Canrobert as aide-decamp to the Emperor.

Germany.—On May the 8th, the representatives of Austria and Prussia officially informed the Germanic Diet that peace was restored, and, at the same time, proposed that the Bund should express its adhesion to the treaty of peace concluded at Paris on the 30th of March. On the motion of Bavaria the subject was referred to the Committee on Eastern affairs. It is rumored that the Bund will pass a vote of thanks to Prussia and Austria, and express entire concurrence in their policy.

Italy.—The Sardinian Senate have had under discussion the Marquis d'Azeglio's motion approving the foreign policy of Ministers. The following are the terms of the motion:

"The Senate, convinced of the happy consequences which may be produced by the Treaty of Peace, both for civilization in general and for the re-establishment of order and tranquillity on the Italian peninsula, and recognizing the honorable part which the policy of this government and conduct of the Sardinian plenipotentiaries have had in these happy results, expresses its entire satisfaction."

The motion was passed unanimously, as was a vote of thanks to the army and navy.

English News.

The accounts of the Reform Club afford some insight into the business of hotel-keeping. The annual receipts amount to £15,346 from 1,238 members. The capital account is £96,000, equal to an annual rent of £4,800. Ground rent, £1,000, and taxes, £850. Mere repairs are yearly £900, whereof kettle tinkering is £70. Fuel is £644, light £932. Washing figures for £560, chimney-sweeps £25, brushes £54. Annual breakage of glass, &c., £328; wear of linen, £363. Ice is £108, "snuff and toothpicks £72," winding clocks £45, playing-cards £80. The stock of cigars appear to reach £930. The stock of wine is only £2,491, and the profit is yearly on sales £500. That such a trifling service as cleaning windows should cost 10s. per week, will give some idea of the heavy costs of a large establishment in the most insignificant items. Snuff and toothpicks cost about 1s. 2d. per member per annum. Considering that gamblers seldom play twice with the same pack of cards, the small amount of £80 for cards shows that the amount of gambling is very small in the club.

Lord Palmerston has raised quite an outcry against himself, by undertaking to prohibit the military band at Kensington Gardens on Sundays. The privilege of the music was granted some short time since by Sir Benjamin Hall, and was much appreciated by the people of the lower walks of life, who had, in fact, no other innocent recreation within their reach on the Sabbath, their only holiday. The Archbishop of Canterbury, however, wrote to Lord Palmerston, personally, requesting him to prohibit the music as "Sabbath desecration." Lord Palmerston, like a dutiful son of the Church, obeyed, although he stated that the prohibition is against his own convictions. A similar band performs every Sabbath for the Queen at Windsor Castle, but the Archbishop sees no desecration in it.

The trial of Palmer, the alleged poisoner, for the murder of his betting companion, Cook, had been going on during the three days, before the Central Criminal Court, London. The evidence, thus far, had been altogether circumstantial, and had not elicited much additional to that made public after the coroner's inquest. The most eminent counsel at the English bar are engaged on both sides; the Attorney-General, and Messrs. James Bodkin, Welsby, and Huddleston for the Crown; Sergt. Shee and Messrs. Grove, Gray, and Kenealy, for the prisoner. Lords Campbell, Alderson, and Cresswell on the bench. It is needless to say the court was crowded to its utmost capacity, and among the audience were many of the leading members of the turf.

An affray occurred between the Clare militia and the civilians at Newport (Monmouthshire) last week, for which Richard Green and William Pritchard, on the prosecution of Michael Callaghan and Stephen Connor, were brought before the magistrates. Colonel Vandeleur attended on the part of the militia. After a long trial the complaint was withdrawn. It was sworn that the soldiers called out "Ireland for the Irish."

At the fifth annual meeting of the Protestant Alliance, held yesterday, the Earl of Shaftesbury stated that, in consequence of a letter which had been addressed to the Prime Minister by the Archbishop of Canterbury, upon the subject of the performance of the military bands in the parks on Sundays, the Government would put a stop to the Sunday performance of the bands. The meeting cheered this announcement vociferously. The number of visitors in the London parks on Sunday, were as follows: Regent's Park, 92,000; Victoria Park, 85,000; Kensington Gardens, 50,252.

A curious small debt case was decided lately in Glasgow. A grocer ticketed a large quantity of sugar at "4 1-2d. per lb." A purchaser ordered the entire quantity at that price, but the grocer objected to sell more than one pound. The would-be purchaser brought an action, and the Sheriff decided that the grocer was compelled to sell the entire quantity of sugar exposed for sale at the ticketed price.

List of the Regiments Engaged in the War.—Alma, Balaklava, Inkermann, and Sebastopol—4th Qneen's Own Dragoons, 8th Hussars, 11th Hussars, 13th Light Dragoons, 17th Lancers, Grenadier Guards, Coldstream Guards, Scots Fusilier Guards, 1st battalion, 1st Foot, 4th, 7th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 23rd, 28th, 30th, 33rd, 38th, 41st, 44th, 47th, 49th, 50th, 55th, 63rd, 68th, 77th, 88th, 23rd Regiment; Rifle Brigade.

Sebastopol and Balaklava—4th Irish Dragoons, 5th Dragoon Guards, 1st Royal Dragoons, 2nd Scots Greys, 6th Inniskilling.

Sebastopol—1st King's Dragoon Guards, 6th Dragoon Guards, 10th Hussars, 12th Lancers, 2nd bat. 1st Foot, 3rd Buffs, 9th, 13th, 14th, 17th, 19th, 31st, 34th, 32th, 42nd, 46th, 56th, 57th, 62nd, 71st, 72nd, 79th, 82nd, 89th 90th, 97th.

The following Regiments have 16 companies, being four added since war was proclaimed:—The two Battalions, Royals, 3rd, 4th, 7th Fusiliers, 9th, 13th, 14th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 23rd, 28th' 38th, 31st, 33rd, 34th, 38th, 39th, 41st 42nd, 44th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 48th, 50th, 55th, 56th, 57th, 63th, 62nd, 63rd, 68th, 71st, 22nd, 76th, 79th, 82nd, 88th, 89th, 92nd, 93rd, 95th, and 97th Regiments, and Rifle Brigade.

Lord Ranelagh has addressed a letter to the members of the Carlton Club, declaring that the presence in that club of members of the present government is injurious to the interests of the Conservative party.

Congressional.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

May 26.—The Committee to investigate the assault upon Mr. Sumner was empowered to send for persons and papers. The mammoth petition from California, asking for an overland wagon road, was presented, and bills were introduced for the construction of two such roads. Mr. Pugh spoke against the admission of Kansas under the Free State Constitution.

May 27.—Mr. Trumbull gave notice that he should introduce a bill to prevent civil war and restore peace in Kansas. The bill providing for a general introduction of a uniform code of marine signals was passed. Mr. Slidell called attention to the telegraphic report of Mr. Sumner's statement before the House Committee, and explained his position in relation to the assault on that gentleman, and was followed by Messrs. Douglas and Toombs, also in explanation. Mr. Butler, who appeared in the Senate for the first time since the assault, stated that, if he had been in Washington, he should have assumed all the responsibility taken by his "gallant relative." The discussion was continued at considerable length.

May 28.—Mr. Pearce, from the Select Committee to investigate the facts attending the recent assault on Mr. Sumner, reported that precedents were only to be found in the action of the House of Representatives, the Senate never having been called upon to pronounce judgment in a similar case. The committee come to the conclusion that, although the assault was a violation of the privileges of the Senate, it is not within their jurisdiction, and the offence can only be punished by the House of which Mr. Brooks is a Member. This conclusion, the report continued, is in strict conformity with parliamentary law and the requirements of the Constitution. Therefore the Committee recommend the Senate to make complaint to the House. With this report the Committee submit a resolution that said report be accepted by the Senate, and a copy of the same, with the accompanying affidavits, be transmitted to the House of Representatives. The resolution was adopted, Mr. Toombs, of Georgia, alone voting against it. Mr. Mason spoke in defence of the President's veto of the Mississippi Improvement Bill.

House of Representatives.

May 26. The expenses on public buildings at Washington occupied some hours. Mr. Kelly of New-York was permitted to print a political speech which he could not find opportunity to deliver. A bill was reported to authorize the patents issued on the final adjudication of California land claims, prior to January 1856. Consideration postponed two weeks.

May 27.—A bill granting about 1,300,000 acres of land to Michigan for railroads was passed.

May 28.—Bills were introduced giving lands to Minnesota, Nebraska, and Kansas, for railroads; ceding the public lands to States in which they lie; for the repeal of the act establishing the Court of Claims; to grant a million acres to Louisiana for railroads, (passed, 62 to 58.)

May 19.—The house bills, giving lands to Wisconsin, Alabama, Louisiana and Michigan for railroad purposes, were passed.

A message from the President, informing Congress that he had ceased to hold intercourse with the British Minister and a despatch from Secretary Marcy to Mr. Dallas, replying to the letter of Lord Clarendon of the 30th of April, on the Enlisttment difficulty, were presented. Mr. Marcy states that the President is much gratified at the conciliatory spirit of the letter of Lord Clarendon, and by the desire expressed to adjust existing differences, and preserve and strengthen the friendly relations between the two countries. The disclaimer of any intention to violate the laws of the United States, and the expression of regret that, contrary to the intention and direction of the British government, there has been such infringement, are satisfactory, and the main complaint, so far as respects her Majesty's government, is thus removed; but the President extremely regrets that he can not concur with Lord Clarendon in the opinion that Mr. Crampton and the Consuls at New-York, Philadelphia and Cincinnati are not implicated in these proceedings. Regarding those who have no connection with this government he has nothing to ask of her Majesty's government; but in the cases of the individuals mentioned, he deems it proper that their relations with this government should cease. In taking this step, however, he does intend to cause any interruption of the diplomatic relations between the United States and Great Britain; but on the contrary is desirous of keeping the two countries upon a friendly footing. Mr. Crampton's withdrawal was asked expressly on the ground that his connection with the elistments had rendered him an unacceptable representative of her Britannic Majesty near this government; and for the same reason, the withdrawal of the Consuls named was likewise requested. These officers are all, as this government still believes, implicated in the violation of the laws of the United States, contrary to the reiterated instructions of their own government. This complicity did not rest solely on the testimony of Strobel and Hertz, but on original letters of Mr. Crampton and others. The despatch then proceeds to detail at length the evidence against the dismissed Minister and Consuls. In the course of the discussion which followed the reading of the documents, General Cass said that no pretext for war could arrise out of the dismissal of Mr. Crampton, unless England was determined to go to war. In the House the Territorial Committee made a report in favor of admitting Kansas into the Union with the Topeka constitution. The Sumner committee asked for and obtained leave to report at any time when the House is in Session. Houses adjourned till Monday.

May 29.—The Crampton Message was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Mr. Grow reported a proposition to admit Kansas under her free constitution. Consideration postponed to the 25th of June. Adjourned to Monday.

Mr. Sumner.

The special Washington correspondent of the Times, under date 27th ult., says—"The scene in the Senate to-day was exciting. Senator Wilson, in defending Senator Sumner, said that the latter was stricken down by a brutal, murderous, and cowardly assault. Butler—(sotto voce)—"You are a liar!" He subsequently retracted the words. Order was called, and the majority soon choked of the debate to Yeas and Nays—every administration man north and south, excepting Mr. Toombs, voting aye. Great excitement succeeded. Many of the southern men were seen in excited conversation. The rumor was soon quite current that Messrs. Wilson and Wade would be assaulted after the adjournment, but about a dozen of their friends took care to be armed, and peace was preserved. It is rumored to-night that Senator Wilson is to be challenged by Brooks.

The House Committee of Investigation waited on Mr. Sumner on Monday, 26th, and took his testimony with regard to the assault.

The following is the statement of Mr. Sumner, under oath:

"I attended the Senate as usual on Thursday, the 22d of May. After some formal business, a message was received from the House of Representatives, announcing the death of a member of that body from Missouri. This was followed by a brief tribute to the deceased from Mr. Geyer of Missouri, when according to usage and out of respect for the deceased, the Senate at once adjourned. Instead of leaving the senate chamber with the other senators, on the adjournment, I continued in my seat, occupied with my pen, and while thus intent, in order to be in season for the mail, which was soon to close, I was approached by several persons, who desired to converse with me, but I answered them promptly and briefly, excusing myself for the reason that I was much engaged. When the last of these persons left me, I drew my arm-chair close to my desk, and with my legs under the desk continued writing. My attention at this time was so entirely drawn from all other subjects, that though there must have been many persons in the Senate, I saw nobody. While thus intent, with my head bent over my writing, I was addressed by a person who approached the front of my desk. I was so entirely absorbed, that I was not aware of his presence till I heard my name pronounced. As I looked up with pen in hand, I saw a tall man, whose countenance was not familiar, standing directly over me, and at the same moment caught the words: 'I have read your speech twice carefully over; it is a libel on South Carolina, and Mr. Butler, who is a relative of mine.' While these words were still passing from his lips, he commenced a succession of blows with a heavy cane, on my bare head, by the first of which I was stunned and lost my sight. I saw no longer my assailant, nor any other object or person in the room. What I did afterward was done almost unconsciously, acting under the instincts of self-defence. With head already bent down, I rose from my seat, wrenched up my desk which was screwed to the floor, and then pressing forward while my assailant continued the blows. I had no other consciousness till I found myself ten feet forward in front of my desk, lying on the floor of the Senate, with my bleeding head supported on the knee of a gentleman whom I soon recognized by voice and manner as Mr. Morgan of New-York. Other persons there were about me, offering me friendly assistance, but I did not recognize any of them. Others there were at a distance, looking on, but offering no assistance, of whom I recognized only Mr. Douglas of Illinois, Mr. Toombs of Georgia, and I thought also my assailant standing between them. I was helped from the floor and conducted into the lobby of the Senate, where I was placed upon a sofa. Of those who helped me here I have no recollection. As I entered the lobby I recognized Mr. Slidell of Louisiana, who retreated, but I recognized no one else till I felt a friendly grasp of the hand, which seemed to come from Mr. Campbell of Ohio. I have a vague impression that Mr. Bright, President of the Senate, spoke to me while I was on the floor of the Senate or in the lobby. I make this statement in answer to the interrogatory of the committee, and offer it as presenting completely all my recollections of the assault and of the attending circumstances, whether immediately before or immediately after. I desire to add, that besides the words I have given, as uttered by my assailant, I have an indistinct recollection of the words "old man;" but these are so enveloped in the mist which ensued from the first blow, that I am not sure whether they were uttered or not."

On the cross-examination of Mr. Sumner, he stated that he was entirely without arms of any kind, and that he had no notice or warning of any kind, direct or indirect, of this assault.

In answer to a cross-question, Mr. Sumner replied that what he had said of Mr. Butler was strictly responsive to Mr. Butler's speeches, and according to the usages of parliamentary debate.

American News.

The following exhibits the electoral vote of the several States, distinguishing between the slave and free States:

SLAVE STATES.		FREE STATES.
Virginia	15	Maine	8
North Carolina	10	Mew Hampshire	5
South Carolina	8	Vermont	5
Georgia	10	Massachusetts	13
Alabama	9	Rhode Island	4
Mississippi	7	Connecticut	6
Louisiana	6	New Jersey	7
Missouri	9	Pennsylvania	27
Delaware	3	California	4
Texas	4	New York	35
Arkansas	4	Ohio	23
Florida	3	Indiana	13
Maryland	8	Illinois	11
Kentucky	12	Michigan	6
Tennessee	12	Iowa	1
		Wisconsin	5
Total	120	Total	176

Hon. Samuel Phillips Prescott Fay died at his residence, in Cambridge, on the 17th ult., at the advanced age of 78 years. Judge Fay was born in Concord, Mass., on the 10th of January 1778, and graduated at Harvard College in 1798. Soon after he graduated he received a captain's commission in the American Army, and joined the forces under the command of General Hamilton, stationed at Oxford, Mass., where he remained in service for a brief period. On the 1st May, 1821, he was appointed Judge of probate for Middlesex County, and performed the duties of the office until March last, a period of about thirty-five years. He was a member of the Governor's Council in 1818 and 1819, and of the Convention for revising the Constitution of Massachusetts in 1820. He was elected a member of the Board of Overseers of Harvard College in 1824, which office he held until the new organization of the Board in 1852.

Chicago seems likely to become a second Amsterdam. The city is built so little above the level of the lake that a large part of it is in the process of being raised to secure better drainage. A company has lately purchased a tract of 150 acres, at $4,000 per acre, through which will be constructed seven canals, each 100 feet in width, with streets 80 feet in width, with streets 80 feet in width between the canals, each street to be provided with railroad tracks. This improvement will give great increase to the water front of the city, and great facility for the expeditious shipment of landing goods.

Upward of 14,000 land warrants, covering 1,700,000 acres, were issued in April. The whole number issued under the law of 1855 is 227,000 requiring upwards of 15,000,000 acres.

The Canadian Agriculturist publishes some statistics upon fencing in Canada, by which it appears that according to the last census there are in Upper Canada 3,697.724 acres under cultivation. Leaving out wood land, much of which is fenced, and assuming a cost of only $8 an acre for fencing, which is a moderate calculation, and it appears that the cost of fencing Upper Canada alone, is about thirty million dollars; and within twenty-five years, for new fences and repairs, there will be a necessity of farmers increasing an expense of $50.000,000.

The St. Louis Republic of the 28th, publishes the constitution of the State of Deseret recently formed and ratified by the people in general Convention at Salt Lake City April 6th. Is is exceedingly brief and plain, and says nothing about slavery. It announces the free toleration of all religions, and does not refer to polymany. A memorial was adopted asking admission to the Union, and George Smith and John Taylor were appointed delegates to present it to Congress.

The Revised Code of North Carolina declares, that if a person fight a duel, and either of the parties shall be killed, the survivor, on conviction, shall suffer death, and the aiders and abetters shall be considered accessories before the fact. If no death shall ensue, all parties shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and, on conviction, be punished accordingly, and moreover be ineligible to any office in the State.

The students of the University of Virginia have held a meeting, and passed strong resolutions in favor of the course pursued by Mr. Brooks in the Sumner affair. They not only returned their thanks to the chivalrous Carolinian, as they call Mr. Brooks, for the gallant manner in which he defended the rights of the South, but voted him a handsome cane to replace the one he broke in so good a cause.

A large number of citizens convened in Columbus S. C., on the 27th ult., in pursuance of a call for a meeting to sustain Mr. Brooks, in view of his recent defence of the rights of the South. Several addresses were made, and strong resolutions in approval of the course of Mr. Brooks were adopted.

The Columbia (S. C.) Banner learns that "Some of the gentlemen of Charleston have provided a suitable present, in the shape of a cane, to be given to Mr. Brooks, to show their appreciation of his late act of 'hiding' the Abolition Senator Sumner. It is to bear the inscription, 'Hit him again.'

We regret to learn, says the Vickburgh Whig, that the levee near the mouth of the Yazoo Pass, has given way, and that a flood of water is pouring into the valley of the Yazoo River. The damage done to planters in the valley must be immense.

It is stated that Capt. Darling, doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, was knocked down Saturday night by Senator Bright for insulting language. An effort, it is expected, will be made to expel Darling from the doorkeepership.

A lumber raft, while descending the Mississippi River last week, struck one of the piers of Rock Island bridge, and was shattered to pieces. Five of the crew were drowned. That bridge will have to come down.

It is said that one hundred clergymen have, within a short period, seceded from the ministry and communion of the English Church to join that of Rome—a number unparalleled since the days of Cranmer.

The Treasury Department commenced the payment of the Texas debt, June 3d, with a net amount on hand subject to draft of $26,228,000, of which $12,808,000 are in New-York.

Nine persons have been arrested and committed, at Detroit, for passing, or having in their possession, counterfeit bills on the City Bank of Montreal, and large quantites of base coin.

The Fairfield, Iowa, Ledger says: We saw a bull-snake on Monday last, which had been killed about a mile east of Fairfield, which measured seven feet and a half in length.

A freesoil writer from Kansas alleges that thirty of the young men from Alabama, taken to Kansas by Major Buford, have deserted him and joined the free State party. (?)

From Pittsburg under date 27th ult. we learn that the river is in good navigable condition for medium class boats. Freights low. Large boats are lying up for the season.

The Emigrant train which left Albany on the 27th, took 700 Mormon emigrants for Salt Lake City. 427 of them were Welsh, and the balance English and Scotch.

The population of Texas has increased, according to the very lowest calculations, 400 per cent. in ten years—a circumstance almost unprecedented in the South.

The Cleveland, Ohio, Journal says that there are over fifty jobbing houses in that city, and that their annual sales amount to over $20,000,000 annually.

The General Land Office has decided that land warrants issued under the act of March 2, 1852, and located, but not pre-empted, are assignable.

Richard Harrison, a prominent citizen of Tarboro, N. C., died last week. His property was estimated at about half a million.

The salaries of teachers and school expenses of Cincinnati for the last three months, amount to $14,673.

Important from Nicaragua and California.

The telegraph from New Orleans, date 27th, states that the steamer Granada, from Havana, (24th,) had arrived with two weeks' later news from Central America. It is reported that the Costa Ricans had shipped 300 wounded from San Juan del Sur, and that their army had retreated from Nicaragua by land. The Costa Ricans say they were deceived in regard to the feeling of the people of Nicaragua towards Walker, and expected to be received with open arms. They were very indignant at the false representations that were made to them on the subject. It is confirmed that the loss of the Costa Ricans at the battle of Rivas, in killed and wounded, amounted to 650, and that of Walker's army to about 100.

California dates by the Granada are to the 5th ult. The chief feature of the news is as follows:—In Mariposa county a party of Americans had murdered twenty Mexicans and Chilians, the pretext being that some Americans had been murdered by Chilians. The Americans had ordered all the Chinese, Peruvians, Chilians and Mexicans to leave the country.

The war against the Indians in Oregon and Washington territories was being prosecuted with vigor, and the Indians had met with several defeats.

The volunteers against the Indians complain badly of lack of rations and neglect in the commissariat department.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, May 16, 1856.

The most interesting event of the day is the amnesty to all political offenders except those bad boys who made their escape to America. To O'Brien, Martin, and O'Doherty, the intelligence will be acceptable, and I presume all three will hasten to avail themselves of their restored right to dwell in their own land. It should be gratifying to us Irishmen that the English Chartists are placed in the same category with our distinguished countrymen. It is doubtful, however, whether Frost, Jones, or Williams will revisit England. The two last, as you are aware, are settled in Van Dieman's land, and are in tolerably good circumstances. Williams, having been a miner in Wales, turned his skill to account in Tasmania, and discovered there several valuable coal mines, thereby not only serving himself, but proving a benefactor to the colony. Jones is the proprietor of a tavern within a few miles of Launceston, on the main road, and a short time since was put forward as a candidate for the Legislative Council. Frost is with you in New-York, an honored exile, as he has ever been the consistent advocate of freedom. There are yet remaining, I think, in Van Dieman's Land, about a dozen men—English and Irish—who were transported for their connection either with the Chartist movement of 1848, or the Irish insurrectionary proceedings of the same year. Among these are Dowling, the artist; Cuffey, the tailor; Walsh, from Waterford; Lyons, from Cork, and several others whose names I do not remember. The "crimes" of these men are the same as those of Smith O'Brien, or Williams, and it would therefore be obviously unjust to except them from the benefit of the amnesty.

The announcement of the amnesty afforded a convenient opportunity for the repetition of the base slander about the parole; and the English Government, and the English press, and the servile copyists of the latter of the Irish press, have taken advantage of it to the fullest extent. What matters it that neither you, Mitchel, nor McManus have, directly or indirectly, intimated a desire to return to Ireland?—the British Government mean not alone to exclude you from your country, but as far as in them lies to damage your reputations. Hence the "breach of parole."

A word, now, upon this subject; for I feel it is one upon which I am entitled to speak with a certain degree of authority. Terence Bellew McManus is excluded from the benefit of the amnesty on the ground of violation of parole. Well, it is notorious to all in the least acquainted with the matter, and to every inhabitant of Van Dieman's Land, that for several months previous to his escape, McManus had not been subject to parole at all. He had been a prisoner at hard labor at Port Arthur. Upon his release from there, he was forwarded to Launceston, whither the Comptroller-General, Hampton, followed him in all haste. Before the arrival, however, of the latter, and before any renewel of parole had taken place, McManus was safely on board a vessel bound for California. Now, a man cannot break a promise which he has not made; a man cannot violate a pledge which he has not given. Nevertheless, McManus is excluded from the amnesty because, as my Lord Palmerston tells us, he "violated parole."

Ex uno disce omnes—from the shameless mendacity of the Ministry respecting one case, let the public judge of the amount of credence to be attached to his statements regarding the others. No, no, your crime in the eye of the British Ministry is not "breach of parole"—which is a lying pretext—but that you should have defied his authority by escaping, and taken refuge, above all places in the world, in America. That country whose growing greatness he so much dreads.

During my sojourn in Tasmania I met every participator in your escape, and learned every particular connected with it. Your friends in that country are entirely satisfied with the manner of its accomplishment; your enemies, whether at the press or elsewhere, have never cast the slightest imputation on your honor; while several Government officials even, with whom I have conversed, have declared that you "satisfied every parole obligation." Well do I remember, on your arrival in New-York, with what eagerness you invited the judgment not only of friends, but of the public, on your escape; how your mind was not satisfied till your case had been submitted to a committee of American and Irish gentlemen of highest characters and positions in New-York; and how, had not their decision been unanimous in your favor, you stood prepared promptly to return to your place of exile; and thus by a sacrifice, unparalleled in history, save by that of Regulus of old, vindicate your integrity and your fame.

Of the escape of John Mitchel I was an eye-witness. Attended by a single friend, he entered the office of his police magistrate, and there formally surrendered his parole. In the office, and beside the door, there were, besides the magistrate, three constables, all armed, or with guns, pistols, and bayonets at hand. Mitchel, in a bold and clear voice, twice informed the magistrate of the object of his visit. He was about repeating it a third time, when his friend said—"Mitchel, you've done your duty—away." It was only at that moment the magistrate seemed to recover his presence of mind—but too late—the exile was mounted and off. But it has been argued, "Bribery was used." Certainly, it was; but to the extent only of allowing the exile a fair chance of escape from the office. On ordinary occasions the police force in and around the office amounted to from twelve to fourteen men—a force which it would have been madness for Mitchel and his friend to attempt to cope with. On the occasion of which I speak, the force was reduced to three constables with the magistrate—all of whom, it is to be presumed, were prepared to do their duty. If from timidity—I believe the true cause—or want of presence of mind, the magistrate, surrounded as he was by a force numerically twice superior to that of the prisoner, failed to perform his duty, assuredly the blame cannot be attributed to the prisoner. The undertaking was a desperate one, and God willed that it should succeed; but the chances were at least even that it would have failed. That Mitchel was conscious of this, is apparent from a couple of extracts which I will give you from a note addressed by him, on the morning of the escape, to P. J. Smyth. He says:

"As we are to part to-day, to pursue our several roads, and to encounter our respective adventures; and as we may never meet again in the world," &c.

"Again, he says:

"This enterprise indeed may fail, as the enterprise of two months ago failed."

He concludes as follows:

"However it may go, my dear fellow, take my most affectionate adieu. If I am retaken, there is an end of me. Remember me warmly and fraternally to these two—Meagher and Reilly."

Good God! when I think of these events; when I reflect upon the incredible hardships, privations, and anguish of mind, consequent upon repeated disappointments, which Mitchel was doomed to suffer for six weeks after his escape from the police-office, and before he was enabled to get on board a ship—his night-journeys through forest and morass, and his ever-constant risk of capture, with the certainty in such an event of being sent to an ignominious death; when I recall the anxiety of his friends during this period, and, above all, the fear which hung around his widowed household—my blood boils to think that men should be found so base, so mean, so cowardly; so malignant, and so treacherous in their malignity; so false, and so shameless in their falsehood, as to impute to him, even in thought, an act of dishonor.

The chivalrous character of Mitchel's escape was recognised and applauded by all classes of Tasmanian society. Even the Hobart Town Advertiser, the organ of Sir W. Denison, and conducted in a great measure by him, avowed that in the manner of his escape, Mitchel had manifested a "chivalrous regard for his honor."

Before leaving Tasmania, Smith O'Brien in his reply to the Launceston address, and surrounded by Magistrates and Members of Council, declared that Mitchel had fulfilled "every parole obligation." Again at the Melbourne banquet he said,—"Mitchel broke no parole. I was consulted respecting the plan of his escape, and I sanctioned and counselled it. If, therefore, Mitchel is guilty of a breach of parole, so, too, am I." On the same occasion, John Macnamara, of Sydney, spoke as follows:—"It had been for a long time a darling object with me to rescue these gentlemen from their cruel situation. I have always, however, found one great obstacle to interpose, their scrupulous—in my mind their over scrupulous—regard for the parole."

Yes, had it not been for this scrupulous regard for your paroles, there is none of you who might not have walked out of the island a week after you landed. There would have been no occasion then for you or Mitchel to have risked your lives and to have endured incredible hardships in the effort to escape; no occasion for Smyth to have spent six months in Van Diemen's Land, toiling, planning, riding from district to district—and all this in order to satisfy the prisoner's own scruples, and deprive his enemies of the opportunity of charging him with a breach of faith. But no matter how or in what manner that escape had been accomplished, the same cry of "breach of parole" would have been raised. The escape itself, and the defiance to British authority which it involves, there is the crime, there the offence.

I find there are a few amiable and sentimental people—people of that class who care not how many martyrs there may be to Irish patriotism, provided they themselves be not of the number—and ignorant of the regulations of a penal colony, who argue solemnly and coolly in this wise:—They say, the acceptance by the Government of your parole was a favor; that therefore the parole should be interpreted strictly according to its spirit, and that, consequently, it was a thing which could not by possibility be honorably evaded or gotten rid of. Now these people proceed altogether upon a false assumption. So far from this parole transaction being a favor, it was the very reverse. So far from placing the Irish State Prisoners in a better position than the ordinary convicts, it placed them in a worse. The common ticket-of-leave-holders are privileged to range from district to district over the entire island, and to reside wheresoever they please, free from any parole obligation. The Irish exiles, in exchange for their paroles, were limited to a certain defined district, beyond which they could not stir without being arrested. The common ticket-of-leave-holders escape from the island in large numbers, and with but little difficulty; the Irish exiles were debarred from escaping, first, by the parole, and next by the district limits. It is thus clear that your position under parole as ticket-of-leave holders within a limited district, was much worse than that of the ordinary convicts, under no parole and subject to no district restrictions. But it may be said, Government might have placed these Irish exiles in solitary confinement, as they did O'Brien, and have murdered them by degrees, as they had well nigh murdered O'Brien. To have done this with all of them, would, if at all practicable, which I doubt, have occasioned the Government much trouble, much expense, and would moreover have outraged public feeling. By granting a limited ticket of leave subject to parole, all this was avoided, Government got credit for vast clemency, and Irish State prisoners were very ingeniously made to be their own jailers in Van Dieman's Land.

The letter of this parole, and, fairly and equally interpreted, its spirit, too, is, that so long as the party held it, he should not escape. Government, however, reserved to itself the right of withdrawing the parole at any time, without notice; the same right, of course, belonged to the prisoners. You and Mitchel exercised this right, and placed yourselves fairly in the power—if they had the pluck—to take you. They did not do so, and, therefore, you discharged your paroles, and whoever says to the contrary, lies.

This letter has extended to such immoderate length, that I must defer till next opportunity some other remarks on this subject.

I mean to show, that while under circumstances of great provocation, the Irish Exiles displayed a scrupulous regard for their paroles, the Government of Sir W. Denison, in repeated instances, violated the letter and spirit of that contract. Yes, breaches of parole there have been, but the delinquents are not Irish Exiles, but those worthy representatives of the British Government, Sir W. Denison, late Lieutenant-Governor of Van Dieman's Land, and Hampton, ex-Comptroller-General of Convicts, and himself a convicted defrauder and embezzler, who, to escape the punishment due to his crimes, had, by last accounts, absconded, and fled the country where, for years, he has plundered and oppressed.

I clip the following from the Freeman's Journal. It is pleasing to find that I do not stand alone in a determination to crush and trample in the earth this infamous lie:

To the Editor of the Freeman.

DUBLIN, May 12.

DEAR SIR—As Lord Palmerston has assigned as a reason for excepting from the political amnesty granted to Smith O'Brien and the Chartists a breach of parole by the Irish prisoners who escaped to America, will you allow me briefly to put this matter correctly before the public.

There are but three of the Irish State prisoners now in America—viz., T. B. M'Manus, T. F. Meagher, and John Mitchel.

M'Manus, at the time of his escape, was not subject to parole at all. Therefore the imputation cannot rest upon him.

Public political enemies, and others actuated by personal malignity, have endeavored to affix a stain upon Mr. Mitchel. I can only say, that in Australia, where the facts connected with Mitchel's escape are truly known, its honorable nature has never been questioned. Moreover, the Hobart Town Advertiser, the organ of Sir W. Denison, commenting, at the time, upon Mitchel's escape, pronounced the mode in which it was accomplished "chivalrous."

The manner of Meagher's escape has been equally unquestioned in Australia.

I deny that either of them violated parole obligations. But, did space permit, I could adduce twenty instances in proof that the government of Sir W. Denison violated the spirit of parole with them. Enough, however; I pronounce the charge of breach of parole a falsehood, and send you my name and address.

W.

I am anxious to see the effect which Lord Clarendon's last dispatch upon the Enlistment Question will produce in America. His lordship deems the simple word of a British Consul more than sufficient to outweigh the oaths of any number of American citizens! Complimentary that to the Sovereigns! Apropos of this subject, I find the following in a contemporary:—

THE AMERICAN ENLISTMENT QUESTION.—We commend the following clause, from an old act of parliament, to the attention of Lord Clarendon. It lays down the doctrine as to the rights of foreign enlistment in a way more conclusive than he is likely to find it elsewhere, and "hoists the engineer with his own petard:—

"II. Geo. II. chap. 7—From the 1st of May, 1735, if any subject shall within this kingdom enlist or enter himself, or shall go out of the same beyond the seas and enlist, or with an intent, or in order to enlist or enter himself as a non-commissioned officer or private soldier in any foreign service, or shall within this kingdom enlist or persuade, prevail, or entice, or procure any subject of his Majesty to enlist or enter himself, or shall hire or retain any subject of the king's with an intent to cause him to be enlisted, or to enter himself, or persuade or procure any subject to go beyond seas, or embark with an intent, or in order to be enlisted, or to enter himself as a non-commissioned officer or private soldier in any foreign service aforesaid, without license of his Majesty under his sign manual, or of the chief governors of this kingdom, under their hands and seals; or if any person shall carry away by force out of this kingdom with any intent in order to persuade, prevail on, cause or compel such person to enlist or enter himself as a non-commissioned officer, &c., in such foreign service, the offender on conviction shall be guilty of felony, and suffer as such without benefit of clergy or of the state."

"9 Ann chap. 6—Persons who shall harbor, conceal, relieve, entertain, or transport beyond seas any such offenders, or shall be aiding, abetting, or assisting therein, knowing them to be guilty of such offences, or any of them, shall be deemed felons, and suffer death as such without benefit of clergy or of the said state, and may be tried for the said felony, though the principal be not convicted or outlawed. No Papist or reputed Papist shall be a juror on the trial of any of the said offenders, and the prosecutor for the crown may challenge them as such, which shall be a principal challenge, and be allowed by the judge. When any offence against this act shall be committed out of the kingdom, it may be laid and tried in any county in Ireland Provided if any person be enlisted or enticed or inveighed without such license first had, shall within fourteen days of such enlisting or agreement, or if any person so carried away by force to the intent aforesaid shall, within two months after his return to this kingdom, voluntarily discover upon oath to any justice of the peace the person by whom he was so enlisted, &c., so as he may be apprehended and convicted, such discoverer shall be indemnified from all penalties for such offence."

A few days ago there was a great Tenant Right meeting in Navan, Co. Meath, followed by a banquet. There were speeches, resolutions, petitions, and loud cheers. The report occupies six columns of the Freeman, hence the amount of good effected must have been great. The same day there was an election for the County Longford. Mr. Hughes, the eminent Catholic lawyer was elected without opposition, for the plain purpose—as was avowed by his seconder, your old friend, A. R. Stritch—to qualify him for a seat on the bench. Such is Ireland. I will go to the theatre to-night and see Helen Fawcett, and, enchanted by her glorious presence, forget for the time that I live in, and belong to, an enslaved and degraded land. KILMAINHAM.

At a numerously attended meeting of the inhabitants of Mullingar, held in the court-house of that town, it was unanimously resolved to adopt the Towns' Improvement (Ireland) Act, 1854, in Mullingar. The court was thronged by the inhabitants of the town and suburbs, and the liveliest interest was manifested in the proceedings.

Irish News.

A correspondent of the Nation (7th May,) conveys the following painful intelligence :—"An institution for the instruction of deaf and dumb children was founded at Strabane by public subscription, and placed under the care of a committee of ladies. This institution from very insignificant beginnings, had risen through the attention of the chief resident patroness, Miss Humphreys, to be one which would reflect credit on any provincial town in the kingdom. It was progressing, and its effects had won for it the esteem and support of a large and discerning community. A school-room and dwelling for the pupils, male and female. The teacher and master and matron had been evicted. The place, situated on the direct road to Londonderry, surrounded with its pretty gardens, had become unattractive. To-day, at the instant I write, it is a scene of heart-rending and melancholy interest. The fine building is a heap of black and smouldering ruins, from which have been disinterred the blackened and disfigured remains of six of its unhappy inmates. The names of the little victims are James Lafferty, Ellen Walker, Ellen Deveny, Daniel Doherty, John Brannon, and Andrew Patton. A jury has been empannelled by the district coroner, Mr. Hamilton. They are now proceeding with the investigation, and the evidence of the teacher, Mr. Downing, would go to prove that the fire, if not accidental, originated without his knowledge. He had retired to rest at 12 o'clock. About one or half-past one he was awoke by the cries of a male servant in his employment as nurse. He left the sleeping apartment, and ran towards the place from which the cries proceeded on towards the kitchen, attracted by light which appeared under the door. He burst it open and discovered that it was in flames. His next effort was to liberate the children. The master, though he had keys in his hand, could not apply the right one, and, failing in his effort to burst in the door, Downing went to procure a ladder with which to effect his entrance by the window. There was no ladder near the school-room, save that belonging to the Court-house, which building is within some hundred yards of the scene. When he had aroused the Court-house keeper, he found the ladder too great for their united strength, and from this he went to the sexton of the church to procure the one kept for lighting and cleaning it. Meanwhile the flames proceeded in their fearful and destructive course, the timbers of the floors ignited, and the roof and windows emitted volumes of smoke. The six children who are dead, and the one missing are, if I am rightly informed, not the only victims, for several of those who have been brought out are suffering from injuries and fright.

A meeting of the general committee of the Irish Institution was held on Tuesday last, the 6th, at the new Picture Gallery in Lower Baggot street, being its first meeting in this building, so liberally placed at the disposal of the institution by the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert until the completion of the National Picture Gallery of Ireland. The members of the committee present were :—The Lord Chancellor (in the chair), Lord Talbot de Malahide, Sir C. M. O'Loghlen, Cart, Q. C.; John Barton, Thomas Hutton, D. L.; J. Huband Smith, John Hogan, John E. Pigot, Robert Callwell, George F. Mulvany, R. H. A.; J. Calvert Stronge, Wm. Jenkins, L. L. D.; Wm. Brocas, R. H. A.; Sergeant Berwick, Q. C. The Chancellor read a letter from his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, proposing to lend two pictures, from his collection at Castle Howard, for the ensuing exhibition. A list was read of several proprietors of works of art who had also promised to lend pictures, and the honorary secretaries were directed to write to several others with a view to obtaining a good collection for that purpose. The committee of instruction were also instructed to make every exertion to obtain pictures for the exhibition, so as to open it as early as possible in the ensuing month. So far the committee have just reason to congratulate themselves on the success that has attended their efforts for the establishment of a National Gallery. Two special acts of parliament have been passed, and two sums of £3,000 each granted by the government, which (with the sum of about £5,000, the Dargan Fund, allocated to that purpose also), are estimated will be sufficient for the erection of a handsome and commodious building on Leinster Lawn—to be the National Gallery of Ireland. Pending its erection, it but remains for proprietors of works of art occasionally to lend a few valuable pictures, so as to form a good collection in the new picture gallery for the purposes of study and exhibition, and thus contribute to art education, and keep alive public attention until the committee are in a position to take possession of the National Gallery.

The Kerry Post tells the following story in a notice of the May fair of Milltown :—A man from Killarney bought a pig at this fair for £1 9s 6d, paid for it, and buyer and seller parted naturally pleased. Having put his purchase into a yard for safe keeping, the man proceeded to add to his stock by the purchase of a cow, and having selected one and arranged the preliminaries, when about to pay for her, discovered, to his horror, that he had paid the seller of the pig a five pound note in lieu of one. He looked for him in vain; the man had gone from the fair, and there was no clue to his whereabouts; but a lucky thought came to the aid of the "man from the lakes"—he liberated the pig from her confinement, concluding she would be likely to "face home"—and though the pace was somewhat lower, he followed the "bonniveen" with all the ardor of a fox chase. Slowly and anxiously he plodded on, hoping each cabin might be the wished for finale to his hunt; but on she led him for nine long miles to Cromane, where, as he had anticipated, she walked into her former domicile, with a confident air and hungry grunt. Her re-appearance was quickly accounted for by the pig master, who told his story, and was ot once handed the £5 note of the value of which the Cromane man was only then made acquainted.

A new church is about to be built at Kenmare, county Kerry, from a design of J. Welland, Esq., Architect to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, whose skill and architectural taste on this style of building (so appropriate to Christian worship) is evident from the great improvement which has taken place in church building throughout the country since that gentleman has become architect to the Commissioners. The site is well chosen, on the elevated ground opposite to the Marquis of Lansdowne's "nursery garden." It commands an extensive view from the sea, as well as from the approaches to the town from Killarney and Glengarriff. It will add much to the appearance of the town, and is much more convenient to the congregation than the old church, which is a considerable distance from it. The design is to be of the early Gothic. The spire will be 90 feet high, terminating with a cross and copper vane. W. Murphy, builder, of Bantry, is the contractor. A number of quarrymen, stone-cutters, and other workmen, are to be immediately employed.

Emigration from Liverpool.—The total number of emigrants who have taken steerage passages in Liverpool ships for all foreign ports during the month of April has been 13,759, against 27,935, or more than double the number in the corresponding month of 1852, and against 15,873, or 2,114 less than in the month of April, 1855. To the United States there were 27 ships, carrying 12,414 steerage and 103 cabin passengers. Of the former, 394 were English, 325 Scotch, 7,848 Irish, and 298 foreigners. To Canada there were 587 steerage passengers and one cabin passenger, the former including 235 English, 74 Scotch, 246 Irish, and 32 foreigners. To the Australian colonies there have only been two departures—both for Melbourne; a less number in one month than has been known for several years. They were the James Baines, conveying 449 steerage and 62 cabin passengers; and the Mindora, conveying 309 steerage and 5 cabin passengers. The total number of persons who have proceeded to Australia during the month was therefore only 67 cabin and 758 steerage, of which latter class 421 were English, 33 Scotch, 215 Irish, and 89 foreigners. A paragraph in the supplement notifies the departure to-morrow of the "Black-Ball" mail ship Lightning.

The Westmeath Guardian says :—The state of our country begins to assume an alarming aspect. One offence succeeds another with fearful rapidity. Whilst the authorities are busily engaged in trying to discover a clue to the perpetrators of the barburous murder of Mrs. Kelly in one quarter, an outrage against the tranquillity of the country is committed in another. An armed party has attacked the house of a respectable farmer near Clonmellon, demanding arms. Although the ruffians succeeded in effecting an entrance, his son and servant defended themselves heroically, and succeeded not only in retaining the gun, for the possession of which the attack was made, but beat the assailants off the premises, pursuing them to a considerable distance. The heavy traces of blood which marked their retreat gave abundant proof that satisfaction had been obtained on the persons of the offenders. Remembering the uses to which fire-arms have been so recently applied both in Cavan and Westmeath, we are convinced it is high time the law should be strictly enforced against all persons having them in their possession without a proper license.

The May fair of Ballinasloe, which was looked forward to with great interest, has passed off with considerable eclat. Top lots were sold at good prices, as is the case in every fair; but for inferior cattle there were few offers. The Leinster buyers held over with the expectation of there being a decline, as sellers were supposed to be asking too much. A top lot of heifers was sold at £15, but the average of fair conditioned animals is from £12 to £10. The fairs of Ballinasloe are increasing in importance. When the new January fair, which is to be a two day one, is established, it will tend much to increase the wants of the Leinster and metropolitan buyers. About 150 of the leading gentry and nobility of the west have signed a memorial to the Earl of Clancarty, requesting his lordship to take out a patent for this fair, and it is understood that next October fair will be followed by one in January.

On "Irish pauper removals" the Waterford Chronicle says :—"At the last meeting of our Board of Guardians we had another strong example of the manner in which the English Boards of Guardians treat the poor Irish, who, after spending numbers of years to advance English industry and enterprise, become, by the visitation of Divine Providence unable, through sickness, or other causes, to help themselves; and when they come to that sad state they are, without any pity, sent—no, not sent, but driven from those that they have served, and sent into a part of a country where, although they may have been born there, they know just as much of, as they do of Kamschatka.

For the year ended 29th September, 1855, the amount expended on the poor in maintenance in Dublin (north union) was 18,047 5s. 9d.; out relief, £554 8s. 9d.; salaries and rations of officers, £2,923 5s. 8d.: all other expenses, £4,505 4s. 3d.—Total, £27,027 14s. 5d. Number of persons relieved in-door, 9,684; out-door, 15,138. Amount of valuation, £312,551 7s. 5d.; poundage rate, 1s. 8¼d. In the south-union, maintenance, £26,917 17s. 10d.; out-relief, £1,990 0s. 2½d.; salaries and rations of officers, £3,402 3s. 9d.; all other expenses, £8,143 16s. 1d.—Total, £40,454 16s. 10½d.; number of persons relieved in-door, 14,375; out-door, 8,922; amount of valuation, £479,059; poundage rate, 1s. 8½d.

We have much pleasure in stating, says the Cork Examiner, that a ship of the line has been nominated to hoist an Admiral's flag in our port, and that in future we may expect to see at least one first-class ship stationed at Queenstown. We have been further informed that a Government officer, who bears the official name of a Master Attendant, has been appointed, at a high salary, to Haulbowline, and it is supposed that the object of this appointment is in connection with works of an extensive character, which are said to be at present under the consideration of the Government.

It appears that in 26 of the Irish counties the tenement valuation has been completed under the act. In seven the valuation is in progress and in seven it has not yet commenced. The apparent discrepancy of these numbers (there being only thirty two "counties" proper in Ireland) is explained by the fact that there are several "counties of cities." The tenement of the counties, the valuation of which is not yet commenced, may probably be finished in two years from the receipt of the revised Ordnance maps.

The richly ornamented dagger, formerly belonging to honest Tom Steele, presented to him by the Belgian Government, which fell into the hands of Mr. Coleman, auctioneer, of Rutland street, was by him presented to Dr. Thomas Kane, J.P., in recognition of his true patriotism and genuine worth as a citizen, and in his professional capacity as the ever-ready friend of the sick and distressed poor. The blade is richly embellished and bears an appropriate inscription, and the hilt consists of a figure in gold representing the Belgian Eagle crushing the serpent.

A Good Landlord.—Arthur Kavanagh, Esq., of Borris House, having ascertained that some of his tenants were obliged to purchase seeds at a ruinous price on the credit system, generously purchased various seeds of the best description to the amount of £500, and presented the tenants with the same in proportion to their requirements at half price. It is not surprising that the tenantry on the Kavanagh estates should be devoted to such a landlord.—Carlow Sentinel.

Engineers have been engaged in making a survey of the port of Kingstown, Dublin, preparatory, it appears, to putting the place in a state of defence. It is intended to erect a fort on the east pier, which is to be mounted with five guns of heavy calibre (32 pounders.)

The Castle-Connell and Limerick Railway, six miles in extent, is contracted for by Messrs. Bagnell and Smith, for £11,500.

The Connaught Rangers (88th) have erected a beautiful monument over the grave of the late Rev. Dennis Sheehan, Chaplain to the Forces, in the Cemetery of the Camp before Sebastopol. The Rev. Mr. Sheehan, who fell a martyr in his sacred ministry, was a native of Cork, and attended the gallant 88th in all its struggles up to his death. He has been frequently seen attending the wounded and dying amidst a storm of balls, and in his mission of love feared not to proceed through the thickest of the conflict.

At Parsonstown, Color Sergeant Daniel McKenzie, of the 57th Regiment, was presented with a silver medal and a gratuity of £15 "for long service and good conduct." This non-commissioned officer, it appears, has served in the regiment upwards of 18 years, during fifteen of which he was a non-commissioned officer; he was seven years with his regiment in the East Indies. Previous to his enlistment in the 57th, he had served under Sir De Lacy Evans in the auxiliary army of the Queen of Spain.

We are glad to perceive, says the Tipperary Free Press, that Mr. Butt, M.P., has given notice of his intention to move a resolution for the abolition of Ministers' Money in Ireland, on the 3d of June. We are pleased to see this step taken by a Protestant representative; and from the well-known ability of the Hon. Member for Youghal, it may be confidently anticipated that he will discharge the task he has voluntarily undertaken, in the manner the best calculated to achieve for it a successful issue.

The Dublin and Drogheda, the Dublin and Belfast Junction, and the Dundalk and Enniskillen Railway Companies are now amalgamated. The office will be removed to Dublin. The works of the Dundalk and Enniskillen line will be at once resumed, the operations will commence at Clones and Enniskillen. The directors will advance the line to Sligo.

The young Earl of Listowel recently visited his extensive estates in the Barony of Upper Ormond, and was received with every mark of respect by his numerous and happy tenantry by whom his noble father was greatly beloved, and who have every reason to believe that the son will walk in the footsteps of the parent.—Limerick Reporter.

In consequence of the high price of forage last year the allowances to mounted men from the 1st of April to the 30th September, 1855, have been increased in addition to what was before granted. In Armagh 3d. per ration; Limerick 3d., Kildare 4d., Dublin 3d., Galway 1d., Cork 4d., Roscommon 2d., Kilkenny 2d., Carlow 1d.

We are happy to learn, says the Galway Vindicator, that the funds for the erection of a new cathedral at Loughrea are rapidly increasing. Already a large sum has been lodged at the National Bank, and we feel assured that when the work is once commenced, there will be no lack of means to carry out the unfortunate undertaking.

Directions have been received to stop recruiting for the line; but no prohibition has yet arrived for preventing the reception of recruits for the militia—on the contrary, so far as the county of Limerick militia are concerned, an order, we understand, has been received at the depot here to continue recruiting for twelve months more.—Munster News.

The Clonmel Board of Guardians have adopted a resolution to strike a rate, which varies from 8l on several electoral divisions to 2s upon St. Mary's; during the past year the average number of paupers in the workhouse of that union was 1,200, and the average cost of maintenance for each pauper was 1s 7d.

Great exertions, says the Limerick Observer, are being made to complete the parish church of Ennis, which has been no less than twenty-five years in progress, though still far from being finished. Many Protestant gentlemen have come forward most liberally in aid of their poorer Catholic fellow-parishioners.

Throughout the length and breadth of Ireland the opposition to the Bill, now before Parliament, is general, and we trust will prove successful. The Bill has nothing just to recommend it; and if anything like a spirit of justice prevails at the Councils of our Representatives, it must fall to the ground.

A great tenant-right meeting, at which as many as 50 priests were present, was held in Navan, on the 15th. Mr. M'Evoy, M. P., presided; and able speeches were delivered by Mr. G. H. Moore, M. P., Archdeacon Fitzgerald, Mr. Kennedy, M. P., Rev. Mr. Quade and other gentlemen.

A boatman named John Connell, 25 years connected with the coast guard service, had put a period to his existence, at the Queensborough station, by discharging a ballet from one of the pistols used on duty into the right side of his head.

The Cavan estates of Lieutenant-General Edward Fleming, (petitioner as well as owner,) were sold in the Incumbered Estates Court. Irrespective of two lots disposed of by private contract, the property realized upward of £51,000.

The Bittern steamer left Cork on Saturday, May 3d, for Liverpool, with 400 gassengers on board, chiefly en route to America. The Nimrod left on the previous Wednesday, with 300 passengers for the same direction.

We learn from the Kilkenny, that the Celtic Union was never in a more promising position since its establishment. Subscriptions are pouring in from all parts of the country.

The Catholic cathedral at Armagh is nearly completed. The United States have subscribed £2,302 towards its erection. The amount intended to be spent on it is £10,700.

A grand tabernacle of Parisian marble has just been erected on the altar of Westland Row chapel Dublin; it cost £300. It stands 13 feet above the water.

Upwards of twenty recruiting parties belonging to the 9th, 17th, 39th, and 89th depots, have arrived in Limerick during the week.

A petition for the winding-up of the Electric Telegraph Co. of Ireland is to be heard before the Master of the Rolls on the 23d.

The revenue derived from stamps or proceedings in the Irish Court of Chancery, during the year 1855, amounted to £12,220.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Bernard W. Delany, Esq., of Coola, to the commission of the peace for Westmeath.

The Lord-Lieutenant has appointed John Besnard, Jun., Esq., a magistrate of the city of Cork.

Skibbereen is at present the cleanest market town in Ireland.

There is a rumor in Rome that in the month of June next, the Emperor and Empress of Austria will visit the Holy City, to take part in the grand fete in honor of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception.

The Empress Eugenie is likely to remain an invalid for life. Her feet are paralyzed, and though the physicians hold out the hope that a few days may restore her to her former health, her recovery is very problematical.

A Vienna letter states that M. Cornelius Bujanovics, who was charged with having poisoned seven persons, has been acquitted by the Criminal Court at Pesth for want of proof.

Answers to Correspondents.

To give our readers the gratification of assuring themselves of the sentiments of affection cherished to the last by Tommy Moore for Robert Emmett—and which we do through the graceful means of a letter addressed by Ireland's darling poet to our eminent and learned countryman, our friend, Dr. Shelton Mackenzie—we hold over the chapter of Personal Recollections, which was designed for the space the letter occupies. It is entitled, and describes, The Galway Election, of January, 1847. Nothing shall prevent its appearing in our next.

The following letter needs no curtailment. The writer sends his name as a guarantee of his earnestness in the cause of the poor emigrant. We perceive by the daily papers that Croghan has been committed for trial. The "Co.," a man named Patrick Tracy, we learn from the same source, is at present in Liverpool:

To the Editor of the Irish News: Sir,—From the high character of your journal, and devoted as it is to Irish interests in this country, I feel that any outrage or swindle perpetrated on them will be promptly published and exposed by you. I beg to call your attention to the following pitiable circumstance A poor man from the Queen's county, Ireland, now residing in Paterson, N. J., having a wife and three children there, wished to send for them, and for that purpose went to an office at 41 Fulton street, formerly occupied by a man of the name of Tracy, who disappeared rather mysteriously some three months ago, since which it has been kept by a man who acted as a man-catcher for him, and who calls himself Croghan & Co. This poor man paid Croghan forty-five dollars to bring out his family, for which he received a paper purporting to be a passage ticket, but which was directed to no person or firm in Liverpool, it being in fact a complete swindle.

The wife took the passage ticket to Liverpool, and the answer she received from every forwarding house was, that Croghan was an imposter. He likewise paid him fifteen dollars for a draft, which was also useless. The poor woman returned to Ireland, and sent the ticket and draft back to her husband, who called with them on Croghan, but could get no satisfaction. He was then directed to go to the Mayor's office, and lodge a complaint. But they likewise would give him no redress.

It is not over two months ago since another concern, of the same kind and in the same street, was broken up, after swindling and robbing the poor people for over six months, out of several thousand dollars. Is there no law to prevent this rascal from doing the same for the same length of time?

I am, Sir, your obedient servant, Sarsfield.

O'Brazil.—Yes, John Dillon has returned to Ireland. He sailed in the Persia, on last trip, the 14th of May. We cannot say positively whether or not he intends remaining permanently in Ireland. Nor is it—we respectfully submit—your right or business, or that of any man, to question the propriety of his doing so. Dillon's having faithfully and gallantly served the National cause all through '48, and for years preceding, does not make him your slave. He served that cause freely and generously—never received a penny of the peoples's money—is neither bound by pledge or favor, or any other consideration, to do otherwise than he just pleases. Impudent curiosity and vulgar dictation, such as your's, Mr. O'Brazil, is what neither John Dillon nor any of his comrades will submit to. So clear out, growler! But it's the way with jealous, good-for-nothing, loafing rascals like you. You forget all the efforts and sacrifices of a good and brave man, the moment he thinks fit to differ from you, or retire to private life. John Dillon was far and away the chevalier of the insurrectionary movements in Tipperary, in '48, up to the time of his leaving O'Brien for the Shannon, by express desire of the latter. At Killenaule, when O'Brien gave orders to have the Hussars stopped from entering the town, and a barricade was hastily thrown up, and manned by a dozen men—two or three with rifles, and the rest with pikes and old muskets—John Dillon took command of it, and, face to face with the Hussars, stood on the top of it—the only man uncovered—the first to fall, had the soldiers fired. His bold and utterly fearless attitude and look, his calm but defiant words, completely cowed the Captain of the Troop, who, there and then, whilst Dillon was still standing on the barricade, pledged the latter his word of honor as a soldier, that, if he and his men were permitted to pass, they would make no attempt to arrest O'Brien, or any one else. This pledge being deliberately tendered, Dillon ordered an opening to be made in the barricade, and, holding the bridle of the Captain's horse, led him down the Main street, and out of town. The rest of the troops followed in single file. That's the story of Killenaule.

Sir: Will you stand an idle query? I once read in a Dublin journal a very graceful lyric, of a tempted Angel, and for over twenty years lost all thought of it, till last night, in a hot fit of ague, (I live near those cursed Elysian fields), my mind began strangely to bring it back, by feet and fingers, till I could put together the following:

Gold, like the sheen of crystal spars,
And silver whiter than the moon's,
And music like the songs of stars,
And perfume like a thousand Junes.
* * * * *
Cups of such rare and ravishing wines,
As even a god might taste and bless.
* * * * *
He shut his eyes, he stopped his ears,
He bid them, in Heaven's name, begone!

Who wrote these fine fresh rhymes? Did he write any thing else? And where's the rest? I was waiting for to-morrow night, when I expected another fytte or so, but as they made me take half an ounce of quinine to-day, I despair—at least, till the Fall—and so beg to trouble you, or any of your readers, east or west. Jarsey.

Jacob—It's a fact. There was one of the Confederates concealed on the top of the stairs of Nelson's Pillar, Dublin, for a fortnight or so, whilst Lord Clarendon's police were hunting for suspected persons. Our elevated friend, the Simon Stylites of that troubled time, was familiar with the old man with the crooked stick who had charge of the Pillar, bribed him, had took possession of the pillar. His meals were regularly brought to him by the old man, and enjoying a delightful prospect—the Bay, Hill of Howth, the Squares, the Dublin mountains—undisturbed by any visitor, he looked down upon his enemies with great serenity. What became of him, when he got down, no one knows. We understand that the Dublin Telegraph purports soon bringing out a beautiful romance, founded on the above incident, entitled The Outcast of Nelson's Pillar.

John Smyth (Jersey City.) The venerable Robert Holmes was not Mr. Duffy's counsel on his trial at the close of '48. Probably you allude to his defense of the Nation in 1846, which is published in pamphlet form. Holme's connection with '48 is his defence of John Mitchel, in a speech of great power and patriotism. The chief features of it are given in Mr. Savage's "'98 and 48."

Father P. Meany, of Clonmel, and several other friends in Ireland, will please observe that there is a charge of two cents a copy, for postage, on each paper we send over, hence our charge of $4.00 per annum. Also that, as yet, we can supply full sets of the back numbers.

Our friend McManus will kindly take this word or two as an acknowledgment for the present, of his hearty letter by the last mail. We ask our friend Lochrane, of Macon—one of the truest and brightest Irishmen breathing—to do the same. Both shall hear from us in full after a little.

The writer of the article on Dublin Castle, in a late number of the University Magazine, was Speranza of the Nation. She is a glorious woman, and her war-lyrics in '47 and '48 were as grand as the song of Sappho.

We are delighted to hear from our friend Father P. Meany, of Clonmel, Ireland, and rejoice with him that the Whigs are about to reward the loyal services of Capt. John O'Connell.

Received "Nial"—"Reconciliation." These pretty verses having appeared elsewhere are outside of our programme. Our poet's corner is dedicated to original compositions.

MR. TIMOTHY EDWARD HUGHES, has received our written authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "Irish News," throughout the New-England States.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1856.

IRELAND AND O'BRIEN—WHAT IS—WHAT WILL BE!

The dearth, this moment, of public men in Ireland of a sterling stamp, is beyond dispute. To that grand race of statesmen, orators, and patriots, who in the Irish parliament, at the close of the last century, and in the English parliament, during the first quarter of the present, lifted the Irish name triumphantly before Europe—as on a standard of gold inlaid with emeralds—a crowd of dwarfs has succeeded, who have neither the heart to be honest, nor the genius to be great.

Nor is it alone with the splendid group, of which Grattan, Plunket, and Curran were the central figures, that the conspicuous men of the present day in Ireland, fail even decently to compare.

In the earlier days of O'Connell's presence in parliament, there were seated close to him, on the green benches of St. Stephen's, a dozen or more Irish members, whose brilliant intellect, prompt eloquence, humor, gallantry, headstrong purpose in pulling together, winning gaiety of manner, fine social qualities and station, still kept fresh the brighter memories of Ireland. Such men were Maurice O'Connell, Talbot of Ross, Wyse of Waterford, Dominick Ronayne, who supplied O'Connell with the very best hits the latter ever made in parliament, and Callaghan of Cork, who with a good deal about him to laugh at, had one of the best heads in the House, and was esteemed by Sir Robert Peel one of the surest authorities on commercial questions. John O'Brien, of Limerick, too, was a gentleman of high note in that privileged assembly of gentlemen. As a scholar, letter-writer, and public speaker, he was distinguished for the refined resources of his mind, the perfect proprieties of his composition, the suavity and gracefulness of his address.

Last of all, though above all, save one, Richard Shiel was of that school and generation. Essentially an orator of the people, known only to the Lords and Gentlemen of England by the flowery and flashing vehemence of his rhetoric, with a sullen host of conceits and prejudices awaiting his first display in the arena, where Pitt and Fox had fought like Gods with thunderbolts, the orator of the Corn Exchange made good his footing at the onset. For sixteen years—a match for Stanley, the haughtiest, firiest, ablest of the Commons—did he with that piercing voice, and burning eye, and beautiful white hand, maintain himself a splendid power among the rulers of the Senate.

To this class of men have succeeded, in these days, the poorest humanities in every respect, that have ever made it their business to take charge of the interests of a people. Without doubt, there are eloquent and honest exceptions. And in the instances where eloquence is deficient, there is good sense, correct views of public questions, and assiduous fidelity. But these are as scarce as the grapes left after the vintage. If their excellence were not nobly enhanced by it, one would pity the wilderness in which they bloomed.

Everything else about them tame, degenerate and corrupt; all lofty sentiment extinguished; the very cries stifled which used to rouse the people to a bolder attitude, and flood their hearts with the proud passions of our princely old race; truth holding its tongue, flying into exile, or entrenching itself darkly in the tomb; rascality promoted, dressed up in ermine and red cloth, welcomed by lily hands and the shouts of brief-bags, wrinkled and inflated; sectarianism rampant, and with the fury of Alecto maddening into an exterminating strife the hatreds that had slept for years; such the scene, and these the circumstances, surrounded by which the few good men in Ireland charged with public trusts and offices, to whom we have alluded, have stood these ten years past, and still stand, true to their consciences, their oaths, their country, and their God!

And into such a scene, to lay his eyes on such a turmoil of evil circumstances, does Smith O'Brien bid farewell to the haunted groves, and storied streams, the famous ruins, and the still more famous fields and waters, over which the tutelary Minerva, for ages of graceful, or glowing, or heroic life, stood in all the splendor of the ivory and gold of Phidias.

For a while, he will be insensible to all this. The sight and enjoyment of his own old home, with its numberless graces, its aged trees, the memories that whisper through them—the young bright handsome faces that will flash upon his cheeks, and light them up with parental ecstacy, piety, and pride—the old followers of the house, who will limp out impatiently, and on the broad door-step, as he comes up the avenue, will fairly cry with joy to think he's back to them again—the shouts of his tenants, the congratulations of his neighbors for miles around, the hills red with midnight bon-fires—all these will, for a time, keep far in the back-ground the repulsive features which the political condition of his country presents.

But it can be for a time only. The activity of his mind, his sense of duty, his social position, his very antecedents will force him, more or less, before long, into public. We do not say he will have to go to Parliament, or ever be disposed to do so. But more nearly home, we hardly see how it will be possible for him to evade the demands which the interests of the community will urge, and his own matured fitness to serve them will invite. There are the local councils—the Board of Poor-law Guardians—the Grand-jury room—the Bench of Petty Sessions, perhaps—from which, as a landlord, it would be inconvenient, if not unnatural, for him to absent himself. In these bodies, the conduct of the Irish representatives, and other public men immediately connected with Ireland, must necessarily be reviewed, day after day. He would, then, come to learn in its full measure the villainy which has, of late years, received the people's votes on false pretences; broken up, for puisne Judgeships and junior Lordships of the Treasury, the popular power; sent floating to the top the old hulks of politics which had sunk from their own rottenness, in the storm of '48; and, in every way, wrought more mischief and disgrace than, for twenty years, Ireland has had the fatality to incur.

Depend upon it, the intrepid voice which so often uttered words of warning, scorn and judgment against the political huckstering and depravity of former times, will be heard again. Sanctified to the people by the sufferings of which it can speak, this voice will have supreme force in Ireland. All others shall have, spitefully or nobly, to yield to it. In all grave emergencies, upon all great questions, whenever any effort of national consequence is to be made, the people will eagerly listen for that voice, reiterate its utterances in enthusiastic cheers, and execute what it decrees. The severe truth, high dauntlessness, perfect purity, patriotism and chivalry of the man—qualities all brought out during the darkness of his exile, as the night brings forth the stars, for the world to witness, and offer up beautiful thanks for, and admire—these endow him with a power which no man in the country will have the temerity to dispute.

The sway of the false prophets, then, is at an end in Ireland. O'Brien returns to Chairmoyle, not only utterly untramelled by any pledge to the foreign government—Heavens! how haughtily he'd have answered them had they asked for one—but with a trust and love centered in him, which he had not when he was banished; and with all his goodness and usefulness, with all his grandeur of heart and mind, might never have won, had they permitted him to remain.

Warmly, affectionately, and exultingly we congratulate our noble friend upon his return. We cannot be there to swell the cheers—cheers such as the foreign Queen never heard—cheers which will shake the mountains, and the ships upon the sea, and the clouds above, as, with form erect, and keen eye quivering with unutterable joy, and head uncovered, he sets his foot upon the old sod once more.

But from the shore of this great land we shall, with thousands of his countrymen, offer up the loving prayer, that his days may be long, and all be filled with gladness, in the land that bore him; that as Heaven has been careful of his little ones whilst he was far off from them, so they may be continued to him in strength, and comeliness, and honor, as the treasures of his household, as the pillars of his name, and as fountains of sweet water in the darkening valley of life; that she who consoled them when they were fatherless, may live to see them all she taught them in her heroic widowhood to be; and that, mad free, his country may call him to her highest seat, and so co plete the glory of his days. That country for which he and gave up all, and calmly bore the cross of tribulation and contumely among the scoffing rabble of a foul prison-land; that country, which in his saddest hours he never ceased to love and speak of, as a gallant son would his stricken mother; and a dungeon-cell in which he would have preferred to the fairest and sweetest garden in all Italy.

FREEDOM IN NICARAGUA.

As we predicted it would be, the flag of Costa Rica is torn down, and the grandiloquent advent of its invasion of Nicaragua among the occurrences that were. The boldness of the Costa Rican President, Mora, in attempting to extend the name of his State from the limits of a school geography into the ear of the world, is excusable; and his ambition has received a much more lasting identification with the occurrences of the time than he possibly could have had the courage to imagine.

In a word, he is defeated, baffled, routed, and in his defeat is made famous. Fortunate Mora, to be the vanquished of Walker.

For history, into whose glowing charge the fate and career of Nicaragua must consign the names of her friends and foes, the Costa Rican invasion is an episode which shall at once preserve the name of the invaders, and illustrate the self-reliant heroism of the handful of Americans who, with the sword in one hand and the democratic constitution of their parent State in the other, gave her peace, prosperity, position—gave her the toll-gate of the great oceans, and insured her commercial existence.

The result which we anticipated some weeks since has been confirmed by the intelligence brought by the arrival of the Orizaba, on the 1st inst.

Our faith in the justice and uprightness of the democratic idea, in representation of which the Walker-Rivas Provisional Government spoke and acted, on the one hand, and our belief in its invincibility when supported by American brain and muscle on the other, inspired such conclusions in our mind as we then somewhat warmly stated. It is not our nature to defer an opinion until success crowns it with popularity—or the reverse beckons it from the brooding silence of the present into the shiftless gloom of obscurity. We meditated from a principle; we spoke from a conviction, and we are encouraged, though not guided, by a success.

By the advices brought we are informed that the Transit route is again free, and that the report of a British blockade was without documentary foundation; the Captain of the British frigate Eurydice having conveyed to Mr. Wheeler, the American Minister, that he had no instructions to interpose, or offer any interruption to the landing or transmission of passengers or munitions of war.

On the other hand, we learn with regret that what has got by means of the newspapers to be known as the "Vanderbilt party," which means the agents and employees of the old Transit Company, being guided by the interest of the principal, Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, aided the Costa Rican invasion of the Nicaraguan republic, and identified itself with the murderers of the Americans at Virgin Bay.

So far this is uncontradicted by those, whose birthright should render it a matter of sensitive haste to tell the public whether the report be true or false. If true, the base commercial incentive of building an isolated example of American progress over the dead bodies of American citizens cannot be too severely condemned and scorned. If false, no words can sufficiently stigmatize the framers of a report, which thus as it were outlaws the American commercial name.

After the rear-guard of President Mora's army had vacated Virgin Bay on the 26th April, a detachment of the Nicaraguan army, headed by General Walker in person, entered the town. The former left behind a number of sick and wounded, and a letter entrusting them to the guardianship of the victorious Commander-in-Chief. These men, we learn, have become greatly attached to the Americans, whom they were led to regard as nothing better than pirates and murderers. They tell a doleful story of the trials and sufferings of the Costa Rican expedition, and are energetic in denouncing the whole affair. "If allowed to return to their homes and families," says El Nicaraguense, "when they are exchanged, they will be apt to dispel many of the errors and falsehoods uttered by the San Jose journal concerning our people."

The remaining features of the news may be quickly summed up. The number of the invaders slaughtered in the Rivas engagement may be judged from the fact, that their bodies having been thrown into the wells, have rendered the remaining portion of the town uninhabitable. Thus, as it were, Providence visited with a blighting retaliation the injustice of their cause, by breeding a disease, that, with the "circumstance of war," made them powerless. General Mora has disgraced the officer who commanded the devastation at Virgin Bay.

The presidential election in Nicaragua had been conducted in an orderly and peaceable manner, and terminated as was supposed, in the return of Patricio Rivas, the Provisional President. Notwithstanding that the opposing candidates were democrats. This confirms the stability of the government, and the more firmly qualifies the statements made on behalf of the spirit with which the Americans entered the Nicaraguan service.

Gen. Goicuria has led a party into the Choutales mine district, opened up that portion of the country, and slain several of the Chamorro bandits who infested it.

The invaders routed, the government sustained by re-election, the army in good health and spirits—much enlarged and still augmenting—the sovereign independence of the State not only cannot be questioned, but must command the most hearty approval of the world.

We congratulate Gen. Walker on his brilliant success—on his expeditions undertaken in the face of outlawry—and on his victories won not only over the excited Costa Ricans, but over the apathetic un-Americanism of technical statesmen, and the clamor of a "righteous" and "sanctimonious" press. We congratulate him the more proudly, for that he had our hearty "bravo!" before his fate was decided; and while yet the vision of some notable pseudo prophets were prognosticating black dishonor to his gallant flag and the utter annihilation of its five Volcanoes. May they blaze for ever!

JOHN BROUGHAM.

Wallack's must be crowded on next Monday. Not a corner but must be filled up as full as it can hold. Not an inch of red bench must be seen. If the private boxes are not piled up with satins and silks, head-dresses, and crushed hoops; if the parquette, up to the top of the little staircase, be not one swarming hive; if a single chair be left to cool itself with the wind of the trombones, round the orchestra; we shall have to say that the Cincinnati Convention has drawn off the best of our population, and that the sooner we ourselves clear out, the better.

John Brougham has his benefit that night. Every Irishman at any rate, should be there, and make a night of it. For our genial, generous, bright-souled friend is a sterling honor to Ireland, and keeps the credit of her old name high among the appreciating and applauding world here. Nor Sheridan, nor Farquhar, nor Congreve, nor O'Keeffe, nor Bickerstaff, nor Michael Kelly, could they walk out in blooming flesh from the crypts and clay in which they sleep, would hesitate a second to go down that night, and plant themselves in the front row of the Dress Circle, to greet their countryman, who in the new world perpetuates their fame by mingling with it the freshness of his own.

But altogether apart from the claims which his skill, humor, and genius, as a dramatic artist, have won upon the public, his prompt and active sympathy with great public charities, and institutions of public benevolence, should be cordially remembered when, as on Monday night, an opportunity occurs for giving him something sterling in return.

Of the Dramatic Fund Association there is not a more zealous and laborious member, and it is not too much to say, that to his exertions the prosperity it now enjoys is greatly owing. The friends of the Roman Catholic Orphans of New York cannot forget his services, on more than one occasion, in behalf of their noble object. In a word, wherever or whenever there is a liberal, full-hearted act to be done, and he gets as much as a whisper that they want him to do it, there and then is John Brougham with his big heart, rich wit, upright manhood, correct taste, overflowing poetry, mirth, industry, and eloquence to do it.

He has given us a "Basket of Chips." Let us reciprocate the merry gift with a "Crock of Gold."

BRAVO, BELGIUM.

An impressive scene took place, a few weeks ago, in the Belgian Chamber of Deputies. With the deepest calmness of tone and feature, one of the members, M. Otis, rose to question the Minister of Foreign Affairs. He referred to one of the protocols of the recent Conference at Paris. This protocol, he he said, contained accusations against Belgium, and the Belgian press, offensive to the national feeling and dignity, and full of warning for the future. He demanded of the Minister, if, in the first place, he had replied to the alleged charges; if, in the second, the French government had called for any changes in the Belgian Constitution; if, in the third and last, such changes were called for, they would be conceded.

M. Vilain replied as gravely, distinctly, and firmly. An answer would be sent as soon as the proceedings of the Conference had been received; no demand had been made by the French government for a change in the Belgian constitution; but if such a request were made, it would never be complied with—never!

The moment that glorious negative was uttered, the beautiful palace, built by Maria Theresa, shook all through its marble colonnades and domes; and through the capital of Belgium, rich in works of the highest Art, in quaint legends, and superb historic memories—in glorious churches, which vie with those of Cologne and Strasburg, in the bright blood poured out all through its streets, and squares, and wooded walks, for Freedom, there was a thrill of joy such as had not been felt since the day the Dutch flag was pulled down from the tower of St. Gudule.

That answer to Napoleon—leaping up so boldly from the proud great heart of the best and most beautiful little people in all Europe—was worthy of the men, who, with the cry of Belgium for the Belgians, had grappled with the bayonets of the cumbrous drones who were eating them out of house and home, and had whipped them back from the land of Rubens and Du Quesnoy to their flats and dykes.

All through Europe, except where Austrian and French gendarmes and gaolors check the very pulsations of the heart itself, there has been, and still ring out, the loudest applauses for this courageous defiance of the tyrant. Even in England, we have right hearty words from the Times, congratulating Belgium on the event. "We are proud," it writes, "that it was in every way worthy of a noble country and a glorious cause." Then it warmly felicitates the Belgian people and the Belgian government on the manner in which they have received an attack so needlessly levelled against their dignity and independence.

The event is full of hope for the European people—for those especially who, like the Belgians a few years ago, are thrust back to the wall by the lances and sabres of some villain afflicted with the King's evil, and chained there to rot in silence. When one of the smallest nations of the continent, hemmed in and overshadowed by gigantic military powers, has the pluck to speak out the word which liberty inspires—has the pluck to face the grim Caligula of St. Cloud, and tell him it will have none of his orderings—and when all through Europe, from the Scheldt to the mouths of the Danube, from the Arno to the Vistula, millions re-echo the defiance—it is not too much to say, that a storm is gathering, which not even the golden Eagles of the Empire can wing their way against.

Bravo, Belgium!

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

By the time this paper reaches our readers at St. Louis or New Orleans, it is more than probable the nomination of the Democratic Candidate for the Presidency will have been made.

So many and so conflicting have been the conjectures with which the telegraphic wires have been for the last five days bewildered, that we have lost our sight and senses—can't see as far as Cincinnati—and, most certainly, not an inch beyond it.

The new state of things, this time next week, will, no doubt, restore us to clearer vision and calmer judgment, and enable us to say what conjectures were right, and what were not.

In the meanwhile, we sincerely trust that a man in whom the great masses have full faith will be the chosen one, and that it will be such a choice as to redound to the credit of American statesmanship, furnish fresh guarantees for the stability of the Republic, the harmony of the several Sovereign States of which it is made up, and the glory in the far future of the common flag.

This, however, we do not hesitate to say—whoever is nomi nated will be the President.

Dismissal of Mr. Crampton and the British Consuls.

At last! After a world of threats, hints, dispatches, and other slow premonitory symptoms, the crisis has taken place. Having taken place, it has blown over. The sweetest equanimity prevails here, and throughout the Union, as though no no such event had occurred. It has surprised no one, nor in any way moved a solitary soul. It would have been otherwise, had it taken place when first spoken of. Then the people's blood was up—they felt an outrage had been insolently done them by the British officials—and the proper chastisement, following fast upon the detection of their doings, would have gratified the national pride, and avenged the violated laws and sovereignty of the Republic.

To be truly effective—for them to tell with a salutary impression at home and abroad—such acts must be promptly done. This is especially true where the executive of a great confederacy, like that of the United States, sees reason to vindicate the honor of the laws and sovreignty confided to its care. An executive—the direct expression and agent of the vast democratic masses—moulded from them for a brief season of power, and resolving back to them without a single vestige of official consequence, mistakes the spirit of the people, nor does it consult wisely the majesty of their laws, when the evasive and tardy customs and language of crowned rogues are resorted to.

Lecture of Bishop Hughes.

The Academy of Music will be thronged on Thursday evening, the 12th. The learned and eminent Archbishop of New York delivers a lecture there, on that date, in aid of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Fourteenth street. His subject we understand, will be The Life and Times of Daniel O'Connell., The orator, the object, and the theme unite in an irresistible attraction.

Literature.

ROBERT EMMETT AND THOMAS MOORE.

In the seventh volume of Memoirs, Journal, and Correspondence of Thomas Moore, recently published in London, under the very indifferent (if not actually dishonest) editorship of Lord John Russell, the following is given as part of the poet's Diary for 1844:

"Feb. 20th.—A letter from R. S. Mackenzie, dated from University Herald Office, Oxford, begins by saying, that he sees by Longman's list I am now concluding (would to Heaven I were!) my very difficult task, The History of Ireland; and proceeds to say: 'It strikes me that if you include Emmett's affair of 1803, you might like to know, that a copy of his speech, on the trial, is in existence, in his own writing. Mr. Marshal, who gives out the books in the Reading-room of the Museum, is in possession of that document; and I believe I can trace it from the hands of the person to whom Emmett gave it. As a politico-literary paper, it may interest the poet and historian of Ireland.'"

As the name of Emmett, though not yet inscribed upon any National Monument, is deeply engraved upon the hearts of his countrymen, no apology is necessary for relating a few particulars respecting the manuscript mentioned in the above.

In 1843, Mr. Marshal, the principal attendant, or book-deliverer, in the Reading-room of the British Museum, London, showed me a manuscript which, he said, had been given to his mother many years before, by the sister of Temple, Addis, andRobert Emmett. At first sight my autographic knowledge enabled me to recognize the handwriting as that of Robert Emmett; and I found, on examination, that it was a copy of Emmett's last speech. It was endorsed, in a hand which I did not know, as "Poor Robert's Speech on his Trial, September 18th, 1803; written the night before." This endorsement, I have no doubt, was made by Emmett's sister, the wife of that honest, inflexible patriot, Robert Holmes, who spurned, through a life-time of honor and integrity, all offers of place and emolument from the Irish government, and proved his truth and courage by defending The Nation in 1846, and John Mitchel, in 1848. Mrs. Holmes did not long survive the loss of her brother; she died early in 1804.

It happened at that moment that I was too much pressed for time (having to leave London the same evening) to compare this copy of the Speech with that which was published, but Mr. Marshal drew my attention to the fact, that the manuscript contained no allusion whatever to Mr. Plunket, nor, of course, to the repeated interruptions by Lord Norbury, the Chief Judge at the Special Commission before which Emmett, and several more of the parties concerned in the inchoate revolt of 1803, were arraigned and tried; interruptions made with the intention, doubtless, of silencing "the sad enthusiast" to the last, by checking the flow of his touching eloquence. I found, also, from general recollection, that Robert Emmett's personal allusions to expected aid from France, were stronger and more decisive in the written than the reported speech. This was my impression at the time, and it was correct.

Some months after this, seeing an announcement that the concluding volume of Moore's History of Ireland was ready for the press, I wrote to Moore, with whom I had a personal acquaintance of several years, to the effect recorded in his Journal (as above), adding that I was persuaded, from the fact of Mr. Marshal having expressed a desire that some public use should be made of the manuscript, there would be no difficulty in obtaining a copy of it. I added that the point of difference between the written speech and that which has been so often published might be worth examining into. Moore acknowledged my communication in the following words.

"Sloperton, Feb. 25, 1844.

"Dear Sir: The delay of my answer to your letter has been caused by a severe attack of influenza, from which I am hardly yet recovered. Pray accept my best thanks for your interesting communication respecting Emmett, of which I shall not fail to avail myself.

"Your obliged servant,

"THOMAS MOORE."

On this subject I heard no more for several months, during which, not being able to leave Oxford, where I then resided, I had no opportunity of again inspecting Emmett's manuscript. At last, I was favored with the following communication from Moore, which may be taken as fixing the authenticity of the document. It bears the London post-mark:

"May 10, 1845.

"Dear Sir; I had the pleasure, some time ago, of expressing my gratitude for your kind and interesting letter respecting the manuscript of poor Emmett's speech, in Mr. Marshal's possession. My 'History of Ireland,' so long on hand as to have made it, latterly, a heavy duty of taskwork rather than the 'labor of love' which it originally promised to be, was completed without including any notice of Emmett's attempted revolt in 1803; therefore I did not give myself any especial trouble about Mr. Marshal's manuscript. I was in town for a couple of days last July, but in no mood of mind to take especial interest in anything but the mournful duty I had to discharge. This time, I have been less occupied, and scarcely lost an hour before I saw Mr. Marshal, at the British Museum. Unfortunately the precious manuscript was at his private residence, so I was disappointed for the instant.

Yesterday, I was more fortunate. The writing is unquestionably Robert Emmett's. Nearly half a century ago, when he and I were warm friends and constant companions, I knew his writing as well as my own. Nor was it without emotion that I looked at one of the very latest of his autographs. You, who are acquainted with my literary efforts, must have gathered from them how much I loved him living, and attempted to honor him when dead; as the peasant, in our native land, who casts a stone upon the cairn of some lamented friend, pays a tribute as great, according to his means, as when the pride of wealth raises a mausoleum over the ashes of the dead.

With abundance of materials in the Museum Library, I was able to compare the manuscript with the spoken speech. There are several points of difference, arising chiefly out of the repeated efforts of Lord Norbury to embarrass Emmett by a series of scolding interruptions. In such attempts his Lordship did not succeed; for though Emmett did not deliver more than two-thirds of what he had prepared, there was force and eloquence in the sentences which he interpolated, on the instant, in reply and reproof to the judicial scold. Emmett was naturally so eloquent (he was one of the best speakers of our Historical Society in College) that there was no reason, except one, why he should have carefully elaborated the few sentences to be spoken before judgment was passed upon him. It is more than probable that he distrusted his own powers, at that trying crisis, and was anxious, no doubt, that his last words in public, actually addressed (to use Lord Byron's fine expression) "to time and to eternity, and not to man," should be well deliberated. He knew their importance.

In the manuscript, as originally struck yourself, the allusion to aid from France is more decided than in the published speech. Emmett certainly intended saying that there was at that moment in Paris a member of the Irish Provisional Government empowered to negotiate for an invading expedition, but with orders not to allow it to sail until the French Government had given Ireland a guarantee for her liberties similar to that obtained by Franklin for America. This is much more than I can find in any report of the speech. Emmett may not have spoken these words, but it is just as probable that he did. The report of the trial was published under the editorship of the then Under-Secretary of the Castle, Mr. Marsden, who is known to have greatly garbled the account.

I have always been doubtful whether Robert Emmet, who was fastidious in his language, ever designated Plunket as a viper whom his father had nurtured to sting his child. There is no trace of such words in the manuscript, but, indeed they could only have been suggested, if ever uttered, by the line taken by Plunket on the trial, a course of procedure which evidently had but one motive, and upon which there could scarcely be a second opinion.

The kindness of Mr. Marshall has given me not only the inspection, but the possession of Emmett's manuscript. I vainly essayed to make him accept some price for it, knowing that his circumstances cannot be good, but he declined so decidedly that I did not venture to insist. I have sent him, as a small acknowledgment, the late edition of my verses, and beg that when you again see him you will say how much I am his debtor.

As you are curious, with pertinacity in your curiosity, about Robert Emmett, I have only to add, that I shall return to Sloperton in a few days; and should the facilities of railroad travelling tempt you to give me a few days' visit, you may then make a copy of the Speech—which I should gladly do for you, but the mere work of writing greatly fatigues me now, and, indeed, I have taken several days to this letter.

Pardon its great length, and believe me,

Your obliged and faithful servant,

THOMAS MOORE.

To Dr. Shelton Mackenzie.

It was not in my power to visit Moore, in his cottage in Wiltshire, and thus I lost the opportunity of obtaining a copy of the Speech. The original remains, most probably, among Moore's papers.

In the ordinary versions of Emmett's speech, this particular reference to expected aid from France is omitted, but the most authentic report, (taken in short-hand by Mr. Ridgway, a barrister, and quoted by Plowden, in his History of Ireland from 1801 to 1810,) contains the sentence, precisely as mentioned by Moore in this letter. There were obvious reasons for omitting Emmett's allusion to France—at least in the report of his trial published by the Irish government. Emmett was angrily interrupted by Lord Norbury, when he declared that, even while he was speaking, a negotiation for aid from France was in progress, and he replied, "Think not, my Lord, that I say this for the petty gratification of giving you a transitory uneasiness. A man who never yet raised his voice to assert a lie, will not hazard his character with posterity by advancing a falsehood on a subject so important. Again I say, that what I have spoken is not intended for your Lordship. It is meant as a consolation to my countrymen. If there be a true Irishman present, let my last words cherish him in the hour of affliction." At these words Lord Norbury again interfered, saying that he could not listen to treason and sedition, complimenting Emmett's family as having produced men of talent, he himself not being the meanest among them. This drew from Emmett the noble apostrophe to his deceased father: "If the spirit of the illustrious dead can witness the scenes of this transitory life," &c. It is to be lamented that no reliable report of Robert Emmett's speech has yet been published. I am not without hope of being able, by careful collation, to produce a more full and accurate version than has yet appeared.

Robert Emmett, although Moore's senior (by one class) at the University, was a few months his junior in age. In the preface to his collected poems, Moore says: "When, in the first year of my course, I became a member of the Debating Society—a sort of nursery to the authorized Historical Society—I found him in full reputation, not only for his learning and eloquence, but also for the blamelessness of his life, and the grave suavity of his manners." In this autobiographical record, Moore quotes the following passage from one of Emmett's speeches: "When a people, advancing rapidly in knowledge and power, perceive at last how far their government is lagging behind them, what, then, I ask, is to be done in such a case? What, but to pull the government up to the people."

Moore also records that Emmett was "as modest as he was high-minded and brave;" and states, that one day, when he (Moore) had just finished playing that spirited tune called the Red Fox, to which "Let Erin Remember the Days of Old" was afterwards written, Emmett started up as from a reverie, exclaiming, "Oh, that I were at the head of twenty thousand men, marching to that air!"

Moore was not ashamed to honor his memory, by public tributes to his worth and motives: witness the touching song, "Oh, Breathe not his Name," suggested by Emmett's last words, his further reference in the beautiful memorial ("She is far from the Land where her Young Hero Sleeps") to the unhappy Sarah Curran, and his manly character of Emmett, in the "Life and Death of Lord Edward Fitzgerald."

All through his life, whatever the ebbs and flows in Moore's patriotic feelings towards Ireland, he was warm, consistent, and affectionate in his homage to the memory of his early friend, Robert Emmett.

R. SHELTON MACKENZIE.

New-York, June 2d, 1856.

MISADVENTURES OF A MEDICAL STUDENT.

Chaos, rudis indigestaque moles;
Nec quidquam nisi pondus iners, congestaque eodem
Non bene junctarum discordia semina rerum.
Metamorphoseon, Lib. 1.

Thirteen black coffins stood round the hall,
And the skulls grinn'd down at me, jeeringly all;
And an old maid's skeleton, gaunt and tall,
In the tatter'd remains of a mouldering pall,
Clank'd her lank shank from a nail in the wall,—
My eye! what a swell for a fancy ball!

There were coils of intestine, in tormina knotted;
Hypertrophied hearts, with the arch and carotid;
There were frogs in a basin and toads in a bottle—
A hard liver's hard liver—an alderman's throttle.
There were noses, from schirrus, immense and elastic,
Which Pathology designates heteroplastic.
If you ask me what that is, more plainly to speak,
I obligingly tell you, at once, it is Greek.

Thirteen black coffins stood round the hall,
And the skulls grinn'd down at me, horribly all;
And an old maid's skeleton, gaunt and tall,
In the tatter'd remains of a mouldering pall,
Clank'd her lank shank from a nail in the wall.
By Jing! what a swell for a fancy ball!

There were arteries meeting in anastomosis;
Item, caries, callus, superb exostosis,
Hydrocephalic skulls, of enormous proportions,
Snakes, fishes and owls, and all nightmare abortions,
From calves with three heads to tom-cats with three tails;
Pigs, poultry and beetles, bats, badgers and snails:
But the old maid's skeleton, gaunt and tall,
Was the frightfulest fright in that frightful hall.

Thirteen black coffins stood round the wall,
And the skulls grinn'd down on me, chattering all;
While the old maid's skeleton, gaunt and tall,
In the tatter'd remains of a mouldering pall,
Clank'd her lank shank, green and yellow with gall.
Old Nick! what a swell for a fancy ball!

Now a strange wild music moan'd thro' that hall,
And a lurid and ghastly glare fell upon all!
The skeletons rattle their yellowish bones,
Pattering, clattering over the stones;
And a murderer's skull, with a grin that made shiver,
Was cracking gall-calculi found near a liver.
The three-tailed tabby begins to purr,
And the phantom badger to smooth his fur.

Thirteen black coffins stand round the hall,
And the skulls grin down at me, mockingly all,
While the old maid's skeleton, gaunt and tall,
In the tatter'd remains of a mouldering pall,
Clanks her lank shank from a nail in the wall.
Ventrebleu! what a swell at a fancy ball!

Monstrosities bellow and Cerberus howls,
There's a flapping of bats and a hooting of owls:
The stuffed monkeys gibber, the great whales grin,
And the ravenous shark moves his dorsal fin.
The frogs are a-croaking, the toads crawl out,
And the hissing snakes wriggle around and about.

Thirteen black coffins stand round the hall,
And the hollow skulls scowl on me, fearfully all:
But the old maid's skeleton, gaunt and tall,
In the tatter'd remains of a mouldering pall,
Thin as a ramrod and yellow as gall,
Clanks her lank shanks from a nail in the wall.
Do tell! what a swell! mummy belle at a ball!

What with coffins and monsters, and death and disease,
The devil may smoke a pipe here, if he please,
Tho' the odor would make the old gentleman sneeze.
And the night, too, is awful—at sea, in a tub,
Ride witches and warlocks, and Belzebub.
There is fear upon earth, there is terror on high,
And the dull glare of tempest is hung in the sky.

Thirteen black coffins move round the hall!
And the pale tenants glare on me, fiendishly all;
And the old maid's skeleton, gaunt and tall,
In the tatter'd remains of a mouldering pall,
Which she wears with an air, as coquettes do a shawl,
Clanks her lank shank from a nail in the wall—
Kicks up her heels, and sends forth such a squall
As never was heard at bar, bull-bait or ball.

And still waxes louder the incubus-ball.
The old maid's skeleton, gaunt and tall,
Stalks to an ape, from her nail in the wall,
And away they spin, in a waltz fantastic,
In haste, as if urged by galenicals drastic;
Then an Arctic bear, all shaggy and grim,
Makes love to a porpoise that ogles him,
Till away they scramble and climb and swim,
Boas and crocodiles join the revels—
Liars and hypocrites, bigots and devils.

Thirteen black coffins stump round the hall,
And the foul corses glare at me, hatefully all;
But the old maid's skeleton, rigid and tall,
In the tatter'd remains of a mouldering pall,
Clanks her lank shank at the incubus-ball,
Till her articulations snap, scatter and fall!

I'd have given more tin than I ere had the knack to lose
To have shoved from my thorax a grim pterodactylus—
An amphibious monstrosity, half a mile long,
Which Geology lately has given to song,—
A personified nightmare, ten thousand years lodger
On earth before Adam, that luckless old codger.
"Go it boots!" and forgetting my usual urbanity,
I struck out right and left, perhaps uttered profanity,
And danc'd like a Dervise attack'd with insanity,
Till I stagger'd and fell on a part very tender.
I awoke and—it seems, I'd "been out on a bender!"

SHAMROCK.

HIBERNIAN STRANGFORD.

About this time twelve-months Lord Strangford died at the advanced age of seventy-five. He was another bead dropped from the intellectual rosary on which the literary votaries of the early part of this century placed faith, and on which the genius of Scott, Montgomery, Southey, Campbell, Byron, Moore, Coleridge, Shelley, Keats, Hunt, Landor, and Sam Rogers were strung. He was the senior of most of those literary friends and rivals, and with the exception of Rogers, Hunt and Landor, outlived them all. These old harp-strings may be said to live on the remembrance of their former vibrations, for as Shelley says—

"Music, when soft voices die, Vibrates in the memory."

Rogers, who survived Strangford a few months, did not make any noise for many years, save with the chinking of his coffers, or through the mouth of some transatlantic litterateur who partook of the toast and table-talk at the well-known literary breakfasts of the banker-bard.

Leigh Hunt, after a life of literary struggling, poetising, book-making and journalistic drudgery, is comparatively easy on two hundred pounds a-year, Queen's pension, and one hundred from the son of Shelley. In 1850, he published his "autobiography," which thoroughly sustains the opinion of the Democratic Review in being "well-tempered as the spring of a Geneva watch, genial as an Indian summer, and occasionally as sparkling as Christopher North's long-loved Glenlivet."

Landor, after bidding for the suffrages of futurity, by writing for the new of his own day, is occasionally heard from by some verses of various power on the movements of the period. In 1853, he published his "Last Fruit off an Old Tree;" of the political portions of which old Tory Blackwood has the most dreadful opinion, considering them "the most dangerous that could be taught." It is no use to sing to the critic, "Woodman spare that Tree," for the fact is Landor has been rather republican.

So much for the surviving contemporaries of "Hibernian Strangford."

Lord Strangford merits some particular remembrance not only that he was one of the "crowd of gentlemen who write," and gained a respectable reputation for what he did write, but because, as in the case of Leigh Hunt and Lord Chancellor Lyndhurst, he had American blood in his veins.

Percy Clinton Sydney Smythe was the eldest son of Lionel, Viscount Strangford and his wife Maria Eliza, who was eldest daughter of Frederick Philipse, Esq., of Philipseburg, New-York; and born 31st August, 1780. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he distinguished himself and graduated with a gold medal in his 20th year. The next year (1801), on arriving at his majority, he succeeded to his father's title, which out of forty-four Viscountships in Ireland is the sixth oldest; his family having been raised to that dignity (for God only knows what service) in 1628. Although his Lordship's genius did not (as Byron's did) put the coronet out of sight, still he had talent of more than average merit, winning manners, and a dispositon which he used with as much suavity as his pen. These accomplishments of mind and body well fitted him for the diplomatic service which he entered in 1803, and successfully cultivated for nearly a score of years in various missions. As Secretary of Legation to Lisbon, Minister of the British Government at the Courts of Brazil, and Stockholm, and Ambassador to Constantinople and St. Petersburg he exhibited considerable ability; in recognition of which he was raised to the English peerage by George IV. in 1825, with the title of Baron Pennshurst (Kent). In 1828 he was entrusted with a special mission to Brazil, and in this concluded his diplomatic labors.

Lord Strangford is chiefly known in Literature by his biography and translation of Camöens, the famous Portuguese whom Schlegel believes to have far surpassed Ariosto "in richness of color and luxuriance of fancy," and whose wonderful and ever-varying descriptions of nature, and especially the changing phenomena of the air and sea, wrought so deep an impression upon the observant and profound Humboldt, as to draw from him such applauding testimony as we find recorded in the "Kosmos." To do justice to such a poet, and popularize his refreshing numbers—his glowing grace, and rich descriptions of nature—necessarily commanded talents of a refined, poetic, and sympathetic character; and a success in the field chosen, was sure to accomplish for the translator a fixed place in the literary world.

The Edinburgh Review struck at the translation; but it has withstood the shock, and, after half a century, English taste and English criticism agree that Strangford made the Lusitanian bard gracefully popular and familiar to England. He "appreciated the genius and spirit of his original, and has faithfully conveyed it to the English readers; while his notes and annotations on the poet show his familiarity with both Portuguese and general literature." The work is now received among the classic versions of foreign authors. Four years after the publication, the translator (who did not confine himself alone to this species of literary love and labor) was of sufficient importance to inspire Lord Byron with a passage in his "English Bards, &c." which at once strikes at the personnel of the poet, and the popularity of his "harmonious fustian" among the "love-sick misses":

"Hibernian Strangford! with thine eyes of blue,
And boasted locks of red, or auburn hue,
Whose plaintive strain each love-sick Miss admires,
And o'er harmonious fustian half expires,
Learn, if thou canst, to yield thine author's sense,
Nor vend thy sonnets on a false pretence;
Think'st thou to gain thy verse a higher place
By dressing Camoens in a suit of lace?
Mend, Strangford, mend thy morals and thy taste;
Be warm, but pure—be amorous, but be chaste:
Cease to deceive; thy pilfer'd harp restore,
Nor teach the Lusian Bard to copy Moore."

Moore dedicated the first of his epistles in his "Poems relating to America," to Viscount Strangford, and in these very characteristic lines pays homage to his poetic claims and performances. The epistle is dated off the Azores:

"Yes, Strangford, at this hour perhaps,
Some lover, (not too idly blest,
Like those, who in their ladies' laps
May cradle every wish to rest),
Warbles, to touch his dear one's soul,
Those madrigals, of breath divine,
Which Camoen's harp from Rapture stole,
And gave, all glowing warm, to thine.
Oh! could the lover learn from thee,
And breathe them with thy graceful tone,
Such sweet, beguiling minstrelsy
Would make the coldest nymph his own."

Throughout Moore's diary there are many references to the friendliness which existed between the poets, but we must confine ourselves to one passage which we give, as it indicates Strangford's politics, and contains a brace of good things:

"31st Aug., 1825. Fixed to dine with Lord Strangford, at the Athenæum, in consequence of a note he wrote me yesterday, saying, "Surely, as none of your d——d Whig Dukes are in town, you could contrive, once in a way, to tete-a-tete it with me at the Athenæum.' Went to the printer with my proofs. Dinner with Lord S. at seven; a good deal of old fun between us. Told me of Canning's anger at him for not voting for the last Catholic Bill. Mentioned that on some one saying to Peel about Lawrence's picture of Croker, 'You can see the very quiver of his lips;' 'Yes,' said Peel, 'and the arrow coming out of it.' Croker himself was telling this to one of his countrymen, who answered, 'He meant arrah, coming out of it.'"

The allusion to Croker's lips reminds us of the same idea so finely expressed in Elizabeth Barrett Browning's "Lady Geraldine's Courtship:"

"——— there, the lips in silent passion, Curved like an archer's bow, to send the bitter arrows out."

"Lord Strangford's services to the literature of Portugal was recognized by his being made a Grandee of that kingdom, and a Knight of the Portuguese Order of the Tower and Sword. He died full of years and honors, having "troops of friends," on the 29th May, 1855, at his London residence in Harley street. He is succeeded in his title and estates by his eldest son, who was born at Stockholm, during his father's embassy there, and is known in political affairs as former member of parliament for Canterbury, and received with favor in literary circles as author of "Historic Fancies" and other works. He is the seventh Viscount Strangford in the Irish peerage, and the second Baron Pennshurst in that of the "United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

Mr. Millais, who for nearly twelve months has been rusticating in Scotland, exhibits five pictures in the Royal Academy's exhibition. The largest picture of the lot, and which will attract most attention, is called "Peace," and represents a convalescent officer leaning languidly back in his chair, and holding in his hand the open newspaper, in which the words "Conclusion of Peace" are plainly legible. On his knee sits his fair-haired wife, and on either hand is playing a little daughter—one being deeply engaged with a Noah's ark, part of the contents of which—a lion, a bear, a cock, and a turkey (Hogarthically symbolical of the four warlike powers)—are in the mother's lap. The little girl is holding up the dove with the olive branch in its mouth.

At the annual distribution of prizes, at the London Art Union, the 200*l.* prize was gained by Mr. James Scott, Bath; the 150*l.* prize by Mr. R. Keatley, Grimsby; and the three 100*l.* prizes by Messrs. J. Bradshaw, jun., Leeds; J. Bontott, Boston; and R. Robinson, Saint Helen's, Liverpool. The only Irish subscribers who obtained prizes were—Mrs. Armstrong, Dublin, and George Sands, Listowel, 25*l.* prize; and John Massey, Tipperary, and J. Patterson, Belfast, 15*l.* prize.

A public appeal has been made for relief on behalf of Mr. Frederick Incledon, son of the late celebrated Charles Incledon, the singer; the former, together with his wife and surviving children, being now in great distress in London.

Professor Owen has been appointed superintendent of the department of natural history and science in the British Museum; salary £800.

A sum of 46,000*l.* has already been subscribed as a guarantee fund for the contemplated art exhibition in Manchester.

A BED OF "'SPARAGUS."

THE SPARROWGRASS PAPERS: or Life in the Country. By FREDERICK S. COZZENS. Derby & Jackson.

This volume is a delicious specimen of typography, and is thereby an insinuating canvasser for the pleasant things contained therein. There is a great deal of humor, not a little wit, and much that is neither, but which is supposed to be one or the other, or probably both in it. In writing such papers—as are here collected—for a magazine, and with the intention of producing a monthly effect—an author is very liable, especially when his funny affinities are seriously and unceremoniously applauded, to rely on his manner when his matter gives out, so that a noticeable quantity may meet the eye of the expectant reader. A few good things carry off a half dozen or dozen pages at a time in a magazine, but when a year's growth of the same are raked up into a volume, the weeds are not so easily to be overlooked; and the flowers stand a doubtful chance of being able to overbalance them. Weeds are always heavier than flowers, and though the appreciative eye might find recompense in one glance of the Forget-me-not, for the vulgar stare of an entire field of Dandelions—still, we must remember that it is from the relief we find in the contrast, and that if we could have so ordered it, the Dandelions would be in the minority and the Blue-bells manifold.

Though we have the garish effect of the one in this volume, we must freely admit that it is in a minor degree. The bright, pleasant things are numerous. The motto from Bryant, on the title page, explains and apologizes for the variety—

"To him who in the love of Nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language."

We have the "various language" of nature, as the author understands the latter, translated with congeniality into the experiences of an attempt at country life; and bursting out of the ridiculous situations, (as stage critics say,) we have many beautiful and buoyant offshoots—bits of true nature; like cunning wild flowers leaping out from, though under the shelter of the grotesque rocks and stumps that form the leading features. Here is a picture of "the bird that tells things," which, if not as "grim, ungainly, ghastly, gaunt and ominous" as that bird or devil that came from the "Night's Plutonian shore" and stuck its beak into the heart of Edgar Poe, is not the less natural, for being a litte less romantic. It is recognizable in every coterie. The Carrier-Pigeon is not alone confined to MR. Sparrowgrass's village. No, indeed—look at the picture:—

"The Carrier Pigeon tells you all your friends say of you, and tells your friends all you say of them. The mode of tactics is somewhat in this wise: She goes to Mrs. Kornkobbe's, takes tea with that lady, pets the children, takes out her needle and thread, opens her little basket, pulls out a bit of linen, with a collar pattern pencilled upon it, puts on her thimble, then stitches away, and innocently asks Mrs. K. if she has heard that ridiculous story about her husband.

"Mrs. Kornkobbe has not heard of it, but bridles up, and would like to know who has had the impudence to say anything about her husband! The Carrier Pigeon does not like to mention names, but vaguely hints that something is in the wind. Mrs. K., of course, is anxious to know the particulars. Carrier Pigeon would not for the world hurt Mrs. K.'s feelings, but, just for her own satisfaction, she would like to ask 'where Mr. Kornkobbe's father was born?' Mrs. K. is ompletely nonplussed by this question, for, to use a mercantile phrase, she had never been posted up in regard to the incubation of her father-in-law, deceased some twenty years before she was married, and two years before she was born. Carrier Pigeon, seeing Mrs. K.'s trepidation, adds, carelessly, as it were, 'Your husband is an American, I believe?' Mrs. K. catches at that, and answers 'Yes.' 'German name?' Mrs. K. replies in the affirmative. 'That is all I want to know,' sighs the Carrier Pigeon. Whereupon Mrs. K., who is wrought up to fever point, answers, 'But that is not all I want to know;' and by dint of a deal of persuasion, finally draws out the important secret; the Carrier Pigeon has heard it reported all over the village, that Mr. Kornkobbe's father was nothing but a low German shoemaker. Now, if there is any information that Mrs. K. desires next in the world, it is to have the name of the person who said so; and Carries Pigeon, after a temporary struggle between duty and propriety, finally but reluctantly gives up Mrs. Marshmallow as the author, at which Mrs. Kornkobbe lets loose all the pent-up fury in her soul upon the whole Marshmallow tribe, from the old grandfather, who hands around the plate in church, down to the youngest member of the family, just recovering from the united attacks of sprue, measles, hooping-cough, and chicken-pock.

"The next day Mrs. Marshmallow, who really loves Mrs. K. like a sister, and who possibly might have repeated by way of a mere joke, and not as a reflection, that Kornkobbe, senior, had been a Teutonic cordwainer—the next day, Mrs. Marshmallow is visited by the Carrier Pigeon. Now Mrs. M. is a lady of much stronger mind than Mrs. K.; not so easily excited by any means; but Carrier Pigeon, by dint of hints, inuendoes, and all the artillery of shrugs and smiles, finally manages to excite her curiosity; and then, when pressed to divulge, after binding up Mrs. Marshmallow not to tell a living soul, and taking other precautions of like nature, reluctantly, after struggling again through duty and propriety, allows Mrs. Marshmallow to draw from her all and everything Mrs. Kornkobbe had said about her the previous evening; but, of course, does not say a word of the use she had made of Mrs. Marshmallow's name, by which the fire had been kindled, so as to bring Mrs. K. up to the scalding point. And, as the tone of the Carrier Pigeon would lead Mrs. M. to believe that all her friend, Mrs. Kornkobbe, had said was gratuitous, she at once makes up her mind that Mrs. Kornkobbe is a base, cold-blooded, double faced, malicious slanderer. How pleased she is that she has found her out. Explanation is out of the question; neither Mrs. K. nor Mrs. M. will condescend to notice each other, and Mr. Marshmallow and Mr. Kornkobbe go down to town in separate cars from that time and for ever.'

After reading this we expect to hear of a millenium. All the Mrs. Kornkobbes and Marshmallows will rush into each other's arms, and their better halves exchange newspapers in the cars! "The Battle of Rocky Caynon" is capital; and the adventure with the dumb-waiter in the deaf-house, a good subject for a farce.

At a sale of modern English pictures, last week, in London, Turner's "The Temple of Jupiter, Island of Ægina—Athens in the Distance," was bought by Mr. Gambart for £1,365.

The first edition of Victor Hugo's "Contemplations" was exhausted at Paris one day after the issue.

MAGAZINES FOR JUNE.

PUTNAM for June closes the seventeenth volume of that capital miscellany. We understand that its prosperity is increasing: and we are happy to add our word of commendation and respect for the ability, tone and literary character so marked and remarkable in its pages. If the foreign reviews could be purchased for half what can secure them at present, we would still recommend Putnam before them all. Not that we think less than we ought of the Westminster and Blackwood, but that we recognize a higher duty in the sustainment of so varied and well-conducted a periodical as Putnam. The present number is a good one. The very interesting paper on "Napoleon Buonaparte as a Family Man," is continued, and should have been concluded. "An American's Adventure in Pegu," is full of interest. Here is a graphic, and to us, who have never been sunstruck, seemingly probable imitation of coup de soleil. The author is exposed to the intensest heat of a tropical sun, a heat such as is experienced nowhere but in Burmah. He says:

"Very soon after the sun rose, I had begun to experience the wilting influence of his rays, and, as he mounted higher and higher, rapidly acquiring strength, I was fast becoming sick. At first I was seized with a fit of vomiting; then my mind became confused. For a moment I would forget where I was, but only for a moment; the next I would recover my recollection, and had a sense of dried peas with hot water poured upon them swelling in my skull; I became violently excited, raved, said I don't know what to the men around me, seized one, thinking he was about to attack me, and then fell over on my face in the bottom of the boat—coup de soleil."

The article, "On the Mountains," is delightful; and we cannot do better than make a couple of extracts. With the writer we fully acknowledge the nobility of the hills; their inspiration to liberty; their lessons to art; their brooding influence to the philosopher:

The effect of mountain scenery on the eye, is naturally much varied by lights and colors; the whole hue is very different in the clear, warm air of a southern landscape, and in the moist, vapory atmosphere of the North. The Alps glitter and glare in the dazzling splendor of everlasting ice, and yet greet us with the bright freshness of the color of youth, so that Italian poets with justice speak of their forest-covered brows, as of fit emblems of all that is imperishable. The granite fastnesses of Sweden loom up in subdued tints, fretted as they are by the tooth of time, and covered with the tender mantle of warm but sad-colored mosses. Dim, dismal mists forever shroud their hoary heads, and the melancholy songs of northern bards see, in their weather-beaten, decaying baldness, the irresistible power of age.

The colors of mountain scenes change with every season of the day and year, and herein lies one of their greatest beauties. As the deep valleys are now lighted up by gorgeous floods of sunshine, and now buried in dark night; as bold spurs, losing themselves into the plain, cast deep shadows on a sunny landscape, or rise, gilded by the rays of the setting sun, from out a sea of shadows, the whole of the mountain range assumes a new form. But more important still, for their effect at a distance, than the variety of different hues and changing shadows, is the principal form of the mountains themselves. A long straight line, rising to nearly equal height at all points, gives to a chain of mountains the appearance of a mere wall or rampart, that closes the horizon, and fills the mind with undefined sadness. Far more pleasing is the impression, when bold heights and sharp-pointed peaks break the uniformity here and there, as in our own Blue Ridge. Some countries boast of odd round mountains, that rise suddenly from the midst of large plains; they are mere shapeless masses, without any proportion, and convey not unfrequently to the mind the painful idea of a colossal grave-mound. Now and then, as on our northern waters, and in almost all long, far-stretching chains, formations are found, that appear to a lively fancy like familiar objects—a sleeping bear, a striking profile, or even a whole standing figure. Such forms may, of course, please our imagination and occupy our memory, but they often affect, unpleasantly, our æsthetic feeling, which cannot be satisfied with what is merely grotesque or amusing.

Also—

Nor must we forget, that mountains isolate men more than anything else on firm land. Rivers have become high-roads, and the ocean has been bridged over; but mountains, though covered with railway-tracks, and pierced by marvelous tunnels, will ever remain the great lines of division between kingdom and kingdom.

"Mountains interposed
Make enemies of nations, who had else,
Like kindred drops, been mingled into one."

With equal jealousy, they shelter their own children against all influences from without. Among them ancient customs and strongly-marked individualities survive, long after repeated revolutions have cut down all that grows on the plain to a dead level. The mountaineer's house is his castle in a better sense and to a much fuller extent than even the proud Englishman's home. There he dwells in simplicity, but in content. His soil is poor, his resources are few, but his wants, also, are modest. Hence poverty and hospitality are the strange twin-sisters that are ever found under his rock-covered roof. So it is all over the globe, wherever men dwell in peace. The scantier life appears among them, the less comfort and luxury are known—the more they are given to value aid and to afford ready shelter to the weary wanderer or the sufferer among themselves. Ritter, in his travels through Abyssinia, was long since led to the conclusion, that hospitality was at home in every Alpine region, in spite of their equally universal poverty.

What is, perhaps, least carefully noticed by the general observer in this kind of High Life is, the nomadic character of almost all dwellers on mountains. The sterility of the soil, in connection with the general activity of the race, drives them constantly away from their native land and leads them to emigrate, at least for a time, to distant countries, partly to sell there the products of their own industry and partly to seek there an ampler income and a provision for their declining years. Thus we find the brave Swiss serving foreign masters with a touching fidelity that makes ample amends for his mercenary service, whilst the humbler son of Savoy is content to clean chimneys and to play his hurdy-gurdy. The poor, frugal Gallego is found all over Spain, as cold Dalarm sends out her sons in winter, and her daughters in summer, to earn a living in Stockholm. The Fulah and the Zemindar of Kamaum but repeat in Africa and Asia the example of the Gallician Pole on the northern Carpathian mountains. But from east and west, from north and south, they all gather again around their early home, ere the silver cord be loosed and the golden bowl broken.

Even on their own mountains, these hardy children of men often lead a life that somewhat resembles the wandering life of the nomad. Thousands earn a scanty living by travelling, without rest and repose, over high, steep passes, and through dangerous valleys, followed by long lines of heavily-laden beasts of burden; others, who live by their cattle, change from the lofty senn-huts in summer to the well-sheltered valleys in winter, whilst in the Himalaya they have special villages built for each season.

The article on "OurLight-house Establishment" is full of useful and interesting information. The fourth part of "Scampavias," is given; which, with a review of Motley's Dutch Republic (appreciative, and slightly critical), an article on Chicago in 1856 (luminous and otherwise), a clever little story, and some dull verses, make up the number.

KNICKERBOCKER for June is, like to the Harper and Putnam, a great effort and a great success. The admirable variety which generally characterizes this favorable magazine is happily sustained by a series of brilliant and pleasant papers. The Editor's Table has almost the hearty pungency of an Irish stew; and has also the Steward or Clark who presides thereat. A specimen of original poetry is given, which is at once a clever composition and a keen commentary on the modus operandi by which some of our rising re-hashers of everybody else's thoughts get "first rate" notices from their friends of the press. Here is a specimen which must be admitted as equal to some of the finest things of Bryant, Gray, Shakspere or Dryden, not to mention Pope or Byron:—

"Truth crushed to earth shall rise again,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.
In thunder, lightning or in rain,
None but the brave deserve the fair.

* * * * * *

A change came o'er the spirit of my dream;
Whatever is, is right;
And things are not what they seem;
My native land, good night!"

HOUSEHOLD WORDS (June) is full of characteristic essays, tales and sketches. We have a picture of St. Patrick, by which we are informed that the pious Patricias according to report was—

"A man of small stature, but of great energy and activity of mind and body," and proofs are extant to prove that "his very aspect must have inspired regard and submission. He was truly humble, wore coarse garments, and worked cheerfully and stoutly with his own hands." He was "most sweet and affable in conversation, by which he accommodated himself to all sorts and conditions of people, and so gained their affections, that if it could be done, they would have plucked out their eyes and given them to him. Countless gifts were pressed upon him, which he always refused, except it were to relieve the poor or build religious houses. He slept on the bare ground, a stone his pillow, till fifty-five years old."

The SCHOOLFELLOW (June) is a delightfully illustrated juvenile bijou. Youth never had such inducements to study as is offered by it. The song-compelling nursery rhyme, entitled "The Faries," in the present number printed anonymously, is the production of William Allingham, a young Irish poet, residing in London, and chiefly occupied (if we mistake not) on Dickens' HOUSEHOLD WORDS.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

The Huguenot Exiles; or the times of Louis IV.—A Historical Novel	Harper & Brothers.
Mechanical Tables, &c. By Charles H. Haswell	" "
Learning to Think, &c. By Jacob Abbott	" "
Putnam's Monthly—June	Dix & Edwards.
Household Words—June	" "
Schoolfellow—June	" "
History of the Design of Flag of United States. (Public Document.)	Hon. A. G. Brown.
The Republican Quarterly Review—April: N. York	James J. Law.
Life of the Blind Virgin Mary.—No. I. By Monsignore Ronmald Gentilucci	Dunigan & Brother. (J. B. Kirker.)
The Physiology of the Senses, &c., &c. By A. B. Johnson	Derby & Jackson.
Gabriel Vane: His Fortune and Friends. By Jeremy Lond, author of "Dovecote."	" "
Adventures of Jules Gerard, the Lion Killer, of Algeria. By Charles E. Whitehead.

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

To THOS. F. MEAGHER., Editor and Proprietor of the Irish News:

DEAR SIR:—Although I am the author of many volumes, and have taken much interest in Irish matters, yet this is my first letter to the editor of an Irish newspaper, and I hope it will be my last. I have matter of great importance to communicate—namely, Hugh Forbes' work, on the Art and Science of War, is just published. This work should be termed the REVOLUTIONARY BIBLE. The title given to it by the author is "Manual for the Patriotic Volunteer; or, Active Service in Regular or Irregular War, being the art and science of obtaining and maintaining Liberty and Independence: by Hugh Forbes. In two volumes. New-York: Wm. H. Tinson, Printer, 24 Beekman street."

To acquire the Art and Science of War, and teach it to my countrymen without price, have been the objects of my life. On arriving in this country, three days after landing, I declared my intention in Clinton Hall, on the 7th of April, 1849. The New-York Nation made a note of it. In this paper I published a lesson on the Art and Science of War, almost every week for a year. Some of these lessons were printed in pamphlet form, and extensively circulated among my countrymen, free of expense.

My next effort to carry out my object, was to publish a work on irregular warfare. This work was termed "The Art and Science of War, for the Irish People. The pike exercise, Foot Lancers, Light Infantry and Rifle Drill; to which is added a short practical treatise on Small Arms and Ammunition, Street and House fighting, and Field Fortification."

I then commenced to deliver free lectures on the Art and Science of War, to the Irish people, and published my principal lectures in book form. Of my books, I made presents of 20,000 copies; for all this labor and outlay I never received or demanded a single dollar. The appearance of Forbes' work brings my labors to a close. It contains all that a people can require to obtain and retain Liberty. All true patriots—all who regard their country's welfare as paramount—should be prepared to act at the moment when action can be of service.

Those who would delay preparation, till the proper time of action shall present itself, are simpletons or knaves; for preparation must occupy time, and thus those precious days which should be spent in action, would be frittered away in making those arrangements which ought to exist always, ready for use at the first propitious hour. Let Irishmen now and henceforth distinguish between the men who want to be prepared, that they may act efficiently at any moment, and those who fear to have matters properly organized, lest some day they might be called upon to put their boasted patriotism into practice. The ink is hardly dry which signed the treaty of peace at Paris, ere fresh indications of war are manifest. On the one hand, we see very strong symptoms of an alliance between France and Russia, against England; while on the other hand we discern evidences of hostile intentions, on the part of both France and England, against this country. In a late paper, I read the reply of the French Minister of War to the U. S. officers, in which he said, dismissing them, "Good-bye, till the first cannon shot."

I repeat, therefore, that he who does not desire to be PREPARED—that he who would defer his instruction till the day of action, is not sincere in his professions of patriotism. Such men are not to be relied on.

A short practical treatise on Regular and Irregular war, for active service, was the great want of a people seeking Liberty and Independence. I had, therefore, made many collections, which might serve as an essay toward supplying that deficiency; but when "Forbes' Manual of the Patriotic Volunteer" fell in my way, I found the first part of the book so well adapted to the purpose which I had in view, that I determined to bring my labors to a close, in this way, by merely recommending the truly valuable work of Hugh Forbes.

The author has, I think, shown much good judgment in the management of a subject so extensive, in the partition and the arrangement of his materials, as well as in the limits which he has given to them, with respect to quantity; and he is in general sufficiently happy in the clearness of his explanations. These, it will readily be allowed, are not the least considerable merits in a work of such moment. It would, indeed, occasion very little additional trouble to render the book wholly applicable to the case of Ireland, and to the feelings of the Irish people. However, it only remains for me to tell our Irish citizen-soldiers, that the work is now to be had of the following booksellers:

I am my dear Sir, yours truly,
OLIVER BYRNE,
Civil, Military, and Mechanical Engineer, &c., &c.

New-York, Messrs. De Witt & Davenport; Albany, N. Y., P. S. Gilbert; Rochester, N. Y., D. M. Dewey; Buffalo, N. Y., A. Burke; Newark, N. J., J. L. Adgens; Philadelphia, Pa., J. B. Peterson; Reading, Pa., H. A. Lantz; Harrisburg, Pa., Geo. Bergner; Baltimore, Henry Taylor; Richmond, Va., Geo. W. West; Charleston, N. C., J. G. Courtenay; Augusta, S. C., M. G. M'Kinne; New-Orleans, B. M. Norman; St. Louis, E. K. Underwood; Chicago, Keen & Lee; Detroit, S. D. Elwood & Co.; Sandusky, Chas V. Olds; Providence, R. I., D. Kimball & Co.; New-Haven, Conn., D. C. Mitchel & Son; Bridgeport, Conn., John Cornwall; Boston, Mass., W. V. Spencer; Wooster, Mass., G. Baker & Co.; Springfield, Mass., W. Bessey; Fall River, Mass., S. P. Pope; Montreal, Canada, John Armour; Quebec, P. Sinclair; Halifax, E. G. Fuller.

THE ELEVENTH REGIMENT,

Col. Van Beuren, made its first Spring parade, on the 19th ult.: the following companies, composing the command, mustering at Washington Square, pursuant to orders, viz.:—A troop of Lancers, Lieut. O'Riley commanding; the Montgomery Guard, Capt. Murphy; City Guard, Capt. Le Bau; Continental Guard, Lieut. Van Valer commanding; Irish-American Guard, Capt. Brady; Union Rifles, Lieut. Pye commanding; and City Rifles, Capt. Zanger. On the ground, an incident occurred, illustrating and inculcating the beauty and necessity of punctuality to the soldier. The time designated in the regimental order for the formation of the line, was half-past one o'clock, P. M. In accordance with the order, the Adjutant's call was sounded at that hour, as the signal for the formation; and the 1st Sergeant of each Company present, reported and received his Company's post, in line. The line was formed—the Montgomery Guard receiving the right of the regiment. Just then, the Continental Guard, under Capt. Helme came up, and claimed their usual post of the right of the column, but Capt. Murphy objected, as they had been absent at the formation of the line, and he claimed the post which had been assigned him as the next senior-captain. Adjutant Pinckney refused to interfere, as he had merely complied with the orders that had been issued by his commandant, and to the latter officer the case was accordingly referred. Col. Van Beuren requested the Captain of the Montgomery Guard to surrender the disputed post to Capt. Helme. But Capt. Murphy still respectfully declined. He replied that the post had been assigned him as his right, in the absence of Capt. Helme, who had not appeared within the time specified in the regimental order—that, not as a matter of churlish feeling, but to avoid establishing a vicious precedent in favor of remissness, he would retain the right of the 11th regiment, for the day—unless the Colonel decided his claim was invalid, and ordered him to retire from the position:—in which case he would consider himself excused from the parade, and leave to the commandant the responsibility of his withdrawal. The Colonel decided that he was right in his position, and would not deprive him of it—whereupon Capt. Helme abruptly withdrew from the parade, leaving his Company in charge of his first-lieutenant!

The regiment was subsequently marched to Madison Square, where it went through several evolutions, the mediocre style of which might be in some measure accounted for by the unfavorable nature of the ground. The Montgomery Guard escorted the colors to and from the parade ground, and both of their platoons presented a splendid front. The City Guard looked well in their model uniform, although their force was slender. The Irish-American Guard also made a creditable appearance on this parade, both in numbers and bearing. We noticed in some of the companies a fullness of front altogether disproportioned to the rear of their platoons, which is a feature to be avoided.

We had not an opportunity of seeing the parade of the 7th regiment, on the same day, thereby losing, as we have been told, a sight worth seeing.

PARADES IN THE CITY.

Several corps of our citizen-soldiery paraded on Monday, the 19th ult. The Second Brigade, Gen. Yates, paraded at Hamilton Square, including the 4th Regiment, Col. Hincken, consisting of one battery of four pieces and three squadrons of Horse; the 5th Regiment, Jefferson Guard, Col. Swatzwalder, about 250 men; 6th Regiment, Governor's Guard, Col. Pinckney; and the 75th Regiment, Republican Rifles, Lieu't-Col. Haggerty, commanding.

Such of the movements as we witnessed—such as changing front on 1st and 3d battalions; advancing in line; wheeling into column, and forward into line—were very well done. It seemed to us that the firing and skirmishing of the 75th were executed with superior ability, and that they would have appeared to better advantage had not their supply of ammunition unexpectedly failed. Owing to some misunderstanding among the men, as to the kind of pants to be worn, the ranks were not as well filled as they might have been.

We understand that the 9th Regiment, Col. Pitkin, will parade, at East New-York, with the 3d Brigade, in June next. The regiment paraded in Tompkin's square on the 26th ult.

The 69th Regiment was paraded with the 4th Brigade, on the 4th of June in the city. Why was this made a city parade? We supposed that some suitable ground in the country would have been selected—and such a selection would certainly be more satisfactory to both officers and men than the present arrangement. The regiment will drill in the City Arsenal in the latter part of the month.

We have no information as to the summer parade of the 75th, but, in connection with this subject, we beg to make a suggestion, viz.:—a joint parade of these regiments at a time and place to be fixed by the commandants. It seems to us that this would be a good and fraternal movement, and one, to which neither Cols. Pitkin, Ryan, nor McCunn would object. But to secure the success of this project, it should have not only the passive assent, but the active concurrence of these gentlemen. What say you, Messrs. les Colonels, to a joint Parade before the expiration of the summer?

GUYON CADETS.

Mr. Lawrence Glynn, of Yorkville, has been unanimously elected second-lieutenant of this Company.

Obituary.

On Sunday last, Harry Downes, late Acting Adjutant of the Ninth Regiment, N. Y. S. M., Captain of the O'Brien Guard, and formerly a member of the Guyon Cadets, was interred in Greenwood.

The high estimation in which he was universally held, was fully testified to by the immense cortege, reaching along Broadway from John street to the South ferry, which attended his remains to their resting place.

The O'Brien Guard were there in force. And the Guyons (Capt. Murphy), ever foremost to render all honor to true worth, fully equipped and uniformed, with their colors appropriately draped, wearing crape on their left arms, attended by Shelton's band, plaintively rendering the soul-touching airs of "The Adeste," "O Sanctissima," and "Auld Lang Syne," formed the Guard of Honor, and with admirable precision discharged three vollies over the grave of their true-hearted, departed, lamented brother.

U. S. Army Intelligence.

[From our Washington Correspondent.]

The following assignments to duty of officers of the Quarter-Master's Department, are made in pursuance of the War Department Circular, of June 10, 1854, viz.:—

1. Brevet Brigadier-General H. Stanton, to duty in the city of New-York.
2. Lieutenant-Colonel C. Thomas, to duty in the city of Philadelphia.
3. Brevet Lieut. Col. T. Swords, to duty in the Department of the Pacific.
4. Major G. H. Crossman, to duty at St. Louis, Missouri.
5. Major D. H. Vinton, to duty at San Antonio, Texas.
6. Major O. Cross, to be relieved in the Dept. of the Pacific—his new station to be designated hereafter.
7. Brevet-Major E. S. Sibley, will report to the Quartermaster-General for special duty.
8. Capt. R. E. Clary, to duty in the superintendence of the transportation of army supplies, on the Red and Arkansas rivers.
9. Brevet Lieut. Col. E. C. Myers, to duty at Fort Leavenworth.
10. Brevet-Major W. W. Chapman, to duty at Benicia, Cal.
11. Capt. F. H. Masten, to duty at Fort Pierre, N. T.
12. Capt. S. Van Vliet, to duty at Fort Brown, Texas.
13. Capt. P. T. Turnley, to duty at Corpus Christi, Texas.

The Quartermaster-General will give the necessary instructions to carry into effect the foregoing changes, which will be commenced without delay, and executed successively, as the interest of the service may permit.

By order of the Secretary of War.

S. Cooper, Adjutant-General.

We understand that Stringer & Townsend are about to issue a volume entitled "Chit-Chat," by Pierce Pungent, who was whilom one of the wits of Frazer's Magazine.

Humboldt, who is now past eighty years old, is said to be as busy as he ever was in his younger days, completing his "Cosmos." Those best acquainted with him, notice no failure either in his physical or intellectual system, and his friends think he bids fair to reach 100 years.

"Out West" Correspondence.

The traders from Sante Fe and Salt Lake have come in, bringing considerable cash with them, purchasing largely and reporting favorably of those markets; a gentleman from Salt Lake informed me that he has never made the trip before without having as in the present instance met any Indians, he having come through in forty-two days without sighting a red-skin. From Kansas we have daily reports by telegraph and mail stating that the patriotic citizens of both sides are making laudable and energetic preperations to stab, shoot, and murder each other for the good and well-being of the Union, and will doubtless do so to a considerable extent, if our respected "Uncle" does not promptly restrain, and if necessary, duresse, the rapid fanaticism which is at present flaunting itself in the rival matters of "Free Soil" and "Ruffianism." Henceforth therefore let no American critic compassionately condemn the uncivilized particulars of a "Tipperary row" or "Kerry melee;" as to such, a crushing reply is returned in the single word "Kansas."

We have had the first grand instalment of "Higher water," from the upper Misssisippi. Crowned with drift and foam, the rapid and eddying flood has spread itself over the lower bottoms and brimmed the ordinary bank-dykes have been looked to, and levees put under guard to combat, and turn the besieging flood as it rolls grandly on in such mood and array as inspired the famous epic of "Ward." the rise from the Missouri has not yet come down and it is yet but a matter of speculation whether the marks of 53, 50, or 45 will be reached in June.

To Lieutenant Maury, or that man of "Circles," and "Terms,' Mr. Meriam, it may be interesting to know that this section has been visited with "tempestuous belts," of late, in one of which having the misfortune to be caught on the river, I may be permitted to chronicle the results as an "eye (and ear) witness:" it fell out on this wise, that being on board the John Simpson bound from Memphis to Cairo on the night of Saturday April 26th, at 10.30 P. M., when at the foot of Flower Island, some 70 miles north of Memphis, we were struck suddenly by a tornado, which wrenched off our smoke stacks, ripped away our larboard wheel-house, stove in part of the cabin, and started the entire upper works some 12 inches, careening us until our starboard guard lay 3 feet under water, and carrying overboard portions of our cargo, two deck hands and one passenger; that our loss was not entire may be attributed, under Providence, to the heroism of our pilot, Mr. James Cooper, of Nashville, a young man who stood by his wheel amid the crashing of the stays and hog chains when the great chimneys came down close by where he stood, and when the pilot house threatened to be instantly blown away like a dry leaf, there he stood alone in the pitchy blackness, his wheel hard down, death looking him closely in the face, and nerved only by the heroic sense of duty; the engineers likewise stood by, and though one to his knees in water and believed her to be sinking as we all did, obeyed the pilo'ts alarm bell, and by pumping the boilers full prevented the explosion which would otherwise have been inevitable when we righted. So that you see you do not monopolize either all the danger or heroism on the great deep, and "Cooper" may be named with him who worked the cannon on the Arctic, and the captain of the "Three Bells."

Literary and Artistic News.

A new book, published at Cincinnati, entitled "The Old Corner Cupboard," is hailed in the most excited manner by the editor of a Louisville paper. It comes to us, he writes, "like a bubbling limpid spring to the weary traveller in a desert waste. It is more than welcome or grateful; it is a luxury." The editor is tired of fiddle-faddle and sensation-books, and believes the "Corner Cupboard" to be "the work of a true, straight-forward, womanly mind." The writer is supposed to be a Swedenborgian, and the story embraces the "ulterior life" of a woman without extraordinary genius, from her girlhood in Massachusetts to her death in the West.

Apropos of a vision which held the eye of Pierce Pungent, and which is duly reported for the readers of the Daily News, Pierce says:—"A library is the catacomb of human wits; the churchyard holds the skull—the library the beings that once peopled that dome of thought and palace of the soul. Often, when sitting alone, surrounded by our books—some of the old original folios, volumes that the very authors of them had seen with their own eyes—have we almost fancied we saw their departed masters issue from their gloom and stand bodily before us."

During the year 1854, 861 works in the Russian language, and 351 in foreign languages, were printed in Russia, besides 2,940 scientific and literary treaties in the different periodicals. The number of authors was 1,239; that of printing offices (for works in the Russian language) 85, of which 45 were at work in St. Petersburg, 16 in Moscow, and the remainder in various other parts of the Empire.

M. Adolphe Adam, the composer, died at Paris on Saturday, from congestion of the brain, in his fifty-third year. He was a most voluminous and popular composer for the French stage; he produced some church music, wrote musical criticisms, and exhibited prodigious industry. In 1847 he lost a large part of his fortune by becoming director of the Theatre Lyrique.

Longfellow's Evangeline and Voices of the Night have been translated by the Chevalier de Chatelain, the translator of Chaucer and Gay. They are issued in a neat style by Huelin of Jersey, and Rolands of London.

Mr. Charles Knight calculates that in the year 1744 the people of England did not expend more than £100,000 a year on books, newspapers, and publications of every kind; but that in 1844 they expended £2,085,600, being an increase of twenty-fold, whilst the population had increased only two and a half fold.

On the occasion of the late Mozart Festival at Regensburg, among the spectators was observed the poor old and forgotten Nanette Schikaneder, weeping before the flower-wreathed bust of the departed master. She sang the music of the "Genius" at the very first representation of the Zauberflote.

M. Cucornet, a French artist, who, being without hands, painted with his feet, and whose pictures were often exhibited at the Louare, has just died in Paris.

City News.

At a late meeting of the Board of Ten Governors, it was stated that the Small Pox Hospital will be ready in about six weeks. About 48 men are at work in the shoe shop recently opened, making shoes required at the institutions. Mr. Charles P. Bishop was appointed chief clerk to the Governors, in place of Mr. Corwin, deceased. The weekly statement (ending 27th ult.) shows that the whole number of persons at the Almshouse, Hospitals, Prisons, &c., in charge of the Governors, is 5,739, which is a decrease of 78 from the previous week.

The Alderman Committee on the reception of Ex-President Fillmore, have determined to send a barge down the bay to receive him. One hundred guns will be fired, and he will be entertained at the St. Nicholas Hotel. Fillmore is expected in the Atlantic about the middle of June.

An accident occurred to the steamer Robt. L. Stevens while on an excursion. She was run into off Long Branch by a schooner, and the machinery disabled. She had about two hundred passengers on board.

A meeting of sympathy for the Cape de Verde Island sufferers was held on the 28th. Although there were but 30 persons present, the sum of $106 was paid in cash, and committees appointed to collect funds.

A May Queen Festival was given at the Odeon, Brooklyn, on the 28th ult., by the young ladies of Public School No. 18. The proceeds were devoted to the purchase of books for the schools.

Special Notices.

HEAD-QUARTERS OF

BARGAINS IN DRY GOODS!

AT RODGER'S, 340 BOWERY,

Between Bond and Great Jones Streets.

CONSISTING of an elegant assortment of Embroidery and Lace Goods, Barages, Lawns, and Barage-Delaines. With a splendid assortment of Stella Shawls, and the latest styles of Mantillas.

Ladies, bear in mind, we always carry out the adage, that "the nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling!" 1m Jun7

DR. B. F. ADAMS,

SURGEON DENTIST, (formerly of Barclay street,) feeling grateful for the patronage so liberally bestowed upon him for the last fourteen years, respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he has taken an elegant suite of rooms, at

NO. 122 CHAMBERS STREET,

(near the Sixth and Eighth Avenue Railroads,) where he may always be found, ready to perform all operations pertaining to his profession, in a manner unsurpassed, and on the most reasonable terms. Whole or part sets of incorruptible teeth inserted without pain, on gold plate or gutta percha, excelling nature in beauty and durability. No impure gold or dangerous amalgams used. Irregularities in children's teeth prevented, or of adults remedied. Cleansing, extracting, &c. &c., all at reduced prices. Sets of teeth inserted on Silver or Gutta Percha, for six shillings each. Teeth examined, and advice given free of charge. Please call.

3m7jun B. F. ADAMS, 122 Chambers street, New-York.

NEW STORE

AND

NEW GOODS.

THE subscriber having leased for a term of years the premises

374 Hudson street,

and made exthnsive additions thereto, and having laid in a large stock o

Carpeting and Oil Cloths,

mostly bought at Auction, for CASH, is now prepared to sell them at the following extremely low prices:

Tapestry Brussels, 8s. usually sold at 10s.
Three Ply Ingrain 8s. usually sold at 10s.
Superfine do 6s. usually sold at 8s.
Fine do 5s. usually sold at 6s.
Common do All WOOL 3s. 6d. per yard, a price absolutely unheard of.

Ingrain, Cotton Warp and Wool Filling 2s. 6d.
Oil Cloths 3s. per yard, usually sold at 5s.

Mats, Matting, Table and Piano Covers, Venetian and Hall Carpetting, Stair Rods, &c. &c.

Clergymen and Churches furnished at wholesale prices.
Goods in all cases warranted as represented.

3mjun J. R. Landon, 374 Hudson street, New-York, a few doors from Hamersly.

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

325 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK. 6mJune7

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

JOHN FOLEY,

MANUFACTURER OF FINE GOLD PENS

BEST QUALITY ONLY.

GOLD AND SILVER PENCIL CASES.

my24tf No. 163 Broadway, New-York.

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled. JOHN HAMILTON, S. W. JOHNSON.

tf

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, via Southampton and Havre, per U. S. steamer Baltic, will close at this office on Saturday, the 7th day of June, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

my17 Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for California, &c., per U. S. Steamer Illinois, will close at this office on Saturday, the 7th day of June, at 10½ o'clock A. M. Isaac Fowler, Postmaster.

OFFICE of Receiver of Taxes—New City Hall, Park, May 29, 1856.—Public notice is hereby given that there is no such office as Collector of Arrearages on Personal Taxes, and that no person but the undersigned, or Henry B. Venn, Esq., appointed for that purpose, to be found at this office, is authorized to receive any moneys due for arrears on Personal Taxes.

je7 6t HENRY H. HOWARD, Receiver of Taxes.

Central American News.

Further from Nicaragua by the Illinois.

The United States Mail steamship Illinois arrived at this port on the 29th. She has brought two weeks later news from California. A Republican State Convention was held in Sacramento on the 30th of April, at which delegates were chosen to attend the National Convention on the 17th of June next. The Republican movement is making rapid progress in the Pacific State. We publish elsewhere an account of a dreadful affray in Mariposa County, in which some fourteen Mexicans and Chileans were killed by Americans. There has been no fighting in Oregon since the date of previous advices. Later news has been received from the Sandwich Islands and the South Pacific. An important commercial treaty has been concluded between this country and Ecuador.

We have also received, by the Illinois, late and interesting news from Nicaragua and Costa Rica. The war between the two Republics may be considered at an end. Cholera, it seems, had attacked the Costa Rican forces in Rivas, and the Commander-in-Chief assigns this as a reason for a retreat from the country he had invaded. The Costa Ricans do not conceal their disappointment at the little sympathy they have receieved from the natives of Nicaragua; and from the tone of the official dispatches which we have translated and publish elsewhere, it will be seen that they are by no means as confident of conquering Walker as they were, or pretended to be at the commencement of the campaign. According to latest advices, the retreat of the Costa Ricans had been commenced, and the probability is, that they will never renew the invasion. If they do, Walker will be prepared to meet them.

The Costa Rican Buleten Oficial of May 3, the latest date received, contains an address from President Mora to the officers of his army, thanking them for their efficient services, and for their valor in Santa Rosa, Rivas and Sarapiqui. Here it is:

CHIEFS AND OFFICERS OF THE ARMY AND COMPANIONS IN ARMS!

Your President, your General-in-Chief, desires to express his satisfaction at the noble conduct you have displayed from the commencement of the campaign until this day.

Before entering upon an undertaking which had for its object the Independence of Central America, I had faith in your valor, your self-denial, your patience and your discipline, but your deportment has exceeded all my hopes. You have exalted these qualities to a heroism.

It is not only admiration that I feel, but a tenderness and affection. You have done more than your duty. It was by an excess of courage that Costa Rica has lost on the battle fields of Santa Rosa and Rivas the most distinguished defenders of her liberties—the flower and hope of the country.

I can bear witness that, on the glorious day of the 11th of April, I saw some of your brethren die, and the grief that I felt was only recompensed by the pride of knowing that they had armed in defence of Central America. I shed tears of sorrow and of enthusiasm.

If I loved my country before, I am now, in consequence of your achievements, very proud of being your Chief.

Thanks, chiefs and officers of the army, for the victories of Santa Rosa, Rivas and Sarapiqui, by which you have given to Costa Rica the brightest page of her history. Thanks,—for the glory with which you have covered yourselves was not gained in a fratricidal struggle, but in a war against the invaders of Central America. Thanks, for you have given an example and a lesson to our friends, and to our adversaries you have shown that you are able, without any aid, to defend Central American rights. You have given them a lesson which will teach the fillebusteros of Walker that in a combat of fifteen minutes, as in Santa Rosa, or in a struggle of twenty hours, as at Rivas, the revolver and the rifle cannot resist the impetus of Costa Rican bayonets.

Chiefs and officers, the rout of the fillibusters has been completed in four engagements; the occupation of San Juan and Rivas, and the possession of the line of transit are the results of our campaigns. We have overcome a thousand obstacles and dangers beyond human calculation, and in fighting for the interests of the Republic, have achieved glory for the army and honor for themselves. There is no dishonor in yielding to the influences of an unhealthy climate. We can retire now to our territory in tranquil security, leaving our enemy exhausted, without prestige, without resources, and better prepared for flight than for resistance. If the treaties formed with Guatemala, San Salvador, and Honduras, are continued, we shall very soon extinguish the bandits who are now profaning a part of the Nicaraguan Territory.

Companions in Arms! Let me reiterate the expression of my gratitude and affection. You have endured with equal fortitude the inactivity of the camp and the dangers of the battle field. You have been as intrepid under the enemy's fire as you were enduring under the privations of the campaign in a foreign country; and now, let us return to our frontiers, assured that the country will recognize our services, with the satisfaction of having done our duty to our country and of having secured the interests of the Republic. JUAN R. MORA.

Rivas, April 25, 1856.

THE CHOLERA IN THE COSTA RICAN ARMY—NECESSITY FOR RETREAT.

From the Boletin Oficial, May 3.

Our valiant chiefs and soldiers have endured great sacrifices. When they went from victory to victory, and achieved, with heroic troops and the Divine protection, a complete triumph over a perfidious enemy; when, with greater enthusiasm and faith, they were preparing to drive that enemy from his last place of shelter, when they were expecting assistance from their brethren in Guatemala, Salvador and Honduras, who were coming to crown the work so brilliantly commenced—then the cholera, that terrible enemy, that invisible and fatal calamity, against which neither bayonets nor cannon nor the most heroic valor can contend—the cholera suddenly made its appearance in their ranks.

About the 24th ult., rumors were circulated in Rivas to the effect that some symptoms of this epidemic had been remarked, caused by an inconsiderate use of fruit. On that day, six cases were reported, and on the following, thirty. What could be done? How fight with the enemy in a climate so dangerous, where, during the last few years, thousands have been swept away by this dreadful disease.

In this critical situation, it was not possible either to remain stationary or to advance. The worthy Chief of the Republic and of the Army, appreciating the value of his soldiers, would not expose them any longer to be the victims of a fatal plague. Fortunately there had not been many deaths, but who is ignorant of the rapidity with which the cholera devours its victims?

In military history these counter-marches are frequent, for an epidemic is an enemy that cannot be fought, an enemy that destroys the heroes who have conquered and survived victory.

WALKER'S MEN ARRIVING AT ASPINWALL.

From the Aspinwall Courier, May 9.

The steamer Teviot arrived here from Greytown, on the 7th. She brings no news from the interior. Some dozen or more of Walker's men came in her, from Greytown, having straggled there—they had left some two months since. Provisions are said to be very short at Greytown. The blockade is kept by H. B. M.'s Eurydice—there being none other there.

The Aspinwall Courier, of May 20th, states that the Costa Ricans commenced their retreat about the 24th, and to the 29th, the entire army had vacated Nicaragua, all of them having marched to Guanacosta—except some fifty men who were at San Juan del Sud, shipping the wounded by water for Punta Arenas.

We have heretofore given an account of the battle of Rivas, which is confirmed. At 3 A. M. on the 12th, being out of ammunition, Walker marched out of the city to the fife and drum—and for four hours the Costa Ricans continued to fire at the church which he had vacated. His force in the battle was 400 foreigners, and 300 natives, and that of the Costa Ricans 3,000.

The Costa Ricans represented themselves as having been entirely deceived; that Walker was far preferred by the natives, and that instead of being received with open arms by Nicaraguans, they had been shunned or attacked at every point. Baron Burow was exceedingly dissatisfied, both at the conduct of the Costa Ricans, and the falsity of the representations that had been made to him respecting Walker's condition and the feeling of the Nicaraguans towards him and his army.

The Star and Herald, of Saturday, represents the church of Rivas to have been robbed by Walker's men, and refers to other plunder by them. We have the authority of those who have watched Walker's movements throughout the past year, for saying, that he has never allowed plunder; and that he has never taken anything from foreigners and natives in Nicaragua, except by government levies.

No church in Nicaragua contains images with precious stones or jewels of any considerable value upon them; the church at Rivas has images in it, is without a roof, wholly unfurnished, and has never been used as a place of worship. So much for the story of the Star and Herald, that images were robbed of diamonds, and used as barricades in the church.

MARRIAGES.

At St. Patrick's Church, Cashel, Margaret, daughter of P. Lyttleton, to Nicholas, son of the late P. Dunne, of Mountmellick.

At St. Mary Shandon, Cork, John Harding, son of Henry Bible, Pope's quay, to Letitia Alice, daughter of the late Thomas Greenslead, of Londonderry.

At Melbourne, Victoria, George M'Cleverty, of Ballarat, to Mary, daughter of Edward Gill, of Dublin.

At Drumcondra, Thomas, son of the Right Hon. Baron Greene, to Sylvia Maria, daughter of the late Vice Admiral Sir Josiah Coghill.

At the Church of the Carmelite Nuns, Tranquilla, Rathmines, John Henry, to Susan Fanny, daughter of the late John Crolly, Esq., of Lough Fahon, and niece of the late Most Rev. Archbishop Crolly.

At Kiltarton Chapel, M. Daly Nolan, M. D., of Gort, to Eliza Mary Frances, eldest daughter of Francis J. Davys, resident magistrate at Gort and Clonbourne.

At Castlecaulfield, James Pepper to Beatrice Hamilton Campbell, daughter of Joshua Willcocks, of Beechvalley House, Dungannon, Tyrone.

At Cork, Richard Kelly to Mary, daughter of the late Abraham J. Good.

At London, Hugh M'Calmont Cairns, M. P., to Mary Harriet, daughter of the late John M'Neile, of Parkmount, Antrim.

At the Church of the Sardinian Embassy, and afterwards at St. George's, Bloomsbury, James Stephens, H. C., Merchant's road, Galway, to Marguerite, daughter of the late Capt. John Stewart, of Mount Stewart, and adopted child of the Hon. James Herron Conroy, of Charlotte Town, Prince Edward's Island.

DEATHS.

At 31 North Cumberland street, Dublin, John Finlay, LL. D., late Assistant Barrister for the county Louth, aged 76 years.

At 16 Lower Fitzwilliam street, Dublin, in the 76th year of his age, Sir Edward Tierney, Bart., of Churchtown, and Kanturk, county Cork, for many years crown solicitor for the north-west circuit.

At Harwicke street, Dublin, Mary Anne, widow of John D'Arcy, of Hyde Park, county Westmeath.

At Blessington street, Sarah Emily, daughter of Isaac English.

At Richmond street, Mountjoy square, Maria, relict of William Kennedy, of Chittagong, East Indies.

At 14 Hardwicke place, Helen, widow of William Piers Cruise, Q. C., aged 75.

At Merrion square, Anne Roberts, daughter of John Drew Atkin.

At Leinster street, Wm. John A. Shaw, of Caledon, Tyrone.

At Merrion terrace, John Joseph Donellan.

At 62 Capel street, Dublin, Anne, the wife of Dan. Shean, for many years connected with the Theatre Royal.

At James's street, Dublin, George Benson, aged 65 years.

At Mountpleasant square, Dublin, W. Pigott.

At Ballybough road, aged 73, Marcella, relict of John Gorman.

At Peafield terrace, Blackrock, Frederick Blood, of the Royal Navy.

At Fort William, Glasthule, Kingstown, Geo. James Baldwin.

At St. Catharine, Lucan, aged 88 years, Capt. G. Duff.

At Kilnaleek, county Cavan, the Rev. William E. Hearn, vicar of Kildrumferton.

At Doe Castle, Donegal, the Rev. J. G. Maddison, formerly Rector of West Monkton.

At Cullaghmore, county Carlow, the Rev. George B. Dawson, rector of Aghada.

At Ferns, Wexford, the Rev. Henry Moore, rector of Kilbride and Ferns, aged 71.

In Cork, Eliza, daughter of the late R. Galwey, of Fort Richard.

At Westport, Mayo, Margaret, wife of T. A. M'Donnell.

At Cultrummer House, Meath, Bridget, relict of Philip Brett.

At Bandon, aged 73 years, Mary Elizabeth, relict of Lieut. Col.-Gillman, of the 81st Regiment.

At the Rocks, Kilkenny, Mary, wife of E. Wheeler, and daughter of Thomas Parke, Collector of Customs, Port Colborne, Canada West.

At Carbury House, county Kildare, aged 70 years, Samuel Holt.

At Ballymountain, Kilkenny, Elizabeth, wife of Wm. Weekes.

At Leighlin Bridge, Emily, relict of Capt. Zobel, and daughter of J. Lyster, Esq., of Lysterfield, county Roscommon.

At Cronrae, Sarah Salisbury, wife of John Dillon, of Johnstown House, Roscommon, and daughter of the late Sir Richard Bligh St. George, of Woodsgift, Kilkenny.

In Armagh, J. R. G. Pattison, Captain in the 2d Warwickshire militia, late Captain in the 27th Enniskillen regiment.

In Killarney, aged 84 years, Johanna, relict of C. M'Carthy, of Cork.

Michael Fitzpatrick, of Valleymount, county Wicklow, aged 24 years.

At Ipping House, Midhurst, Sussex, aged 75 years, Dorothea, relict of Col. Rochfort, of Rochfort, county Westmeath, formerly Member of Parliament for that county.

At Algiers, Cosby Thomas Nesbitt, of Lismore House, Cavan.

At Cocos Islands, Java, Wm. B. Buchanan, son of the late John Buchanan, of Omagh, Tyrone.

At London, Mrs. Healy, relict of Richard Healy.

At Portaferry, Down, Lucy, daughter of the late Thomas Savage.

At Main street, Clonmel, George Everard.

At the residence of her step-father, Maryanne, daughter of the late James White, of Clonmel.

At Waterford, Mrs. Mary Buckley, who for many years held the situation of housekeeper at St. John's College, where her integrity, attention and kindness, were always proved and acknowledged.

At Broad street, Waterford, John Carey, woollen draper.

At 20 High street, Dublin, the Rev. Denis Murphy, late C. C. of St. Catherine's, Meath street, aged forty-three, chaplain to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul.

At New terrace, Sunday's-well, Wm. P. Townsend, for many years reporter in Cork.

At High Park, Tipperary, Richard Beere Phillips, son of R. H. Phillips.

At Tulla, in the county Clare, aged eighty-seven years, James O'Halloran.

At Harbor Terrace, Queenstown, Bridget, relict of the late Thomas V. Neile, aged 64.

At Higginstown, Mary Anne, relict of the late Mathew Keeffe, and mother of the Rev. Matt Keeffe, C. C., Dunnagmgagin. The funeral office was attended by 54 priests of the diocese.

Special Notices.

THE CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

BRONCHITIS.—WHAT PRODUCES BRONCHITIS?

FIRST STAGE OF DISEASE.

COSTIVENESS is the first link that connects disease in the System. It creates, induces, feeds and supports Bronchitis; and is slightly or indifferently treated, as though it was of no serious tendency: nevertheless, it has laid the foundation of that destroying disease, without the knowledge of the sufferers, undermining and sapping the very vitals of their constitutions.

Among the numerous class of diseases which afflict man, there is none more silent or treacherous in its approaches or more certain to triumph over its slowly consuming victim, than that formidable and insidious leveller of humanity—Bronchitis, which is produced by catching cold, through a neglect of regulating the state of the bowels when arriving to adult age. It seldom excites attention or alarm in the mind of any person, until it has sown the seed of disease and suffering in the human system, by checking the circulation of the blood; and it is to this source alone that we attribute the awful mortality of Consumption.

The following is a simple but correct illustration, namely:—If the culverts and sewers of the city were choked or clogged up, accidentally or otherwise, what would be the result? An overflow of accumulated filth and slush on the surface of the earth in its neighborhood, until it fills every hole, corner and crevice. This is quite similar to the human body, when the channel or sewer of life, as I may term it, which is the bowels, is checked or confined through constipation or some unnatural obstruction, which prevents the blood from circulating through the general system.

What, then, is the consequence? An accumulation of diseased matter and bile. Where will this bile and poisonous substance go to when it is prevented from taking its natural exit, through the bowels? It must surge itself back again into the blood, to be infused through the entire frame by the agency of the blood, bringing in its passage disease and suffering, and exhibiting itself by pain, nervous sensations and irritation all over the body—producing a bad feeling at the stomach, sourness of the food, a rush of blood to the head, catarrh, bronchitis, a short dry cough, dizziness, pain in the shoulders, and through or under the shoulder blades, cold feet, a peevish and irritable temper, annoyed by this hacking cough, and then gradually begins the expectorating from the throat of a lightish phlegm, resembling boiled starch or tough jelly of various colors, from a light to a darkish substance, and hawked up like a string.

SECOND STAGE.

From this period the patient is aware of some unusual and disagreeable feeling, though he seldom takes the hint till it goes from bad to worse. Catching cold from the slightest exposure, which he cannot avoid in consequence of the blood being in a diseased and corrupt condition for a long time previous to the appearance of those troublous symptoms, through the impure state of the blood, that at every breath the patient draws he inhales a similar quantity of fresh air by the nostrils and mouth, which keeps the tickling that exists in the throat and bronchial tubes in a ferment of irritation—this is the reason why some people complain of catching cold, even when confined to their room. Hence the sufferer is hacking, hawking, or expectorating a little at a time, with the impression that there is something in his throat that wants to come out; and which he desires to get out. There is a frequent desire for heavy sighing, with a dryness of the nostrils, which inclines the patient to pick or scratch them; sleepy, drowsy, dull, and heavy loss of appetite, and confused memory; a stuffing, tightness, and oppression of the chest, with a rawness and soreness of the gullet of the throat. This is caused by the silent enemy that has lurked in the system for months, and even years, and has at last aroused your fears, and well it might; for out of one hundred persons who die of Consumption ninety-nine are owing to disease of the throat alone, though simply called Bronchitis; and wretchedly treated by this self-pretended and dignified class of sheepskin physicians termed M. D.'s, who have proved a curse to the human family. They treat their patient on the following abusive principle, by cutting the tonsils and palate from the throat, as you might cut the gills out of a fish—next comes the solution or wash of nitrate of silver or caustic, and the whalebone swab, to wash and burn away the disease that has occupied the throat. Then comes the application of blister, and Croton oil externally to the throat and neck, to draw out the inflammation, as the physicians suppose (what blind philosophy.) Then comes the quack sheet of their MATERIA MEDICA—Calomel, Antimony, Morphine and Opium, to salivate and lull the feelings of the patient, which adds to the disease and increases the suffering, by giving the disease an opportunity of triumphing over nature. What a delusive idea to think the above treatment would be available in having recourse to those debilitating and irritating remedies of cutting, burning, blistering, purging and starving, which is of itself sufficient to lower and reduce the constitution of an ox.

THE THIRD STAGE

Confirms the above remarks. While undergoing this torturing treatment, the constitution is gradually failing and giving away, in giving rise to more alarming symptoms, evidently preparing its victim for the shroud, while the physician and friends fail to see the cause until those confirmed symptoms of consumption set in, but foolishly assign the cause to some other besides the genuine one, till the disease has reached its meridian, with a complication of fresh symptoms, breathing short and hurried, cough frequent, with an accumulation of corrupted matter, sometimes streaked with blood; profuse night sweats, emaciation and debility; cold chills in the forenoon, with a burning fever after; flesh soft and flabby, the limbs scarcely able to support the body; a susceptibility of catching cold on the least exposure, attended with a hoarseness and loss of voice, with a very heavy expectoration in the forenoon; flying pains in the chest, sides and shoulders, with a severe fit of coughing in the morning, or awaking from sleep. The painful crisis is fast approaching, with a swelling and puffing of the feet and ankles, and frequent attacks of diarrhœa. In females, the symptoms are more distressing at an earlier period than in the male, with a weakness in the back and loins, a sinking and exhausted feeling at the stomach, nervous and excitable, with gradual and frequent interruptions of the monthly flow, and as the disease progresses, a total or final cessation of it, with the harbinger of a broken down constitution' which is a discharge of whites, a symptom that proves very debilitating and irritating to females.

All the above symptoms and sufferings are the fruits of costiveness at an early period, accruing to the sufferer through neglect of keeping the bowels in gentle operation, which would circulate the blood, and prove as ventilation to the general system, from the age of 18 to 26, when this disease creeps on and grows on, until every organ in the body is totally disorganized.

My long experience and observations, and my unprecedented success in treating consumption, inclines me to devote the remainder of my life to the cause of suffering humanity. I have cured more consumptive patients in the last ten years than any other doctor in the world in that time, and not by steam, smoke or vapor, nor by smelling medicine through an India rubber or glass tube, but through the selection I make from the forest and verdant meadows. I can always determine on examination whether I can be successful or not, and I speak accordingly. I have made it a rule to treat no disease longer than three weeks. If I cannot check the fatal progress of the disease in that time, I give up the patient as lost, and lead the sufferer to no further expense.

☞ In compliance with the repeated solicitations of consumptive patients living in remote parts of the country, I have opened an hospital at No. 178 Bowery, for the exclusive treatment of those laboring under any species of the above disease, where I can bestow on them the unremitted attention which the seriousness of their cases require; where I can be able to regulate their diet and regimen according to circumstances. Three weeks under the supervision of my especial care is worth four months at a distance.

All persons desirous of medical information can obtain it by enclosing one dollar, when all information and communication will be forwarded on receipt.

D. Durkin, Chronic and Consumptive Doctor,
my31 No. 178 Bowery, New-York.

NEW AND EXCLUSIVE—FASHIONS FROM INDIA.

GENIN

THIS DAY INTRODUCES HIS

EAST INDIA SUMMER HAT,

A Straw Fabric of unequalled Beauty, of which he has secured the monopoly for the present season. The EAST INDIA HAT possesses marked advantages over all other Hats of vegetable material which have ever been imported into the United States.

In point of lightness it stands alone. Placed in the scales against the finest leghorn, chip, or grass fabric, it would "kick the beam." In fact, its weight is scarcely perceptible either in the hand or on the head. The texture of the braid is fine and delicate, and the ventilation perfect. No one who sees the Hat can doubt that it is the beau ideal of coolness. Fragile as it is, rain will not destroy its shape. In order to suit all taste and all ages, the EAST INDIA HAT has been made up in a variety of shapes. The crown varies in hight so as to assimilate with the features of boyhood, youth, maturity and old age. Although the stock of the EAST INDIA HATS in this country is exclusively in the possession of the undersigned, and not a single specimen can be obtained outside of his establishment, the prices, in accordance with his proverbial policy, will be found extremely moderate.

Genin, No. 214 Broadway.

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street,
ap26 3mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

Special Notices.

Reed's Celebrated London Cordial Gin, having gained much popularity in this country, being distilled the same as that in London, as he was formerly a distiller of the same kind of Gin in England, under the EXCISE LAWS.

This article is used in every hospital in and out of England's great metropolis. Its medicinal properties are invaluable.

☞ This Gin is not an imitation or a mixture of raw materials, of which much is sold in this city, under the name of London Cordial Gin, but a genuine and pure article, equal to any imported.

W. R. takes the opportunity of thanking the public for their liberal support, support, and begs a continuance of the same.

DISTILLERY,
118 East 29th st., New-York, between 2d and 3d avenues.

LABORATORY AND CHEMICAL OFFICE,
18 Exchange Place, N. Y., March 4, 1856.

MR. REED: Sir—I have submitted to close examination two samples of London Cordial Gin, manufactured by you, and purporting to equal the English article. I find on comparison with samples of Hodges' and Burnett's previously examined by me, and which I know to have been imported direct, that the quality of yours is by no means inferior to their celebrated compounds, while the perfect method you posess of rectifying, insures an article of a higher degree of purity and flavor, when it has the equal advantage of time to soften it, than much of the so-called imported London gin. As a medicinal agent and cordial, under proper advice, it may be depended upon, from the care with which you select the essential oils combined with it in the distillation.

Yours, respectfully,
ISAIAH DECK, M. D.,
Consulting and Analytical Chemist.

Mr. REED'S Distillery, 118 East Twenty-ninth st., New-York. [my31 3m

"Hereditary bondsmen, know ye not
Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow?"

RICHARD KAVANAGH,

132 and 134 FEDERAL STREET, BOSTON.

THANKFUL to his numerous patrons for past favors, is desirous of letting them know that he has given up the Grocery and Provision trade, and intends in future to devote his untiring exertions to promote their terrestrial happiness in the shape of good Liquors, Segars, to say nothing of a Free Lunch every day at 11 o'clock. Attached is a very handsome Sitting Room, and a splendid Room for Committee Meetings. my31 4t

Smiles many a long, bright sunny day,
When heaven puts on the blue of May.

Ladies, if you wish Gaiter and Button Boots, of all the fashionable styles, at 12s. to 20s, or if you wish slippers, ties and buskins, from 6s. to 10s. per pair, with boys', misses' and children's boots and shoes of all kinds and prices, patronize J. B MILLER & CO., 134 Canal street. [my31 4t

Sewing Machine Depot.—Sewing Machines of all kinds improved and repaired, on reasonable terms, an in the most substantial manner. Superior Machine Oils for sale. A large assortment of Machine Silk Twist and Needles for sale at reduces prices.
my 24, 3 mos. F. S. COATES & Co., 345 Broadway, New-York.

The Best Hair Dye.—DR. O. M. BALLARD'S new article received the highest premium at the World's Fair and American Institute, where it was examined by the distinguished Chemists, Dr. Chilton, and Prof. John Torrey, and pronounced the best. For sale by the best Druggists. Principal office and store, 498 Broadway, New-York. my17 3m

Furniture.—F. FITZSIMMONS respectfully calls the attention of his customers and the public to his stock of elegant and substantial FURNITURE, (not made for the auction room) consisting of rich Parlor Suites in rosewood; oak Dining and Chamber Sets of every description; Upholstery in all its branches executed in the best mechanical manner. Prices unexceptionable. Warerooms No. 8 Astor place, near Broadway. my24 3m

STATEN ISLAND
FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.

Also ladies and gentlemen's garments, Shawls, &c., &c.
BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 3 John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

Lumber and Timber for Export and City Trade.—THOS. RIGNEY & Co. offer for sale AT THEIR YARD FOOT OF THIRTIETH-STREET, North River, a general assortment of LUMBER AND TIMBER, suitable for export and the city trade. SHIPPERS AND BUILDERS will find it to their advantage to examine their stock previous to buying. Apply as above, or to J. PICKARD, Agent, 26 Bridge street. my17 3m*

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE for Servants, 129 Waverley Place, two doors from Sixth avenue, New-York.—A large number of competent help can be suited with good situations, in city and country, without delay. Employers in the city and country supplied with the best of female help. [my17 3m] WM. O'BRIEN, Proprietor.

KNOX'S
OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,
59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.
DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and Single counting-room DESKS, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office Desks from 3 to 6 ft., of Mahogany, blackwalnut and oak; cases for Books and pigeon-holes. Office chairs, cushions, lounges and Office Tables of every description. my17 tf

REMOVAL.
McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks
Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 86 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

TO NERVOUS SUFFERERS.

A Retired Clergyman, restored to health in a few days, after many years of great nervous suffering, is anxious to make known the means of cure. Will send (free) the prescriptions used. Direct to
Rev. JOHN M. DAGNALL,
my10 3m No. 59 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

I. E. Tate's Pannus Corrium Boot and Shoe store, for tender feet. A large stock of Boots, Shoes and Gaiters always on hand, in great variety, and made to order at the shortest notice, for Gentlemen, Boys and Youths—wholesale and retail, at the lowest Cash prices. Particular attention is requested to the Pannus Corrium or Leather Cloth Boots and Shoes, for those troubled with corns, bunions or tenderness of the feet. Its qualities for summer boots or shoes, surpass anything ever got up in this country for real comfort, as it keeps the feet perfectly cool, and at the same time is susceptible of the finest polish; for a dress boot more so than any French calfskin, with one half the labor. ISAAC E. TATE.
my 24, 3 mos. 427 Broadway New-York.

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.
Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my3 3m

Wanted.—Good hands to embroider on linen. Apply at GENIN'S Bazaar (under St. Nicholas Hotel,) 513 Broadway. my17 3m

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.
JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

RAGLAN HATS—Public approval of our efforts as hatters, to supply the lightest neglige hat, at a low cost, in 1854 and 1855, led us to seek among the Paris fabricants for quality and tint suited to our special sales. In announcing the Raglan hat, we deem it due to ourselves to state that, originating with us, we have control of the entire importation, as received per Barcelona and Fulton. The number being limited, gentlemen will do well to make their selections early. For sale at our counters only.
Leary & Co., Leaders and Introducers of Fashion, Astor House, Broadway, New-York. 3tJun7

Mrs. Luby's Academy for Dancing, Deportment, and the Calisthenic exercises, 275 Bleeker street. A Private Class for the above exercises has been formed, and will continue to meet during the month of June, on Wednesday evenings, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Mrs. Luby gives lessons on the Piano Forte, and in the French language. 2tJun2

Special Notices.

HERRING'S
PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the
World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,
As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS,) which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 185, 187 and 188 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.
The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,
No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,
AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,
AND
MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,
of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,
WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.
possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,
SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.
(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,
OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durab quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

TO THE LADIES—MILLINERY.

A large and beautiful assortment of Ladies' and Misses'

BONNETS, STRAW TRIMMINGS, RIBBONS, FLOWERS, AND MANTILLAS,

At William S. Irvine's No. 112 Canal street.
my31 1mo

Analytical and Metallurgical Chemistry and Mining Geology.
DR. ISAIAH DECK,
No. 18 EXCHANGE PLACE, NEW-YORK.

MAY be consulted on all subjects relating to Practical Chemistry, Mining- and Metallurgy. Assays of Ores, Analyses of Minerals, and Mining Products in general carefully and expeditiously conducted, and sound opinions delivered upon the most economical methods of working them, based on the latest chemical discoveries. Geological and Mining Surveys undertaken in any part of the world—Dr. DECK having had had considerable experience in this branch of his profession. my31 3m

Information Wanted—Of MICHAEL BOODEN, a native of the Parish of Urlingford, near Johnstown, County Kilkenny, Ireland, who left his residence in Ireland for New-York last December. Amy information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, N. Y., will be thankfully received by his wife.

Information wanted of John Duffy, a native of Castleblaney, county Monaghan, Ireland, by trade a carpenter, who arrived in this city about five years ago, and when last heard from was living at Staten Island. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, will be thankfully received by his wife Alice Duffy.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, May 23, 1856.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Complaint Book, opened at this office on the 1st of January, 1855, is still open for the reception of complaints of municipal abuses of all kinds. So far as the Mayor has the power, he will continue to exercise it for the abatement of any such evils, when brought to his attention through the Complaint Book, or otherwise. The Mayor invites all persons to take this method of reporting to him all violations of corporation ordinances, nuisances, or dereliction of duty upon the part of the officers of the Corporation, and he will, as heretofore, use all the legal means at his command to see the laws enforced, and the interests of the public protected. By order of the Mayor. ALEXANDER MING, Chief Clerk.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my31y

Medical.

DRS. GILBERT AND KENNEDY,
TREAT
CANCERS, TUMORS, ULCERS, &c.,
WITHOUT SURGICAL OPERATIONS.
OFFICE 746 BROADWAY, COR. ASTOR PLACE, N. Y.

CERTIFICATES FROM

Ex. Gov. T. M. Tucker.	Hon. T. Butler King.	Judge Alex. Walker.
Judge F. W. Huling.	Gen. Narcisso Lopez.	Col. Maunsel White.
Capt. Isaiah Sellers.	Capt. Wm. Leathers.	Thos. E. Bond, M. D.
A. S. Baldwin, M. D.	W. P. Allison, M. D.	J. S. Peacocke, M. D.

PERMISSION TO REFER TO
Ex. Gov. Jas. C. Jones. Hon. Fred. B. Stanton.
B. F. Palmer, Inventor of "Palmer's Artificial Leg."
Francis Grice, Naval Constructor, Navy Yard, Phila.
Proprietors of the Girard House, Philadelphia. my24 1m

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.
Pro Bono Publico.
"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.
ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

"Eye and Ear."—DOCTOR HENDERSON, Oculist and Aurist, 419 Broadway, corner of Canal street, treats all diseases of the eye and ear, without cupping, leeching, blistering or the use of calomel. Within the past two years upwards of thirty cases of blindness from inflamation have been restored to sight, to whom reference can be given, (hundreds of which can be seen in my circular,) by inclosing three postage stamps. Electro-chemical Medicated Vapor and Sulphur, hot and cold water BATHS. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Sundays and evenings by appointment. 419 Broadway, corner of Canal st., New-York. my17 3m

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

DR. J. ALLEN, (late Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery,) invites attention to his improved method of constructing Artificial Dentistry, which combine the following advantages:

1st,—There are no seams or crevices for the lodgement of food, to vitiate the saliva, or infect the breath. The interstices are all filled with a silicious compound, which is so applied as to form an artificial gum; this is fused at a high heat, which unites the Teeth firmly to each other, and to the plate upon which tney are set, thus imparting great strength and lifelike appearance to the denture.

2d,—The Teeth for this style of work are made perfectly natural in form and shade, and when properly set with the artificial gum as above, exhibits that harmony with the other features which characterize the natural organs.

3d,—The original form and expression of the mouth and face can be restored. This is done by having the denture so constructed as to bring out the sunken portions and sustain them in their proper position; this is an important feature in this style of work, to which the author devotes special attention.

4th,—A clear and distinct articulation of speech is restored. This is effected by having the inside of the teeth, and artificial gum, of a natural form, to which the tongue is readily adapted; this prevents the hissing or muffled sounds so often observed in speaking or singing, in persons wearing artificial teeth.

The Rooms are at No. 30 BOND STREET, New-York. A Pamphlet containing more full particulars, sent free, to those who desire it. ap26 3m

H. G. LUTHER,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST,
No. 698 BROADWAY, Second House above Fourth st.

HAVING enjoyed an extensive practice during the last twelve years, feels confident of his ability to give perfect satisfaction to all who may honor him with their preference. He is prepared to perform all operations connected with his profession, in the most faithful manner, and in strict accordance with scientific principles, embracing all the recent improvements of the day.

References of the most respectable character given if desired. Patronage respectfully solicited.

☞ N. B. Teeth extracted without pain.] my17 3m

Dr. J. J. McGowan, Physician and Surgeon, Graduate of Harvard University, Fellow of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Medical Societies, etc., has removed to No. 69 Canal street, New-York, a few doors from Broadway, where he will attend to calls in every branch of the medical profession. Dr. McG. will devote particular attention to chronic diseases, and those of women and children. m10 1t

All eye-diseases cured by Dr. C. W. Upham, Oculist, Successor to Dr. Roehrig, 334 Fourth street, near Broadway. No cupping, bleeding, or salivating. Cataract cured in many cases without operating. Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M. References given. Persons residing in any part of the country, can be treated by correspondence. my17 4t

New School of Medicine and Pharmacy. The last Unfolding of the ART of Healing. My daily practice proves that I CURE CONSUMPTION, in all its varied forms and most advanced states, as readily as any other disease. Therefore I desire to treat all Consumptives, but particularly those who have tried all other physicians without relief. Mrs. M. J. MARIN, M.D., No. 37. Lafayette place, N. Y. (First street east of Broadway, between 4th and 8th sts.) Office hours: from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., exclusively for Ladies; and from 2 to 5 P. M., for Gentlemen, Wednesdays excepted. All other hours by appointment. my31 3m

THE GREATEST WONDER OF THE AGE!

A REMEDY WHICH CURES IN FIVE MINUTES.—M. LEROUX'S FRENCH CHOLERA COGNAC BITTERS.—This wonderful and scientific compound is recommended by the most eminent and learned physicians of all Europe and America, and enjoys the best reputation of anything similar ever offered. It is without doubt the best, most efficient and generally acknowledged remedy against Cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, and complaints of the stomach in general. The numerous patients who have tried it according to directions, have invariably found relief in a very short time, and the best proof of it is, that since this standard remedy was introducee in the armies of the allies in the Crimea, the mortality of the soldiers from Cholera and similar diseases was reduced by over 75 per cent.; in consideration of which, the inventor was presented by the French and English governments with a gold medal, bearing the inscription, "Hail! M. LEROUX, the great Chemist and inventor, by whose knowledge our armies are preserved from Cholera."

This invaluable preparation is also a remedy for biliousness, indigestion, weakness, and general derangement of the stomach. Upon being taken, it creates appetite, and prevents the heaviness attendant upon eating, by persons who are dyspeptic.

In this city, also, this remedy has been tried with the most undoubted success, and the undersigned can produce the best testimonials of our most celebrated physicians, as to its immediate and complete success, which he will be happy at any time to show to any that may wish to see them. S. STEINFELD, sole agent for the United States, No. 70 Nassau street, corner of John.

P. S.—Those not having money to pay, may call at my place from 3 to 5 P. M. and receive this remedy gratis. my17 3m

☞ A CARD.—To the Medical Profession.—A medical gentleman, having a practice worth $4000 per annum, in a large and flourishing city in the western part of the statp of New-York, wishes to dispose of the same on very reasonable terms. Also the position of Physician to the Hospital. To a young medical man, possessing the requisite qualifications, this is an opportunity rarely to be met with. Full particulars can be obtained on application to the office of the Irish News, 29 Ann street. 5tJun7

"TERRA COTTA"
CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental. Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture, lowest rates. LONG ISLAND POTTERY. Depot, 82 Nassau street, New-York. my10 3m

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	3s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 3s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap193m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap268m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

P. L. ROGERS,

FOUNDER OF THE ONE PRICE SYSTEM,

invites an inspection of the extensive

SPRING STOCK OF FASHIONABLE CLOTHING,

at his great central wholesale and retail warehouse,

CORNER OF FULTON AND NASSAU STREETS,

opposite the Herald office.

There any gentleman can procure an elegant outfit in twenty minutes Every garment is warranted of the newest cut and of good workmanship.

Parents can fit out a family of boys with equal dispatch from a stock that includes every style, size, color, material and quality.

The selling prices, which are guaranteed to be 25 per cent. under market average, are all affixed in plain figures to the articles, and NO DEVIATION can be made.

The Order Department is stocked with the finest CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, etc., and the Clothing made to measure cannot be excelled in the world, although the prices are far lower than at other establishments.

my24tf P. L. Rogers.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap268m

---

$100,000 WORTH OF NEW GOODS!

FROM AUCTION, at LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY. EGAN & CO. have just purchased an entire new lot of Spring and Summer Dress Silks of all styles and qualities, and will sell them at Low Prices in their New Store. In consequence of Overstock of Goods being Imported, Silks have reduced in value full 30 per cent., and we buying them at the reduced prices, can afford to sell the most desirable styles and qualities lower than those that have purchased when goods were high and scarce. We have no Old Stock—no Damaged Goods—no Bankrupt Sale—none of those Humbugs—but we have good PLAID SILKS from 4s. 6d. to 12s per yard; new and splendid Striped Poplins, from 3s. to 8s. 6d. per yard. A large assortment of Black and Colored Silks. We ask but one price, and sell in dollars and cents. Some of the newest STELLA SHAWLS, from $2 50 to $20. A large and splendid lot of CRAPE SHAWLS, and a general assortment of spring goods. Being the only LINEN HALL in the city, and having a buyer in Belfast, Ireland, we are always supplied with the best qualities of LINEN for Shirting, Sheeting, and Damask Table Cloths, by the cloth or yard. Some splendid Damask and Snow-Drop Napkins at $1 50 per dozen. Ten cases of French Printed Lawns for Dresses, will be opened to-morrow and the following day, from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per yard. Marseilles Quilts from 14s. to $5 each. 4tjun7

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap193m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

THE undersigned have formed a Copartnership, under the name and firm of Foot, Cole & Co., for the transaction of the Paper Commission Business, at 32 Beekman street.

FOOT, COLE & CO.

JOEL W. FOOT, | C. D. HARMAN,
CHAS. COLE, | CARLTON LE SAGE.

Mr. H. C. Goodwin, has no further connection with us. ap19

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 193 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap193m

---

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,

ap196m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co., C. Meletta, | Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co., James Cook & Co. 6m

---

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

J. McCARTEN,

WATCH AND CLOCK MAKER,

154 SEVENTH AVENUE.

Between 20th and 21st streets, New-York.

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry carefully repaired and warranted. A good assortment of watches and clocks always on hand. 7jun

---

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.

my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

ROBERT IRWIN,

CHEAP BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

my10 156 Chatham street, opposite James' st., New-York. 3m

R. HOGAN,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

UMBRELLA AND PARASOL MANUFACTURER,

374 BOWERY, NEAR FOURTH STREET.

Repairing neatly executed. my17 3m*

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

OFFICE, 28½ SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE FOR SERVANTS.

275 BOWERY, NEW-YORK.

MALE and Female Servants can be promptly suited at the above number, with any situation in the city or country, at good wages, in first-rate families, without delay.

N. B. Employers quickly supplied.

3m may 31 ALEXANDER F. RUNGE, Agent.

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this country, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN, ANDREW McSHANE, JAMES DOWLING. } NEW-YORK. 8m

---

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

8mos (near Broadway.)

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of MESSRS. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

☞ Office 188 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap263m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap263m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

HOSEY & RILEY,

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,

600 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

Private entrance on the first floor, 134 Crosby street.

☞ Hosey & Riley invite their friends to give them a call.

my24 3m HOSEY & RILEY.

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists' Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, Oils, Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather Belting.

☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON all CONSIGNMENTS.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.

ap198m*

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES 6 CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1856. NO. 10.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. X.

Editorial.

THE NOMINATION—JAMES BUCHANAN.
IRISH MILITIA.
BRITISH POLICY AND NICARAGUAN HONESTY.
ST. QUIETUS.

Answers to Correspondents.

About Gerald Griffin, Thos. McNevin, Mr. Malowney, Maguire and Shiel, Judge Ball; Crampton's exit, and O'Connell's appropriate remark; R. D. Williams' Letter, &c. &c.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS—The Galway Election—A jaunt, day and night, to Loughrea.
HISTORY OF FOREIGN PERIODICAL LITERATURE.
DEMOCRATIC REVIEW.
KELLER'S TABLEAUX.

Poetry.

HOME THOUGHTS. By B.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM DUBLIN, by "Kilmainham."
LETTER FROM WATERFORD, by the "Metal Man."

Military.

Fifth Brigade, 72d Regiment—Montgomery Guard—Bridgport and Sarsfield Guard, Elizabethtown.

Miscellaneous.

Latest Irish, English, and American News—Spirit of the Irish Press—Cincinnati Convention—Know-Nothing Convention, &c.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. MAHONY, Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. P. WALSH, Cincinnati, Ohio.
—— COURTNEY, Charleston, South Carolina.
BRICE, 100 Exchange Place, New Orleans.
JOHN PLASTO, 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y.
McGOWANS, Portland, Me.
ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
MORRISEY, " "
DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.
JOHN C. CLARKE, 88 Newark avenue, Jersey City.
B. E. DOWLING, Jefferson st., next the Post Office, Newport, Ky.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.
POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

SAMUEL YATES,
GENERAL NEWS AGENT,
Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.
No. 22 Beekman Street.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,
NEWS AGENTS,
30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.
DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.
tf JOHN HAMILTON, S. W. JOHNSON.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 34 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 300 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from EDWARD H. DIXON, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, FROM THE CRADLE TO THE GRAVE;" Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above. ap26tf

Publications.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL. 4 vols., very scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
HAYES' BALLADS OF IRELAND. 2 vols. in one, 12mo. cloth, $1.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornellan. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.
O'BRIEN'S ROUND TOWERS. Scarce.
MUSGRAVE'S IRISH REBELLIONS. 2 vols., 8vo.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 62 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Shandy Maguire, 50 cts. Griffin's Adventures of an Irish Giant, 18mo., cloth, 25 cents. Wild Irish Girl, 12mo., cloth, 50 cents. Ireland's Welcome to the Stranger, 12mo. cloth, 62c.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street, New-York.

In press, Madden's Lives of Robert Emmett and Thomas Addis Emmet.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory, By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

tf P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE.

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

(JAMES B. KIRKER,)

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK,

PUBLISH the largest and finest assortment of Catholic Bibles, Testaments, Prayer Books, Tales, School Books, and other works, to be found in the United States.

An extensive supply of all other Catholic articles always on hand. Catalogues of their publications sent free of postage.

E. D. & BROTHER HAVE JUST ISSUED

1. THE LOVE OF MARY. Devotions for the month of May. 88c.
2. THE YOUNG CRUSADERS. A tale. 38c.
3. HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR; or Meditations on the Blessed Sacrament. 25c.
4. THE CONVERSION OF RATISBONNE. 25c.
5. CONSCIENCE, or the Trials of May Brooke, a tale by Mrs. A. H. Dorsey. 2 vols; each 38c.

4t May 24

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assisciun. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½
Edma and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to 4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to 12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to 12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to 25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

NEW-YORK CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

"The objects of the Association are, 1st. The dissemination of Catholic and useful knowledge. 2d. To forward the moral and intellectual advancement of its members. 3d. To create among its members a spirit of harmony and good feeling, that will be conducive alike to their interest and pleasure. These to be attained by establishing a Library and Reading Room, and by Readings and Lectures when practicable."

Contributions of either books or money received at the office, No. 107 Nassau street.

M. T. COZANS, President.
JOSEPH McGUIRE, Vice-President.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, D. Quinn.
RECORDING SECRETARY, James Fabb.
TREASURER, John Russell.
LIBRARIAN, T. S. Haughey.
DIRECTORS, R. T. Kelly, J. J. Mullen, M. B. Lynch, L. T. Cozans, P. J. McGuire. m3jun14

Book of Men, Women and Babies. By DR. PORTER, of New-York.—Such is the title of a book of real practical utility, and which contains more sound philosophy and good sense, than we have ever seen in a book of the kind before. No parent will ever regret putting it into the hands of his wife, sons, and daughters. Married or single, should hasten to possess it. Every mother will find the instructions in this book promotive of health and contentment in her household.—Jersey Tribune, Elizabeth City, New-Jersey.

In paper covers, 50 cents, postage free. Address DR. PORTER, 216 Fulton-st. Twelve copies to one address, $5. my17 3m

Wanted.—Good hands to embroider on linen. Apply at GENIN'S Bazaar (under St. Nicholas Hotel,) 513 Broadway. my17 3m

Publications.

SYDNEY SMITH.

Published this day,

WIT AND WISDOM OF REV. SYDNEY SMITH.

Being selections from his Writings and Passages of his Letters and Table-Talk. With Notes and a Biographical Memoir, by Evert A. Duychinck; a Portrait on Steel, after G. Stewart Newton; and an Autograph Letter. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

The most important of Sydney Smith's Writings witl here be found given entire; while the selection generally presents the most characteristic passages of his "Wit and Wisdom" from the whole. Numerous Miscellanies, of much interest, are included, which are not to be met with in any previous collection of the author's works.

CONTENTS:

Biographical Memoir, by the Editor.
Articles from the "Edinburgh Review" (including the Papers on Female Education, Professional Education, Notices of America, &c., &c.)
Sketches of Moral Philosophy, (including the Essays on the Conduct of the Understanding; on Wit and Humor, &c., &c.)
The Peter Plymley Letters.
Passages from Sermons.
Speeches on the Reform Bill. The Ballot.
Letters on American Debts.
Passages from Letters on the Ecclesiastical Commission.
A Fragment on the Irish Roman Catholic Church.
Letters on Railway Management.
Character of Sir James Mackintosh and of Francis Horner.
Practical Essays, &c.
Passages from Letters.
Table Talk, Personal, &c., &c.

je 7 J. S. REDFIELD, 34 Beekman street, N. Y.

THE BALLADS OF IRELAND:

COLLECTED BY

EDWARD HAYES,

Containing Selections from all the Irish Poets.

They are Ballads of the Affections, Fairy Ballads, Legendary Ballads, Miscellaneous Ballads, Translated Ballads, &c., &c.

THE following are among the Authors:—Banim, Ansty, Barry, Beamish, Blacker, Brown, Callanan, Carleton, Charlotte Clarke, Croker, Croly, Thos. Davis, Francis Davis, De Vere, Dowling, Downing, Drennan, Dufferin, Duffy, Ferguson, Forrest, Fox, Frazer, Gallaher, Goldsmith, Griffin, Halpin, Hill, Hoey, Irwin, Keegan, Kelly, Kenealy, Kennedy, Knowles, Lane, Lover, Lynch, Madden, Maginn, Mahony, Mangan, McCarthy, McDermott, McDavitt, Meehan, McGee, Moore, Mulchinock, Rev. Dr. Murray, John Fisher Murray, Norton, O'Connell, Parnell, Ryan, Simmons, Smythe, Starkey, Sterling, Supple, Waller, Walsh, Wilde, Williams, Wolfe, &c.

The whole comprising 725 closely printed pages, making the most remarkable and interesting book ever presented to the people of this country.

Price—in one volume, $1. In two volumes, $1.25. The price of the Irish edition is $2.50.

☞ For sale by all booksellers.

The book will be sent to any part of the U. S., postage free, on receipt of the above prices. Published by my17 tf PATRICK DONAHOE, 23 Franklin-st., Boston, Mass.

Amusements.

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL,

596 BROADWAY,

TWO DOORS ABOVE THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL.

GREAT ATTRACTION.

TABLEAUX AND MUSICAL SOIREES.

MADAME LOVARNEY AND MR. F. STOEPEL.

Every night during the week the following Tableaux will be given:

Venus Landing from the Sea. Diana Surprised.
Battle and Victory of the Romans. Cain and Abel.
Faith, Hope, and Charity. Elevation of the Cross.
And "The Descent from the Cross," by Rubens.

LECTURE

BY

MOST REV. ARCHBISHOP HUGHES,

IN THE

ACADEMY OF MUSIC, FOURTEENTH STREET,

On THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 12th 1856.

The proceeds to be applied to the Church ofthe Immaculate Conception, Fourteenth street, now in progress of erection.

The Lecture will commence at 8 o'clock. Tickets One Dollar. my31 3t

Mrs. Luby's Academy for Dancing, Deportment, and the Calisthenic exercises, 275 Bleeker street. A Private Class for the above exercises has been formed, and will continue to meet during the month of June, on Wednesday evenings, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Mrs. Luby gives lessons on the Piano Forte, and in the French language. 2tJun2

EXTRAORDINARY CATHOLIC CEREMONIES

At Hoboken,

ON SUNDAY, JUNE 1ST.

The Enshrinement of the Relics of St. Quietus the Martyr, Portrait of the Rev. Rosevelt Bailey, D. D., Roman Catholic Bishop of Newark, N. J. The Shrine containing the Relics of St. Quietus.

" " Effigy.....and eleven other splendid Engravings, including a magnificent 2 page cut of the Democratic Convention, is in FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER, now ready at all news depots. Price 10 cents, or $2 per volume.

Subscription office, 12 and 14 Spruce street, N. Y. je14 1t

Information Wanted—Of WILLIAM KELLEY, a native of the county Cavan, Ireland, who left this city about three years ago for the State of Pennsylvania. Any information concerning him will be thankfully received by his sisters, Rosie and Anne Kelley, at No. 15 Rose street, in care of Thomas McManus, je14

TAILORS, ATTENTION!

If you wish to possess the best and most exact system of Coat and Jacket Cutting, procure HOLDWAY'S DIAGRAM AND SCALE, whereby you are enabled to cut for 30 different sizes, varying from 20 breast measure (which, you know, is small,) to 54, which you also consider large, and whereby you will find a misfit next to impossible. See it and judge for yourself.

To be had of TILL & COOK, 299 Broadway; or of A. HOLDWAY, 29 Anne street, next door to the IRISH NEWS office. je14 tf

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists' Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers

Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, O Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather Belting.

☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON all CONSIGNMENTS.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.

ap19 3m*

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC.....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC.....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC.....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC.....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
38 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents In Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,

OLD LINE PACKETS,

Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 13th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap26 3m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

Shipping.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP LINE.

CITY OF BALTIMORE....CITY OF WASHINGTON.
CITY OF MANCHESTER...KANGAROO.

THE magnificent new steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Leitch, 2,367 tons, 500 horse power, will sail from Philadelphia on the 26th June, and from Liverpool on the 16th July. Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including cooked provisions. Persons wishing to send for their friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—F. S. Saxton.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati————.....Toronto, C. W.—D. K. Feehan.

BLACK BALL LINE

OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap191y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, ARTHUR M'AVOY, } Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitegerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." —— KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. GEO. B. MAGRATH, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (—— ——,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. M. KEATING, Com'dt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White st. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. W. H. LYONS, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 104 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. PATRICK O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa. M. W. MORRISS, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

3mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

European News.

By the arrival of the Canadian screw-steamer Indian (from Liverpool, 21st ult.,) at Quebec, June 2nd, we received the following not very important intelligence :

In the House of Lords, on Monday evening, 19th ult., the Earl of Clarendon, in reply to a question by the Earl of Elgin, said that the letter signed E. Hammond was a genuine document, and that it arose from the following circumstances :—The agent of the Costa Ricans in the country, and some agents in the South American States, had, ever since the attack of Walker on the government of Nicaragua, appealed to the government of this country to assist them in defending themselves. A great variety of projects had been laid before her Majesty's government for the acceptance of a Protectorate by this country, and giving them material assistance. To all those requests her Majesty's government had invariably replied in the negative, declaring that they would have nothing to do with the troubles of the States of Central America ; but at the same time, the government expressed itself extremely sorry for the attack on Nicaragua, and the deplorable events which followed, which they especially regretted because the property of British subjects had not only been endangered, but actually sacrificed by Walker—therefore her Majesty's government would be very glad if Walker's enterprises would not be carried further ; but they again and again said that with the affairs of Central America they had determined to have nothing whatever to do, and that all their action would be limited to sending just that sufficient naval force to the coast of South America which would be adequate for the protection of British property. Mr. Wallenstein, who made the application on behalf of Costa Rica, was greatly disppointed at this answer, and spoke of the vast amount of British property there, which, he said,ought to be defended by a naval power—that the Costa Ricans are resolved to make a steadfast resistance against the invasion of their country by Walker, but that they had no means of repelling the threatened aggressions, the Costa Ricans being a peaceable people and unarmed. Mr. Wallenstein said he had no credit in this country, and was unable to buy arms here, and he asked if our War Department would not give a few arms in order to enable those unoffending people to repel this aggression. The matter was referred to the War Department, and the answer returned by Mr. Hammond, in the letter to which the Earl of Clarendon alluded. Mr. Wallenstein did not consider himself entitled to accept that offer ; the arms had never been taken, and Mr. Wallenstein had since declined to take them.

Since Walker took possession of Nicaragua he had disposed of a good deal of British property by force alone, and her Majesty's government had communicated with the government of the United States in the matter, and he would read an extract from a despatch from Mr. Crampton on the question. There had been no disguise whatever with the United States government. The object of the British government avowedly had been to protect British interests. On the 5th of March, Mr. Marcy said he entirely diapproved of the existing state of things in Nicaragua, and thought it likely to cast a shadow upon the reputation of the government of the United States. He observed that he knew no better plan of proceeding than for the United States and the British government to combine for the protection of citizens of the United States and subjects of Great Britain.

Turkey.

Dispatches from Vienna state that letters had been received from Constantinople announcing that a convention had been concluded between the Porte and the Western Powers, and adding that the evacuation of the Turkish territory by the troops of the Allies will be completed in six months.

Russia.

It is reported, via Berlin, that General Sir William W. Williams had arrived at St. Petersburg, and would shortly leave the Russian capital for England. The London Times's Berlin correspondent writes that the Emperor had given his whole fleet a new arrangement, in consequence of the events of the war. At present, the Russian fleet consists of three divisions, making a total of 43 vessels of war and three transports. Of the former, nine are steamers.

Trade continued dull at St. Petersburg. Holders of tallow were unwilling to sell at prevailing prices.

The coronation of the Emperor Alexander was fixed to take place in September.

The Honolulu Polynesian rejoices that the Government is about to remove the restrictions upon the culture of Awa. Awa is a plant which the natives once used freely to produce intoxication, and hence its culture in any but very limited quantities was prohibited. Now, however, the Hawaiian medical men discover that it is a valuable remedy, and propose its cultivation in large quantities, with the intention of sending a preparation of it abroad. Meantime, the restriction is very little attended to ; the natives steal up to the mountains and procure the plant by virtue of medical permits, and get tipsy in their houses, to as great an extent as tipplers who wear white skins. The Awa laws are wholly inefficient—more's the pity.

The biggest gun in the world is in Bajapoor, India, and weighs 40 tuns. A seat in the interior accommodates five persons without much crowding. It is formed of mixed metal, of which there is said to be some portions of gold and a considerable quantity of silver. Upon being fired off as a salute on one occasion, though not charged with more than half the weight of powder which its chamber could contain, the concussion was awful.

A congress of "reformers of all nations" convened by the aged Robert Owen, in St Martin's Hall, London, on the 14th. Mr. Owen presided, and addressed the meeting at some lengh, enforcing his views with great earnestness. Petitions to Parliament and a memorial to the Queen were adopted.

The Crimean Board of Enquiry protracts its sittings. Sir John McNeill declines to attend before the Board, in the room of Col. Tulloch, who is unable to appear from sickness. In absence of the Commissioners, therefore, the enquiry continues, but draws within a day or two of its termination.

Lately, in an action of ejectment, tried before Mr. Justice Williams, at Carmarthen, the jury, after an absence of two hours, returned the following verdict : "We don't know nothing about it—no, not we."

A pension of £5,000 sterling per annum has been voted by the East India Company to the Marquis of Dalhousie, the retiring Governor-General of India. The ground of the pension is that he has annexed four kingdoms, within the past four years.

English News.

The quarterly return of marriages, births and deaths for England is generally favorable. More than the average number of children were born, and the deaths were much below the average number in the winter quarter that ended on March 31, 1856 ; the marriages returned for the last quarter of the year 1855 were below the average number. 303,548 persons were married (151,774 men and 151,774 women) in the year 1855, so that the rate of marriage was as 1,619 persons in every 100,000 of the population living, whereas the average in the ten years, 1846 to '55, was 1,682. The births of 169,252 children were registered in the winter quarter that ended on March 31. This number is absolutely the highest that has ever been returned in a winter quarter, and the rate of birth is 3,585 in 100,000, or much above the average (3,499) of the season.

The Marquis of Ailsa has for some years encouraged his gamekeepers in the destruction of vermin, by paying so much per head for those brought in. All kinds of vermin were thus brought low—even to the jackdaw and common rat, which caused great destruction to the eggs of pheasants and partridges. In four years and a-half the sum paid on the estate of Culzean and Craiglure moors, in Ayrshire, for vermin destroyed by the keepers, amounted to £231 15s. 10d. Among the vermin killed from 1850 to 1854 were : Foxes, 32 ; otters, 19 ; badgers, 1 ; cats, 1,296 ; polecats, 43 ; stoat-weasels, 2,132 ; common weasels, 1,942 ; rats killed in woods and hedges, 12,586 ; hedgehogs, 1,093 ; adders, 268 ; hawks, 310 ; small horned owls, 123 ; hoody or carrion crows, 225 ; magpies, 495 ; jackdaws, 10,041—total, 21,981.

The boats in connection with the Royal National Lifeboat Institution have, during the past year, been the means of saving the crews of nine vessels, amounting to 75 individuals. During the last nine months the committee have awarded ten silver medals and 17 honorary testimonials inscribed on vellum, and have granted £302 in pecuniary rewards to parties that have saved, or endeavored to save, lives from shipwreck. Since the establishment of the institution, in 1824, 79 gold medals and 557 silver medals for distinguished services have been voted for saving life, besides pecuniary rewards amounting together to £9,631. The total number of lives saved from shipwreck in the same period, and for which the above rewards have been granted, is 9,691.

On Wednesday last, at Aberdare, a resident of Mountain Ash, says the Swansea Herald, underwent the severe process of "coal stringing." The process involves the being tied to a ladder, which is placed on men's shoulders, and thus the victim is carried along the streets, derided by the assembled crowd, and saluted by every kind of filth—rotten eggs, of course, included. The unfortunate victim in this case, a collier, residing at Mountain Ash, had incurred the displeasure of the women, in seducing a fair demoiselle of Aberdare, concealing the fact that he was a married man with three children. The sinner was seized at Mountain Ash, and brought to Aberdare, the scene of his delinquencies ; and it was not until the police interfered that he was released from his painful position.

The average statistical returns of twelve years show that the number of summary convictions in England and Wales are 74,-347, or 1 in every 231 persons. With committals for trial it would appear that about 100,000 people are annually imprisoned in the jails of Wales and England.

The annual statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer has been laid before Parliament. The estimated revenue for the current year is set down at £67,166,000, showing a deficiency of £8,873,000.

It was Lord Clarendon's brother, the Hon. Mr. Villiers, who committed the "indiscretion" of giving the copy of the Treaty of Peace to the Daily News.

Riots were anticipated in London on account of the withdrawal of the military bands from the parks on Sunday evenings, but the last Sunday passed off quietly.

The blood steeped field of Inkermann, (in the Crimea,) is one large violet bed, where very early in the year the flowers spring up in extraordinary profusion.

Spirit of the Irish Press.

Under the head of "Kidnapping extraordinary," the Ulsterman has the following :

The monster proceedings of the soup missionaries in Ireland are reaching a pitch of extravagant wickedness that loudly calls for the intervention of the strong arm of the law. Rendered desperate by the ill-success of their efforts to pervert the poor, and alarmed lest their fanatical patrons in England should tire of their hungry demands and stop their pay, they have at last gone to lengths that endanger the safety of the very homes of the poor.

Cases we have seen, not a few, where the proselytisers have got hold of orphan children by the most cunning means, and where they have resisted the unceasing efforts of the poor young creatures' relatives or others to rescue them from their fanatical clutch. One instance of the kind it was, not very long ago, our task to expose, when the investigation was being made into the doings of the memorable ragged school—and successfully to expose it too. This case was thought very bad ; and when, the other day, a soup-agent was caught kidnapping a child, we looked on it as a solitary act of madness on the vagabond's part, for which no parallel could be found elsewhere. But we were mistaken. And shrewdly we fear that this kidnapping is developing into a regular system. If our readers have any doubts on the matter, let them read the following most extraordinary letter :

To the Editor of the Ulsterman.

Sir—My child, a little girl of twelve years old, has been taken, or rather induced to go away from me, I know not whither. I have sought her everywhere, and can find no trace of her. I appealed to the local magistrate and to the police, from whom, I must say, I got very little aid or satisfaction. I write to you, hoping you will let the poor Catholics of Ulster know what they may expect from their children at the hands of Protestant masters and mistresses, in which houses they may be hired. I, being a poor man, hired my little girl, Susan Sweeney, in a Protestant house in this town, some time ago, on the express condition that she should be allowed an opportunity of learning the Catholic doctrine and attending her religious duties. This condition was violated as soon as I left the place ; and by false promises, clothes, and Bibles of various kinds, they succeeded in tearing out of her young and tender mind all love and respect for her father and mother—all that modesty and simplicity which should adorn the young Christian girl, for all of which my child was much distinguished before she came under the ungodly training of those unprincipled proselytising kidnappers, who, instead of all these Christian virtues, have sown in the young heart disobedience, obstinacy, pride, and vanity, and have induced her to leave her father and mother in suspense and anxious uncertainty as to what has become of her.

If you be kind enough to publish this, I will send you further particulars. It may not aid me much in getting back my child, but it may serve as a warning to other Catholic parents who may have their poor children hired into Protestant houses. I am, dear sir, your humble servant, Daniel Sweeney.

Portrush, May 14, 1856.

TENANT-RIGHT.

For a number of years, says the Tipperary Free Press, Ministry after Ministry has paltered with this question—affording hopes they never intended should be realised, and pretending support only to ensure ultimate disappointment. Under the regime of Lord Derby, Mr. Napier's bill, in which there were many excellent provisions, received a second reading, and by the administration of Lord Aberdeen progress with a similar measure so far only was made. Last session, when Lord Palmerston induced Sergeant Shee to confide to the hands of his subordinates the bill introduced by the hon. member for Kilkenny, he kept dallying with the question until the prorogation of Parliament drew nigh, and then it, with many others, was insultingly shelved. This session, Messrs. Maguire and Moore have introduced another measure, but, in so doing, they have candidly avowed they entertain no expectation whatever of being enabled to pass it into law.

While matters have been thus undecided, and while the cause of the honest tenant-farmers of Ireland has been made the shuttlecock of parties, the effects of so disastrous a course have been sensibly experienced in Ireland. The tenant has no security for the outlay of his capital—the landlord no restriction in the exercise of what he deems his rights—and, for those reasons, emigration still continues, and the demon of murder is at intervals unchained. A few evenings since, the conduct of a landlord in the West, who served a whole country side with notice of ejectment, elicited the stern reprehension of statesmen in Parliament, and of writers in the public press. But this gentleman is not so much to be censured as those Legislators who permit the relations between the owners and occupiers of the soil to continue in an anomalous and unsettled state, and who sanction, by non-intervention, the commission of deeds at which humanity shudders, and the perpetration of crimes that stain the character of the country, and are alike accursed of God, and abhorred of men.

To put an end to this state of things, every lover of his country should lend exertion, and the movement begun in the Corporation of Dublin is an example that should be imitated by the municipal bodies in every county in Ireland. The Corporations are the representatives of the people—elected by them, and, for the most part, identified in interest and feeling with popular sympathies and popular rights.

We have not been disappointed, says the Kilkenny Journal, in anticipating that the patriotism and good sense of our city councillors would guide them towards a creditable course in reference to the Tenant Right question. Alderman Cane's motion, seconded by Town Councillor Tidmarsh, has been adopted unanimously. One of the largest meetings of the corporation of Kilkenny which has assembled for many a day has pronounced in favor of the Tenant Right Bill ; and the fact will have a decided influence upon the fortunes of the Irish tenantry. It is significant that a similar motion has just been adopted by the corporation of Dublin. These are real triumphs for the unfortunate tenantry ; and if a similar amount of public spirit be exhibited elsewhere, perhaps they will be induced to remain in the country after all. As it is, they seem to be flying away as rapid as ever, according to their means and proportion. This is rash, indeed ; but it is better, after all, that they should fly into an exile full of toil and vexation, than sink into the sorrows of the wily Souper, or resort to the moral corruption of the workhouse or jail. The corporation of Kilkenny may congratulate themselves upon having helped to relieve their countrymen from this dreary alternative, and they may rely upon the cordial gratitude of the people in return.

THE MEMORY OF JOHN BANIM.

We insert, with pleasure, says the Kilkenny Journal, the following letter from our respected fellow-citizen, Dr. Campion, to William John Fitzpatrick, Esq., a young Dublin merchant of great literary attainments, author of the Life of Lord Cloncurry, &c. In a correspondonce which recently appeared in the Irish Quarterly Review, between Mr. Fitzpatrick and an English writer, respecting the "Tales of the O'Hara Family," the latter gentlemen charged Kilkenny with having neglected the memory of John Banim. Mr. Fitzpatrick ably and generously defended the "Faire Citie" from this imputation ; and Dr. Campion now renders a graceful tribute to his disinterestedness by making him the medium of publishing some additional details upon the subject. We need scarcely say, that no one has a better title to speak in this matter than "The Kilkenny Man" :

Kilkenny, St. John's Bridge, May 8th, 1856.

Dear Sir—I have noted several times in the Dublin Review, an assertion which has led to a very erroneous conclusion with regard to the interred remains of the late John Banim ; and as you have taken up so commendably and so zealously the noble task of protecting the memory of the dead worthies of Ireland, perhaps one or two remarks respecting the late novelist, dramatist, and poet, of our marble city, may not be unacceptable to you.

In the first place, I submit that our limited locality has done its duty towards the commemoration of the genius of our brother who is gone, in realising a subscription list of 130 guineas, and erecting to his manes a beautiful marble bust, by the celebrated John Hogan. What provincial town has done as much?

In the second place, it is not true that there is no stone to mark our author's burial place. There is a stone (and a stone that few would care to displace) under which lie the lamented remains. It is a square large tomb, erected to the memory of their parents by the large love, though very limited means, of the two affectionate sons. Such a memento, I conceive, ought to be reckoned something, at least, to lead a wandering eye aright, and to stay a straying footstep. I will go farther, and assert, that this memory of parental love is a purer monument to his name and fame than the ten pounds' worth of granite which the Dublin Review taunts the inhabitants of Kilkenny for not erecting.

In conclusion, I would suggest that John Banim's name be graven on the tomb of his deceased parents. Such a measure may, perhaps, quiet the few tilting pens that never moved for Ireland's greatest novelist until the bust to his memory, by a few of his zealous admirers, was an accomplished fact. I have the honor to be, dear sir, your obedient servant,

John Thomas Campion, M.

Further from Europe.

The United States mail steamship Washington arrived at this port on the 6th, with mails to the 21st ult. On the same date the Cunard steamship Niagara, with Liverpool dates to the 24th, arrived at Boston.

Sir Henry Berkeley was to be appointed the new Governor of Victoria.

There was a full attendance of capitalists at the Treasury on the morning of the 19th May, in reference to the new loan of £5,000,000, but the only tender was from Messrs. Rothschild. On the sealed paper of the Government being opened the offered price and the reserved price were found to be £108 and £107 10s. 7d. for every £100 of money. The loan was finally accepted at the latter rate, which is equal to 93 for Consols. The scrip was marked ½ to ¼ premium. The applications including the amount required by the Messrs. Rothschild themselves, were stated to amount to £40,000,000, and the total paid on the 16th of May as a 10 per cent. deposit was £3,700,000. The surplus deposits were returned on the 21st, which gave much ease to the money market.

The foundation stone of a new military hospital, named the Royal Western Hospital, was laid by her Majesty the Queen with great pomp and ceremony on the 19th May. The site selected is situated about six miles from Southampton, and is about half a mile from the shore. The hospital will be sufficiently large to accommodate 1,000 patients. The land purchased by the Government covers 100 acres, and the frontage of the building alone will extend upwards of 1,400 feet. The pile will, it is expected, cost £200,000. A sad accident occurred on board one of the gun-boats ranged off the shore for the purpose of saluting her Majesty. By the unexpected discharge of a gun whilst being loaded, two seamen were horribly mutilated and killed.

In the House of Commons the Chancellor of the Exchequer had made his financial statement. The deficiency in incomes of the past year amounted to £3,560,000, to cover which the loans of £5,000,000 in Consols had been raised. The Chancellor promised a saving of £17,559,000 by the revision of the Army and Navy estimates for the current year. One million and a half of the loan was applicable to the year 1856–57. The sum of £3,000,000 in Exchequer bills had been successfully converted into Consols. Notwithstanding the reduced estimates for the services of the Army and Navy, the expenditure for the present financial year was estimated at the net amount of £77,525,000, whilst the net income from revenue was estimated at no more than £67,152,000, leaving a deficiency of £10,373,000. To meet this deficiency there was a balance remaining of the last five million loan of £1,500,000, a proposed vote of credit for £2,000,000, then the new loan of £5,000,000, shortly a prospective issue of Exchequer bonds or bills to the amount of £2,000,000, which will leave a small balance to the credit of the country.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Peel has stated, in answer to inquiry, that the German Legion will be disbanded as soon as it has returned from the East, and the men will be sent to the Colonies, not as soldiers, but as emigrants.

The trial of Palmer, the English poisoner, is in progress, and attracts immense crowds. Among the distinguished persons present on the 17th of May, was Mr. Dallas, the American Minister.

The Moniteur publishes the official returns of the gross receipts of the French railways during the first quarter of 1856, which amounted to 59,843,581f. Compared with those of the corresponding period of 1855, there is an augmentation in 1856 of 10,930,142f. The extent of line worked which, on the 31st March, 1855, was 4,699 kilometres, increased in 1856 to 5,609 kilometres.

By a treaty concluded between the Sultan and the Western Powers, the period within which the evacuation of the Turkish territory was to have been completed, has been prolonged. The prolongation is said to be six months from the present time.

The Czar proposed as an Arbitrator on the Central American Question.

From the London Times. May 23.

Does not such a state of things as exists in Nicaragua call for a speedy settlement of the Central American question, and the dispute between the two governments? What real difficulty is there in the way of such a settlement? We have expressed ourselves ready to give up the Mosquito Protectorate, as soon as ever a sufficient guarantee can be given for the safety of that Indian tribe to which our honor is committed. One point of disagreement, then, may be considered as already disposed of. With respect to our occupation and colonization of the Bay Islands, we are willing to submit that to the arbitration of a third power. A perfectly unobjectionable way, then, of settling the other point of dispute is provided, after which the quarrel is over.

Did Mr. Buchanan object last year to arbitration on the ground "that it would be difficult to find an impartial umpire, as we had gone to war with their arbitrator, the Emperor of Russia?" Well, that objection, at any rate, is no longer of force. We are not at war with the Emperor of Russia, and therefore he is at liberty for the purpose of arbitration. The United States cannot suppose that he will be partial to our side of the question, and therefore, if we are ready to accept his arbitration, they can have no objection. A power so recently our antagonist in a severe and sanguinary struggle, and now smarting with the sense of a humiliating peace, will not, at any rate, be too much disposed to favor our interests; rigid justice, as it is all that, under any circumstances, we ought to expect from any umpire, is all that we can possibly expect from such an umpire. A war, under such circumstances, is impossible; so long, at any rate, as the American Government retains any respect for European public opinion, and does not abandon itself to the violence and prejudice of an inferior party in the United States, with whom jealousy of England triumphs over every consideration of policy and justice.

Or will Mr. Buchanan say again, that "there is nothing to arbitrate," and that "he does not consider it a question for arbitration?" But such a position as this is plainly untenable. In a dispute between two powerful and intelligent governments, it never can be allowable for one side to say that its own case is so clear and self-evident that it will not submit to arbitration. Of course, the United States Government thinks itself in the right, otherwise it would not dispute these points with us. But that is its own opinion, and no more. Opinion must bow to the offer of a fair judgment upon the question, otherwise all justice between nation and nation, and between man and man, is at an end. In civil justice each party thinks itself in the right, but the two submit to a third party, who is the judge; and in international justice the principle is the same; for when the two parties or Governments cannot of themselves arrive at an agreement they must go to a judge or arbitrator, unless they settle the dispute by arms, which is to settle it, not by justice, but by force. Does Mr. Buchanan think the language of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty "so plain and explicit" as not to need arbitration? That is the very reason why he ought to wish for an arbitrator. If the case is so clear on his side, the arbitrator will of course see it, and decide accordingly.

British Aid to Costa Rica.—In the House of Commons, May 23, Lord J. Russell said that, as it was impossible for his noble friend to speak again, he would defer until Monday a question he wished to put to him. Its purport was to inquire as to the authenticity of a letter signed "E. Hammond," with respect to furnishing arms to the Government of Costa Rica, and to ask whether by furnishing arms, the Government intended to take any part in the hostilities between Costa Rica and Nicaragua? [Hear.]

The French journals, La Patrie and Le Journal du Havre, have taken up the speech of Gen. Quitman, of Mississippi, on Mexico, Cuba and Central American affairs. They invite France, England, Spain, and all the other States interested, to put a stop to the filibustering propensities of the United States.

The nomination of the Count de Morny as Ambassador to Russia, has been much stigmatized by the foreign press, who view him rightly as a croupier of the great hell, the Bourse. The Count de Morny discovered that some of the attacks upon him in the German papers emanated from the Ministry of the Interior; he openly threatened M. Billault with ruin and exposure. He carried his complaints to the Emperor, to whom M. Billault tendered his resignation, which the Emperor, however, declined to accept, saying, that his personal will was paramount, and should be so, regardless of any squabblings with the Count de Morny.

One of Louis Napoleon's old intimate adherents, M. Laity, is about to replace M. Morquart as private secretary to the Emperor. His dismissal results from the discovery of his having been mixed up in certain speculations of a not very creditable nature. M. Laity was condemned for writing Napoleonian articles in a journal in Louis Philippe's reign. Now, all journals, except Napoleonian ones, are suppressed.

England persists in refusing her permission to cut through the Isthmus of Suez, unless Egypt be given to her. In that case, the French Emperor would be permitted to help himself either to Belgium or Morocco.

The Legitimist, who procured the treaty for the English and Belgian journals, is to be tried in the Police Correctional Court, on a charge of conspiring to steal government papers.

American News.

A patent has recently been secured for an apparatus for making wood-gas. This important improvement was originally patented in Bavaria in 1851 by the original inventors, Messrs. Pettenkofer & Ruland, who are eminent chemists of that country, and were the first who discovered and brought into practical use the great principle essential in making wood-gas—that of subjecting the primitive vapors of destructive distillation to an immediate increased intensity of heat, so as to combine the carbon and hydrogen. The patent for the United States, which was applied for two years ago by Messrs. Davis, Massey, and L. R. Breisach and others, assignees of the inventors, has now been granted, and the gas is made by them on a large scale in Philadelphia for the city, and has been introduced into several places in the Western and Southern States. It gives a pure, brilliant light, without offensive odor, and is much less expensive than coal-gas.

The Louisville Courier of Friday says there was "quite an interesting administration of justice" on the steamer Alvin Adams during her recent trip from St. Louis to Louisville. A man named McBride was robbed of forty dollars while under the influence of liquor, by another passenger who claimed to be his friend. When McBride became sober, he suspected the author of the robbery. He was immediately hunted up; taken out, and having been stripped, the missing money was found in one of his boots. At the next wood-yard, the thief was taken on shore, and the poor fellow made to apply a coat of tar and feathers to his naked body. In that condition he was left alone to rid himself of his tarry clothing as best he might.

The engineer employed by the United States has estimated that the following amounts are necessary to complete the harbors on the shore of Lake Michigan, in this State:

Racine,	$43,992 45
Kenosha,	58,047 24
Milwaukee,	80,805 99
Manitowoc,	62,780 92
Sheboygan,	36,614 55

The congressional Committee have reported in favor of appropriating about one-half of this amount, but it is doubtful whether any at all will pass.

Every few days (says the Journal of Commerce) companies of Mormons, varying from two to seven hundred persons, are noticed as landing at some of the Atlantic ports, and proceeding westward. It seems that Iowa city has been selected by the leaders of the church as the place of rendezvous for some 5,000 of their adherents, previous to their finally starting for Utah, in July or August. They are principally recruited in England and Scotland. The company which arrived in New-York some months ago are temporarily lodged in the railroad buildings in Iowa city, and an encampment of tents has been formed about two miles from the town.

The total number of commitments to the County Jail for the last month says the St. Louis Daily Democrat, are fifty-three. Of these 10 were committed on charges of larceny, 5 runaway negroes, 5 for fine and costs on charges of assault and battery, 6 for safe keeping, 5 for forgery, 6 on peace warrants, 3 for murder, 2 free negroes for being in the State without license, 3 for contempt of court, 1 for adultery and 1 for robbery. Thirty-five were discharged from prison during the month. The total number of prisoners now confined in the cells is 61.

Gustavus Koerner, who was the Democratic Lieutenant Governor of Illinois in 1853, is among those who have come out against Slavery extension and the party in its favor. He has always been an advocate of freedom, having been obliged to leave Germany in consequence of his participancy in the Revolution of 1830. He has long been a resident of Illinois and is a man of great influence among the German population of that State.

The value of foreign goods imported at the port of Boston during the week ending May 30, amounted to $787,308.

It is gratifying (says the last Mississippi Clarion) to notice the gradual and steady filling up of the counties of East Mississippi, now being accomplished by immigration from the States east of us—mostly Georgians and Alabamians. This is due mainly to the building of the Mobile and Ohio railroad, which furnished an outlet to this large scope of country, previously so completely locked in from the rest of the world.

The Boston Journal mentions that in a lease lately drawn up and signed for a tenement in the vicinity of Dock square, in that city the following paragraph was inserted. "In case of war and bombardment of Boston or injury to the premises in consequence of foreign or domestic war, this term shall end, and the leases be canceled."

Mr. F. Bostick, a well known, influential citizen of Yazoo, Mississippi, is out in a long and spirited letter, declaring his withdrawal from the Know-Nothing organization, and his determination to do battle henceforward and forever in the Democratic cause. "Prodigal like," says he "I will return to the noble old Democracy!"

Mr. Leopard, one of the recent purchasers of the telegraph line from Shreveport to Natchez, has by great exertion, succeeded in getting the line in order from Shreveport to Alexandria and Natchez, and will, in a short time, be able to transmit intelligence through to New Orleans.

All towns in Minnesota are crowded with emigrants Boarding and provisions are high in consequence. Since the spring opened the emigration to the Territory has not fallen short of one thousand persons a day. The population will soon exceed a hundred thousand at this rate.

The resolution introduced into the Massachusetts Legislature by Mr. Charles Hale, appropriating $20,000 for material aid to the sons and daughters of Massachusetts now in Kansas, was taken up on the 3rd, discussed, and again laid on the table by eight majority.

In a drunken scuffle recently, in Mallorysville, in which Jesse and Jasper Cohran, father and son, were engaged, with knives, the father stabbed his son in thirteen places, which resulted in his death—the father was slightly cut. He has been committed to jail.

Some scoundrels entered the Catholic Cathedral in Chicago and took therefrom the Ciborium, the Chalices, the Remonstrant, and other valuable articles. They also strewed the consecrated Host upon the floor of the sanctuary, and did other injury.

Fitzgeral Tasistro, an $1,800 clerk in the State Department, at Washington, has been removed for writing an abusive letter to the Baltimore Republican about Foreigh Ministers, and sending copies under the Department seal to Ministers.

A correspondent, writing from Madison Co., N. Y., under date of June 1st, closes his letter thus: "I might mention that I found a snow-bank a little beyond Georgetown, yesterday, which must have been three feet deep."

The name of Deseret, which the Mormons have given to Utah, signifies the "State of the Honey Bee." The honey bee is the precursor of civilization, its visits to the wilderness being contemporaneous with those of the pioneer.

A tea service of silver, costing $350, has been prepared by the Portsmouth (Va.) friends of Dr. Jos. N. Schoolfield, of Petersburg, commemorative of "his distinguished services during the pestilence of 1855."

At the recent Kansas meeting in Syracuse, a letter was read from Gerrit Smith, proposing to raise one million dollars for the aid of the Free State cause, pledging himself to give ten thousand dollars.

The largest water-wheel in the world is at Troy, New York. Its power is equal to one thousand horses, and annually converts ten thousand tuns of iron into horse-shoes, spikes, nails &c.

The body of Mrs. Rossiter, wife of the painter, has been embalmed and sent home from Italy for burial, accompanied by her sorrowing father, husband and three young children.

The Canadian militia has recently been enrolled and officered, and is to be armed with the best weapons and the latest improved equipments. The rifles are of the Minnie make.

We notice in one of our exchanges the marriage of John H. Strange, and Miss Elizabeth Strange. It is a little strange, but we think the next event will be a little stranger.

Congress has adjourned until Monday, the 9th June, for the purpose of cleaning the rooms, and giving an opportunity to the Democratic members of visiting Cincinnati.

Fifty thousand herring were taken at Chappaguansett Creek, Holmes's Hole, Mass., a few days ago. Over three hundred thousand have been taken there this season.

After the opera in New Orleans the other night, Madame Colson, the prima donna, was presented with a diamond bracelet worth $1000.

The Pittsburg Union says, real, white, cold snow, fell in this city yesterday, May 30th! The thermometer, in the evening, stood at 50°.

The old Catholic Church in Fall River was burned on last Sunday morning. It was occupied by schools, &c. Insured for $4000.

A bill has passed the Senate of Massachusetts devoting $1,000 to experiments by Professor Agassiz in the artificial propagation of fish.

There is a man in New Jersey Penitentiary who has twenty three wives, two of whom he married within two hours of each other.

The wife of General Lane, who figures so extensively in Kansas, has obtained a divorce from him, it is said, in Indiana.

John Fox, the murderer of John Henry, son of Gov. Henry, of this city, is to be hung on the 25th of July Next.

The Grand Jury of Fayetteville, North Carolina, has indicted the Bank of Fayetteville for issuing small notes.

A writer in the New-York Tribune states that 4,382 hand-organs are daily ground in the streets of that city.

Among the late arrivals at St. Louis hotels, is one that reads—"E. Smith and four wives, Salt Lake."

Young America, is the name of the first fire company in Watertown, Wisconsin, just organized.

The Planters' Bank of Savannah has declared a semi-annual dividend of ten per cent.

Strawberries sell at Norfolk (Va.) at 18 cents a quart.

Cincinnati Convention.

June 2.—The Democratic National Convention assembled at Cincinnati at noon, amid the roar of artillery. Col. Medary, of Ohio, was selected as temporary chairman. Committees on Credentials, Organization and Platform were chosen and the Convention adjourned till ten o'clock next morning. Of course the preliminary proceedings were not concluded without the usual uproar. At one stage the Benton delegates from Missouri, who had been excluded from the Hall, knocked down the doorkeepers and forcibly gained admittance. Bowie knives and revolvers were drawn, to the infinite terror of all the peacefully disposed patriots present. No harm however resulted from this demonstration. Gen. John E. Ward, of Georgia, was chosen by the Committee on Organization Chairman of the Convention. The excitement at Cincinnati is intense.

June 3—The Convention completed its organization by adopting the report of the Committee recommending Gen. John E. Ward, of Georgia, for President, together with a Vice-President and Secretary for each State. The difficulty between the rival Missouri delegations was settled by the admission of the anti-Benton delegates. A motion to admit the delegates from the District of Columbia on the floor of the house was adopted after considerable discussion. Nothing further of moment was done in the Convention. The Credential Committee was occupied all day in hearing the arguments pro and con on the question of the admission of the New-York hards or softs. The Platform Committee agreed to report in favor of re-affirming the declarations of the Baltimore Convention of 1852, and resolutions denouncing the Know-Nothings, fully endorsing the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska act, and pledging the Democratic party to the construction of a Railroad to connect the Atlantic and Pacific States.

June 4. The Committee on Resolutions, at the opening of the morning session, presented the platform. It reaffirms the platform adopted at Baltimore in 1852, denounces the Know-Nothings, declares in favor of the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska act, the construction of the railroad to the Pacific, State Rights and the Union, free trade throughout the world, the Monroe doctrine, the transit across the Isthmus of Panama, sympathy with the regenerators of Central America, and securing an ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico. The resolutions respecting internal affairs were adopted with unanimity. On those that refer to external objects some difference of opinion arose, and the Convention adjourned to allow members an opportunity to interchange sentiments with one another on the subject. The proceedings before the credential committee with reference to the quarrel between the New-York factions, caused great excitement. After a protracted session the committee resolved to recommend the Convention to admit portions of the soft and hard delegations, the proportion of each to be based on the vote for Congressmen in 1853 and 1855. The committee also declared the soft section to be the regular organization of the party in this state. The friends of Judge Douglas have, it is said, withdrawn him from the field. The following embraces the platform :

And whereas, since the foregoing declaration was uniformly adopted by our predecessors in national conventions, an adverse political and religious test has been secretly organized by a party claiming to be exclusively Americans, and it is proper that the American democracy should clearly define its relations thereto : therefore,

Resolved, That the foundation of this Union of States having been laid in its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example of free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concern, and no respect of persons in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birthplace.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose the well-considered declarations of former conventions upon the sectional issue of demestic slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the states ; and that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union—

Resolved, That claiming fellowship with and desiring the cooperation of all who regard the preservation of the Union, under the Constitution, as the paramount issue, and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the states and incite to treason and armed resistance to the laws in the territories, and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion, the American democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the territories of Kansas and Nebraska, as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the slavery question, upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatisms of the Union: non-interference by Congress with slavery in states or territories ; that this was the basis of the compromises of 1850, confirmed by both the democratic and whig parties in national conventions, ratified by the people in the election of 1852, and rightly applied to the organzation of territories in 1854 ; that by the uniform application of this democratic principle to the organization of territories and the admission of new states, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect, the equal rights of all the states will be preserved intact, the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate, and the perpetuation and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future American state that may be constituted or annexed with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognise the right of the people of all the Territories including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the fairly expressed will of the majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with the other States.

Resolved, That the Democratic party recognizes the great importance in a political and commercial point of view of a safe and speedy communication within our own Territory between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of this Union ; and it is the duty of the Federal Government to exercise promptly all its constitutional powers for the attainment of that object.

Resolved, That the condition of popular institutions in the old world, and the dangerous tendencies to sectional agitation combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land, a high and sacred duty has devolved, with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the union of the States, and to sustain the advance among us of constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few at the expense of the many, and by vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

The following are the resolutions upon the foreign policy of the country :

1. Resolved That the questions connected with the foreign policy of the country are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations place their moral influence by the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to other States on the Continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing powers, requires that we hold sacred the principies involved in the Monroe doctrine, and their binding import which admits of no misconstruction, and should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That which the great highway, Nature, as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintainance, has marked out for free communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans—constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people—that result should be secured by the timely, efficient exertion and control with the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can under no circumstances surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of such commanding interest the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers a pasage across the Oceanic Isthmus.

4. Resolved, That the Democratic Party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico—to maintain a permanent protection of the great outlets through which is emptied into its waters the products raised upon our soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people, in our Western valleys and the Union at large.

June 5.—The platform, as published with the exception of the supplementary resolution relating to the construction of a Pacific Railroad, was adopted with great unanimity. The minority report of the Credential Committee, admitting the New York hards and softs to the Convention in equal proportions of each faction, was adopted. Both parties endorsed the platform, and agreed to support the nominees ; and both were pronounced fully up to the orthodox standard of the democratic faith. The New York delegates having taken their seats, the naming of candidates for the Presidential nomination commenced. Buchanan, Pierce, Douglas and Cass were severally nominated, and the voting proceeded.

FIRST BALLOT.

James Buchanan	135	Franklin Pierce	122
S. A. Douglas	33	Lewis Cass	5

The following is the first vote in detail:

States.	Buchanan.	Pierce.	Douglas	Cass.
Maine	5	3	..	..
New-Hampshire	..	5	..	..
Vermont	..	5	..	..
Massachusetts	4	9	..	..
Rhode Island	..	4	..	..
Connecticut	6	..	..	..
New-York	17	18	..	..
New-Jersey	7	..	..	..
Pennsylvania	27	..	..	..
Delaware	3	..	..	..
Maryland	6	2	..	..
Virginia	15	..	..	..
North Carolina	..	10	..	..
South Carolina	..	8	..	..
Georgia	..	10	..	..
Alabama	..	9	..	..
Mississippi	..	7	..	..
Louisiana	6	..	..	..
Ohio	13½	4½	..	..
Kentucky	4	5	..	..
Tennessee	..	12	..	..
Indiana	13	..	..	..
Illinois	..	..	11	..
Missouri	..	..	9	..
Arkansas	..	4	..	..
Michigan	6	..	..	..
Florida	..	3	..	..
Texas	..	4	..	..
Iowa	..	..	4	..
Wisconsin	5	2	..	..
California	..	..	..	4

On the first ballot the New-York Softs cast for Pierce 18 votes, and the Hards cast 17 for Buchanan.

SECOND BALLOT.

Buchanan	139	Douglas	31½
Pierce	119½	Cass	6

On the second ballot, Buchanan gained 3½ votes, Pierce losing 3, Douglas 1½, and Cass gaining 1.

THIRD BALLOT.

Buchanan	139½	Douglas	32
Pierce	119	Cass	5½

On the third ballot, Buchanan lost 1, Pierce 1, and Douglas gained 2. In Kentucky Buchanan gained 2 and Douglas lost 2. In Wisconsin Douglas gained 1, and Cass lost 1 in Ohio.

FOURTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	141½	Douglas	30
Pierce	119	Cass	5½

On the fourth ballot, the only change, except the regular New-York, was in Kentucky, where Buchanan and Pierce gained 1 each, Douglas losing 2.

FIFTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	140	Douglas	31
Pierce	119½	Cass	5½

On the fifth ballot Buchanan gained 1 and Piebce lost 1. In Massachusetts Buchanan lost 1½ and Douglas gained a ½ in Kentucky.

SIXTH BALLOT

Buchanan	155	Douglas	28½
Pierce	107½	Cass	5

On the sixth ballot Tennessee changed 12 votes from Pierce to Buchanan. In Kentucky Buchanan gained 2, Pierce 1, Douglas losing 3.

The announcement of the vote of Tennessee for Mr. Buchanan was received with loud cheering, which was checked by the President.

SEVENTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	143½	Douglas	58
Pierce	89	Cass	5½

On the seventh ballot Tenneesee turned her 12 votes from Buchanan to Douglas, and Arkansas changed her 4 votes from Pierce to Douglas. In Massachusetts Buchanan gained 1 ; Georgia changed from Pierce to 7 for Douglas, and 3 for Buchanan.

Mr. Bates of Tennessee, here moved to adjourn till 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, but being met with loud cries of "No!" "No!" the motion was withdrawn.

EIGHTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	147½	Douglas	56
Pierce	87	Cass	3½

On the eighth ballot Buchanan gained 1 in Maine and 2 in Kentucky.

NINTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	142	Douglas	48
Pierce	87	Cass	7

On the ninth ballot Buchanan gained 1 in Massachusetts and Missouri, and lost 1 in Kentucky.

A motion was now made to adjourn, and lost by an immense majority.

The Alabama delegation asked and obtained leave to adjourn for a few moments.

TENTH BALLOT—CONTESTED.

Buchanan	146	Douglas	56
Pierce	87	Cass	7

On the tenth ballot Vermont changed from Pierce to Douglas, 5 votes, and Douglas gained 2 also in Ohio.

ELEVENTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	150½	Douglas	59½
Pierce	80½	Cass	5½

On the eleventh ballot Maryland gave its entire vote for Buchanan.

Here another motion was made to adjourn, and lost by loud cries of "No."

TWELFTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	147½	Douglas	63
Pierce	80	Cass	5½

On the twelfth ballot there was no material change,

Another motion was now made to adjourn, and lost.

THIRTEENTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	148	Douglas	63½
Pierce	79	Cass	5½

On the thirteenth ballot Rhode Island broke from Pierce, casting 2 votes for Buchanan, and 5 for Pierce.

Again a motion was made to adjourn, and the States called. Motion lost.

FOURTEENTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	150	Douglas	63
Pierce	77½	Cass	5½

On the fourteenth ballot Rhode Island cast her whole vote for Buchanan.

The convention then adjourned till 9 o'clock next morning.

June 6 at 10 o'clock A. M., the President called the Convention to order.

The Hall was not full when the balloting commenced.

FIFTEENTH BALLOT.

Buchanan	168½	Cass	4½
Douglas	118½	Pierce	3½

When Maine was called her vote was cast, even for Buchanan and one for Pierce.

North Carolina led off on the same tack, and was followed by South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida, and Texas.

Tennessee cast her 12 votes for Buchanan Pierce ran down to three votes.

SIXTEENTH BALLOT

Buchanan	168	Cass	6
Douglas	121

The New York Softs went over to Douglas on the sixteenth ballot. Maine concentrated her votes on Buchanan. Ohio gave him 2 more. Kentucky cast all her votes for Douglas having previously given him but 7.

On the 17th ballot, Buchanan was nominated almost inanimously ; when the vote was announced as being 296 for Mr. Buchanan, the cheering was immense. Three tremendous cheers were then given for Buchanan, three eqaally enthusiastic ones for Douglas, and three moderate ones for Pierce.

In the afternoon session Mr. J. C. Breckinridge of Kentucky was by the same vote nominated for the Vice Presidency.

Know Nothing Convention.

June 3.—The Know Nothing National Council met at Knickerbocker Hall, in this City, but did not make much progress. They succeeded in organizing, although there were not many delegates present. There was a brief debate on a motion to do away with pass-words, and remove the veil of secrecy, pending which the Council adjourned.

June 4.—An animated and prolonged debate occurred as to the propriety of abolishing secrecy in their meeting, which was ultimately decided in the affirmative by a large majority. During the day spicy speeches of political importance were made by Hon. John M. Botts, Hon. Humphrey Marshall, Hon. Thos. A. Jenckes, of Rhode Island ; Hon. Bayard Clark, of New-York ; Mr. Saunders, and others.

June 5.—The National American Council closed its annual session in this city yesterday. There were but few members present, and the business transacted was of little public interest. A protest was presented against the action of the Council in improperly excluding from a seat Mr. Bayard Clarke, of Albany —a duly elected delegate—because he would not unqualifiedly support the Philadelphia nominations. Efforts were made to introduce resolutions denouncing slavery agitation, and pledging the party to a protective and internal improvement system, but they were successfully resisted.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, May 22, 1856.

O'Brien—"Comparative liberty"—"Extraordinary leniency" of the British Government—The Government violate their Contract with O'Brien, Mitchel and Martin—The Colonists and the Exiles—About the escapes of the latter—Misrepresentation—Judge Keogh—O'Connell on old Keogh—Pat Costelloe—His lonesomeness—The Irish Militia—Not a drop of blood for Ireland—Kill thousands for England.

Had all the Irish Exiles, on arriving in Van Diemen's Land, acted like Smith O'Brien, and refused the parole conditions offered to them, they would have placed the Government in a most embarrassing position. To have placed them all, and guarded them, in solitary confinement, like that to which O'Brien was subjugated at Port Arthur, would have been a matter of extreme difficulty, if not of utter impossibility. Moreover, such a proceeding would have outraged public feeling to a degree that the government of Sir W. Denison, already tottering to its fall, could not have withstood it.

Circumstances, however—ill health, &c., compelled all, with one exception, to give their parole, and accept the comparative liberty. Now, in this contract the advantage was all on the side of the Government. Placed in separate districts, beyond which it was forbidden to stray, the Exiles were, in the first place, debarred almost completely from following any useful occupation by which they might have earned their bread. They were thus forced to depend for their support upon remittances from home. On the other hand, the Government was relieved from any responsibility regarding them, by the fact of their having consented to become their own jailers. In every respect, as I showed in my last letter, their condition was worse than that of the ordinary convict ticket-of-leave holders.

This fact, I have reason to believe, soon became apparent to the Exiles themselves, even while the Home Government were claiming credit for treating them with extraordinary leniency. Nevertheless, the Exiles had entered into a solemn contract with Sir W. Denison and the English authorities in Van Diemen's Land, and by that contract they resolved to abide. I will now proceed to show in what manner Sir W. Denison and the convict authorities fulfilled their portion of the contract, and in doing so will confine myself to the statement of a few facts which cannot be controverted.

One morning, while at breakfast with Mr. O'Brien, at his hotel at New Norfolk, Mr. Tarleton, the magistrate of the district, called, and informed Mr. O'Brien that he had received orders from the convict authorities at Hobart Town to place him under "strict surveillance." Mr. Tarleton, happening to be a gentleman, informed Mr. O'Brien that he would take upon himself the responsibility of disregarding those orders, "because," said he, "I know that whilst your parole lasts, you will do nothing inconsistent with its obligations." Now here was a plain, unmistakeable breach of contract on the part of the Government. When Mr. O'Brien gave his parole to the Government, the latter guaranteed that so long as it lasted he should be at perfect liberty within the district allotted to him. They publicly accepted his word, as a gentleman, that he would not attempt to escape, and in exchange they guaranteed to him a certain amount of freedom. Privately, they issue instructions to place him under "strict surveillance," thus impeaching his honor as a gentleman, restricting, or rather annulling, his freedom, and violating not only the spirit, but the very letter of the contract. Mr. O'Brien's remark, I recollect, at the time was: "These officials at Hobart Town imagine that I am capable of acting as they would act under similar circumstances. They judge of me by themselves."

Now who will deny that this moment the parole was at an end, and that Mr. O'Brien was at perfect liberty to walk out of the island, without permission asked or leave taken of anybody.

Yet these are the men—Denison, Hampton, and the base convict officials of Hobart-Town—upon whose authority charges of breach of parole, forsooth, are levelled against McManus, Meagher, and Mitchel.

Take another case. Two months before Mitchel escaped, P. J. Smith was arrested in mistake for John Mitchel, and imprisoned, and subjected to ill-usage accordingly. At another time, an armed policeman entered the house of a magistrate where Mr. Mitchel and his family, and John Martin, were spending the evening, and was actually caught in the fact of listening at the drawing-room. The wretch had been set as a spy upon Mitchel and Martin; and this, mark you, while they were under parole, and pledged not to escape clandestinely. Who will deny that in both these instances the parole was grossly violated by the Government?

I could mention other cases of breach of parole by the Government authorities, but these will suffice. I may state, however, in further illustration of the meanness and duplicity of these people, that it was intimated to the magistrates and country gentlemen of Van Diemen's Land that they could not associate with, or exhibit kindness to the Irish exiles, without incurring the displeasure of the Government. For the credit of the colonists, be it observed, the intimation was treated with contempt.

In my last letter I showed that the charge of breach of parole against any of the Irish exiles now in America was a falsehood. I showed that McManus at the time of his escape, and for six months prior thereto, had not been subject to any parole at all. I showed that Thomas Francis Meagher, by the testimony of eye-witnesses—by the testimony even of Van Diemen's Land officials themselves—had fulfilled every parole obligation. I showed how John Mitchel had in person surrendered his parole—how, accompanied by a single friend, he had entered the magistrate's office, where he sat surrounded by three armed constables, none of whom were bribed, as has been falsely alleged—how, owing, as I believe, to the timidity of the magistrate, he was enabled to escape—and how that escape was regarded, not alone by Mitchel's friends and the whole public of Van Diemen's Land, as honorable, but how the organ itself of Sir W. Denison pronounced it to be "chivalrous" in the manner of its accomplishment.

It remains, therefore, only to stigmatize the language used in Parliament by Lord Palmerston, and echoed by the base English press, as a lie; a base, an infamous lie!

Breaches of parole there have been, but the delinquents, as I have above shown, are Sir W. Denison, Hampton, the convicted defrauder, and, for all the world knows, perhaps Lord Palmerston himself.

Public political hostility, private personal malignity, public calumny, private misrepresentation, the bold lie of the Minister, the fraudulent sophistry of the editor, all these have been brought to bear against the characters of the Irish exiles escaped to America, but all in vain. The simple statement of facts alone suffice to overturn the vile fabric which public and private malignity, supported by calumny and misrepresentation, could construct.

I was much pleased with your article on Judge Keogh. Does it not seem strange to you that our Parliamentary patriots who made such a row in the House of Commons, about the appointment of Mr. Stonor to an Australian judgeship, should be silent upon the subject of Mr. Keogh's elevation to the Irish bench? Do you know Mr. Keogh senior, father of the learned judge? If you do, even by appearance, you will appreciate the truth of O'Connell's description of him. On one occasion, when O'Connell was a candidate for Dublin, old Keogh either refused to vote for the Liberator, or else voted for his opponent, I forget which. The event excited much indignation, and old Keogh—the base, ungrateful Catholic—was denounced, in no measured terms, by the orators of the Precursor Society. I recollect hearing O'Connell interrupt one of these orators, while pouring forth a torrent of boiling abuse, and exclaim:

"Ah! what do I care about that little red-nosed Connaught attorney!"

Your old friend Pat Costelloe is still alive. Meeting him the other day, I exclaimed:

"Surely no country on earth has produced so extraordinary a race of patriots as Ireland! Here is Pat Costelloe, a 'patriot' of fifty years' standing, and a placeman and patriot of twenty-five years."

His appearance called to mind an anecdote which the present Lord-Lieutenant used, some years ago, to relate with much glee. Pat—before he got provided for—had been a steady place-hunter for years. It is true, he had not rendered any essential service to the Government—his only qualification, indeed, seemed to be, that he was an unflinching supporter of the Liberator. Calling, one day, at the Castle, upon his usual mission, and addressing Lord Morpeth—then Chief Secretary—he said:

"It isn't, my Lard, that I stand very much in need of a place, for I have a snug little patrimony of my own. But, my Lard, all my friends—Morgan O'Connell and Carew O'Dwyer, &c.—have got places, and when I'm in company with them—and very good fellows they are in company—I feel lonesome, my Lard, that I have not a place, too."

That magnanimous force, the Irish militia, will, I believe, soon be disbanded. If it has done no other good, the embodiment of this militia has at all events effected this much: it has settled and established the true meaning and signification of "moral force." Moral force, then, means, that while it is lawful to draw the sword for England, it is criminal to unsheath it for Ireland; that while the existence of the Irish nation is not worth the shedding of a drop of human blood, the preservation of the ill-gotten power of England is worth the sacrifice of thousands of human lives. Surely this is a glorious result!

KILMAINHAM.

Letter from Waterford.

Old Times—Tramore—Impaling an Idea—Mr. Blake's gas—Aldermen—Larry Forristal—Red Cloth and Vermin—Mr. O'Neill's lectures—Complimentary resolution—Hurrah for Waterford—Old friends alive and kicking—Presentation in Lismore Convent—The Sisters of Mercy—Running down an "iron-ribbed" Virgin—Hugh Jenkins, of Baltimore—Nick Power—A big Bog-trotter—Paul the Bostman—A handsome Militia Captain—Peter Strange—A Longitudinal Jackass—Crotty the Cobbler—A Baker's bread baked—Twe Devils on two sticks—Death of Mrs. Wyse.

WATERFORD, May 16, 1856.

Just in from Tramore. Been out there these three days. 'Twas glorious. Sometimes taking a gallop on the strand, as far as the Rabbit Burrow, and back again. Sometimes a ramble all over the cliffs, from the Lady's Cove to Garraras Strand, and the beach fronting the Islands of Kane. I had a dip, of course, every morning, and a sail yesterday over to Brownstown Heads, with the Keowns, at the very break of day. Do you remember the mornings we used to troll with them for mackerel? The scudding we used to have up and down from the Cove to the Metal Man's Cave, and sometimes across to Ballimacaw! Those were the happy days. I wish to goodness! her ladyship of Buckingham Palace would let you have a couple of months with us in Waterford. May be we wouldn't have a jolly fine time of it!

The Tramore season may be said to have fairly commenced. The railway was driving a fine business on Sunday last, and all during the week. The bathing-boxes have been all rolled down from their winter quarters on the top of the stones, and everything—in the way of bathing-caps, foot-tubs, and towels—is ready for the public. By-the-bye, is it true you all bathe together, men and women jumbled up in a crowd, at your American Tramores? Lord! that is awful. It's awful to think of, at all events, however beautifully it may work.

When I sat down with the pen in my hand, I intended writing you a mighty big chapter of news about Waterford. Here, then, before I'm half a minute at the business, I'm obliged to throw myself back in the chair, stretch out my legs, kick up my heels, yawn like a watchman, and take to my pipe. There's no news in Waterford. It takes three or four months for an accident, or anything else that's original and novel, to think of occurring. You know that, many a time, you complained to me of it. However, I'll go on smoking and thinking all the while; and whenever anything strikes me, I'll just stick my pen through it, and fasten it, like a moth or a beetle, to the paper before me.

Smoking reminds me of gas. Our spirited and intelligent townsman, Mr. Blake, has been exhibiting his new gas establishment, all the past week, to numbers of visiters. The light which Mr. Blake knocks out of his gas is of a very pure and brilliant description. The members of the Corporation tested it on Tuesday, and expressed themselves wonderfully well pleased. Larry Forristal is Alderman still. He thrives and grows fat on Mount Misery. You recollect the comical grumbling he had when it was proposed, that the Aldermen and Town-Councillors should provide themselves with civic costume. The Town-Councillors with long robes of crimson cloth, having velvet trimmings and facings—the Aldermen the same colored garments, with ermine, instead of velvet, to finish them.

"Isn't it a poor case," says Larry, standing one day at the gate of Robert Curtis' butter-market, "that we're put to the trouble of buying a bundle of red cloth, with I don't know how many yards of vermin?"

Poor Henry Downs used to tell this story about Larry with the heartiest humor.

Larry's red gown—flounced with "vermin"—kept him out of his grave—at all events, out of mournful dullness—for many a day.

At the Town-hall, the only entertainment at present is a short course of lectures, on ancient and modern music, by Mr. John O'Neill. I havn't been to see him as yet, being out, as I told you in Tramore until an hour ago, refreshing myself from dawn to nightfall with the music of the great ocean, which is both ancient and modern—"ever ancient and ever new," as the words of one of our most sublime Catholic hymns express it. Mr. O'Neill has been lecturing in Clonmel, and with decided effect. The Tipperary Free Press notices him with great praise. As you have always taken the warmest interest in every thing tending to elevate the popular mind, and confirm the literary reputation of the country, I give you what the Free Press says—

"The lecture was evidently prepared with great care, and enunciated with considerable ability. If, on the former occasion, the talented young lecturer evinced a thorough appreciation of his subject, and showed how conversant he was with the manners and customs of the ancients with respect to the 'gentle art,' on last evening he particularly demonstrated his knowledge of its more recent history. After an eloquent dissertation on sublimity in music, poetry, painting and architecture, he concluded his elaborate and most instructive lecture, amid the warmest demonstrations of applause from a highly respectable and discriminating auditory."

In connection with this, you won't blush if I tell you, that at their last meeting, which took place two or three days ago, the Mechanics' Scientific Institute passed a very handsome resolution addressed to you. Here is the extract of the proceedings—

Meeting held at the Institute, on Friday, the 16th day of May, 1856, W. M. Ardagh in the chair:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to forward a copy of our last Annual Report and Prospectus, to our talented fellow-countryman, Thos. F. Meagher, Esq., and respectfully invite him to help the cause of progress in his native city.

The letter from John G. Davis, inclosing you this resolution, is written with the very best taste, and extreme good feeling. You ought certainly to publish it the moment you get it. It would be only a graceful and proper acknowledgment of the unswerving attachment which the Waterford people, high and low, rich and poor, Radical and Tory, cherish for you. I know you love them, every one of them, and are proud of them. So you ought. They have stood to you through thick and thin, and every day they grow stauncher and fonder still. Hurrah for Waterford, and the sky over it! That's what I say. And I know you'll pitch up your hat, and join in the shout.

Were you to take a run in here for the summer, you'd be delighted to find that very, very few, indeed, of your old friends are off the road. Death has been surprisingly sparing with them, thanks be to God! Dick Sergeant is to the good—hale, hearty, and spunky. So is Johnson, and Pierce Newport, and Sir Ben. Ned Walsh, too, and Alderman Murphy, and even old Bell, about whom you were in doubt. He still lives to shoulder his big umbrella on wet days, and enjoy his clay pipe every evening, in the Club corner, as usual. Of course, you've long since heard of the death of Dr. Foran, our good Bishop. The anniversary for the repose of his soul takes place in the Cathedral to-day.

This suggests me, it might be interesting to some of your readers—some County Waterford boys or girls—to know that a reception took place at the beautiful little Presentation Convent of Lismore, last Wednesday week. Miss Casey, of Kilmacthomas, on that occasion received the white veil from the hands of the Right Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Dr. Foran's pious and learned successor. Father Flinn, of Kilrosenty, eloquently signalized himself and the event by a most touching discourse. The Waterford News says that, the ceremony being over, the Bishop, Clergy and friends of the young novice, sat down to a splendid dejeuner in the refectory of the Convent. Then, we're to have a grand Bazaar, the first week of June, in Dungarvan, in aid of the sick poor, visited by those glorious creatures, the Sisters of Mercy. A German Brass Band, of very brilliant power, and well known here, and in Cork and Limerick, for the rare excellence of its performances, will attend. Sir Nugent Humble and his popular and beautiful wife, Sir Richard Musgrave, Lord Kane and all the wealthy neighbors patronize it warmly. They'll be at the fair, and the Sisters and their cause will receive immense help.

Little Tommy Barnes (you surely don't forget him and his big six-story sail-loft, 'long-side of Ben Graham's iron foundry on the Quay?) ran into the Maid of Erin, the New-Ross steamboat, with his handsome yacht, Challenge, on Wednesday last. The Maid was lying at the Neptune Foundry (you recollect it, close to old Carrigan's house, William street,) when the Challenge, endeavoring to weather a schooner which was on the same tack, came foul of the iron-ribbed virgin, causing considerable alarm and damage. The Challenge lost her bowsprit, and the Maid some of her sheeting. 'Twas Tommy's first trip this season. But he'll get his boat all right again, and handsomely apologize for his awkward encounter with the Nymph of the Suir!

On looking over the Annual Report of the Mechanic's Institute, I find the name of Hugh Jenkins, Esq., of Baltimore, United States, in the list of Life Members. He was born in Waterford, left it when very young, and is now in splendid circumstances. So I've heard the Whites, the Popes, the Laphams, and others of our tip-top Waterford merchants say. He is principally engaged, I believe, in the Brazilian trade—has several clippers in it—and, in a word, flies his flag from the main-royal. Well done, old Jenkins! Don't I like to see Waterford men flourishing all over the world? Don't I like to see them, in America and elsewhere, proving that it wasn't want of enterprise, nor industry, nor quick brains, nor thrift, nor forethought, nor patient thought and toil and calculation, they lacked, but a happy, free country—a country left to itself, or rather to the wonderful means with which God has gifted it, and fair laws, and all the goodness and high spirit, and proud activity which follow in their train—to bless it? And is it not delightful, too, to see the sons of our darling old city, when miles and miles away from it, returning with affectionate remembrance to it, fondly thinking of it in their prosperity, and out of their abundance, well and nobly earned in a foreign land, helping the institutions of their native place? Three cheers for Hugh Jenkins! and fair wind, and every sort of good luck, to his Baltimore clippers! Hip, hip, hurrah!

Nick Power, our senior County Member, and his unmarried daughters, have arrived at the Shelbourne Hotel, Dublin. I suppose they'll be coming down to Faithlegg shortly. There's nothing like spicing a letter with a few grains of fashionable intelligence. Nick is just as big a bog-trotter as ever. His London life doesn't polish him much; nor has his constant bench-warming in Westminster produced from him any flowers of rhetoric as yet. I remember when the Earl of Mulgrave (now Marquis of Normanby) was down with us in Waterford, stopping over at Sir Henry Barron's, in 1837. There was a great public dinner given to him in the Town-hall (Lord Stuart de Decies, then William Villiers Stuart, in the chair), and there was no end of balls, and suppers, and everything of the sort, all in his honor, at Belmont, Sir Henry's hospitable seat—Barron's Court it's called now. The day before he returned to Dublin, however, his Excellency went on a pic-nic down the river—if I don't mistake, it was in the lovely Maid of Erin—accompanied by Sir Henry, and the Earl of Howth, and a world of beauty and fashion, from the neighboring counties of Tipperary, Kilkenny, and Wexford. Nick Power, of Faithlegg, was on board, with his bouncing, blooming, and merry-hearted daughters (the finest-hearted girls in the county) and was paid particular attention by his handsome and chivalrous Lordship. He had a happy knack of insinuating himself amongst strangers (the strangest even) with a word or two upon some subject or business in which they were immediately interested. Nick was a great farmer. His thoughts were never out of the cow-house. His Excellency knew this; and having shaken hands with old Nick, congratulated him on the bright prospects there appeared to be for the cattle and crops.

"Your's, Mr. Power, I understand, couldn't be in a more promising condition."

Nick, with a "faith" and a spit, towld him his Lordship was right.

His Lordship remarked on the loveliness of the scenery and the weather, the admirable music on board, and the charming ladies with whose presence he had been honored.

"Faith, then, for all that, my Lord, I'd sooner be in the haggard at Faithlegg, looking at the cows scutting about the lawn."

That was Nick's answer, and the answer was charmingly indicative of tastes which to this day preserve their original perfume and vigor.

Poor Paul—Martin Paul, of Duncannon—the old market boatman, for years and years plying between the latter place and Waterford, died the week before last (the 10th of the month,) from sheer old age. He was 102 the day of his death. Paul spent his earlier life in the British navy. At the battle of the Nile, in 1798, he fought like a divil on board the Bellerophon, and had the satisfaction of seeing half the crew killed and her three masts shot away. For his desperate bravery on that occasion, he received a medal, which he used to wear indiscriminately at Repeal meetings and on the King's or Queen's birthday. Your brother Harry, by the bye, is still at the Fort. He seems thoroughly devoted to the military profession, and to his zealous and indefatigable attention to his duties is chiefly owing the splendid condition in which the Waterford Royal Militia has been for some time past, and continues to be. Harry is a fine dashing-looking fellow in regimentals. He takes the shine out of them all. He's far the handsomest officer of the regiment. Curious thing it is—you outlawed by the Queen, editing a paper in New York—and he, at home, wearing her uniform and manning one of her most formidable forts. But Harry was never a rebel—was always very moderate in politics—inclined to conservatism, in fact. So that he's perfectly consistent in holding her Majesty's commission.

Peter Strange, of Aylwardstown, is still firing away with his letters at Father Aylward, of Castlecomer. They're all about Tenant-right (defending Sergeant Shee, one of the Kilkenny members, from charges of treachery, and the Lord-knows-what, which the reverend gentleman has brought against the learned Sergeant) and generally hitting away, right and left, at popular agitators, the Tenant League, the dead body of Lucas, and the scattered fragments—the disjecta membra—of Young Ireland. Peter is a longitudinal jackass. His letters remind me of rusty old fowling-pieces, mounted with brass and furnished with flint locks, which one sees hung up across the chimney in gardeners' houses, and which the gardener now and then takes down to have a pop at a crow or a sparrow. Peter, I believe, got his learning at Clongowes, but he's entirely too long-eared to make a bright use of it.

I looked in at the Petty Sessions, the other day, with the hope of finding something on the table to please you. The only thing was a cobbler, named Crotty—"a cobbler of many years standing in Waterford," says the Waterford News—who was indicted with asking for alms the night previous. To this Crotty demurred, setting forth ably that he only asked a half-penny for tobacco from a man he knew, because, sure enough, he was to be up early next morning to mend some old shoes. The cobbler "of many years standing" was discharged by the considerate magistrates, the mendicancy with which he was charged being his maiden offence.

At the last session of the Board of Poor-Law Guardians there was a great dispute about the baker, and the bread to be furnished. Some one said the latter was as good as that furnished to the Limerick Union. Mr. Cadogan protested—the Limerick bread was like turf!

Then follows this highly entertaining dialogue:

"Mr. Elliott moved that the baker be referred to the committee.

"Mr. Grubb—I second that motion.'

"The master, on being called up, stated that the baker was not competent to keep accounts.

"Mr. Carrigan—What way did he put down 108?

"Master—He put it down 1008 (laughter).

"Mr. Carrigan—A man of that class is not fit to take charge of the bakehouse."

At the last meeting of the Dungarvan Guardians, a young lad, named Power, made a piteous complaint against his late master, Mr. Mansfield, a farmer from Ardmore. In the first place, he had no shoes to go through the "furze and freagh" with, to mind the cattle; and then Mr. Mansfield bought a penny-worth of bread for him, and eat the half of it himself. At this the Guardians laughed loudly, and thought it great fun.

John D'Alton, in his last work, entitled King James's Irish Army List, has a long account of the Sherlocks. The recollection of the many pleasant hours you often spent in and about Killaspy, the seat of the living representatives of the family, will render this item of news interesting to you. The List mentioned proves them to be a magnificent old stock.

The County Dublin Militia is here still. They had a review on Lombard's Marsh (the site of the new park) last week. Their Colonel, the Earl of Meath, did himself the honor of putting them through their facings. Lord St. Lawrence, (the Lieut. Colonel) was on the field. What a spicy cock-robin that little chap is! I remember him in July, '46, in the Phœnix Park, riding a race, ('twas a "gentleman's race," of coorse, and over the coorse) against some officers of Lord Paget's dragoons. The cock-robin came in sweating, a neck and a half ahead; and the moment he did, (the cheering drove me half mad) his father the Earl of Howth, strode up, and lifted the little chap, boots, whip, and all in the most beautiful style, clean out of the saddle.

After the review on the Marsh, the officers and men enjoyed themselves at the expense of two cripples, who undertook to run a race, a few yards, for a shilling a head. Highly humane and religious amusement, no doubt! Extremely worthy of Irish officers and soldiers, blazing in scarlet, bedizened with gold, and thirsting for glory. They'd look well themselves, pelting down Beresford street, out to the Manor, with their heads under their arms, or otherwise crippled, and all for a quid of tobacco, like Crotty the cobbler.

Having mentioned the Manor, I can't help somewhat mournfully referring to the death of Mrs. George Wyse, which took place in Kingstown, near Dublin, about three weeks ago. All your Waterford friends in America know her to have been the sister-in-law of our very eminent and highly honored fellow-citizen, Thomas Wyse, at present, and for some years past, British Minister at Athens. Mrs. Wyse's daughter, Winifred, who is as good as she is beautiful—and she is still as beautiful as the first rich blush of summer—is deeply to be pitied. Waterford has long been proud of her, and now most tenderly and deeply condoles with her. To the stoniest heart, it is a touching sight, that of a beautiful and queenly girl in tears for her mother, and, as poor Winifred Wyse may be said to be, alone in the world.

Ever believe in the memory, heart and soul of

THE METAL-MAN.

Irish News.

An amusing story is going the round of society in Dublin. A certain Dean, who is desirous of standing well with the Castle, and who has frequent interviews with the Lord Lieutenant, gave his Excellency a letter to read which he had just received from a gentleman in the Crimea, formerly his Excellency's private secretary. His Excellency read with much satisfaction till he came to a postcript, which, it seems, had escaped the Rev. Dean's notice, and then his face darkened, and he asked the Dean whether he had read the whole letter. "Yes," replied his Reverence; "very amusing, isn't it?" His Excellency returned the letter, and the confounded Dean then read: "Can it be true that old ass C——, is going to marry Rose————?" naming a young lady, one of the belles of Dublin. Whether his Excellency, in anger, or the Dean, in distress, disclosed the story, is not known. We can only say that the tale is generally credited, and excites unbounded merriment in the gay circles of the Irish capital.

The Dublin Company's steamer, the Windsor, has been chartered by the French government to carry stock and passengers from Dublin to Havre. The fares for bulls, cows, implements and produce, vary from £3 10s. to £2, according to the size and age of the animals. Rams, boars, and sows, from £1 10s. to 10s. each, and farm implements and produce at £1 per ton, or 2s. the cwt., according to the weight or size of the article, and the room it will take up in the stowage. Herds and caretakers in charge of animals will be carried free.

The Drogheda Corporation will shortly, it is stated, by one of the most solvent in Ireland, offer the sale of some of their outlying property, which will soon take place in the Encumbered Estates Court. They will, it is said, be enabled to discharge every shilling of their bonded debt. By the decision of the House of Lords in the case of the Corporation v. Holmes, the accession to their funds will leave a clear income of some £,4000 per annum.

The Limerick Reporter says: "The intelligence conveyed as to the free pardon of Wm. Smith O'Brien, was received by his old neighbors and friends in the town and vicinity of Rathkeale with the most joyous enthusiasm. Immediate preparations were made for the purpose of giving expression to the ardent feelings of joy by which all classes in the town are actuated. There was a general illumination; nearly every house in the town shone with the emblems of congratulation, including the residence of the Venerable Archdeacon, &c., &c." The writer says: "I may state that the announcement in a cotemporary to the effect that Mr. Smith O'Brien may be immediately expected home is incorrect. He is not expected till the middle of July, when he will be received by his friends and tenantry in the neighborhood with every demonstration of unabated regard and warmth. There has been no better landlord, and in all the relations of private life, no more estimable gentleman."

Dr. Donovan delivered on the 10th a lecture on Irish Sirnames, in continuation of a similar one given on the Tuesday previous. He began by showing the analogy between the Russian affix "off," or "ofma," and the Irish "O" and "Mac," and said that the word "son," in most of the Northern nations, has a distinctive prefix or affix allotted to it. He then explained how several of the English sirnames became Hibernicised, and said that the native Irish, in process of time, modified their sirnames, till, at length, they merged into an Anglican shape, and lost their ancient peculiarities almost totally. He then proceeded to refute an assertion of the poet Spencer, who, in a dialogue between two imaginary personages, attempted to show that several ancient Irish families were of English descent, because they chanced to inherit patronymics which sounded as though they were of British origin.

The Clonmel Chronicle says:—As a man named Patrick Christopher, better known as Paddy Bawn, and who was formerly leader of one of those disgraceful factions which were ever the fertile source of crime, was returning from the fair of Mountaincastle, between this town and Cappoquin, he received a severe blow on the side of the head while shouting defiance towards some members of an opposing faction. The blow felled the unfortunate man, and his assailants, not content with the injury which had been inflicted, flung more stones at Christopher while he lay on the road, and then decamped. Their victim was discovered lying lifeless not a great distance from his house. A hat, which is now in the possession of the constabulary, was since found by a carman while coming along the road near the halfway house.

An inquest has been held in order to see whether any information could be gained relative to the skeleton lately discovered in a bog near Claudy. One witness was examined, who was well acquainted with Mr. Lambkin, the Excise officer, whose skeleton it is supposed to be. The man swore that that gentleman had often expressed fears that he would be waylaid by some people named the Matthews, because he had not screened their shortcomings in connection with their paper mill. A medical gentleman was examined, who said the remains were those of a human being, and that the hair appeared to be that of a male. It was also deposed that the cloth in which the body was enveloped was a kind of coarse wrapper, sometimes used in the manufacture of paper.

The Ulsterman 16th ult., announces the death of the Rev. George M'Crane. The sad event took place on Wednesday, at the residence of his father, in Gormanstown, where he had been for some time, laboring under consumption. This excellent young priest, who had been partly educated at Maynooth, and completed his studies in the Irish College of Salamanca, was well known and respected in Belfast having been on the mission here up to the time of his iliness. He was chaplain to the Convent, and the Lunatic Asylum. He was as remarkable for his zeal as for his amiability, and was specially distinguished by his indefatigable exertions in raising subscriptions for, and furthering the erection of, the new Convent, Announcing the death of the Rev. Thos. Cody, the Glasgow Free Press says:—This estimable clergyman breathed his last at his residence in Monteith-row, on Thursday evening, after a short illness. Father Cody was born in the city of Cashel, in Ireland, about thirty-eight years ago, in a city which has given saints to the church, as it gave monarchs to the country. After spending some time at Carlow, he was removed to the Missionary College of All Hallows, near Dublin, in which he concluded his studies, and was shortly after his entrance ordained for the Scottish mission in the year 1844.

"In Cork," said O'Connell, "I remember a supernumerary crier, who had been put up in place of an invaiid, trying to disperse the crowd by exclaiming with a stentorian voice—"All ye blackguards that isn't lawyers, lave the presence o' the coort entirely, or I'll make you, by the powers."

Mr. Dargan and a few of the principal share-holders in the Cork, Blackrock, and Passage Railway Company, have effected the purchase of the interests of the Cork River Steamers Company. By this arrangement the boats and railway will henceforward be under one management.

The Rev. Moses Mitchell, vicar of Kirknewton, has committed suicide by shooting himself. At the inquest it appeared that he had previously been subject to fits of great despondency, and the jury found a verdict of "temporary insanity."

The Very Rev. William Fitzpatrick, O. S. D., aged about 72 years, died on the 1st inst., at the Dominican Convent, Esker, county of Galway. The venerated deceased was one of the now few surviving fraternity of the "olden time."

The several recruiting parties in Ireland, which were receiving volunteers for the line, have been ordered to join their respective regiments. Lieutenant Squirl, of this town, and parties under him, will leave in a few days.—Boyle Gazette.

A captain of the Clare Militia is engaged to be married to a lady of £42,000 fortune. One of the subalterns of the same corps has left for London, to conclude a matrimonial alliance with a fair lady of enormous wealth.

There is at present being exhibited at our hide and skin market, a calf skin with two heads, two mouths, four eyes, and four ears, eight feet, and two tails, all perfectly shaped and formed.—Limerick Chronicle.

The Association for the Propagation of the Faith received for the month ending the 8th of May the sum of £367 1s 4d, of which £5 11s 8d was from the diocese, and £3 6s 1d from the archdiocese of Cashel.

The officers of the French war-ships at Kingstown were entertained at dinner at the Mansion House, Dublin, by the Lord Mayor.

An Irish horse, "Paddy Boy," won at the great race meeting in the Crimea.

Answers to Correspondents.

A stupidly offensive typographical error occurred in our list of "Books Received," last week: the word Blind was printed instead of Blessed, in the title of "The Life of the Blessed Virgin Mary: By Monsigr. Rounald Gentillucci," published by James B. Kirker. (Dunigan & Brother.)

M. McC., Vanleek Hill, Canada West.—Works in the Irish tongue are very scarce here. Haverty, corner of Fulton and Dutch streets, or Bradburne, corner of Fulton and Nassau, are the only parties we know through whom you might be able to procure such as you want.

J. B. Syracuse.—It has long since been shown, by incontrovertible authority, that Riley, of Mexican War traitorism notoriety, was not an Irishman.

Reviews of Brougham's "Irish Echoes," and "Dramatic Works," and many other interesting favors from the publishers, are crowded out.

Mr. Meagher has nothing to do with the business affairs of the Irish News. Mr. Lalor has the entire management of them, and it is to him all letters upon the subject are to be addressed.

Felix asks us who we think is the most eloquent and gifted of the Irish members of Parliament at present. We are rather disposed to mention John Francis Maguire, the member for Dungarvan, in answer to that question. Though devoid of many of the graces of eloquence, he has a copiousness of imagery and words, a vigor of thought, and a forcible and clinching way of driving his points home and fastening them there, which place him high above all his countrymen in Parliament. When he first stood for Dungarvan, he met Shiel face to face on the hustings, and opened on him a tremendous argument and rebuke. At first, Shiel was considerably nettled; but finding his opponent was a man of true metal, as sound as he was bright, he gradually reconciled himself to his rhetoric, and before it was over, used frequently to exclaim, as Maguire came out with something very good, "Capital, by Jove!—Capital hit, by Jove!" Two or three days after this, we met Shiel in Waterford, and referring to the election, he spoke in raptures about Maguire.

"A Shark" wants to know whether it was round the Horn, or through the Straits of Magellan we came, on our way from Australia. As we're on dry land, we've no objection to inform the Shark of our movements. We came round the Horn, keeping a hundred miles to the south of the island of Diego di Ramirez.

We have had a long and patriotic letter from a respected citizen of Belfast, Maine, condemning the conduct of young Jerome Bonaparte, in resigning his commission in the American Army (Mounted Rifles) and entering the service of Louis Napoleon. The writer asks us, if we agree with him. To be sure we do. To be an American citizen is infinitely a grander privilege than to be the subject of any King or Queen.

"An uncompromising Repealer" thinks we ought to have said more about Mr. Crampton's dismissal. So we might, if we had thought it worth while. A word, after such a waste of time and paper, was quite enough to spend upon it. When the Earl of Haddington (the great Orange Lord-Lieutenant) was leaving Dublin, escorted by squadrons of Hussars and Dragoons, and followed by hundreds of carriages (containing the wealthiest and most arrogant of the Irish aristocracy) O'Connell, who happened to see the procession from the other side of the Liffey, (he was standing on the foot-path of Ormond Quay at the time), remarked to a friend, on whose arm he was leaning—"That's a nice turn-out." The same may be politely said of Mr. Crampton's dismissal. The weather is trying—we are disposed to be languid—and strong talk quickly evaporates. The "uncompromising Repealer" had better take a bottle of soda water, and keep his blood perfectly cool.

"Jupiter" asks us if we met any Irishmen the time we were in Pernambuco, Brazils. Certainly we did. The evening after landing, we were strolling through the city, gaping and gazing at every thing from the gutter to the garret, when the name of Malowney, on a green sign-board, caught our eye. Entering the shop or store, over the doorway of which it hung, we found Malowney himself, in his shirt-sleeves, with a black velvet smoking-cap on his scalp, and a large pair of silver-mounted spectacles astride the bridge of his nose, with a huge pair of shears cutting out a coat. As we intend that Malowney shall occupy a front seat in our little theatre of Personal Recollections, that's all we'll say about him for the present.

"Dennis O'Leary writes to us an inflammatory letter, from Babylon, Long Island, intimating generally his approval of the News, but begging of us (these are his words) to "set more fire to our paper." We are grateful to Dennis for his approval and wise counsel. But crackers and fireworks don't come in till the Fourth of July. They're a nuisance every other day of the year.

"Castledermot"—Decidedly so. Gerald Griffin has written far away the finest Irish novel in print. Nothing that Lover, or Carleton, or Lever, or even Banim has written, as a sustained effort, is comparable to the Collegians. As for Gissipus, 'tis the most exquisitely classic production ever put upon the English stage. But to think that poor Griffin was cold in his grave long before the world knew of his beautiful grand genius, and that this glorious masterpiece of art, which for nearly one hundred nights won the loud applauses of all London, should have been returned to him by Macready, when he was in the very agonies of hunger!

"Pluto," from Hellgate, East River, writes to us pretty much in the same style as Dennis O'Leary, of Babylon, has done. He, too, suggests to us a more plentiful use of patriotic brimstone. We're "altogether too cold," he says. Pluto's suggestion, at the very first smell, indicates the locality from which it emanates.

"An ardent well-wisher." We refer him and his manuscript to Pluto's inflammable region.

"Portumna" asks a kindly and loving question about the life and death of Thomas McNevin. Our correspondent may rest assured we shall not, nor cannot, forget this brilliant young writer and orator. The works his industrious genius has left to the Irish race have made his name memorable. The History of the Volunteers and the Confiscation of Ulster we class among the most precious volumes of the Library of Ireland. Unfortunately, we met him only a year before the eclipse of his intellect took place. The first time we saw him was in the Committee-room of the Repeal Association. A debate on some report was going on. A dull and cumbersome lawyer (whose ceremonious stupidity had acquired for him the reputation of profound sagacity) had just sat down, after urging his objections against a bold national sentiment or two contained in the report. "My learned friend," says McNevin, "may exhibit all the solemnity, but I much doubt if he possesses the wisdom of Minerva's bird." The lawyer was ever after known as "the owl."

Judge Ball is still on the Bench. He was incorrigibly fond of interrupting witnesses and counsel, and making fun of both by soliciting (with the utmost apparent innocence) explanations of statements and questions, the meaning of which was as clear as day. Everybody in Ireland knows what a field-laborer means when he says he's been "fencing." It means digging ditches—throwing up hedges or fences. "What were you doing?" asked the Counsel, of a witness one day, at the Waterford assizes. "Fencing," your honor. Judge Ball interposed. "Fencing?" said he, as gravely as a sexton could say it—"with foils, do you mean?" There was a pause and a titter. "No, my Lord," says the witness, "we were fencing with spades." Spades proved trumps. The red Ball was cushioned.

"Shamrock" sent us a pleasant little letter with his "Misadventure" last week. He says:

"Herewith you have a 'Misadventure,' the first I have written since '46 or '47. I hope it may suit your pages; if so, pray look to the proof-sheets yourself, as there are several technical terms that may possibly bother a Yankee compositor. Tell Savage that I am very grateful to him for the honorable mention he has made of me in his "'98 and '48." Indeed, it made me blush, from my os calcis to the occipito-frontalis, to read such exaggerated praises of one who, tho' he suffered much, certainly did but little. I wish I had a chance to publish my 'Misadventures' in New-York. Would Redfield take them?"

Young Woman from Thurles—whether Nick Maher, of Turtulla, is alive or dead. We lost sight of him long ago. As a patriot, he wasn't worth a kish load of turf. As an orator, he was something a little more decent than Sir Timothy O'Brien, the Member for Cashel.

MR. TIMOTHY EDWARD HUGHES, has received our written authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "Irish News," throughout the New-England States.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1856.

THE NOMINATION.

In the damp and drizzle of Friday morning, the 6th of June, a roar of cannon, from the Park and Brooklyn Heights, announced the will of the American Democracy. On the seventeenth ballot, by acclamation, James Buchanan, of Pennsylvania, was declared by the Convention of Cincinnati, the chosen candidate for the Presidency.

The continuous peals of artillery with which the news of the prompt and unanimous decision of the Convention was received in this, and the sister city of the Churches, but echoed, it seems, the hearty delight with which the nomination has been received throughout the Union. Every morning since, the telegraph has notified the offices of the daily papers, that the great cities of the West have signalized the event with all the enthusiasm of a national ovation.

From the Lakes to the Hudson, popular orators have congratulated America upon the wisdom of the Convention, and thousands, it appears, have with their tumultuous cheers ratified the choice which their delegates lost so little time in determining.

Belfast, in Maine, has had its glad hurrah; and to-morrow, no doubt, we shall hear of a triumphal ode spoken in the Rotunda of the St. Louis, at New-Orleans, and illuminations, torch-light processions, and a profusion of fire-works, all through the gay and chivalrous capital of Louisiana. The Atlantic and Pacific will clasp hands across the prairies, and pledge each other to a victory in November for the Constitution, the civil and religious liberty it defines, and the majestic unity of States which it has founded and confirms.

In the city of Washington, the oldest and youngest Senators of the Republic—both eloquent and bold champions of the great Democratic dogmas—have spoken to a vast multitude under the Capitolian hill, words of generous devotion to the man, who for a short contest their competitor with the people, stands now before the world the legitimate and recognized choice of the Democracy, destined to perpetuate, as Chief Magistrate of this opulent and powerful commonwealth, the principles of Jefferson, Monroe and Jackson.

The speeches of Senators Douglas and Cass were worthy of their fame, their heart, their statesmanship, and cause. The speech of President Pierce, if anything were wanting to complete the happiness and promise of the event, gracefully hailed and crowned it.

The architect of his own fortune; rapidly rising to distinction among the most notable lawyers of his native State; a staunch supporter of President Monroe; the steady, warm, and trusted friend of Andrew Jackson; occupying for years seats in both Houses of Congress; Minister to Russia under President Jackson; Secretary of State under President Polk; Minister to England under the present Administration; he has, through a series of great services and successes, proved himself well worthy to preside over the affairs of this magnificent country. No public man, we believe, in these days covers so broad a space, stands so firmly upon his antecedents, and gives from such a fortunate and illustrious experience so many guarantees that under his management the country will be united and prosperous within, and in all its transactions, whether of peace or war, will be honored and honorable, at home and abroad.

The platform he accepts deprecates the bigotry of Know-Nothingism; reasserts the liberality, wisdom, and grandeur of the elder statesmen of America; enunciates positively, and insists upon, the integrity of American citizenship, irrespective of creed or birth-place. For which reasons—and for the additional one of his being, as Jackson was, the son of an Irishman—we heartily wish him the most brilliant success, and pledge him our friendliest and most strenuous support.

THE IRISH MILITIA.

There's a fresh grievance, it appears, to complain of at home. The militia regiments, enrolled during the Crimean campaign, are to be shortly disbanded. The Irish regiments lead the way. They are not to have the privilege of being devoured last. The Polyphemus, in whose clutches they are, treats them with no consideration whatever. Of this the Irish press, from Derry to Dingle, bitterly complain. With a storm of reproaches, they accuse the English Government, in whose service they exhaust their pens, with adding another act of heartless injustice to the long list of wrongs and insults it has heaped upon Ireland.

Many of them warm into the most eloquent abundance of denunciatory adjectives, and rising with the vengeful spirit of the theme, precipitate volumes of prophetic wrath against the mistress that has turned to marble upon them. England is reminded of the impetuous alacrity with which her Irish subjects threw themselves into the stony bed of the Alma, and threw up their hats for the victory. Paraphrases of Shiel's famous passage about Wellington and the aliens, flash and thunder through the columns of Gazettes, Chronicles, and Reporters.

Whose were the arms that drove your bayonets deepest into the foe at Inkerman? What sabres proved the sharpest in the charge of Balaklava? Who was Redan Massey? Was not De Lacy Evans nursed to the tune of Garryowen? Did the Zouaves fling themselves against the belching batteries of Sebastopol with an intrepidity more dashing, reckless, and desperate, than our own boys from Enniskillen and Connaught?

These, and such as these, are the questions which in a fiery torrent—a Phlegethon of rhetoric—beat round the foot of that throne, to revive the faded gilding of which, these poor slaves in red coats have ached for days and nights, sweating, shivering, and bleeding unto death, all along those steppes which crown with iron the black Euxine. And they ask, if a country whose sons have thus proved their loyalty to England, is to be outraged and defrauded? For these our services is the Irish militia to be disbanded? For these our services, are we, of the three nationalities which make up this compact empire of Great Britain, to be the first carted to the scaffold, robbed of our shilling a day, stripped of our livery, thrown flat on our face, and shortened by our shako?

The whine and wirrasthru is everywhere taken up. Hardly does it subside for an hour in Dublin, before the lachrymose editors of the South give it to the winds and mist of their beautiful province. The last note of the lamentation is still throbbing through the Groves of Blarney, or floating over Cromwell's Rock, or mingling with the chimes of St. Mary's tower of Limerick, when, with the broadest accent, it is caught up somewhere about Carrickfergus, and from there it sweeps round and all over the cliffs and lakes, castles and homesteads of the strong North, clamorous enough to wake the armed sleepers in the enchanted cave of Innishowen.

It pains us to see so much vexation of heart. It pains us infinitely more to witness at this day in Ireland such miserable humility, and find them down on their marrow-bones begging of England not to take away their elegant clothes, and their shilling a day. It pains us to the quick to see a splendid opportunity, open as the sea itself, gradually narrow and close up, and another dark wall thicken round the hopes which had risen from the tomb.

The Irish militia regiments are to be disbanded—the quicker the better.

With no irreverence for a noble institution do we say this. A national militia has ever our enthusiastic word and cheer. We know what it has done on the soil of Greece for the fame and freedom of a graceful, eloquent, and glorious people. We know what it won for the Republic of the Seven Hills, in Sicily and Spain, beyond the Rhine, and even to the Tweed. The crags and glaciers of the Alps in sublime silence chronicle the victories of the Swiss militia over the armies of Austria, Bavaria, and Burgundy. The turbaned legions of the Bosphorous turned and fled before the militia of Poland, when the Crescent had reached its highest point in the western sky, and threatened to eclipse the Cross of Constantine. The mighty obelisk overlooking the bay of Charlestown, the broad waters of the Delaware, the beautiful column in Savannah sacred to the memory of Pulaski, the green mounds stretching away, and the trees dotting the fields from the Mississippi to the Bayou Bienvenue, the beach at Vera Cruz, the white walls of Chepultepec, the pyramid of Cholula, the black forest of Contreras—a thousand scenes and monuments, the hand of art and the soul of nature, far and wide proclaim the triumphs of the American militia.

In a word, we know, as Thomas Davis has written, that a national militia is the only force which can repel the invader, without endangering the citizen; and with him we hold that a national militia is sanctioned by the history of Ireland and of England, is dear to the Constitution, honored by victory, and flourishes at this hour in Prussia, Switzerland, Belgium, Norway, Sweden, and America—the most spirited States and confederacies in the world.

What Ireland once accomplished with the mere parade of her militia, the imperishable words of Grattan announce to all time. Before us, as we write, hangs the fine engraving of Collyer, representing the Volunteers, with their colors, artillery, and cavalry, drawn up on both sides of King William's statue in College Green. A salute has just been fired. A dense bank of grayish smoke shuts out the rear ranks of the soldiers, high over which, the quaint faces of the old houses of Dame street, and the noble arches and architraves of the Parliament-house, and the double cupola and corinthian capitals of Trinity College appear. The windows of the houses are filled with ladies. In the foreground stands the Duke of Leinster and Lord Charlemont, their swords drawn. A squadron of dragoons occupy the right of the Generals. Two field-pieces, under the command of old Napper Tandy, are stationed on the left. No Napoleonist could look with deeper sorrow on the Farewell of Fontainebleau, than do we on that splendid vision of Ireland in arms, invoking Liberty, in the august shadow of her Senate. It reminds us of what Ireland was, of what she might have been, of what she has come to be.

How the Volunteers failed, broke up, and vanished fruitlessly into history, most men at this day know. It is useless to repeat the dreary story. Enough to say, that with arms in their hands, 100,000 strong, they suffered themselves to be deceived by the fair looks and words of the schemers in the pay of England, and proclaimed the independence of the country without providing for its security. The courteous imbecility of Charlemont, their General-in-Chief, deepened the mischief which their own chivalrous credulity was unfortunate enough to generate. The consummate villainy of Castlereagh quickened the disease to a crisis, and the century threw its dawning light on a nation, sitting in rags and fetters, with a broken sceptre at her naked feet.

Whatever the error, the mischief, and disgrace incurred by the Volunteers of 1782; however stupidly they permitted themselves to be seduced into a ruinous confidence, and suffered their country to be seized, gagged, and plundered in their presence; all might have been retrieved, had the men of this generation in Ireland been inspired with the spirit which has bequeathed us the Declaration of Rights, the genius which circled it with a divine light, and the republicanism which grew out of it, adding new splendors to the martyrology of our race.

Again, as in the time of the Volunteers, was Ireland left to her own resources. Again was England plunged into a foreign war—the bloodiest and most sumptuous into which she has flung her sweat and treasure—and again was Ireland free to determine for herself a future of happiness and high honor. The Militia were called out. Landlords, lawyers, peasants, and mechanics, stood shoulder to shoulder, arms in their hands, sentinelling the Irish coast, with none to dispute with them possession of the land that bore them, and none to contradict the decree for Irish freedom, had they had the manhood to send it forth. Never was a nation so generously invited by great events to better her condition. Never was a nation offered so propitious an opportunity for a complete redemption, and an Olympic race of glory.

But far more culpably than the Volunteers, who erred in judgment only, and not in heart, the Irish militia of to-day sin against the noblest memories of their country, the wounds which cry out for vengeance, the hopes and prayers of our race dispersed throughout the world, and the special goodness of Providence.

Away with them!

BRITISH POLICY AND NICARAGUAN HONESTY.

The news of the war between Nicaragua and Costa Rica affords the London Times an opportunity—which Aminadab Sleek could not better embrace—with pious prevarication, to roll up the whites of its eyes with sanctimonious unction and howl with the admonitions of internal philanthropy.

Of course, the religiously inclined Thunderer is not particularly attentive as to the truth of the text from which he preaches, or more truly, he wraps it up in such a leaden cloud of misrepresentation, as completely shuts out all glimpses of the Heaven he implores. We see nothing, and only hear the noise, which, from the oleaginous nature of its medium, fully illustrates that hitherto unaccountable phrase in Festus—"buttered thunder."

Central America is a nightmare to the Times. "Confusion, anarchy, and bloodshed" sit upon its chest, squeezing its devout diaphragm, roaring anti-British diatribes into one ear, and scoffing at Clayton-Bulwer Treaties into the other—tearing asunder its Exeter-Hall eyelids, and searing its sacred balls with gouts of blood.

After six years, of devoted and malign assiduity, and, it must be admitted, fearless audacity, in attempting to fix itself firmly in Central America, and seize two-thirds of that pathway of empire—after the successful bewildering of General Taylor's administration, and the unceremonious laughing at Fillmore's—after achieving Clayton-Bulwer Treaties, the universal benevolence of which completely overshadowed all distinct American interests; and eating diplomatic Webster-Bulwer dinners, at which the distinguished consideration of the former was less effective than the renewed London Assurance of the latter—after the coast had been cleared, a multi-blooded Indian declared King of Mosquito and "ally of her most gracious majesty," San Juan seized and baptized in rum by the name of Greytown, the islands of Tigre and Ruatan "filibustered" on European principles, and the whole Central American question so interwoven and tangled with well-assumed misunderstanding, and well-defined doggedness—after such a series of successes, the present state of affairs in Nicaragua falls heavily on the soul of Anglo-Saxon intervention.

It is no wonder, then, that the Times speaks of war in Central America as "butcheries which disgrace humanity," "savage excesses and simple barbarism," &c. It broadly states that General Walker "possessed himself of the Nicaraguan Government, not, it would appear, without protest from the native authorities," which is a notorious and characteristic falsehood. General Walker did not possess himself of anything. He was invited to aid in stilling the troubled waters of Nicaraguan politics. The President's Message, which places the matter in a prominent historical position, distinctly says, that the "assistance and co-operation" of General Walker and his little legion of Americans was invited. But before President Pierce had so recognized the fact, its truth was beyond cavil, and actually the cause which gave stability to the Nicaraguan Government, and consequently recognition by the United States.

Again, the Times says, "He (Walker) has invaded Costa Rica," which is quite the reverse of the truth, Costa Rica having invaded Nicaragua.

Taking such views, and making such misrepresentation, the Times follows up by asking "who is responsible for this deplorable state of things in Central America—for this reign of anarchy, horror, and blood, in the place of that smiling commerce and peaceful prosperity which the framers of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty contemplated for these States?"

Replying in the negative for Great Britain, it lays the whole onus of the inability of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty with, as we imagine, considerable satire, at the door of the United States. The whole thing is an attempt at wretched special pleading. General Walker has done more to shiver the pretensions of England in Central America than the combined labors of the many agents of the U. S. Government who have dealt with the question. Not but that Mr. Hise and Mr. Squier took good grounds, but Walker has taken the only means by which the English are brought to their senses.

When Mr. Buchanan was Secretary of State, he said truly (in a letter to Mr. Hise, then American Chargé to Central America), "The object of Great Britain is evident from the policy she has uniformly pursued throughout her history of seizing upon every valuable commercial point of the world." These ideas in words almost identical were illutsrated by the correspondence of British officials, as we shall show. Mr. Buchanan indicated the purpose of England to be the controlling of the route between the Atlantic and Pacific; but her design evidently went further in the desire not only to control but to obstruct the Pacific route. The astute policy pursued by her statesmen warned them that trouble was in the future. Great Britain could manage Costa Rica quietly; it being considered "a kind of second Mosquito, practically a British Colony, in which sundry petty dictators" were the mere puppets of British influence; and to the truth of which recent accounts furnish a somewhat satisfactory index. On the other hand, Nicaragua was regarded as Republican in spirit and organization; and from the first, says the Democratic Review, "presented an obstacle to British policy, which neither cajolery nor threats has been able to remove, and which finally has made her the victim of British insult and agression."

This, however, is about to draw to a close, and the prophecy of one of the British sub-officials has been already, to a great extent translated into a bitter fact.

Early in 1849 the British Vice-Consul at Nicaragua, Mr. Manning, wrote to Lord Palmerston, thus—"My opinion is, that this country will be over-run by American adventurers, and consequently, bring on Her Majesty's government, disagreeable communications with that of the United States." To stem this tide of adventure, and chiefly the "disagreeable communications," &c., the Vice-Consul suggested that a protectorate should immediately be negotiated, and a transit favorable to British interests managed. "The welfare of my country," continues the patriotic and crafty Vice-Consul," and the desire of its obtaining the control of so desirable a spot in the commercial world, and free it from the competition of so adventurous a race as the North Americans, induces the writer to make such propositions;" which met with immediate action from the British Government.

The humbling of Costa Rica, and its proven inability to either warp by intellectual influence, or cow by arms the progressive state of Nicaragua, the settled strength of the political element in the latter, and the advantages it offers to emigration—which a leading city contemporary has, in the face of all geographical and statistical knowledge, attempted to disparage—its American strength, heartiness, and vigor—the infusion of that "adventurous race," which Mr. Manning, in common with all Englishmen, so much envy in business, and have such good reason to dread in war,—these guarantee the brilliant life of Nicaragua, and through it the safety of the Central American States, and the speedy demolition of English ferreting there.

RELICS OF SAINT QUIETUS.

A portion of our City Press, either from inexcusable ignorance, or for furthering political designs, have, with much flippant discourtesy, commented on the ceremonies with which the Catholic Church at Hoboken received the relics of Saint Quietus.

In a country which professes to be Christian—to believe in the Religion of the Saviour of mankind—we were not a little surprised at the profligate sneers with which the Press we allude to regarded those ceremonies.

It is a matter of frequent practice, we are aware, to declare the liberties of the country in danger, from the sinister designs of the Pope, the intrigues of the Jesuits, or some other bug-bear of the kind equally illusory. Such charges and pretences may serve to propogate the political faith which ignores everything that is foreign—even the Religion of Him who was born in Judea.

But when those by whom the truths of history are well known and understood—who profess a belief in the Christian Religion, and ridicule its evidences—go out of their way in discussing the secular affairs of the day, to insult the faith of the Christian, then is it necessary for us to protest against such assaults, in the name of that Christianity which is common to the land.

It has never, we apprehend, been pretended by the believer in the truths of the Bible that, during the primitive ages of the Church, she was other than the pillar and ground of truth. During the time when, by the common consent of approving sects, the Church was immaculate and pure, those who embraced the faith did so with the certainty, their profession of faith would require the sacrifice of their lives. In the face of torments and death, they believed and proclaimed their belief, and died the champions of the Cross.

They were pursued by fire and sword—by wild beasts, made ferocious with hunger, but not so ferocious as the Pagans who devoted their victims to destruction. Their heroic firmness won the admiration of the beholders, who, at first looking on their suffering with apathy, were overcome by the spectacle of a heroism so sublime. In seeking for the cause of such self-sacrificing devotion, they discovered the secret of eternal life, and became themselves ready to perish for their faith. The blood of the martyrs became the seed of the Church. Does not every Christian know and believe this?

In secret recesses, in caverns and catacombs which surround the City of Rome, those early Martyrs were interred, with those evidences which to after ages have revealed for how many years they professed the faith, and that they died for it. History and tradition have preserved the memory of all this. The blood thus profusely shed, as it exuded from the veins of the victims, was caught up and preserved by the Faithful—interred in the cup which received it, with the remains of the dead—that it might serve as an attestation of the holy cause for which that blood had been shed.

In reviewing the treasures and relics of the past, is there any thing from Nineveh and Babylon produced by the excavations and discoveries of Layard, or from Herculaneum and Pompeii, worthy to be honored with the regard which the Christian should pay to the remains of him who died for his faith in the first days of the Church? No matter to what Christian sect he may belong, can he regard without emotion or reverence those mute but undeniable testimonials which are evidence to his senses of the truth of the narrative which tells of the persecution to which the early Christians were exposed? Should not these relics, purged of all earthly dross, be kept as a sacred deposit by all who feel an interest in the truth of Religion, and the integrity of History?

Can any American who knows that the bones of the Martyrs of the Revolution were reverentially gathered from the shore where the prison-ship had consigned them at the Wallabout, to be buried with military honors, feel it to be an insensate devotion to dead men's bones that causes the Catholic Church to inter in the bosom of her altars the bones of the martyrs who died the soldiers of Christ, in the grandest revolution the world has ever known?

A revolution which changed the destiny of mankind—confounded the Jew and the Gentile—and, by the light which shines from Calvary, guides man in the pursuit of the happines of eternal life.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

THE GALWAY ELECTION—A JAUNT DAY AND NIGHT TO LOUGHREA.

It was snowing heavily the morning I set out from Dublin to cross the Shannon. Mitchel was with me. We breakfasted about five o'clock at Mackin's Hotel, in Dawson street; after which we crossed over, and took our seats in the day-coach for Ballinasloe. It was an extraordinary queer coach. The only one of the sort, I believe, in Ireland. The wheels, axles, and splinter-bars, were painted yellow. The body, a dingy carmine. Having glass panels all round, it resembled the Civic state-coach. The drowsiness of its look completed the resemblance. The usual bustle, blundering of hostlers and office-clerks, importunities of waiters and newsmen—there are no newsboys in Ireland—being cut short by the coachman mounting the box and shaking out his reins, in a few minutes we were smartly trotting through Dame street, on our road to Kilcock.

The day's journey was woeful. It snowed the whole way. But that was no novelty, for it had been snowing a week previous. The road, for three or four feet in many places, was carpetted with the beautiful white flakes, and not a trace of a hedge or a ditch, hay-stack or tree, could be seen. We changed horses at Kilcock, Kinnegad, and Kilbeggan, and a number of other lively and flourishing towns like them, finding nothing all the way through, not even a comical beggar, to relieve the spotless monotony of the wearisome scene. It was the dreariest drive I ever sat out. If that can be called a drive, which was a dead walk for more than two-thirds of the road. At several points we had to get out, and trudge it on foot some hundreds of perches, the snow was so deep. Were it not for this, and the company of a villainous red-faced rogue—the under-sheriff of Roscommon—who entertained us with professional anecdotes, demonstrative of his profound sagacity and skill, the journey would have been the most desolate blank.

The under-sheriff, some years before, had been a constable in Dublin, and many of his experiences in that city were sparklingly told, with an unctuous twinkling of his dewy greenish small eye, and other lively intimations of the relish the retrospect of his past life afforded him. One or two popular Irish Members of Parliament figured brilliantly in his choice reminiscences; one, in particular, from the hospitable region of Connaught. The conversational powers of the delicate official were equalled only by the avidity he repeatedly expressed for spatched snipe, a little buttered toast, a broiled kidney well peppered, and any quantity of blazing hot punch. He not only finished off every little souvenir with a heartfelt aspiration for these necessaries of life, but very often blended them fragrantly with the narrative, or suddenly diversified the stream of his discourse with abrupt eulogies in their favor.

"'Twould be so nice," he used to sigh, drawing himself tight and cozy back into the corner of the coach, and giving himself a delicious hug, "'twould be so nice to have that spatched snipe, that broiled kidney, and lashings of punch to wash them all down with!"

This sentiment was the savory burden of his remarks. Every time it escaped him, he winked an eye or two, smacked and licked his lips, squeezed up and gave himself a hug.

Twelve o'clock had struck long before our big glass coach pulled up for the night, under an arch-way in the great town of Ballinasloe. We ought to have been there at seven o'clock in the evening. The delay was horribly provoking. The candidates were to be proposed the following morning; we had pledged ourselves to be in for the first of the fight; were bringing down a heavy supply of the sinews of war, in bank-bills and silver, besides a huge bundle of placards; and here we were, I don't know how many miles, from Galway.

"Let's have a chaise and pair," said Mitchel.

"By all means."

"And travel all night."

"Done," said I, "that's the way to do it."

The chaise and pair were ordered, and whilst they were tacking the former out of an old shed, and harnessing and putting the latter to, and lighting the cracked lanterns, the distinguished travellers supplied the requirments of nature with a chop—a dainty abbreviation for at least a good dozen—and otherwise conformed to the suggestions of the under-sheriff of Roscommon. By-the-by, the very instant the coach pulled up under the arch-way, the rascal, without saying a word, jumped out, cut down the street, and disappeared in the snow.

Sound asleep, buttoned up in the shaggiest great-coats, wound round with shawls and mufflers, knee-deep in straw, we jogged along all night to Loughrea. It was pitch dark when we got there. Not a soul was stirring. The hotel we stopped at, might have been a warehouse of mummies—mummies from kitchen to garret—for all the signs of life it showed. The Post-boy rapped with the butt-end of his whip, and then with his knuckles—as if that were an improvement—and then kicked with his heels, whistling and shouting all the while, by way of having a vocal accompaniment to his devil's ta-too on the door. When he was tired, I relieved him. Mitchel fell to, when I could no longer stand to the work. Half an hour's furious instrumentation, with vocal accompaniments, solos and trios, produced no impression. The house still slept on.

"They're all dead within here."

"We'd better knock up another," the Post-boy suggested.

We did. We tried another house. The same overture to Fra Diavolo. Whip, knuckles and heels—heels, knuckles and whip. Whistling ad libitum. Shouting ad libitum. Da capo. Solo by Mitchel. Quick movement, prestissimo, by Meagher. Flourishes, hither and thither, by Post-boy. Grand finale—one, two, three—kick and crash altogether! All to no purpose. Not a stir.

"Divil a one," says the Post-boy, "alive in Loughrea."

Yielding to his suggestion, we refreshed ourselves with third performance of the Divil's Own overture on a third door, a good bit up town, in the direction of Ballinasloe. The third performance, so far as profits were concerned, was not a yawn, nor a rustling night-shirt, nor any conceivable stir, better than the second or first. Curious thing, all this time, there wasn't a solitary bark from a dog, nor a premature cock-crow. Curious thing, all this time, the old yellow chaise stood stiff in the middle of the main-street, fronting the first hotel we drew up at, with the horses asleep and rapidly freezing.

"What's to be done?—this is awful."

"Awful," says Mitchel.

"The worst of bad luck," says the Post-boy.

We returned to the chaise. Thought of turning in and sleeping there, till some one would awake.

"But the horses 'ill die on me," says the Post-boy, "if they be left in the street."

Sure enough. So instead of turning into the chaise, we turned round to the inn door, and with a re-doubled instrumentation, threw off on the middle and lower panels, the overture to Lodoiski, an ancient national divertissement of the Irish Celts round the borders of the Pale. Accidentally concluding one of the very few pianissimo passages, we heard a grumble, and then something like a naked foot upon the floor, and then a rummaging for water-jugs, and candlesticks, or sconces, and a sheathing of bare bones in breeches, and a dangling of suspenders—gallowses they call them in Ireland.

"Begorra! he's coming," says the Post-boy, and he gives the door one kick more—"make haste, ye divil," says he.

"Take that," says he, hitting it another kick, "it's long enough you kept us at it this morning."

The long and the short of it is, some man or other came down in his stocking-vamps to the hall. Who it was I never enquired. Unchaining it first, and then turning the bolt back, he opened the door with a yawn—such a yawn as a fatigued zebra might give on the sands of Zahara—or his humbler kinsman has been seen to indulge in, on a fair day, in the main street, near the Pound of Knocktopher. His right hand rested on the key, which rested in the door lock. His left hand held a battered brass candlestick, having two inches and a quarter of dingy yellow dip, with a grenadier of black and red wick leaning over the greasy green socket, dribblng and running to waste fast, like a very tipsy individual, no longer able to stand it.

He growled. Of course he growled. You never saw a man yet, obliged to leave his blankets, fumble about for a light, crack his shins against fenders and fire-irons, and come down to a damp hall in his stockings—above all, obliged to come down on a winter's morning, avourneen! with three feet of snow on the ground—who didn't give vent to a growl.

Well, there was the key of the stable-yard, and the Postboy might put up his horses and chaise, and do the best he could for them; and there was a sofa in the parlor, and a hearth-rug and half a dozen chairs besides, and the gentlemen might do the best they could for themselves; but there wasn't a chaise nor a horse to be had in Loughrea, and if they didn't like to stop in the parlor, they'd have to stop in the street; and let them say so at once, till he bolted the door, and went back to bed.

Determined not to be beaten, we wouldn't go in. He might keep his hearth-rug and parlor. A chaise we'd have, or die in the street—die on the door-step—die in the snow of Loughrea, on our way to Galway—die at the Quartrebras of the Waterloo to which we were hastening—hurrah! We told the Postboy—Postboys have no names in Ireland—not to put up his horses until he succeeded in getting a relay.

"Ye needn't be afeered," says he, "I'll be as good as my word."

Mitchel and I then went off, and knocked at the second hotel we knocked at before. Knocked peremptorily, furiously, successfully. A woman came down. The decent good creature, with a drab bed-gown about her, curtsied and wished us good morning. We asked her had she a chaise and pair.

She hadn't. She was sorry for it. She'd have been happy to have obliged us.

One horse even?

Not the taste of a horse. There wasn't a horse to be had in Loughrea.

Might as well try the third house we knocked at the third time before. The morning was breaking. Had a better chance now. Here and there specks of yellow light were breaking out through window-shutters and panes of glass. Here and there, up and down the street, there was an occasional rub and clatter, as if middle-aged men were putting on big boots, or looking for flannel drawers in the dark. For it was dark, very dark, still. The faintest, milkiest tinge of the sun was all that was visible.

Knocked as before. A little louder, perhaps. A boy, with a baggy corduroy breeches up to his armpits almost, and only half covering his shins, with dirty bare feet, scratching the back of his head, opened the door. He was fifteen, I should say, and much less advanced in knowledge than yours. A shy, timid, cowering look, accompanied with a chronic snuffle, a constant itchy shrug of the shoulders and back, and the toes scratching and picking at the floor all the time, made him as piteous a sight as one could see, in a poor Irish town, in the dawn of a sharp winter's day.

"What's the matter?"

"Chaise and pair to be had?"

"No."

Any chance of the like? A single horse even? Any money for one—a kingdom for a horse! No. There wasn't a chaise and pair, nor a pair and chaise, nor a chaise without a pair, nor a pair without a chaise, to be had in Loughrea. Turning away, back to the old spot, the boy, with a snuffle, shut the door on us.

"Monahan has bought them all up," says Mitchel.

'Twas true for him. Every chaise, outside or inside car, gig, or other conveyance on wheels; every horse, mare, gelding, pony, foal or filly, mule or jackass, that could carry, help along, or expedite a voter—Monahan, the government candidate, had bought up for miles and miles around, three days before.

Mitchel said there was no help for it—we'd have to remain. Loughrea was the bitter weed we'd have to chew for the day.

"No," said I, "there's the chaise we came in."

"Where is it?" said he, as we came bolt up to our old starting ground—the first hotel we serenaded so sweetly.

Not a sign of a chaise—not a ghost of a horse—not a Postboy in shadow. True to his word, as he promised to be, the moment he had our backs turned, he turned in his horses, turned in his chaise, turned the key in the ricketty old wooden gate—the gate leading out from the stable-yard into the street—and turned himself in, an icicle in broken breeches, to thaw on the hay-loft.

"Locked out here, too," says Mitchel

"Never give up," says I.

"Done!" says Mitchel, "never give up."

With this we struck straight across the street—vowing to Minerva to build a wooden horse, and fill it with armed men, and roll it up the road, and so take Galway, rather than give in.

"What, again?" asks the decent woman with a brown stuff gown on her this time, a plaid shawl, a quilled cap, and check apron.

"What's the matter with ye, at all?" says she; "is it a murder?"

Considering the state of the weather, the disappointments we met with, and the exciting position we stood in, we replied with singular suavity and presence of mind. Enlarging upon the political condition of the country, we explained the object of our mission. It was of the utmost consequence we should be in Galway by ten o'clock that morning. The country was lost unless we were there. We had speeches to make, which couldn't afford to be kept. Monahan would have the course to himself and O'Flahertie be driven to the wall, in case we couldn't get on. Was there no way on earth to get clear of Loughrea?

She didn't know exactly, but thought she could manage. Her sympathies, and every thing else she could give, were with O'Flahertie, Repeal, and the starving poor. There was an owld chaise in the back-yard, and we were welcome to it, if we could make anything of it. But it hadn't been out since the cholera. As for horses, there wasn't one in the stable. She'd see, however, if she couldn't hunt up a pair.

Five or six minutes after this, Mitchel and I, with the help of a miserable creature in a caubeen and tattered red waistcoat, were dragging out the chaise, which had been laid up since the cholera, from a mountain of rubbish. Broken ladders, barrel staves, worm-eaten bed-posts—one of them with a rusty iron roller screwed into its heel—hen-coops, with half of the laths smashed, and feathers and straw dropping or sprawling out of them, with old rungs of rush-bottomed chairs, cracked japanned trays, garden railings, a coffin-lid, the whitish frame of a hot-bed, with scraps of manure sticking to it—these, and a hundred other odds and ends, were piled about the chaise, thrust in between the wheels, pitched up on top of it, and in every imaginable way interwoven with it. Half an hour and more went by, before we succeeded in giving it fresh air. As for the supernumerary in the caubeen and red waistcoat helping us at all—the idea is not to be entertained for a second. A deplorable skeleton—a ricketty, tottering, jumble of the lankiest poor bones, which threatened every instant to crack; with hands thin, sharp and sinewy as claws, and cheek-bones which looked as if they were splintered, and had thrust themselves out through the skin; he was the saddest poor scarecrow that ever fluttered its rags in the wind. But he was one only of thousands upon thousands in that horrible year, who crawled the highways, eat grass, and died in ditches, with foul froth upon their lips, their very hearts eaten fairly out of them with famine.

As much as there was of it, it was a clear, beautiful, crisp morning. Most of the houses were open. A turf-cart was coming up the street, and a policeman, in his pepper-and-salt overcoat, was dawdling towards us, swinging his truncheon. The arrangements for our journey to Galway were brought to a close. The disinterred chaise stood in the street, half a yard from the gutter, with a pair of bay horses chained and tied to it—partly with rope, leather, and a few rusty links of old iron—the driver standing in a big moth-eaten box-coat, several inches too long for him, silently beside them. Chaise, horses, and driver were all of a piece. Their lugubrious unity was impressively perfect.

From what has already been said, the destitute condition of the chaise may be easily imagined. It hadn't been out since the cholera. So the old lady, the owner of the vehicle, informed us. Had she told us it was once upon a time down with the complaint, and hadn't recovered, it wouldn't have been hard to believe her. Had she told us it was troubled with a complication of disorders, appearances would have borne out her statement. One thing I'm sure of—it never went to anything but funerals.

The horses were worse. One was very short; the other very long. Both were starved. Their angular development was wonderful. They were all knobs and ribs, knees and shoulder-blades. They must have lived on the stone-walls of the County Galway ever since they were foals. The short one had a long switch tail. Some inches of it had fallen through, and were lying out through a couple of the top spokes of the near fore-wheel. The long one, had a cob tail. The appearance it made suggested a carrot. I have said they were a pair of bay horses. They might have been so, were it not for the lumps of potato-field mud with which they were coated. Had the old lady told us they, too, had been down with the cholera, the story would have smoothly passed off.

The driver was the worst of the three. In addition to what he had on in the coach-house, when we first met him, the big box-coat just mentioned, a worn-out velveteen breeches, and the remains of a pair of mouldy, heavy built shortboots covered up his shivering anatomy. He hadn't a word or a look. There wasn't a grain of life in him. The spiritless, broken-backed whip he held, with the lash coiled round his hand, was the type of himself. Had the old lady told us the whip had been ailing—been troubled with the measles or tape-worm—we shouldn't have thought it far from the truth. Chaise, horses, and driver, were a true picture of Ireland in that terrible year.

Everything apparently ready for the start, Mitchel caught the handle of the chaise door, turned it, twisted it, but all to very little purpose. 'Twould open three or four inches only. The hind wheel nearest to us didn't belong to the chaise—was never meant for it—was ever so many sizes too large for it, and completely overlapped the door. A wise thought suddenly struck us. The landlady, coachman, and Mitchel, got behind the chaise, and lifted it up bodily forward, so as to some extent to get the door clear of the wheel. Whilst it was poised, I pulled the door open, and jumped in on my knees. The moment I did so, the old chaise recoiled, nearly knocking the three engineers clean off their feet. For a minute or two, with my weight in the bottom, it swung violently to-and-fro. The horses were fairly dragged back—the short one almost choked with the pole-chain. Mitchel roared with the fun of the thing. I couldn't get out. The difficulty was settled by Mitchel getting in through the front window. This he succeeded, with a good deal of squeezing, in doing—coming down on all-fours, partly into my arms, and partly upon the back part of the chaise. Once in, we found there was no seat. 'Twas nothing but the shell of a chaise. The very lining was torn clean out of it.

"This will never do," says Mitchel.

"Let's try it a while," says I, dying to be off any way out of Loughrea.

Fancy us, then, moving at the slowest, deadest practical pace, in the sparkling blue light of a brisk, healthy, clear morning in winter, down the main-street of this beautiful town — the ghost of a coachman dropping that shred of a whip on those apparitions of gristle and bone—Mitchel and I not uttering a word, and a huge trunk lashed upon top. The end of it was, at the end of the street, we abandoned the sepulchral equipage, and leaving it, cadaverous coachman and all in a state of paralysis, walked back to breakfast. The coachman endeavoring to turn and follow us—which effort nearly gave him the lock-jaw—succeeding in getting himself and his horses in a diagonal stretch right across the road, and there they remained utterly unable to go back or forwaard, or move an inch in any conceivable direction, until some help came puffing and clattering from town, untackled the horses, wriggled the chaise round, spliced the poor devils to it once more, and then with an occasional shove from behind, and shouldering the wheels once or twice out of the ruts, brought it back to the stable, with the same forlorn solemnity with which it set out.

It was two hours before we could get out of Loughrea. We did so, seated back to back, on a little outside jaunting-car, with a spunky Connemara pony under it, and a broth of a boy hurrahing for O'Flahertie and whipping away the entire of the road, with his feet on the shafts.

HOME THOUGHTS.

Far, to the westward of the famed Offaly
  There stands a town, now falling to decay,
Embosomed in a fair and fertile valley,
  Through which a mountain torrent wends it way,
By rath, and fane, and castellated hold,
And such memorials of the times of old.

There is a lonely churchyard looking down:
  Full fifty generations, passed away,
Have walked and talked through that historic town,
  To raise a frowning pile of human clay;
And there are cenotaphs, and epitaphs,
At which the reckless monarch, Time, but laughs.

Of what was once a church, the mottled walls
  Stand bleak and bare, through which the rude wind whistles,
Making a thousand nightly spirit-calls;
  Putting weird voices into shrubs and thistles,
And human bones from coffins look alway,
From which the rains have washed the churchyard clay.

Two hawthorns and some scattered elms are growing,
  And—this is Ireland's springtime—blowing, too,
Beneath, the queenly Shannon's seaward flowing
  Through fretted arches, and the wild curlew
Skims through the cannon, on a bastioned tower,
That heralds our disgrace, and England's power.

Far off to southward, eastward, and to North,
  Are seen Slievebloom, Keeper, and Clonmacnois,
And scenes on which a poet might look forth,
  And gaze, entranced by rushing memories,
Pleasing and sad, the former evanescent,
Oppression's hand being nearly omnipresent.

How like the climate is the nation's story;
  A day of sunshine to a week of rain;
A storm that tries strong oaks and castles hoary—
  A death-like calm that holds a lengthened reign.
When patriot hearts have drained their generous sources,
So with Oppression's tide sail "moral forces."

It is a very old historic spot;
  Yet dim Tradition notes it more than history;
For many a deed which history noteth not
  Is blazoned there, and larded much with mystery;
And mystery's the magic of the mind—
As to the child the voices of the wind.

For there is told of chiefs, and ladies fair,
  And barons bold, and leal and trusty squires—
And miracles! For that old ruin bare
  Once housed a Brotherhood of gray old friars,
That taught the people, and cured many a plague,
That came before Repeal and Tenant-League.

These friars holy, by unholy orders,
  Were forced to quit the place and go abroad,
And wander round the French and Spanish borders
  For holes to hide, or shrines to worship God.
Their house and lands were benefices given
To those who showed a shorter road to Heaven.

A captious scribe would here make strict inquiry,
  Or theologue a learned predication.
And so might I, but I don't mean to tire ye;
  For I'm intent upon my own salvation.
Let prosing disputants prove which is shorter,
I tell how time makes war on stone and mortar.

But this I know, of my own knowledge; that
  There mortals of all creeds are buried still Within that mound, and that Jehosaphat
  Will have incongruous pilgrims from that hill,
When the Archangel sounds the final rally,
And all set forth to seek that mystic valley.

I said the house was given—and so it was—
  A parson's benefice, and the ancient people
Built one adjacent; but the Penal Laws
  Denied them long the use of bell or steeple.
In latter days, however, it befel,
They were allowed to have, and ring, a bell.

And then arose a rivalry in ringing
  Between two ancient beldames of the town;
On Sunday mornings there was lusty swinging—
  One Celt, one Saxon, dressed in russet brown.
'Twas said Kate Hogan rang her bell the louder,
But that Peg Chapman held her head the prouder.

But once, a traveller, coming o'er Knock Rhuadh,
  Announced both bells of equal intonation.
So a coequal triumph thrilled the two;
  They linked, and walked, like those in higher station;
'Twas even said—but I'm not certain whether—
They met that evening and took tea together.

Then there began a strange affiliation,
  A drawing close, sister-and-brotherhood,—
O'Connell started his Conciliation
  Upon the hint,—for be it understood
Their's was the merit, though he reaped the fame—
And ne'er acknowledged whence th' idea came.

But, ah! those days are passed, and with them passed
  The manners bland, the feelings warm and plastic,
Too bright, too happy, and too good to last,
  The links are rent by feuds ecclesiastic;
The two good dames are laid beneath the weather,
To rise and take their final march together.

But why, at such a time, do I recall
  The dames, the church, the churchyard, and the bells,
Whilst sick to death, I beat against the wall
  The measure of those well-remembered knells?
Their's on a steeple, our's between two poles,
Those rivals in the call of human souls.

'Tis that my sands of life are low, and I
  Would like to be interred in that old place;
I'd wish to sleep beneath an Irish sky,
  Whose chequered clouds, in youth, I loved to trace;
And in that mound, beneath the hawthorn's shade,
In sacred dust my father's heart is laid.

Though few are there to pray above my grave,
  What matters it, for when my knell is rung,
I would not have a sanctimonious slave
  To mutter heartless prayers on lying tongue:
But who hate English law, and give good proof,
May pray there—I'd have others keep aloof.

O, there is something redolent of truth,
  A fervor that soars upward unto God,
In th' prayers of him who gives his guileless youth
  To thwart the tyrant on his native sod.
But there's a serpent stealth in th' loyal tread—
It taints the earth, and mocks the patriot dead.

A priest there was, whose heart and reverend head
  Had throbbed for Ireland nigh a hundred years,
And were he not now numbered with the dead,
  How soothing now his fervent prayers and tears;
Heaven were a surety, could I see him bend
Above me now, who was my childhood's friend.

There's something more, I now must leave unsaid,
  'Tis of a youth, who first my friendship sued;
Alas! he cannot place above my head
  A blossom from Glendalough's lovely wood;
Whose shades we roved together young and pure,—
Farewell, dear friend, death's knocking at the door.

B.

The London correspondent of the Tribune noticing the exhibition of the Royal Academy says that the public swarm to Holman Hunt's picture of the Scape-Goat more than to any other there. There is—he writes—a great deal of mistaken nonsense talked about these pre-Raphaelites. Now, it so happens that I know the men, and knew them before the movement was celebrated. The leading men, all young (under 30, I mean)—are three—Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Holman Hunt, and John Everett Millais. Rossetti is a son of the late well-known Professor Rossetti, the poet, and commentator on Dante. Hunt is a Londoner. Millais is from Jersey, and no doubt of French ancestry. They were fellow-students at the Academy together, and in the course of a few years their ideas on the subject of Art grew up among them and induced them to form an association—the P. R. B., or Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. This movement is not pietistic at all, and has no connection with the German School of Overbeck. It was simply the result of a feeling that modern art was unreal and untrue, as art, compared with early art; and that a closer and deeper and more accurate observation of Nature had become necessary. Hence their elaborate detail and marvelous fidelity. Rossetti is, perhaps, the most influential mind, spiritually and intellectually, in the movement; Hunt and Millais are better known, because Rossetti does not "exhibit;" though his pictures are much admired, (especially by Ruskin,) and find private purchasers. These are the authentic facts, which are not understood here, and which therefore are still less likely to be understood so far away as New-York. Ruskin is going to bring out a pamphlet, I believe, on the present Exhibition; so we shall have another "row;" for I hear that he is very angry with his recent assailants in the reviews, and eager to brandish the cudgels; and as it is certain that they are very angry with him, we must expect combats. Art is one of the subjects which are most lively now in England; and it is as well, for there is no oratory, not much literature, and scarcely any drama.

The celebrated Italian poet, Alessandro Manzoni, has experienced a severe loss, the last of his four daughters having died in Tuscany of consumption.

FOREIGN PERIODICAL LITERATURE.

Magazines and Reviews, though of comparatively recent introduction, to some extent now occupy the position in which Books once were placed. They have become a Power in the wide realm of Thought. We may class them, with Newspapers, under the generic head of Journalism. They exercise a wondrous influence within the almost limitless scope of their extended circulation.

Printing had been somewhat more than a century in operation, when (about the year 1563) arose the custom in Venice, during the war with the Turks, of transcribing items of military and commercial intelligence upon small sheets of paper, which fragments of news were read aloud in certain public places, each auditor paying for the privilege a small coin, long since passed into disuse, called gazetta. From written to printed copies of the news was a natural though not rapid transition; for the Venetian government, jealous of printing, did not allow any other than manuscript papers until the close of the 16th century, and even its own official organ, issued once a month, was in manuscript long after that period. These papers, which soon obtained circulation all over Italy, were called gazettes,—most probably from the name of the coin for which their contents were first made public, though some philologists derive it from the Latin word gaza, which, colloquially extended to gazetta, would signify "a little treasury of news." Whatever the origin of a name which is now every where extended to newspapers, the fact remains that the thing was commenced in Venice nearly three centuries ago. In the Magliabecchi Library, at Florence may be seen a sixty years' file of the earliest Venetian manuscript papers.

Once introduced, Journalism spread over Europe. The first English newspaper (called the English Mercurie), was published by Queen Elizabeth's authority, in 1588, when the dreaded Spanish Armada was in the English Channel. In Germany, though occasional news-sheets had been issued some years before, the first regular newspaper was printed in 1612. Twenty years later, the first French newspaper was published, "by authority;" this was the Gazette de France, of which 196 annual volumes appeared from its birth in 1631 to its death in 1827. Newspapers arose, at various intervals, in Italy, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Sweden, the Netherlands, Russia, and Greece; but Journalism has not flourished in these countries. Even Turkey and Egypt now have their newspapers. There is a newspaper at Tripoli, and French enterprise has issued journals in Smyrna and Algiers. When North America was "settled" by the English, one of the institutions transplanted from the old country was the Press; but, even as late as the reign of George I. (in 1720) there were only seven newspapers in the whole of the North American Colonies. At present, there are more newspapers in the United States than in all the rest of the world.

Reviews and Magazines arose long after Newspapers. The first periodical, containing analyses and critical judgments of new books, was the Journal des Savans, a weekly journal, which appeared in 1665, and, though suspended from 1792 to 1816, is yet published, as a monthly serial. Almost from the first, eminent men of letters were induced to write in it. A variety of literary journals have since appeared in France, to which most of her leading literary men have contributed; indeed, many a reputation was made through this channel in Paris, whereas the general rule in England appears to be—first obtain a high character as a book-writer, and then contribute to the Reviews. We advisedly say "the general rule," inasmuch as that admits of exceptions, which, even in our own time, include such distinguished men as Sydney Smith, Jeffrey, Brougham, Horner, Barrow, Lockhart, Wilson, De Quincey, John Foster, Stephen, Robert Hall, Maginn, Talfourd, Lamb, Thackery, Hazlitt, Mahony, and others, who made their reputation as writers in periodicals.

The first literary journal of Germany appeared in 1682, in Holland in 1692, in Italy in 1710, in Spain in 1737, in England in 1731. The first Magazine or Review published in this country was the American Monthly Magazine. It was established by Jeremy Gridley, at Boston, in 1745, and had three years existence. That admirable, accurate, and interesting work, Duychinck's Cyclopædia of American Literature, is unaccountably deficient, in not giving a Sketch of American Periodical Literature, which its accomplished authors could so easily and sufficiently have supplied.

Edmund Cave, a London bookseller, founded the first English periodical in 1731—the Gentleman's Magazine, which yet continues to flourish. It already extends to two hundred and fifty volumes, and is a mine of antiquarian and literary lore. At first, it was little more than a collection of odds and ends of newspaper clippings, and was great on calves with two heads and six feet, antediluvian toads found on obdurate rocks, old coins discovered in Roman pipkins, mammoth turnips, exaggerated gooseberries, relentless murders, audacious highwaymen, and such interesting topics. But, in March, 1738, Samuel Johnson, who afterwards became a Leviathan of Literature, commenced writing for the Magazine (his first contribution was a Latin ode to its plodding publisher!) and, two months later, his "London"—a poem written in imitation of the third satire of Juvenal—appeared in the Gentleman's. Its manly vigor drew from Pope the remark, when informed that the author was some obscure hack, "he will soon be deterrê," or dug out from his obscurity. From that time, during many years, Johnson contributed largely to the Magazine, in which, as has been finely said, he did not live to write, but wrote to live.

From time to time, various periodicals arose, to rival the Gentleman's Magazine, (which proceeded in a steady course of gradual improvement,) but scarcely even the names of these competitors have been handed down.

In 1749 appeared the Monthly Review, which was discontinued only a few years ago. Griffiths, a bookseller, ignorant and self-opinionated, was its founder and editor. He had so much success as to induce Hamilton, a rival bookseller, to start the Cri- tical Review (in 1756), with Smollett, the novelist, as a principal contributor. In April, 1757, it happened that Griffiths met Oliver Goldsmith, then aged 29—the exact age at which Johnson commenced writing for Cave. At this time, Goldsmith was usher in a school near London, kept by Dr. Milner, author of Latin and Greek grammars, and a contributor to the Monthly Review. Awkward and shy though Goldsmith was in company, he attracted the attention of Griffiths, who condescendingly invited him to send in a few specimens of literary criticism. The samples pleased, and Goldsmith was induced to abandon the tuition of children, to become a writer in the Review, occupying a garret in Griffiths' house, fed at Griffiths' board, a day-laborer in the field of literature, every article which he wrote being tampered with and altered by two old women—to wit, Griffiths and his wife. To this miserable thraldom poor Goldsmith submitted for five months, during which he was overworked and underfed. This was his first burst into authorship.

In 1756, the Universal Review, laboriously edited by Dr. Johnson, commenced a career which lasted only three years. The British Critic, (not to be confounded with the British Review, immortalized in "Don Juan," by Byron's sharp satire,) was first published in 1793, and was changed into the Theological Review in 1827. In the latter part of the eighteenth century also were commenced the European Magazine, (as a rival to the Gentleman's,) as well as the Monthly Mirror, on which the elder Disraeli wrote largely, and several other literary journals of less merit, which have long since passed away. To this period also belongs Sir Richard Phillips' Monthly Magazine, which lingered on until 1840, and the famous Anti-Jacobin Review, in which Canning and Frere were the principal writers, during its brief (three years) existence.

The first Review of any note in the present century was the Edinburgh, the first number of which appeared in October, 1802. It was a decided improvement, in every respect, upon all previous critical periodicals, and entirely changed the character of literary criticism. Many of the ablest writers in England, as well as Scotland, were among its contributors. Here did Jeffrey wield a power, during nearly thirty years, such as no man had exercised since the autocracy of Samuel Johnson: here, though their politics were not the politics of the Review, did John Wilson and Walter Scott write literary criticism; and here, passing over the long list of illustrious contributors, (including Carlyle, a host in himself,) did Macaulay "flesh his maiden sword." To counteract its enormous influence, as an advocate of liberal opinions and a recognized organ of the Whig party, John Murray, a Tory bookseller in London, put forward the Quarterly Review in 1809. Under the editorship of William Gifford, a sharp satirist, and subsequently of John Gibson Lockhart, a literary gladiator, the Quarterly Review obtained great circulation and influence. As its rival had engaged the services of the most gifted authors and authorlings among the Whigs, so did the Quarterly invite and obtain the co-operation of the ablest writers of the opposite party.

As an ultra-radical organ, the Westminster Review was commenced in 1824, by the celebrated Jeremy Bentham. There had previously appeared, the Retrospective Review, a work of great merit. Other quarterly publications have since appeared, many of which are yet "to the fore," as a Milesian might say; the Foreign Quarterly, the Church of England, the British Quarterly, the North British, the London, the New Quarterly, the National Reviews, and several others more particularly devoted to class subjects—such as divinity, law, medicine, sporting, science, and scholastic literature.

To enumerate the many attempts made, in England, Scotland, and Ireland to establish Magazines would demand more space than we choose to spare. Enough here to mention the more prominent publications of this class, which yet keep their ground. It is decorous, however, to give a word (if not a tear) to certain magazines which have passed away. Such was Knight's Quarterly Magazine (afterwards the Album,) in which Macaulay's noble "Song of the League" first appeared; the London Magazine, where De Quincey broke out "twenty thousand strong, like an Irish rebellion," with his Confessions of an Opium-Eater; Ollier's Literary Miscellany, conducted, as well as published, by the author of "Inesella;" and later yet, William Kennedy's Englishman's Magazine; the Metropolitan, first edited by Thomas Campbell, the poet, and then by Captain Marryat, whose popular sea-stories first appeared in its pages; and Douglas Jerrold's Magazine, George Cruikshank's Omnibus, and a variety of obscurer monthlies.

In London, the oldest existing magazine is the New Monthly, commenced in 1812, and successively edited by Thomas Campbell, Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, Theodore Hook, Thomas Hood, and William Harrison Ainsworth, the novelist of Newgate, its present proprietor, who has succeeded in making it one of the very dullest of periodicals. Ainsworth's Magazine is its worthy rival, being only a trifle less heavy. Bentley's Miscellany, a brilliant affair under the editorship of Charles Dickens, shares the general dullness which now sits, like a nightmare, upon most of the London Magazines. Fraser's alone preserves something of the high character which it had won under the editorship of William Maginn, supported by such contributors as "Father Prout" and Thomas Carlisle, Edward Kenealy and Allan Cunningham, Crofton Croker and James Hogg. The United Service Magazine merits notice, occasionally having some excellent papers relating to naval or military adventure. The Sporting Magazine and Household Words, followed by a host of minor periodicals, may close the list of existing London periodicals. The Athenæum, Critic, and Literary Gazette, are little more than weekly reviews of new works.

In Edinburgh there are only now two Magazines worth notice: Blackwood's, commenced in 1817, and long valued for the contributions of Professor Wilson and his friends, and Tait's, called into existence, in 1832, during the excitement of the Reform Bill agitation. Chambers' Edinburgh Journal, vigorous as ever after twenty-five years of utility, should not be omitted here; nor Hogg's Instructor, the vehicle for communicating to the world the platitudes of Mr. George Gilfinnan.

In Ireland, numerous attempts have been made to introduce periodical literature. Towards the close of the eighteenth century was published a monthly compilation entitled Walker's Hibernian Magazine, (which did not survive the Union,) and the Anthologia Hibernica, containing the first published poems of "Master Thomas Moore, aged 12 years." This last was literary as well as antiquarian, but was continued only through the years 1793 and 1794. To this period also belongs the Milesian Magazine, (conducted as I am reminded, by a note in Savage's "'98 and '48,") by Dr. Brennan, commonly called "Turpentine Brennan," from a specific he used; and the Irish Magazine, edited by the notorious Walter Cox, suspected—and not without strong grounds—of having played the part of traitor and spy in the perilous times of '98. In 1825, a London publisher named Robins, (to whose enterprise we owe the appearance of Hardiman's Minstrelsy of Ireland,) brought out a monthly periodical called The London and Dublin Magazine, illustrated with well engraved portraits of eminent living Irish celebrities, edited by Mr. Whitty, author of "Tales of Irish Life" (and now proprietor and editer of the Liverpool Journal in England,) with a corps of Irish contributors, among whom Thomas Furlong, the poet, took the lead. As long as its price was a shilling amonth, its sale in Ireland was great. In evil hour, it was made a half-crown magazine, and did not long survive the change; the price wastoo much for Irish impecuniosity. After its failure the Dublin Penny Magazine and the Irish Penny Journal appeared, but though their contents, chiefly on Irish literature and antiquities, were of great and varied interest, they soon died for want of national encouragement.

In 1832, Mr. Curry, a bookseller, commenced the Dublin University Magaziue, which immediately took rank, and preserves it to this day, as a periodical of high literary merit and great literary nationality. Some of the best writers in Ireland have been and are among its contributors, and we think that no periodical in London or Edinburgh is its superior at present.

Among the Irish writers who nave most largely contributed to the Dublin University Magazine are Dr. Anster, translator of Goethe; Isaac Butt; Samuel Ferguson, author of that noble ballad, "The Forging of the Anchor;" Clarence Mangan, the illustrious and ill-fated poet; William Carleton, the novelist; Charles Lever, ("Harry Lorrequer;") Samuel Lover, the songwriter; Marmion Savage, author of "The Bachelor of the Albany;" W. H. Maxwell, author of "Wild Sports of the West;" Waller, better known by his soubriquet of "Slingsby;" Dr. Wilde, historian of "Irish Rivers;" Mrs. Wilde, "Speranza," of the Nation; Edmund Kenealy, author of "Goethe, a Pantomime;" Crofton Croker; Lefanu, author of "The Cock & Anchor, a story of Old Dublin;" Calcraft, historian of the Irish Stage; John Fisher Murray, whose "Night in the Vatican, or Father Tom and the Pope," has been untruely accredited to Maginn; William Dowe, the translator of Beranger; Cæsar Otway, the Irish Sketcher; D. F. Macarthy, M. J. Barry, and Aubrey de Vere, a trio of poets from Munster; O'Donovan and Petrie; the antiquarians; Charles Sandford, the Greek scholar; W. Archer Butler, of "Old Trinity;" Sir Wm. Hamilton, the Astronomer; Colby Grattan, of the "High-ways and Bye-ways;" Dr. Shelton Mackenzie, and numerous others.

There is also published a quarterly, called the Dublin Review, commenced under the especial patronage of O'Connell, (to which his eldest daughter, Mrs. Fitzsimmons, the most gifted of his family, largely and ably contributed for several years,) exclusively devoted to Catholic literature, politics, and polemics. Cardinal Wiseman and several other able Irish writers are among its contributors, and its character is high. In 1852 was commenced the Irish Quarterly Review, a periodical of increasing worth and reputation, only too little known in this country. There are one or two magazines published in Dublin, exclusively in connection with the Protestant party in Ireland.

In Great Britain and Ireland, as in this country, literary articles of considerable interest and importance occasionally appear in the newspapers of the day. Indeed the weekly journals of the "old country" almost invariably devote a portion of their space to literature, as well as to general intelligence and politics.

To read the whole of the literary and political periodicals of Great Britain and Ireland—quarterly reviews, monthly magazines and weekly miscellanies—would occupy a man about twenty days (of ten hours a day) in each calendar month. There is such a preponderance of heavy articles, that we pity the person who has the hard task of going through them all, as a critic, in order to estimate their respective claims for re-publication here. One man has done and does this—but he is a phenomenon. This is Mr. Littell, publisher and editor, of Boston.

Some five-and-thirty years ago, he edited a periodical, at Philadelphia, called Littell's Museum. It contained the cream of all the British periodicals, and being low in price, handsome in print and paper, and edited with discriminating taste and delicate tact, met with very considerable success. At this mo ment, the purchase-money of a complete set of the Museum would be ten times the original amount. In fact, a set is never in the market.

In April, 1844, Mr. Littell, having removed to Boston, and relinquished his interest in the Museum (which soon pined to death when the ruling mind was absent), commenced a weekly serial, called Littell's Living Age, of which 36 octavo volumes were published in the nine succeeding years. In April, 1853, was commenced a second and improved series, of which the thirteenth volume is now in course of publication. Although the print is by no means small—it is a size larger than that of the present article—the forty-eight volumes of the Living Age contain a quantity of matter equal in extent to 150 ordinary octavos. The work is issued in weekly numbers, at 12 cents—each number containing as much picked material as a half-crown number of Blackwood's or Ainsworth's Magazine.

We say "picked material," for it is all that. The best papers on the British reviews and magazines are here presented, with occasional extracts from the leading journals in this country. Here, for example, are the two last numbers of the Living Age (Nos. 628 and 629), in which we have, unabridged, the best papers in the Edinburgh Review, Quarterly Review, Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, Ladies' Companion, Chambers' Journal, Household Words, Examiner, Press, Economist, Spectator, Notes and Queries, Dublin University Magazine, Fraser's Magazine New-York Independent, Liverpool Times, and a variety of minor sources. Sometimes there is a sip of "Punch"—but we only mention the contents of two numbers.

We can scarcely imagine any one so foolishly inclined as to think of expending some hundreds of dollars every year to procure all the periodicals whose cream is served in the Living Age. We know that ordinary mortals could not read them all, so vast is the extent to be selected from. But we are glad to know, and knowing to make public, that, for six dollars a year, four large 8vo volumes of the Living Age, of 824 pages each, can be procured, containing the most readable and valuable portions of the numerous and expensive British periodicals in question. Here is literally a library for next to nothing.

R. S. M.

The U. S. Democratic Review this month (June) concludes the sixth volume of the new series. It aims to be the organ of the united Democracy of the Union; and, believing that the causes which divided the party have ceased to operate, holds out inducements to its readers which must be hailed with hearty applause. "The most distinguished statesmen and writers of the Democratic party will again contribute to its pages," says the prospectus, and under the attentive managemement of Mr. Cone, we trust once again to hear the echoes of its thunder rolling through the masses. In 1852, the Democratic Review was regarded, by even its political enemies, as the only periodical in this country which could compete with Blackwood and the Westminster. The vigor, brilliancy and high literary tone of the Review during that stormy period will not easily be forgotten, for the work is an inseparable portion of the political history of the day. The publication of every number was an event; and we hope to see it, irrespective of hard, soft, or half shellism, take such a position again. Such a work should be the the platform from which the people can behold the duties of an administration, and whence the government can see the people fairly represented. This it should be, and not the flatterer of the one nor the toady of the other.

The leading article in the issue before us, entitled "The Union—The Democratic Party—The Administration," discusses the evils of the Slavery agitation, the constitutionality of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, argues that "the Administration has not falsified any fundamental principle maintained by the 'Hards,'" strikes at Know-Nothings, Fusionists, Black-Republicans; and, showing the K. N.'s naturally co-operate and ally with the two latter, invokes the patriots of the land to crush them, "as Napoleon did the alliance of England, Russia and Austria, upon the famous field of Austerlitz." A little further on we have an article devoted to Know-Nothingism, which, however well intentioned, is somewhat cumbrous. It is too pedantic. The author knows too much, and consequently is not "at home" in illustrating the Know-Nothings. "The Battle of the Books" is a review of a review, which appeared in the March issue; and is devoted to the defense of the orthography of Noah Webster, in opposition to the opinions of the previous writer. It is interesting. "The Chronicles of Persepolis," being the adventures of Mr. Quigg, a more robustious Mr. Sparrowgrass, in the kingdom of New-Jersey, and other papers, with some poetry, fills out the number.

Keller's Tableaux continue to attract and delight those for whom the love of the Fine Arts, in its truest acceptation, is a commendable and elevating desire. Keller's Hall is at once a studio and an exhibition. The artist will behold in it every accessory and necessity of the former; the lover of Art will receive its admirable effects as the careful elaboration of the most famous designs. No such exhibition has ever graced the city, and it is a self-congratulatory evidence of a high-minded taste, that it has met with such decided approval. The effect of some of the tableaux is wonderfully striking. Of these, "Famine" and the "Shower of Gold" deserve especial commendation. In New-York, where there is no life school, there is no better, in fact, no other place where the young artist can receive so much useful instruction. In addition to the living pictures, the singing of Lovarny and the German Glee Club is exceedingly attractive.

Obituary.

Died, on the 2d instant, in Springfield, Mass., Eliza, wife of Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, in the 25th year of her age. Her remains were conveyed to Worcester, where she was met by a very large and respectable portion of the Catholic congregation. The funeral proceeded from the Western Depot to St. John's Church, where Mass was celebrated, while that highly talented organist of St. John's choir chanted the Requiem in a most solemn and impressive style. On leaving the church, the pupils of St. John's school, numbering about 400, formed a procession, led by the Principal and Teachers, and marched to the Catholic Cemetery, the last resting-place of that loving and affectionate wife and mother, who left the comfortable and happy home of her native hills, to share the troubles and fortunes of her devoted husband in another land.

Married.

In this city, on the first inst., at St. Patrick's Church, by the Very Reverend William Starrs, V. G., James Casey, son of James Casey, of Clonkerry, county Clare, Ireland, and brother of John Casey, now in Australia, to Miss Elizabeth McSpirrit.

Irish and Australian papers will please copy.

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

THE FIFTH BRIGADE, KING'S COUNTY—THE SEVENTY-SECOND REGIMENT.—An instruction parade of the flank companies, officers, and non-commissioned officers of the Fifth Brigade, conducted by Brig.-Gen. Duryea, took place on Monday, the 26th ult., at East New-York. The orders for this parade included detachments of three infantry regiments, viz. : the 13th, Colonel Abel Smith; the 14th, Col. Jesse C. Smith; and the 72nd (Irish Volunteers), which has been under the command of Lieut-Col. Morris, since the departure of Col. Powers for Nicaragua; the 70th, under Col. Graham, composed of cavalry and artillery, being the remaining unrepresented regiment of the Brigade.

The great disadvantages under which the soldiery of this Brigade have labored for years in respect to facilities for improvement, have been so palpably oppressive, that we supposed some effort commanding the sympathy and support of the community would have been made ere this for their removal. Why such an effort has not been made, or if made, why it has not been successful, we cannot satisfactorily discover, except on the hypothesis that dissension in the camp is the lion in the path. As for the ricketty old building called, by courtesy, an "Armory," in Brooklyn, and which is the only champ clos where the troops of the consolidated city may resort for exercise, an "order arms," executed with emphasis, will bring it some night toppling about the heads of the victims within.

Yet, the character of this parade bore evidence to the spirit with which Gen. Duryea had labored to neutralize the difficulties incident to his command. A number of movements were executed during the day, some of which were quite novel; such as the advance and retreat by alternate battalions, the advance in echellons, by battalion, by the right, &c., in which the troops, under the patient and perspicuous explanation of the General, made rapid progress. A few consecutive days' drilling of a similar kind would make a change in a battalion.

Not the least deserving of mention were the 72nd companies on the field, whose formations of the square and of the line were exceedingly well done. Their rifle company, the Jackson Rifles, under Captain Wills, skirmished in a rapid and easy manner. Being personally cognizant of some of the difficulties incident to the organization of this regiment, and of the labor required to overcome them, we were gratified to learn that it was likely to prosper. The new Commandant, Col. Talmage, was introduced to the command on this occasion, by Lieut.-Col. Morris, who takes a furlough for the summer, which he proposes to spend in the green mountains of Vermont, whither he will take with him in his retirement the best wishes of his command and of his many friends for his welfare and success.

Doctor Robert Johnston has received the appointment of First Surgeon to the 75th Regiment N. Y. S. M.

CO. C., "SARSFIELD GUARDS."

Elizabethtown, N. J.

The Fourth Annual Parade of this Company came off here yesterday, commanded by Capt. William Toomey.

They mustered some thirty men, and were accompanied by Rubsam's New-York band.

I have never witnessed a more thorough-going, well-disciplined, and orderly set of fellows; every one of whom are naturalized citizens, holding the most respectable positions in our community.

BRIDGEPORT, CON., June 1st, '56.

As you devote a portion of the News to military matters, I need offer no excuse in sending you a sketch of our doings in these diggings. The Montgomery Guards assembled at their Armory on Monday last, May 26th, to make their first PARADE since they were disbanded, by order of Gov. Minor, for having the misfortune of being born in Ireland, for no other people are honored with the name of foreigner by his Excellency but us.

The first thing I noticed when I entered their Armory, was four men on the right of the Company, armed with pikes, such as were used in 98. They also had muskets slung across their shoulders, which gave them a formidable appearance. Thomas Faulknor, a Castlebar man, and a member of the Company, first suggested those weapons; and Jeremiah Herlihy, a Cork man, also a member, made the first, and presented it. After the Company formed, they were presented a beautiful U. S. Flag, made by Sarah McFadden, of your city. This was the gift of a whole-souled Irishman, a native of Kildare, William Kinsella, who feels honored by being a full Private in a Company which our worthy Gov. visited with his displeasure. The presentation was accompanied by some suitable remarks, and the speaker reminded his hearers that Irishmen were not Arnolds—that they loved their country too well ever to prove traitors—that they were assembled there this day to enjoy one of a freeman's proudest privileges, guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, the right to have arms, and learn the use thereof; and that by their obedience to the laws, they would give the lie to their enemies. Captain O'Connell responded, on behalf of the Company, thanking the donor for his princely present; and when directing the attention of the men to the stripes, he reminded them of the bloody stripes which were inflicted by the enemy of their adopted country on poor old Ireland for centuries; and hoped that the day was not far distant when the children of oppressed Erin would unite and smite their oppressors, as America did in '76 and 1812. He hoped that the black night of Ireland's miseries was about to end, and that the bright sun of liberty would shine on a free and happy people.

At half past ten o'clock they were reviewed by his Honor, the Mayor, P. C. Calhoun, Esq., at the Court-house, numbering 40 muskets. Proceeding from thence about two miles, they had a target practice, and, at 80 yards, converted their target into a riddle. After maneuvering for a short time, they partook of some eatables provided for them on the ground, and then returned to Bridgeport, where, after parading the principal streets, they were dismissed. They were accompanied by the Bridgeport Brass Band, who came together in the kindest manner, and procured three gentlemen from the Washington Band of New York, to fill some vacancies, caused by their leader and two others leaving Bridgeport.

The Guards had a soiree that evening, at which over 150 couple attended. Everything passed off pleasantly. It's a day that will not be forgotten in Bridgeport for some time, at least.

Believe me to be truly your's,

DOLPHIN'S BARN.

The Relics of a Saint—Their Reception at St. Mary's Church, Hoboken.

We find the following report in the daily papers. St. Mary's church, in Hoboken, an unpretending edifice, occupied as a place of worship by the congregation under the care of the Rev. Mr. Coffin, a clergyman of the Roman Catholic Church, was the scene of an unusual interest yesterday, it being announced that the ceremony of the translation of St. Quietus, a martyr to the Christian religion, would take place.

The attendance on the occasion was very large. Tickets of admission, like the following, were required of persons entering the church :

TRANSLATION
OF THE
RELICS OF ST. QUIETUS, MARTYR,
The gift of His Holiness Pope Pius IX.,
TO ST. MARY'S CHURCH,
Hoboken.
By the Right Rev. Dr. Bayley, Bishop of Newark,
Sunday, June 1st., 1856.
Tickets 25cts.

At halfpast ten o'clock, the Rev. Dr. Bayley, Bishop of Newark, the Rev. Mr. Coffin, and other clergymen and attendants, entered the church from the front door in their ecclesiastical robes, conveying the relics, which were placed on the smaller altar on the south side of the church. The relics were contained in a case about a foot in length by eight inches in width and height. The case was made of an ornamented golden frame and cover with glass sides and ends, so that the relics, which consisted of some fragments of bones, very old and decayed in appearance, were plainly to be seen. In the altar, a second glass case, of larger dimensions, had been arranged, in which was placed the figure of a corpse of a beautiful boy, of about 12 years old, modelled in wax. A deep wound was represented on the throat. The figure was designed to represent St. Quietus, whose relics were encased above. The vase taken from his tomb in the catacombs of Rome, and which is said to have contained his blood, was lying at the head of the figure, and the tablet taken from the tomb, was at the feet. The ceremonies on the occasion were conducted by the Bishop, and various clergymen and attendants—the number within the altar being about twenty. During the ceremonies, some three hundred persons, male and female, were confirmed. At 12 o'clock Bishop Bayley delivered a discourse. He adverted first to the early history of the Christian Religion, and the martyrdom of large numbers of those who adhered to its doctrines. They had to-day in the church the relics of one of the primitive Christians. He did not intend to make a panegyric of his life, for he knew nothing of it. He knew only that his name was Quietus, and that he died for the religion of Christ. He then alluded to the catacombs of Rome, which were dug out of the strata of soft rock which underlies the Eternal City, by the early Christians, to protect themselves in times of persecution, to worship therein, and to use them as receptacles of the remains of those who became martyrs to the faith of Christ. Tnere were nearly sixty of these catacombs underneath Rome. Sometimes they intersected each other, and at some points large chambers were found excavated, where religious services were held. When one of their number fell a victim to persecution on account of his religion, a niche or shelf was hewed out of the side of one of the galleries, and the body placed therein, with a phial or a vase containing some of their blood, and sometimes the instruments used in tormenting them by their persecutors. A slab was then placed over all, on which was inscribed the name, the age of the person at his death, the time he lived, and a request for prayers to be offered in his behalf. These burials continued until times of persecution had passed. Pope Damascus, who died in the year 384, inscribed over the entrance to the gallery from which the relics of St. Quietus were taken language which made it evident that he shrank from having his body intruded into the company of Saints and martyrs. The pictures, vases, inscriptions, coins, and other relics found in the catacombs, afforded evidence that the belief of the early Christians was the belief of the Catholic Church. Allusions were there made to Purgatory, to invocation of the saints, and other features of the doctrines of the Catholic Church. A Protestant bishop who had gone through the catacombs, said, "It must be confessed that the seeds of popery were sown in the Apostle's day." That remark was not made in a kindly spirit, but they accepted it as a truth. The remains of St. Quietus, which were now before them, were taken from the very niche where they had no doubt been placed at the time of his death. They had also here the slab that inclosed the body, and the vase containing his blood. They were placed in a box and sent to this church. There could be no doubt upon the part of those who had any knowledge of the circumstances that the relics were authentic. The Church was watchful that no relic should be exposed to the veneration of the faithful unless it was authentic. The remains were sent to the pastor of this church by a distinguished Cardinal at Rome. The inscription mentioned that the name of the martyr was Quietus. The vase of blood found in the sepulchre showed without doubt that he was a martyr of Christ. The inscription mentioned that he lived five years and two months in the faith of Christ. This did not mark his real age. But it was evident from the bones that he was young, and it was a fact in history well known, that a large number of martyrs were children. St. Agnes, the Virgin Martyr, was but thirteen years old. He was aware that many would regard this ceremony with surprise, but on this account they should be more anxious as Catholics to give this public testimony of their faith, that in these matters they were not governed by any influences but the teachings of their religion. Nothing could be more easily defended than that particular feature of their religion—the veneration of relics. The spirit of this country, which was so much ahead of this, was far more hostile to their religion than even the paganism of the times of St. Augustine. Against this spirit, which disputed every thing, and as a necessary consequence believed nothing, he would caution them. Martyrdom was the perfection of sanctity, because it was the perfection of self-sacrifice, and self-sacrifice was the spirit of their religion. The same hatred to the religion that had always existed still existed. Its aim was to root out and destroy what it affected to despise. But, taking the example of the saints, they, as Christians, had nothing to fear. Unjust legislation might deprive them of property they had dedicated to God, but they could never be deprived of the peace of a good conscience—of their holy faith, and of the reward which had been promised those who suffered for His sake.

After the discourse an hour was passed in further ceremonies, when the assembly was dismissed. Large numbers however remained to look at the relics.

A Poisoned Valley.

A singular discovery has been made near Batten, in Java, of a poisoned valley. Mr. Alexander Louden visited it last July, and we extract a paragraph from a communication on the subject, addressed by him to the Royal Geographical Society :

"It is known by the name of Guovo Upas, or Poisoned Valley; and following a path which has been made for the purpose, the party shortly reached it with a couple of dogs and fowls, for the purpose of making experiments. On arriving at the top of the mountain, the party dismounted and scrambled up the side of the hill, at the distance of a mile, with the assistance of the branches of trees and projecting roots. When at a few yards from the valley a strong, nauseous, suffocating smell was experienced, but on approaching the margin the inconvenience, was no longer found. The valley is about half a mile in circumference, of an oval shape and about thirty feet deep.

"The bottom of it appeared to be flat, without any vegetation, and a few large stones scattered here and there. Skeletons of human beings, tigers, bears, deer and all sorts of birds and wild animals lay about in profusion. The ground on which they lay at the bottom appeared to be a hard sandy substance, and no vapor was perceived. The sides were covered with vegetation.

"It was proposed to enter it, and each of the party having lit a cigar, managed to get within twenty feet of the bottom, where a sickening, nauseous smell was experienced without any difficulty of breathing. A dog was now fastened to the end of a bamboo and thrust to the bottom of the valley, while some of the party, with their watches in their hands, observed the effect. At the expiration of fourteen seconds he fell off his legs without moving or looking around, and continued alive only eighteen minutes. The other dog now left the company and went to his companion. On reaching him he was observed to stand quite motionless, and at the end of ten seconds fall down; he never moved his limbs after, and lived only seven minutes. A fowl was now thrown in, and died in a minute and a quarter. And another, which was thrown in after, died in the space of a minute and a half.

"A heavy shower of rain fell during the time that these experiments were going forward, which, from the interesting nature of the experiments, was quite disregarded. On the opposite side of the valley to that which was visited lay a human skeleton. The head was resting on the right arm. The effect of the weather had bleached the bones as white as ivory. This was probably the remains of some wretched rebel, hunted towards the valley, who had taken shelter there unconscious of its character."

Herbert's Alleged Gift to the Widow of Keating

The following letter has been communicated to the American Organ by the brother of Thomas Keating, who was killed by Mr. Herbert in the affray at Willard's Hotel at Washington :

WASHINGTON, June 4, 1856.

A report has been extensively published that the Hon. P. F. Herbert had given to the wife of my late brother, Thomas Keating, a handsome dwelling and money to educate her children. If the intention of the author was to create public opinion in favor of Mr. Herbert I deem it my duty to deny that Mrs. Keating received any such favors from him. There is no foundation whatever for such a report. And I have never heard any person say that he has even expressed any regret for the act by which a widow and two orphan children were left solely dependant on the charity of the world.

There has been generously presented to the widow the sum of five hundred dollars ($500) subscribed by the guests at Willard's Hotel. By publishing the above you will confer a great favor and an act of justice on the lamented family of my late brother.

Very respectfully, sir, you obedient servant,

P. M. Keating

MARRIAGES.

At Antwerp, Travers B. Smith, son of the late John Smith, of Henrietta street, Dublin, to Victoria, daughter of the late Robert Montgomery, jun., Sandymount, Belfast.

At St. Peter's church, Eaton square, London, Justice Willes, to Helen, daughter of the late T. Jennings, of Cork.

At Hampstead, John Hopgood, of Finchley Road, St. James's Wood, to Rebecca Frances, daughter of Robert John Lattey, of Cregg, Galway.

At Shiplake, Oxfordshire, North Burton, of Thurland Castle, Lancashire, to Alicia Gertrude, daughter of Captain Versturme, late of the 27th Enniskillen regiment

In Paris, George L. Parrot, of Aveley, Essex, to Henrietta, daughter of Major Henry Clinton Martin, of the Royal Artillery.

At St. Peter's church, Thomas G. Moore Lane, Madras Army, to Eliza Anne, daughter of Thomas H. Irvine, Camolin.

At Moneyglass chapel, by the Rev. Samuel Young, Daniel M'Aleese, of Randalstown, to Catharine, daughter of James Duffin, Moneyglass.

At Hammersmith, near London, Philip Doyle, Barrister-at-Law, to Bessie, daughter of the late Benjamin Lara, M.D., Southsea, Hants.

At St. Michael's church, Limerick, Joseph W. Sidley, of the firm of Revington & Co., to Louisa Jane, daughter of John Adams, H. M. Customs, Queen street.

At St. Paul's Convent Garden, Henry Brown, to Mary, daughter of Roland John Reynolds, of Knightsbridge.

In Cork, Richard Kelly, to Mary, daughter of the late Abraham G. Good, of that city.

At Malone church, Henry George Perry, of Rathdowney, Queen's county, to Eliza Jane, daughter of George Gillmore, Montpeller, Belfast.

DEATHS.

At Mountrath, of consumption, Malachy, the son of M. Byrne, Chicago, Illinois, U. S., aged eleven years and three days. May his soul rest in peace.

At Tivoli, Kingstown, John M. Colgan.

At Bandon, Harry Bowles Sayre, surgeon.

At Coleraine, Martha, relict of John Orr, of Londonderry.

At Donaghmore, near Dungannon, aged 81 years, Jane, relict of George Monro, formerly of Belfast.

At Newtownlimavady, county Derry, Leslie Alexander.

On board the Monarch, on his passage from Calcutta to England, Major-General Sir William H. Sleeman.

At Monkstown, Isabella, widow of John Calhoun, Barrister-at-law.

At Bengal terrace, Finglass road, aged 80 years, Frances, relict of Joseph Sheppard, of Springpark, Tipperary.

In Guernsey, in the 71st year of her age, Jane, relict of Lieutenant-Colonel Lyster, and daughter of the late George Fosberry, of Adare Farm, county Limerick.

In Cork, from the effects of a fall while walking in Patrick street, Miss Anne Newsome, of that city.

At Geraldine, Sydney, Garrett Hugh Fitzgerald, son-in-law of the late Alderman G. F. D. Mahony. He was Mayor of Limerick in 1838.

At Kilrush, Thomas Fitzgerald, saddler.

At Fermoy, Mrs. Elizabeth Drew, aged 75 years, relict of Samuel Paoli Drew, M.D.

In Clonmel, aged 65 years, Margaret, relict of Thomas Ryan, late of Cottage.

At Rathnaleen, near Nenagh, Stephen Hill.

Near Doneraile, county Cork, Edward Sayer, solicitor.

At Sion Hill Convent, Dublin, Maria, daughter of James O'Donoghue, of Carnelly Cottage, Clare.

At Lucan, Capt. George Duff, aged 88.

City News.

In the first five months of 1854, 108,944 persons arrived from abroad at the city of New York; in do. of 1855, 50,049; and in 1856 35,245. The greater part of these immigrants were Germans, Irish and English, as follows:

	Germans.	Irish.	English.
1854	57 706	32,554	8,816
1855	18 132	17,266	8,504
1856	10 173	11,367	7,757

The majority of the English immigants are said to be converts to Mormonism, on their way to the Salt Lake City.

The City Marshal reports the number of persons committed to the Jersey City Prison during May, to be fifty-five; for offences as follows:

Drunkenness	39	Suspicion of Theft	1
Disorderly Conduct	2	Stealing	2
Vagrancy	2	Assault	4
Malicious Mischief	4	Lunatic	1
Total			55

The nativity of the prisoners is as follows: Ireland, 39; England, 5; Scotland, 2; France, 1; Germany, 1; and the United States 7—Total, 55.

The United States Inebriate Asylum—an institution for which we are mainly indebted to the persevering efforts of a medical gentleman of this city (J. W. Turner M. D.)—has, we are happy to learn, taken all the preliminary steps for establishing itself upon a sure and stable basis, and will, ere long, go into operation.

The Board of Supervisors have adopted a report in favor of paying McSpeddin & Baker's bill of $2,644 50, for binding books for the Register's office. The proposition to reduce the City Inspector's fees for recording marriages and deaths, from ten to three cents, was referred.

Collector Redfield has received a letter through the Post Office, without any signature, enclosing $1,500, which the writer said is due the Government.

Death of John B. James.

The Albany Argus pays the following just tribute to the memory of Mr. James, who, travelling westward, partly upon business but chiefly to recruit his health, fell ill at Chicago, and died on the 16 ult:—Mr. James was a private citizen, refusing all participation in public service, without ambition, and sensitively averse to such notoriety as the press sometimes gives to the career of men. We feel that, perhaps, it might best comport with the character of one who lived but to love and adorn the circle in which he moved, to let his passage from it be mourned by silent tears and regrets. And yet how difficult to restrain the open expression of so general a grief! He had grown up amongst us. We had seen his happy boyhood expand into the noble fullness of powerful and graceful manhood. Quick, versatile, genial, accomplished by travel, by study, by the intercourse of the best society of Europe and America, he was looked up to by all who knew him with pride and love. There was a grace in his manner and an expression in his fine countenance of the glowing and generous emotions within, that won all sympathies. His conversation charmed men like that of an accomplished woman, addressed to the intellect but reaching and commanding the heart. What wonder that a nature so rich, and which, like some rare perfume, exhaled itself with such lavish profusion, is exhausted at last.

Soon after graduating at College, and when still in his fresh youth, Mr. James married a young and lovely girl, with whom he spent years of unalloyed happiness, in comparative seclusion from the world. The hand of death severed that union, and the intercourse of society, tho' it afforded pleasures which he relished, and a field in which his intellect and taste had free and congenial employment, was inadequate to fill the void.

He was the son of the late William James, a wealthy and enterprising citizen of Albany; and his brothers, Rev. Wm. James, and Edward and Howard James of this city, Augustus and Rev. Henry James, of New York, survive him. His sisters, Mrs. Barker, Mrs. Temple, Mrs. Smith Van Buren, preceded him to the grave.

The Churches in America.

Zetto Barnes condenses for the Tribune some interesting facts.

Sir:—The Congregational Church was organized in 1620, and is now of 236 years' standing in America. At the time of taking the census of 1850, in had 1,706 church edifices, valued at $7,970,190, and will convene 801,835 hearers.

The Baptist Church was organized in 1632, and is now 217 years old in the United States. It has 9,300 church buildings, valued at $11,001,127, and will convene 3,248,580 hearers.

The Roman Catholic Church was organized in 1633, and is now 223 years old in America. It has 1,227 church buildings valued at $9,256,758, and will convene 675,721 hearers.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1706, and is now of 150 years standing. It has 4,863 church edifices, valued at $14,557,095, and will convene 2,179,504 hearers.

The Methodist Church was organized in Baltimore, Dec. 25, 1784, and is 72 years old in America. It has 133,338 buildings, valued at $14,826,148, and will convene 4,354,101 hearers.

The Universalist Church was organized in 1785, and is now 71 years old. It has 532 church buildings, valued at $1,756, 816, and will convene 214,965 hearers.

Though it is but 72 years since the Methodists were organized in this country, the whole family in the United States number over 1,496,000 members. They have over 619,000 more members than any other Protestant Church in America. They have over 3,900 more church edifices than any other religious body in this country.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, to say nothing of the other branch of the Methodist family, has two (Theological Seminaries) Biblical Institutes, 10 Universities, 13 Colleges, 55 Academies, Institutes, and Seminaries of learning. They have 553,065 scholars in Sabbath Schools, 2,760,000 "Sabbath School Advocates" circulating among the children, and 1,792,806 volumes in their Sabbath School Libraries. The fund expended in the Sabbath School cause for 1855 was $10,170, and that in promoting the cause of the Mission exceeded $230,000. The Book Concern in New York publishes over 5,000 bound volumes per day.

Business Directory.

BREWER & CALDWELL,
200 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.
ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS
ON
BANK OF LIVERPOOL,
In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

HERRING'S
PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS,) which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.
The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,
No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,
AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,
AND
MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,
WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,
SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,
OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durab] quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

JAMES O'FLYNN.
HOWARD HOTEL,
178 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

Advertising Envelope Manufacturer, Embosser, Die Sinker, and General Engraver. Notarial and Lodge Seals, Crests, and Coats of Arms. Seal Presses of every description constantly on hand. 14ju3m

WEEMAN'S IRON RAILWAY MANTFACTORY.
No. 26 Merrimac street, Boston, Mass.
Where he has been for the past thirty years.

ALL persons in want of IRON FENCES, suitable for cemetery, house, garden, Balustrades, &c., can, by calling on the subscriber, purchase a better fence at a lower price, than at any other establishment in the state, as he makes it his entire business.
jun14m6 EBENEZER WEEMAM.

HEAD-QUARTERS OF
BARGAINS IN DRY GOODS!
AT RODGER'S, 340 BOWERY,
Between Bond and Great Jones Streets.

CONSISTING of an elegant assortment of Embroidery and Lace Goods, Barages, Lawns, and Barage-Delaines. With a splendid assortment of Stella Shawls, and the latest styles of Mantillas.

Ladies, bear in mind, we always carry out the adage, that "the nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling" 1m Jun7

"TERRA COTTA"
CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental. Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture, lowest rates. LONG ISLAND POTTERY. Depot, 82 Nassau street, New-York. my10 3m

Sewing Machine Depot.—Sewing Machines of all kinds improved and repaired, on reasonable terms, an in the most substantial manner. Superior Machine Oils for sale. A large assortment of Machine Silk Twist and Needles for sale at reduces prices.
my 24, 3 mos. F. S. COATES & Co., 345 Broadway, New-York.

Business Notices.

NEW AND EXCLUSIVE—FASHIONS FROM IND1A.
GENIN
THIS DAY INTRODUCES HIS
EAST INDIA SUMMER HAT,

A Straw Fabric of unequalled Beauty, of which he has secured the monopoly for the present season. The EAST INDIA HAT possesses marked advantages over all other Hats of vegetable material which have ever been imported into the United States.

In point of lightness it stands alone. Placed in the scales against the finest leghorn, chip, or grass fabric, it would "kick the beam." In fact, its weight is scarcely perceptible either in the hand or on the head. The texture of the braid is fine and delicate, and the ventilation perfect. No one who sees the Hat can doubt that it is the beau ideal of coolness. Fragile as it is, rain will not destroy its shape. In order to suit all taste and all ages, the EAST INDIA HAT has been made up in a variety of shapes. The crown varies in hight so as to assimilate with the features of boyhood, youth, maturity and old age. Although the stock of the EAST INDIA HATS in this country is exclusively in the possession of the undersigned, and not a single specimen can be obtained outside of his establishment, the prices, in accordance with his proverbial policy, will be found extremely moderate.

Genin, No. 214 Broadway.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my3 1y

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap26 3m

RAGLAN HATS—Public approval of our efforts as hatters, to supply the lightest neglige hat, at a low cost, in 1854 and 1855, led us to seek among the Paris fabricants for quality and tint suited to our special sales. In announcing the Raglan hat, we deem it due to ourselves to state that, originating with us, we have control of the entire importation, as received per Barcelona and Fulton. The number being limited, gentlemen will do well to make their selections early. For sale at our counters only.

Leary & Co., Leaders and Introducers of Fashion, Astor House, Broadway, New-York. 3tJun7

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE FOR SERVAN TS.
275 BOWERY, NEW-YORK.

MALE and Female Servants can be promptly suited at the above number, with any situation in the city or country, at good wages, in first-rate families, without delay.

N. B. Employers quickly supplied.
3m may 31 ALEXANDER F. RUNGE, Agent.

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE for Servants, 129 Waverley Place, two doors from Sixth avenue, New-York.—A large number of competent help can be suited with good situations, in city and country, without delay. Employers in the city and country supplied with the best of female help. [my17 3m] WM. O'BRIEN, Proprietor.

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9ih Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.
6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.
ap19 3m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.
ap19 1y Thomas Maher.

Special Notices.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, May 23, 1856.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Complaint Book, opened at this office on the 1st of January, 1855, is still open for the reception of complaints of municipal abuses of all kinds. So far as the Mayor has the power, he will continue to exercise it for the abatement of any such evils, when brought to his attention through the Complaint Book, or otherwise. The Mayor invites all persons to take this method of reporting to him all violations of corporation ordinances, nuisances, or dereliction of duty upon the part of the officers of the Corporation, and he will, as heretofore, use all the legal means at his command to see the laws enforced, and the interests of the public protected. By order of the Mayor. ALEXANDER MING, Chief Clerk.

$30 Dollars Reward will be paid for any information which will lead to the discovery of John Scantling, who left 326 Madison street, N. Y., on the 20th May. He spoke of going to Michigan. He has blue eyes, dark hair, no whiskers, and is slightly lame of his left leg. He is about five feet high, and is a native of the county Kilkenny, Ireland. The subscriber will pay the above named reward.
his
JOHN ⋈ WALSH,
mark
2tjun12 326 Madison street, New-York.

Information Wanted—of MICHAEL CARROLL, and ELLEN CARROLL, otherwise SWEENEY, his wife, late of the town of Galway, Ireland, who left that place in the month of July, 1851, for New-York, and who when last heard from in the month of July, 1853, were residing in New Orleans. Any information of their whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, will be thankfully received.
☞ New Orleans papers please copy. je14 1t

Information Wanted—Of MICHAEL BOODEN, a native of the Parish of Urlingford, near Johnstown, County Kilkenny, Ireland, who left his residence in Ireland for New-York last December. Amy information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Coumissioners of Emigration, N. Y., will be thankfully received by his wife.

Information wanted of John Duffy, a native of Castleblaney, county Monaghan, Ireland, by trade a carpenter, who arrived in this city about five years ago, and when last heard from was living at Staten Island. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, will be thankfully reeeived by his wife Alice Duffy.

OFFICE of Receiver of Taxes—New City Hall, Park, May 29, 1856.—Public notice is hereby given that there is no such office as Collector of Arrearages on Personal Taxes, and that no person but the undersigned, or HENRY B. VENN, Esq., appointed for that purpose, to be found at this office, is authorized to receive any moneys due for arrears on Personal Taxes.
je7 6t HENRY H. HOWARD, Receiver of Taxes.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The MAILS FOR EUROPE, via Southampton and Havre, per U. S. steamer Washington, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 14th day of June, at 10½ o 'clock, A. M.
my17 Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster

Business Notices.

Reed's Celebrated London Cordial Gin, having gained much popularity in this country, being distilled the same as that in London, as he was formerly a distiller of the same kind of Gin in England, under the EXCISE LAWS.

This article is used in every hospital in and out of England's great metropolis. Its medicinal properties are invaluable.

☞ This Gin is not an imitation or a mixture of raw materials, of which much is sold in this city, under the name of London Cordial Gin, but a genuine and pure article, equal to any imported.

W. R. takes the opportunity of thanking the public for their liberal support, support, and begs a continuance of the same.

DISTILLERY,
118 East 29th st., New-York, between 2d and 3d avenues.

LABORATORY AND CHEMICAL OFFICE,
18 Exchange Place, N. Y., March 4, 1856.

MR. REED: Sir—I have submitted to close examination two samples of London Cordial Gin, manufactured by you, and purporting to equal the English article. I find on comparison with samples of Hodges' and Burnett's previously examined by me, and which I know to have been imported direct, that the quality of yours is by no means inferior to ther celebrated compounds, while the perfect method you posess of rectifying, insures an article of a higher degree of purity and flavor, when it has the equal advantage of time to soften it, than much of the so-called imported London gin. As a medicinal agent and cordial, under proper advice, it may be depended upon, from the care with which you select the essential oils combined with it in the distillation.

Yours, respectfully,
ISAIAH DECK, M. D.,
Consulting and Analytical Chemist.

Mr. REED'S Distillery, 118 East Twenty-ninth st., New-York. [my31 3m

"Hereditary bondsmen, know ye not
Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow?"

RICHARD KAVANAGH,

132 and 134 FEDERAL STREET, BOSTON.

THANKFUL to his numerous patrons for past favors, is desirous of letting them know that he has given up the Grocery and Provision trade, and intends in future to devote his untiring exertions to promote their terrestrial happiness in the shape of good Liquors, Segars, to say nothing of a Free Lunch every day at 11 o'clock. Attached is a very handsome Sitting Room, and a splendid Room for Committee Meetings. my31 4t

Smiles many a long, bright sunny day,
When heaven puts on the blue of May.

Ladies, if you wish Gaiter and Button Boots, of all the fashionable styles, at 12s. to 20s., or if you wish slippers, ties and buskins, from 6s. to 10s. per pair, with boys', misses' and children's boots and shoes of all kinds and prices, patronize J. B MILLER & CO., 134 Canal street. [my31 4t

I. E. Tate's Pannus Corrium Boot and Shoe store, for tender feet. A large stock of Boots, Shoes and Gaiters always on hand, in great variety, and made to order at the shortest notice, for Gentlemen, Boys and Youths—wholesale and retail, at the lowest Cash prices. Particular attention is requested to the Pannus Corrium or Leather Cloth Boots and Shoes, for those troubled with corns, bunions or tenderness of the feet. Its qualities for summer boots or shoes, surpass anything ever got up in this country for real comfort, as it keeps the feet perfectly cool, and at the same time is susceptible of the finest polish; for a dress boot more so than any French calfskin, with one half the labor. ISAAC E. TATE.
my 24, 3 mos. 427 Broadway New-York.

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.
Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my3 3m

Furniture.—F. FITZSIMMONS respectfully calls the attention of his customers and the public to his stock of elegant and substantial FURNITURE, (not made for the auction room) consisting of rich Parlor Suites in rosewood; oak Dining and Chamber Sets of every description; Upholstery in all its branches executed in the best mechanical manner. Prices unexceptionable. Warerooms No. 8 Astor place, near Broadway. my24 3m

Lumber and Timber for Export and City Trade.—THOS. RIGNEY & Co. offer for sale AT THEIR YARD FOOT OF THIRTIETH-STREET, North River, a general assortment of LUMBER AND TIMBER, suitable for export and the city trade. SHIPPERS AND BUILDERS will find it to their advantage to examine their stock previous to buying. Apply as above, or to J. PICKARD, Agent, 26 Bridge street. my17 3m*

KNOX'S
OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,
59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.
DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and Single counting-room DESKS, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office Desks from 3 to 6 ft., of Mahogany, blackwalnut and oak; cases for Books and pigeon-holes. Office chairs, cushions, lounges and Office Tables of every description. my17 tf

STATEN ISLAND
FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.
Also ladies and gentlemen's garments, Shawls, &c., &c.
BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 3 John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

$100,000 WORTH OF NEW GOODS!

FROM AUCTION, at LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY. EGAN & CO. have just purchased an entire new lot of Spring and Summer Dress Silks of all styles and qualities, and will sell them at Low Prices in their New Store. In consequence of Overstock of Goods being Imported, Silks have reduced in value full 30 per cent., and we buying them at the reduced prices, can afford to sell the most desirable styles and qualities lower than those that have purchased when goods were high and scarce. We have no Old Stock—no Damaged Goods—no Bankrupt Sale—none of those Humbugs—but we have good PLAID SILKS from 4s. 6d. to 12s per yard; new and splendid Striped Poplins, from 8s. to 3s. 6d. per yard. A large assortment of Black and Colored Silks. We ask but one price, and sell in dollars and cents. Some of the newest STELLA SHAWLS, from $2 50 to $20. A large and splendid lot of CRAPE SHAWLS, and a general assortment of spring goods. Being the only LINEN HALL in the city, and having a buyer in Belfast, Ireland, we are always supplied with the best qualities of LINEN for Shirting, Sheeting, and Damask Table Cloths, by the cloth or yard. Some splendid Damask and Snow-Drop Napkins at $1 50 per dozen. Ten cases of French Printed Lawns for Dresses, will be opened tomorrow and the following day, from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per yard. Marseilles Quilts from 14s. to $5 each. 4tjun7

REMOVAL.
McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks
Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street,
ap263mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

Analytical and Metallurgical Chemistry and Mining Geology.

DR. ISAIAH DECK,
No. 18 EXCHANGE PLACE, NEW-YORK.

MAY be consulted on all subjects relating to Practical Chemistry, Mining- and Metallurgy. Assays of Ores, Analyses of Minerals, and Mining Products in general carefully and expeditiously conducted, and sound opinions delivered upon the most economical methods of working them, based on the latest chemical discoveries. Geological and Mining Surveys undertaken in any part of the world—Dr. DECK having had had considerable experience in this branch of his profession. my31 3m

Wanted, A situation as Engineer, to run a stationary engine, in any part of this city. Apply to James Casey, 405 Ninth street, opposite the Morgan Iron Works, who will give most satisfactory references.

Medical.

THE CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

BRONCHITIS.—WHAT PRODUCES BRONCHITIS?

FIRST STAGE OF DISEASE.

COSTIVENESS is the first link that connects disease in the System. It creates, induces, feeds and supports Bronchitis; and is slightly or indifferently treated, as though it was of no serious tendency: nevertheless, it has laid the fonndation of that destroying disease, without the knowledge of the sufferers, undermining and sapping the very vitals of their constitutions.

Among the numerous class of diseases which afflict man, there is none more silent or treacherous in its approaches or more certain to triumph over its slowly consuming victim, than that formidable and insidious leveller of humanity—Bronchitis, which is produced by catching cold, through a neglect of regulating the state of the bowels when arriving to adult age. It seldom excites attention or alarm in the mind of any person, until it has sown the seed of disease and suffering in the human system, by checking the circulation of the blood; and it is to this source alone that we attribute the awful mortality of Consumption.

The following is a simple but correct illustration, namely:—If the culverts and sewers of the city were choked or clogged up, accidentally or otherwise, what would be the result? An overflow of accumulated filth and slush on the surface of the earth in its neighborhood, until it fills every hole, corner and crevice. This is quite similar to the human body, when the channel or sewer of life, as I may term it, which is the bowels, is checked or confined through constipation or some unnatural obstruction, which prevents the blood from circulating through the general system.

What, then, is the consequence? An accumulation of diseased matter and bile. Where will this bile and poisonous substance go to when it is prevented from taking its natural exit, through the bowels? It must surge itself back again into the blood, to be infused through the entire frame by the agency of the blood, bringing in its passage disease and suffering, and exhibiting itself by pain, nervous sensations and irritation all over the body—producing a bad feeling at the stomach, sourness of the food, a rush of blood to the head, catarrh, bronchitis, a short dry cough, dizziness, pain in the shoulders, and through or under the shonlder blades, cold feet, a peevish and irritable temper, aanoyed by this hacking cough, and then gradually begins the expectorating from the throat of a lightish phlegm, resembling boiled starch or tough jelly of various colors, from a light to a darkish substance, and hawked up like a string.

SECOND STAGE.

From this period the patient is aware of some unusual and disagreeable feeling, though he seldom takes the hint till it goes from bad to worse. Catching cold from the slightest exposure, which he cannot avoid in consequence of the blood being in a diseased and corrupt condition for a long time previous to the appearance of those troublous symptoms, through the impure state of the blood, that at every breath the patient draws he inhales a similar quantity of fresh air by the nostrils and mouth, which keeps the tickling that exists in the throat and bronchial tubes in a ferment of irritation—this is the reason why some people complain of catching cold, even when confined to their room. Hence the sufferer is hacking, hawking, or expectorating a little at a time, with the impression that there is something in his throat that wants to come out; and which he desires to get out. There is a frequent desire for heavy sighing, with a dryness of the nostrils, which inclines the patient to pick or scratch them; sleepy, drowsy, dull, and heavy loss of appetite, and confused memory; a stuffing, tightness, and oppression of the chest, with a rawness and soreness of the gullet of the throat. This is caused by the silent enemy that has lurked in the system for months, and even years, and has at last aroused your fears, and well it might; for out of one hundred persons who die of Consumption ninety-nine are owing to disease of the throat alone, though simply called Bronchitis; and wretchedly treated by this self-pretended and dignified class of sheepskin physicians termed M. D.'s, who have proved a curse to the human family. They treat their patient on the following abusive principle, by cutting the tonsols and palate from the throat, as you might cut the gills out of a fish—next comes the solution or wash of nitrate of silver or caustic, and the whalebone swab, to wash and burn away the disease that has occupied the throat. Then comes the application of blister, and Croton oil externally to the throat and neck, to draw out the inflammation, as the physicians suppose (what blind philosophy.) Then comes the quack sheet of their MATERIA MEDICA—Calomel, Antimony, Morphine and Opium, to salivate and lull the feelings of the pafient, which adds to the disease and increases the suffering, by giving the disease an opporiunity of triumphing over nature. What a delusive idea to think the above treatment would be available in having recourse to those debilitating and irritating remedies of cutting, burning, blistering, purging and starving, which is of itself sufficient to lower and reduce the constitution of an ox.

THE THIRD STAGE

Confirms the above remarks. While undergoing this torturing treatment, the constitution is gradually failing and giving away, in giving rise to more alarming symptoms, evidently preparing its victim for the shroud, while the physician and friends fail to see the cause until those confirmed symptoms of consumption set in, but foolishly assign the cause to some other besides the genuine one, till the disease has reached its meridian, with a complication of fresh symptoms, breathing short and hurried, cough frequent, with an accumulation of corrupted matter, sometimes streaked with blood; profuse night sweats, emaciation and debility; cold chills in the forenoon, with a burning fever after; flesh soft and flabby, the limbs scarcely able to support the body; a susceptibility of catching cold on the least exposure, attended with a hoarseness and loss of voice, with a very heavy expectoration in the forenoon; flying pains in the chest, sides and shoulders, with a severe fit of coughing in the morning, or awaking from sleep. The painful crisis is fast approaching, with a swelling and puffing of the feet and ankles, and frequent attacks of diarrhœa. In females, the symptoms are more distressing at an earlier period than in the male, with a weakness in the back and loins, a sinking and exhausted feeling at the stomach, nervous and excitable, with gradual and frequent interruptions of the monthly flow, and as the disease progresses, a total or final cessation of it, with the harbinger of a broken down constitution which is a discharge of whites, a symptom that proves very debilitating and irritating to females.

All the above symptoms and sufferings are the fruits of costiveness at an early period, accruing to the sufferer through neglect of keeping the bowels in gentle operation, which would circulate the blood, and prove as ventilation to the general system, from the age of 18 to 26, when this disease creeps on and grows on, until every organ in the body is totally disorganized.

My long experience and observations, and my unprecedented success in treating consumption, inclines me to devote the remainder of my life to the cause of suffering humanity. I have cured more consumptive patients in the last ten years than any other doctor in the world in that time, and not by steam, smoke or vapor, nor by smelling medicine through an India rubber or glass tube, but through the selection I make from the forest and verdant meadows. I can always determine on examination whether I can be successful or not, and I speak accordingly. I have made it a rule to treat no disease longer than three weeks. If I cannot check the fatal progress of the disease in that time, I give up the patient as lost, and lead the sufferer to no further expense.

☞ In compliance with the repeated solicitations of consumptive patients living in remote parts of the country, I have opened an hospital at No. 173 Bowery, for the exclusive treatment of those laboring under any species of the above disease, where I can bestow on them the unremitted attention which the seriousness of their cases require; where I can be able to regulate their diet and regimen according to circumstances. Three weeks under the supervision of my especial care is worth four months at a distance.

All persons desirous of medical information can obtain it by enclosing one dollar, when all information and communication will be forwarded on receipt.

D. Durkin, Chronic and Consumptive Doctor,
my31 No. 173 Bowery, New-York.

DR. B. F. ADAMS,

SURGEON DENTIST, (formerly of Barclay street,) feeling grateful for the patronage so liberally bestowed upon him for the last fourteen years, respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he has taken an elegant suite of rooms, at

NO. 122 CHAMBERS STREET,

(near the Sixth and Eighth Avenue Railroads,) where he may always be found, ready to perform all operations pertaining to his profession, in a manner unsurpassed, and on the most reasonable terms. Whole or part sets of incorruptible teeth inserted without pain, on gold plate or gutta percha, excelling nature in beauty and durability. No impure gold or dangerous amalgams used. Irregularities in children's teeth prevented, or of adults remedied. Cleansing, extracting, &c. &c., all at reduced prices. Sets of teeth inserted on Silver or Gutta Percha, for six shillings each. Teeth examined, and advice given free of charge. Please call.
8m7jun B. F. ADAMS, 122 Chambers street, New-York.

DR. J. VOORHIES,
MEDICAL ELECTRICIAN,
NO. 69 SANDS STREET,
Brooklyn.
Office hours from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M.

N. B. All chronic or nervous diseases cured by Electricity in some form. Electro Medicated Vapor Baths ready for operation. Dropsy can be cured by this treatment. Consultations free. m8jun14

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,
ap196m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

Medical.

DRS. GILBERT AND KENNEDY,

TREAT

CANCERS, TUMORS, ULCERS, &c.,

WITHOUT SURGICAL OPERATIONS.

OFFICE 746 BROADWAY, COR. ASTOR PLACE, N. Y.

CERTIFICATES FROM

Ex. Gov. T. M. Tucker.	Hon. T. Butler King.	Judge Alex. Walker.
Judge F. W. Huling.	Gen. Narcisso Lopez.	Col. Maunsel White.
Capt. Isaiah Sellers.	Capt. Wm. Leathers.	Thos. E. Bond, M. D.
A. S. Baldwin, M. D.	W. P. Allison, M. D.	J. S. Peacocke, M. D.

PERMISSION TO REFER TO

Ex. Gov. Jas. C. Jones. Hon. Fred. B. Stanton.
B. F. Palmer, Inventor of "Palmer's Artificial Leg."
Francis Grice, Naval Constructor, Navy Yard, Phila.
Proprietors of the Girard House, Philadelphia. my24 1m

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Stiles, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.
ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

"Eye and Ear."—DOCTOR HENDERSON, Oculist and Aurist, 419 Broadway, corner of Canal street, treats all diseases of the eye and ear, without cupping, leeching, blistering or the use of calomel. Within the past two years upwards of thirty cases of blindness from inflamation have been restored to sight, to whom reference can be given, (hundreds of which can be seen in my circular,) by inclosing three postage stamps. Electro-chemical Medicated Vapor and Sulphur, hot and cold water BATHS. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Sundays and evenings by appointment. 419 Broadway, corner of Canal st., New-York. my17 3m

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

DR. J. ALLEN, (late Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery,) invites attention to his improved method of constructing Artificial Dentistry, which combine the following advantages:

1st,—There are no seams or crevices for the lodgement of food, to vitiate the saliva, or infect the breath. The interstices are all filled with a silicious compound, which is so applied as to form an artificial gum; this is fused at a high heat, which unites the Teeth firmly to each other, and to the plate upon which tney are set, thus imparting great strength and lifelike appearance to the denture.

2d,—The Teeth for this style of work are made perfectly natural in form and shade, and when properly set with the artificial gum as above, exhibits that harmony with the other features which characterize the natural organs.

3d,—The original form and expression of the mouth and face can be restored. This is done by having the denture so constructed as to bring out the sunken portions and sustain them in their proper position; this is an important feature in this style of work, to which the author devotes special attention.

4th,—A clear and distinct articulation of speech is restored. This is effected by having the inside of the teeth, and artificial gum, of a natural form, to which the tongue is readily adapted; this prevents the hissing or muffled sounds so often observed in speaking or singing, in persons wearing artificial teeth.

The Rooms are at No. 30 BOND STREET, New-York. A Pamphlet containing more full particulars, sent free, to those who desire it. ap263m

H. G. LUTHER,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST,

No. 698 BROADWAY, Second House above Fourth st.

HAVING enjoyed an extensive practice during the last twelve years, feels confident of his ability to give perfect satisfaction to all who may honor him with their preference. He is prepared to perform all operations connected with his profession, in the most faithful manner, and in strict accordance with scientific principles, embracing all the recent improvements of the day.

References of the most respectable character given if desired. Patronage respectfully solicited.

☞ N. B. Teeth extracted without pain. my17 3m

Dr. J. J. McGowan, Physician and Surgeon, Graduate of Harvard University, Fellow of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Medical Societies, etc., has removed to No. 69 Canal street, New-York, a few doors from Broadway, where he will attend to calls in every branch of the medical profession. Dr. McG. will devote particular attention to chronic diseases, and those of women and children. m10 1t

New School of Medicine and Pharmacy. The last Unfolding of the ART of Healing. My daily practice proves that I CURE CONSUMPTION, in all its varied forms and most advanced states, as readily as any other disease. Therefore I desire to treat all Consumptives, but particularly those who have tried all other physicians without relief. Mrs. M. J. MARIN, M.D., No. 37. Lafayette place, N. Y. (First street east of Broadway, between 4th and 8th sts.) Office hours: from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., exclusively for Ladies; and from 2 to 5 P. M., for Gentlemen, Wednesdays excepted. All other hours by appointment. my31 3m

THE GREATEST WONDER OF THE AGE!

A REMEDY WHICH CURES IN FIVE MINUTES.—M. LEROUX'S FRENCH CHOLERA COGNAC BITTERS.—This wonderful and scientific compound is recommended by the most eminent and learned physicians of all Europe and America, and enjoys the best reputation of anything similar ever offered. It is without doubt the best, most efficient and generally acknowledged remedy against Cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, and complaints of the stomach in general. The numerous patients who have tried it according to directions, have invariably found relief in a very short time, and the best proof of it is, that since this standard remedy was introducee in the armies of the allies in the Crimea, the mortality of the soldiers from Cholera and similar diseases was reduced by over 75 per cent.; in consideration of which, the inventor was presented by the French and English governments with a gold medal, bearing the inscription, "Hail! M. LEROUX, the great Chemist and inventor, by whose knowledge our armies are preserved from Cholera."

This invaluable preparation is also a remedy for biliousness, indigestion, weakness, and general derangement of the stomach. Upon being taken, it creates appetite, and prevents the heaviness attendant upon eating, by persons who are dyspeptic.

In this city, also, this remedy has been tried with the most undoubted success, and the undersigned can produce the best testimonials of our most celebrated physicians, as to its immediate and complete success, which he will be happy at any time to show to any that may wish to see them. S. STEINFELD, sole agent for the United States, No. 70 Nassau street, corner of John.

P. S.—Those not having money to pay, may call at my place from 8 to 5 P. M. and receive this remedy gratis. my17 3m

A CARD.—To the Medical Profession.—A medical gentleman, having a practice worth $4000 per annum, in a large and flourishing city in the western part of the statp of New-York, wishes to dispose of the same on very reasonable terms. Also the position of Physician to the Hospital. To a young medical man, possessing the requisite qualifications, this is an opportunity rarely to be met with. Full particulars can be obtained on application to the office of the Irish News, 29 Ann street. 5tJun7

TO NERVOUS SUFFERERS.

A Retired Clergyman, restored to health in a few days, after many years of great nervous suffering, is anxious to make known the means of cure. Will send (free) the prescriptions used. Direct to
Rev. JOHN M. DAGNALL,
my10 3m No. 59 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Best Hair Dye.—DR. O. M. BALLARD'S new article received the highest premium at the World's Fair and American Institute, where it was examined by the distinguished Chemists, Dr. Chilton, and Prof. John Torrey, and pronounced the best. For sale by the best Druggists. Principal office and store, 493 Broadway, New-York, my17 3m

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	4s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	8s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 8s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap193m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

NEW STORE

AND

NEW GOODS.

THE subscriber having leased for a term of years the premises

374 Hudson street,

and made exthnsive additions thereto, and having laid in a large stock o

Carpeting and Oil Cloths,

mostly bought at Auction, for CASH, is now prepared to sell them at the following extremely low prices:

Tapestry Brussels, 8s. usually sold at 10s.
Three Ply Ingrain 8s. usually sold at 10s.
Superfine do 6s. usually sold at 8s.
Fine do 5s. usually sold at 6s.
Common do All WOOL 3s. 6d. per yard, a price absolutely unheard of.

Ingrain, Cotton Warp and Wool Filling 2s. 6d.
Oil Cloths 3s. per yard, usually sold at 5s.

Mats, Matting, Table and Piano Covers, Venetian and Hall Carpetting, Stair Rods, &c. &c.

Clergymen and Churches furnished at wholesale prices.

Goods in all cases warranted as represented.

J. R. Landon, 374 Hudson street, New-York,
3mjun a few doors from Hamersly.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap263m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

P. L. ROGERS,

FOUNDER OF THE ONE PRICE SYSTEM,

invites an inspection of the extensive

SPRING STOCK OF FASHIONABLE CLOTHING,

at his great central wholesale and retail warehouse,

CORNER OF FULTON AND NASSAU STREETS,

opposite the Herald office.

There any gentleman can procure an elegant outfit in twenty minutes Every garment is warranted of the newest cut and of good workmanship.

Parents can fit out a family of boys with equal dispatch from a stock that includes every style, size, color, material and quality.

The selling prices, which are guaranteed to be 25 per cent. under market average, are all affixed in plain figures to the articles, and NO DEVIATION can be made.

The Order Department is stocked with the finest CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, etc., and the clothing made to measure cannot be excelled in the world, although the prices are far lower than at other establishments.

my24tf P. L. Rogers.

TO THE LADIES—MILLINERY.

A large and beautiful assortment of Ladies' and Misses'

BONNETS, STRAW TRIMMINGS, RIBBONS, FLOWERS, AND MANTILLAS,

At William S. Irvine's No. 112 Canal street.
my31 1mo

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

GEO. McDONNELL,

BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURER,

32½ PARK ROW, NEXT DOOR TO LOVEJOY'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK.

☞ Boots, Shoes, and Gaiters of the best quality made to order.

3m.my10 Geo. McDonnell.

ROBERT IRWIN,

CHEAP BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

my10 156 Chatham street, opposite James' st., New-York. 3m

R. HOGAN,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

UMBRELLA AND PARASOL MANUFACTURER,

374 BOWERY, NEAR FOURTH STREET.

Repairing neatly executed. my17 3m*

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 198 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap198m

---

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co., C. Meletta, | Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co., James Cook & Co. 6m

---

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHES,

NO. 202 BOWERY.

[Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jeweled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a ju12m6 workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to.

J. McCARTEN,

WATCH AND CLOCK MAKER,

154 SEVENTH AVENUE.

Between 20th and 21st streets, New-York.

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry carefully repaired and warranted. A good 7jun assortment of watches and clocks always on hand.

JOHN FOLEY,

MANUFACTURER OF FINE GOLD PENS

BEST QUALITY ONLY.

GOLD AND SILVER PENCIL CASES.

my24tf No. 168 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

325 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK. 6mJune7

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

OFFICE, 23½ SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at

1 yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this conntry, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN & McSHANE,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

NEW-YORK. 3m

SHIP STORES SUPPLIED.

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

☞ Office 138 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap263m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap263m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

HOSEY & RILEY,

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,

600 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

Private entrance on the first floor, 134 Crosby street.

☞ Hosey & Riley invite their friends to give them a call.

my24 3m HOSEY & RILEY.

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

DRY-DOCK DISTILLERY.

No. 291 East thirteenth st., near Avenue B.

JAMES RUSSELL,

Rectifier and Manufacturer of Cordials,

IMPORTER AND DEALER

IN Foreign and Domestic Wines, Liquors, Cordials, &c. J. R. having had long experience in the liquor trade, he has facilities of selecting wines and liquors of the most superior quality, which he offers to dealers and families at the lowest market prices, and flatters himself that a single trial will be quite sufficient to secure custom.

Goods delivered free of expense in any part of the city, and country orders promptly attended to. 3m jun14

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES 6 CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 21, 1856. NO. 11.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XI.

Editorial.

SERMONS IN STONES—BURKE AND CURRAN.
NOISE IN THE NORTH—A KETTLE TO THE LION'S TAIL.
JOHN BROUGHAM AND THE BOWERY.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS—William Smith O'Brien.
A NEST OF NOVELS—Paul Ferroll, Aspen Court, The Huguenot Exiles, and Philly and Kit.
AN IRISH DIAMOND—Brougham's Irish Echoes and Dramas, with Memoir by Dr. Makenzie.
ARCHBISHOP HUGHES' LECTURE ON O'CONNELL.

Poetry.

THE PRAYER.
DEAR CAHERMONE.
SONG FROM BLARNEY LAKE.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.
LETTERS FROM DUBLIN—By Kilmainham.

Military.

MEMOIR OF THE SHIELDS' ARTILLERY, Boston.

Answers to Correspondents.

A Visit to "England's Majesty," by a Member of the Commons—Interesting suggestions by correspondents, &c. &c.

Miscellaneous.

Latest Irish, English, and American News—Ratification Meeting in the Park—Buchanan and the Press—Deaths and Marriages.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. MAHONY, Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. P. WALSH, Cincinnati, Ohio.
— COURTNEY, Charleston, South Carolina.
BRICE, 100 Exchange Place, New Orleans.
JOHN PLASTO, 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me. ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O. DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y. MORRISEY, " "
McGOWANS, Portland, Me. DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.
JOHN C. CLARKE, 88 Newark avenue, Jersey City.
B. E. DOWLING, Jefferson st., next the Post Office, Newport, Ky.
M. GRADY, 27 Fayette st., Lowell, Mass.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.
POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.
tf JOHN HAMILTON,
S. W. JOHNSON.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 54 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 800 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from EDWARD H. DIXON, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, FROM THE CRADLE TO THE GRAVE;" Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above.
ap26tf

Publications.

A tap from a Shilelagh

FOR THESE

STUPID AMERICANS!

An account of the Visit of

RACHEL IN THE NEW WORLD.

By M. BEAUVALLET, one of the "Corps Dramatique."

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.

M. Beauvallet gives a most amusing account of the Felix "Million Hunt," from the start in Paris to the conclusion of the "Hunt" over here. The book is full of the most pert and impertinent remarks on our cities and institutions.

NEW-YORK, BOSTON, PHILADELPHIA, none escape witticisms and criticisms in this

Cockney Frenchman's First Literary Attempt.

Our theatres, actors, audiences, all suffer alike. Our Gentlemen are

"GAMBLERS AND ROBBERS," our Ladies are

"FEMALE VAMPIRES."

So CANDID and perfectly INGENUOUS statements have never before been given. It will create the heartiest mirth wherever it is read.

For sale at all bookstores in town and country.

Price one dollar- DIX, EDWARDS & CO., 321 Broadway, N. Y.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL. 4 vols., very scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
HAYES' BALLADS OF IRELAND. 2 vols. in one, 12mo. cloth, $1.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornellan. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.
O'BRIEN'S ROUND TOWERS. Scarce.
MUSGRAVE'S IRISH REBELLIONS. 2 vols., 8vo.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 62 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Shandy Maguire, 50 cts. Griffin's Adventures of an Irish Giant, 18mo., cloth, 25 cents. Wild Irish Girl, 12mo., cloth, 50 cents. Ireland's Welcome to the Stranger, 12mo. cloth, 62c.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
110 Fulton street, New-York.

In press, Madden's Lives of Robert Emmett and Thomas Addis Emmet.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

VOLUNTEERS ASSEMBLED IN COLLEGE GREEN—A copy of this rare engraving, (described in No. 10 Irish News) for sale. Price $5.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,
By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to

A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE.

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

(JAMES B. KIRKER,)

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK,

PUBLISH the largest and finest assortment of Catholic Bibles, Testaments, Prayer Books, Tales, School Books, and other works, to be found in the United States.

An extensive supply of all other Catholic articles always on hand.

Catalogues of their publications sent free of postage.

E. D. & BROTHER HAVE JUST ISSUED

1. THE LOVE OF MARY. Devotions for the month of May. 38c.
2. THE YOUNG CRUSADERS. A tale. 38c.
3. HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR; or Meditations on the Blessed Sacrament. 25c.
4. THE CONVERSION OF RATISBONNE. 25c.
5. CONSCIENCE, or the Trials of May Brooke, a tale by Mrs. A. H. Dorsey. 2 vols; each 38c.

4t May 24

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50

Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Life of St. Francis of Assisciun. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½

Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½

Edma and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to 4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to 12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to 12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to 25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

Publications.

Pleasing Intelligence.

BOWERY THEATRE.

JOHN BROUGHAM

WILL OPEN

THE ABOVE ESTABLISHMENT,

WITH A

Stock Company,

On Monday, June 30.

FOUR NEW VOLUMES

OF

SADLIER'S POPULAR LIBRARY.

 These and other books for popular reading, libraries, &c., issued by the publishers, are sent free by post, on receipt of the amount; and if ordered in any considerable number for libraries or prizes, a very large reduction is made. It is hoped that the low terms will induce a very general use of these books.

Just Ready—Volume 10th,

HISTORY OF THE WAR IN LA VENDEE, and THE LITTLE CHOUANNERIE. By G. J. HILL, M.A. With two maps and seven engravings. 12mo, cloth, extra, 75 cents; cloth, extra gilt edges, $1 12.

Volume 11th,

TALES AND LEGENDS FROM HISTORY.

CONTENTS—1. Gonsalvo of Amaranta—2. The victory of Muret—3. The Dominicans Ghent—4. The Martyrs of Stone—5. The Abbey of Premontre—6. Legends of St. Winifride—7. The feast of the Immaculate Conception—8. The Consecration of Westminster Abbey—9. The Monk's last Words—10. The Martyr Maidens of Ostend—11. The loss of the Conception—12. Foundation of the Abbey of Anchin—13. Our Lady of Mercy—14. John de la Cambe—15. The Carpenter of Roosendael—16. The Widow of Artois—17. The village of Blankenberg—18. St. Edward's Death—19. The windows of San Petronio—20. The Vessels of St. Peter.

12 mo. cloth, extra, 63 cents; cloth, gilt, 88 cents.

Volume 12th,

THE MISSIONS IN JAPAN AND PARAGUAY. By CECELIA CADDELL, author of "Tales of the Festivals," "Miner's Daughter," "Lost Genoveffa," &c. &c. 12mo, cloth, extra, 63 cents; cloth, extra, gilt edges, 88 cts.

Volume 13th,

CALLISTA, A Tale of the Third Century. By Very Reverend JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, D.D., Rector of the Catholic University, Dublin. 12mo. cloth, extra 75 cents; cloth, extra gilt, $1 12.

The following extract is from a very long notice of the work in the Dublin Tablet:

"The story is partly interwoven with historical facts, but its author professes, at the outset, that as a whole it is a simple fiction from beginning to end. However that may be, as an instrument of conveying a real and genuine historical knowledge of the days of which it treats, in their aspect toward Christianity, it will probably remain without a rival in the literary world."

Just Ready, the eighth thousand

1. FABIOLA, or the Church of the Catacombs. By Cardinal WISEMAN. Cloth, extra, 75 cents; gilt, $1 12.

"In "Fabiola" it is not difficult to recognize the learning and brilliancy of an eminent person, whose perfect knowledge of the Rome of to-day imparts to his description of the primeval remains of Christian antiquity a truthfulness and value, independent of the rich stores of erudition which he has applied to their examination."—Catholic University Gazette.

2. HEROINES OF CHARITY. With Preface by AUBREY DE VERE, Esq. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

CONTENTS:—1. The Sisters of Vincennes—2. Jeanne Biscot—3. Anne de Melun—4. Louise de Marillac, Duchess de Aiguillon, Madame de Pollalion, Mademoiselle de Lamoignon—5. Madame de Moramion—6. Mrs. Eliza A. Seton—7. The Little Sisters of the Poor.

3. THE LIFE OF ST. FRANCES OF ROME. By Lady GEORGIANNA FULLERTON. With three others; and an Essay on the Miraculous Lives of the Saints. By J. M. CAPES, Esq. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; cloth, gilt, 75 cents.

4. CATHOLIC LEGENDS AND STORIES. A varied and beautiful volume, containing 31 of the choicest specimens, for the most part new to English readers. Cloth extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

5. THE WITCH OF MELTON HILL. By the author of "Mt. St. Lawrence," &c. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; cloth gilt 75 cents.

"We have seldom read a better story than this. If all the volumes of the 'Popular Library' are as good as this, the series will have an immense success. As for the moral and religious tendency of the book, it is excellent. We can conscientiously recommend it.—Catholic Leader.

6. PICTURES OF CHRISTIAN HEROISM. With Preface by the Rev. H. E. MANNING, D.D. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

CONTENTS:—1. Father Azevedo—2. Sister Honoria Magaen—3. Blessed Andrew Bobola—4. Blessed John de Britto—5. The Nuns of Minsk—6. A Confessor of the Faith, 1793—7. The Martyrs of the Carmeg—8. Gabriel de Naillac—9. Margaret Clitherow—10. Geronimo at Algiers—11. Martyrdoms in China—12. Father Thomas of Jesus.

Cloth, extra, 12mo, 50 cents; gilt edges, 75 cents.

Just published, the 5th thousand of

7. THE BLAKES AND FLANAGANS. A Tale illustrative of Irish Life in the United States. By Mrs. J. SADLIER. 12mo. 400 pages, cloth extra, 75 cents; cloth, extra, gilt edge, $1 12.

"The style is excellent, thoroughly natural and unaffected, the narrative flowing, the conversation full of vivacity, and the characters well sustained. ....We cannot but wish it the widest circulation that a book can have."—St. Louis Leader.

8. THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ST. BERNARD. Translated from the French of M. L'Abbe RATISBONNE. With a Preface by Henry Edward Manning, D.D., and a Portrait. 1 vol. 12mo. 500 pages. Cloth, extra, $1; gilt edges $1 50.

9. THE LIFE AND VICTORIES OF THE EARLY MARTYRS. By Mrs. HOPE. Written for the Oratorian's Schools of our Lady's Compassion. 1 vol. 12 mo. 400 pages. Cloth, extra, 75 cents. Gilt edges, $1 12.

D. & J. SADLIER & CO., 164 William street, New-York; 128 Federal street, Boston; and cor. Notre Dame and St. Francis Xavier streets, Montreal, C. E.

THE LONDON JOURNAL

Is now published in New-York, and published weekly at 60 NASSAU STREET, by J. SMITH. Price two cents each. Subscription terms, one dollar per annum. N. B. All the back numbers, from the commencement of the new volume, can be obtained by applying as above.

Agents wanted in every town in the Union and the Canadas. 21ju21

TAILORS, ATTENTION!

If you wish to possess the best and most exact system of Coat and Jacke Cutting, procure HOLDWAY'S DIAGRAM AND SCALE, whereby you are enabled to cut for 30 different sizes, varying from 20 breast measure (which, you know, is small,) to 54, which you also consider large, and whereby you will find a misfit next to impossible. See it and judge for yourself.

To be had of TILL & COOK, 299 Broadway; or of A. HOLDWAY, 29 Anne street, next door to the IRISH NEWS office. je14 tf

Wanted.—Good hands to embroider on linen. Apply at GENIN'S Bazaar (under St. Nicholas Hotel,) 513 Broadway. my17 3m

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 80 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
88 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,
OLD LINE PACKETS,
Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 13th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap26 3m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

Shipping.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP LINE.

CITY OF BALTIMORE....CITY OF WASHINGTON.
CITY OF MANCHESTER...KANGAROO.

THE magnificent new steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Leitch, 2,867 tons, 500 horse power, will sail from Philadelphia on the 26th June, and from Liverpool on the 16th July. Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including cooked provisions. Persons wishing to send for their friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—F. S. Saxton.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati————.....Toronto, C. W.—D. K. Feehan.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remitcance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING,
ROBERT J. DILLON,
HUGH KELLY,
} Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CRERAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN,
ARTHUR M'AVOY,
} Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

Special Notices.

Caution to the Public.—To distinguish the genuine magnetic powder, for the destruction of insects, from poisonous imitations, it is necessary to examine the wrapper. See that four national medals—those of England, France, Belgium, and the United States—are engraved thereon. Be sure also that a lithographic fac simile of Lyon's signature appears both on the wrapper and label. This caution is necessary to protect the proprietor from fraud and the public from danger and disappointment. The leading scientific societies, and the first chemists of Europe and America, have pronounced the magnetic powder the only poisonous insect bane in the world, as well as the most effective and fatal means for the destruction of bed-bugs, roaches, fleas, ants, flies, moths, &c., that was ever prepared or sold. The proprietors of the principal city hotels endorse it. Come and see the testimonials of Prince Albert, ex-President Fillmore, and hundreds of the nobility of Europe, as well as the sovereigns of America. The magnetic pills, for the extermination of rats and mice, are endorsed with equal emphasis by all who have tried them. Call and see the medals, diplomas, government orders, scientific certificates, letters, &c., at the Central Depot, No. 424 Broadway.

jun 21 3m EMANUEL LYON.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my3 1y

---

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

3mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

GREEN & SEWELL,
BANKERS,
No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

---

☞ NOTICE.

LOVEJOY HOUSE,

NO. 160 GREENWICH ST., NEW-YORK.

(21ju6m) LOVEJOY & FALLON, Proprietors.

M. GRADY.

27 FAYETTE STREET, LOWELL, MASS.

ju21 Agent for the IRISH NEWS and all the other choice literature of the day.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap26 3m

---

Sewing Machine Depot.—Sewing Machines of all kinds improved and repaired, on reasonable terms, an in the most substantial manner. Superior Machine Oils for sale. A large assortment of Machine Silk Twist and Needles for sale at reduces prices.

my 24, 3 mos. F. S. COATES & Co., 845 Broadway, New-York.

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE FOR SERVANTS.

275 BOWERY, NEW-YORK.

MALE and Female Servants can be promptly suited at the above number, with any situation in the city or country, at good wages, in first-rate families, without delay.

N. B. Employers quickly supplied.

8m may 31 ALEXANDER F. RUNGE, Agent.

BREWER & CALDWELL,

200 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

Wanted, at 766 Broadway, (near 8th street.) Places procured for conductors, Bookkeepers, Clerks, Salesmen, Firemen, Brakemen, Barkeepers, Porters, Waiters, men on Steamers and Railroads, boys for trades, and girls of every description. 21my3m

French, English, and German spoken. LOUIS KAUFMAN, Agent.

Servants wanted.—50 good, honest, capable, and faithful servants wanted daily. Cooks, Chambermaids, Seamstresses, Laundresses, Nurses, Waitresses, and general house and work girls—at the N. Y. Employment Office, 480 Broadway, established in 1844 by tf21ju T. P. SAUNDERS.

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE for Servants, 129 Waverley Place, two doors from Sixth avenue, New-York.—A large number of competent help can be suited with good situations, in city and country, without delay. Employers in the city and country supplied with the best of female help. [my17 3m] WM. O'BRIEN, Proprietor.

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9ih Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap19 3m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 682 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap19 1y Thomas Maher.

Lecture of Archbishop Hughes at the Academy of Music.

LIFE AND TIMES OF O'CONNELL.

The lecture of Archbishop Hughes, last evening, at the Academy of Music, drew a brilliant and crowded auditory of the admirers of the great O'Connell. The eloquence and exalted position of the gifted and accomplished prelate himself, and the sacred object of the lecture, the erection of an edifice devoted to the worship of our common Father, contributed to the solemnity of the occasion.

Every available spot in the vast building was filled from the floor to the dome, by a most intelligent audience, among whom was a large proportion of ladies. The platform was occupied by many of the Roman Catholic clergymen of New York and its vicinity. The Archbishop was accompanied on the platform by Right Rev. Dr. O'Laughlin, R. C. Bishop of Brooklyn, Very Rev. Mr. Starrs, Vicar General, Very Rev. Mr. McCarron, Archdeacon Rev. Mr. Preston, Rev. Mr. Quin, Rev. Mr. Lutz, and several others. His appearance elicited a burst of loud and prolonged cheering.

He said:

The life and times of Daniel O'Connell furnish a theme for the grouping, into one subject, of the most remarkable and important public events which history has recorded as occurring at any time between the birth and the death of a public man. I regret that the task of presenting those events, in a condensed and yet luminous form, has not devolved on one more competent to fulfil it in manner satisfactory to so numerous and so enlightened an audience as the one I have the honor to address. If we begin by speaking of the times of O'Connell, how wonderful are the public events which occurred under his eye, and within the range of his personal knowledge. For example, at his birth the Catholic population of Ireland were under the inflictions of the penal code, which had continued for nearly ninety years, and had exercised its baneful and degrading influence on three successive generations. It combined, in its malignant foldings over every portion, so to speak, of the mind and body of the Catholics of Ireland, the strong coil of the anaconda with the subtle sting of the scorpion. It denied them rights of property, rights of domestic order, rights of education, rights of religion—in short it denied them every right except that which cannot be called a right, but a necessity, namely: it aimed at making them paupers, as regarded property; barbarians in reference to science and general education; and either apostates from the Catholic faith, or adherents thereto under the disadvantages both of pauperism and of ignorance.

Details of specific statutes on this subject would be out of place in a lecture necessarily so brief as this must be. But I may express the whole result in the words of Edmund Burke, who was a Protestant, although he never ceased to be a lover of his Irish countrymen. He says:

"It had (that is, the penal code) a vicious perfection. It was a complete system—full of coherence and consistency; well digested and well disposed in all its parts. It was a machine of wise and elaborate contrivance, and as well fitted for the oppression, impoverishment, and degradation of a people, and the debasement, in them, of human nature itself, as ever proceeded from the perverted ingenuity of man."

Under the operation of such a system, which had been in force for more than eighty years, Daniel O'Connell was born in 1775. The sword of the American colonies was unsheathed in resistance against the oppression of Great Britain in that same year. O'Connell, on all public occasions, ascribed the mitigation of the penal code in Ireland to the successful resistance of the American patriots. In 1777, a British army, in its pride of place, surrendered at Saratoga to the once despised, insulted, and calumniated provincials. The penal code was relaxed in 1778. This relaxation was not the striking off of Ireland's fetters, but simply a lengthening by a link or two of the chain which, in its stringent rivetings, had crushed her energies. It gave the Catholics power and dominion over such remnants of property of which they had not been legally plundered during the three previous generations. But still they could not acquire, even by this relaxation, the right to purchase, or, as tenants, hold any freehold interest.

In 1782, England was involved in war with other enemies, whose fleets rode triumphant and unopposed in the British Channel. She required 20,000 seamen and active landsmen for her military service; and, in order to obtain them from Ireland, she relaxed the rigor of the penal code for a second time. By this relaxation she permitted the Catholics of Ireland to open schools for the education of their youth in literature and religion—having made it a crime by her penal laws, during the previous eighty years for any Catholic to teach or to be taught in Ireland or elsewhere. If want of education be a reproach to the Irish in later times, this historical fact will be sufficient to assign the reason. It reverses into a sad and literal sense, so far as the Irish are concerned, the hollow compliment of Lord Brougham to the enlightening genius of the British people, when, proclaiming the progress of education, he announced that the "schoolmaster was abroad"—the schoolmaster had been literally abroad from Ireland during ninety years. His attempt to keep school or teach any person in Ireland, Protestant or Catholic, any species of literature or science, was punished by law with banishment; and if he returned after banishment, he was subject to be hanged as a felon. Under these circumstances, it was certainly the schoolmaster's interest to be "abroad." But if any Catholic child, however young, was sent to any foreign country for education, such infant child incurred a corresponding penalty—that is, a forfeiture of all right to property, present or prospective.

In 1792, the French armies defeated their enemies at every point. The Netherlands were conquered, the cannon of the battle of Gemappe were heard at St. James', and the wisdom of English statesmen induced them by way of conciliating the Irish, to relax the chain of the penal code by an addition of two or three other links of diminished bondage. By this relaxation of the barbarous code, Catholics for the first time in a century, might become barristers, attorneys and solicitors; they could be freemen of the lay corporations; the Grand Jury box and magistracy were open to them, and they were permitted to attain the rank of colonel in the army—nay, some of them were allowed the elective franchise in voting for members of Parliament.

Up to this time concessions to the great body of the Irish people were made under the direct apprehension of danger to the British empire from the States with which she was at war. O'Connell was not yet of age, but already partial freedom, from one cause and another, began to dawn on his unfortunate country. All this he had seen, and part of this he was. But, besides, what astonishing events passed before his eyes, on the stage of European political, civil and commercial vicissitudes during his life! In his times, there was the French Revolution, with all its wide spread and terrific consequences of bloodshed, war, triumphs and defeats. He was still in France as a student, when Louis XVI. was executed on the scaffold. He witnessed some of the horrors of the revolution. He saw the priesthood of his church slaughtered by the sanguinary multitude and the disordered Councils of the State. He witnessed, if not on the spot, the attempt to abolish Christianity, to dethrone God by denying his existence, and to substitute for the worship of the Subreme Being, a symbolical divinity called "Human Reason," an attempt the folly and stupidity of which were almost more than its blasphemy. He saw the Corsican adventurer rush into this chaos and reduce it to partial order—religion renovated—the existence and worship of God re-inaugurated—order re-established amidst what had been anarchy—and this adventurer, as he might at first have been called, rising by the force of his genius, the power of his sword, but above all, the permission of God, to an undisputed sovereignty, not only over France, but almost over Continental Europe.

O'Connell was a sincere Catholic, and the buffetings to which the Church of God during that awful period was exposed, must have affected him deeply. The Deism and political infidelity which had animated most of the Cabinets of Europe for half a century previous to the outbreak of the French Revolution, were now passing under his eye, from the theories inaugurated by Voltaire into their practical results. As an appropriate beginning, the Jesuits had already been suppressed at the period of O'Connell's birth. He lived to see them restored, after the malignity of their enemies had been confounded, and the hostile intrigues of anti-Catholic Cabinets had been broken up and scattered to the winds. The blows of infidelity reached higher marks, and he saw the head of the Church, Pius VI., dragged into exile, and there giving up his great soul into the hands of God. He saw Pius VII, also a captive under the hands of secular power. He saw that British government which professed, and no doubt professed sincerely, such hatred to the Pope of Rome, restoring, at the expense of blood and treasure, the same illustrious exile, Pius VII., to the chair of St. Peter, and to the freedom which is essential to the head of the church. He saw a successor to the throne of Louis XVI., reëstablished in the halls of his royal ancestors, whilst the great conqueror of Europe, who had dazzled the world by his victories, was condemned to spend the last few years of his life as a chained eagle on a desert rock in the ocean. Two subsequent monarchs of France he has seen driven into exile, where they died unacknowledged by the great nation over whom they had reigned.

Confining his views to Great Britain and Ireland alone, he could not fail to have observed a contest between parties, changes in politics, contradictions between principles professed by either in their modification, variation and reversals, according to different times and circumstances. He must have seen the Whigs and Tories of England, like gladiators in a pagan coliseum, struggling each for ascendancy over the other. The very changes in the royal family have been awful lessons of experience, which were exhibited to the steady gaze of Mr. O'Connell, and no man was fitter to comprehend the deep moral and political meaning which they were so well calculated to convey.

But it is not surprising to me that Mr. O'Connell scarcely ever alluded, in his speeches or writings, to these great and terrible revolutions which were changing from year to year the political and social condition of Europe. Burke had indulged philosophically in topics of this kind. But O'Connell had but two loves: the one was the love of his country, the other of his creed, and in his public life these two became one and indivisible.

In a country like the United States, in which there is no distinction of creed—in a country like ours, in which all Christian denominations are equal before the law—and on an occasion like the present, it is far from agreeable to me to allude to rivalships or disagreements between English and Irish, or between Catholics and Protestants, among the Western Islands of Europe.

Yet I think it impossible for any one to conceive a just estimate of the character of O'Connell who will not admit in the circumstances of his life and times the distinction which is happily out of place in the free and independent States of the American Republic. O'Connell is by no means the only patriot of Ireland; but he is the only patriot who combined and absorbed in his policy the sympathetic impulses of religion and patriotism, so far as these regarded the feelings and interests of the great mass of his countrymen. Others, whose names it would be hardly necessary to mention here, have probably excelled him in rhetorical and eloquent periods of patriotism, and entitled to the respect which is due to great talents. But they had not the key of the heart of Ireland—they pleaded and spoke under circumstances which might attest individual devotion, and acquire for them individual fame; but so far as both were concerned, they were but "as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal." O'Connell, as a mere Irish patriot, was throughout his life superior to any of the illustrious names which Ireland has been in the habit of cherishing—be they Burke, Grattan, Curran, or any other of the others. He was not their inferior in statesmanship, jurisprudence or eloquence. But he was their superior so far as their country was concerned; he was their equal or more in patriotism, and had at the same time, by all odds, the advantage over any rivals in opening the avenues to the heart of the Irish people. He was a Catholic statesman—they were Protestant statesmen—honorable men, if you will, but shut out from an approach to the inner doors of Irish life. O'Connell's life, from the commencement of his public career, seems to have been influenced by the memory of two early, but perpetual dreams—the one promising a hope that he would release his countrymen from the bondage which was entailed by what is familiarly called the "Union"—the other that he would be enabled to rescue his fellow Catholic countrymen of Ireland and of the British dominions from the thraldom and degradation to which, before his day, they had been subjected. In accomplishing the former he was disappointed by the brevity of human life and other circumstances. In the latter he succeeded, and during his life he had the happiness to see, mainly through his own exertions, the altars of Ireland, England and Scotland and the colonies of the great British Empire liberated from the degrading thraldom to which by iniquitous legislation they had been previously subjected.

If with all his patriotism he had been a Protestant, he might like others have distinguished himself by most eloquent speeches against the wrongs inflicted by the State, and in favor of the right denied. But then he would have risen to a species of only individual notoriety, and general admiration as a patriotic rhetorician. He would have gone up as a blazing rocket and descended as a mere stick. Catholics of hardly less powers than his have exhibited themselves in this way; and so long as they were supposed to be united to the heart of Ireland by deep and undoubted sympathies, they were successfully sought to be purchased by the hostile Government of their country, or—banished or consigned to execution, Ireland has suffered the loss of many able and profoundly patriotic men devoted to her cause, but who sacrificed themselves or even sacrificed their public interest to the results of their individual aspirations, unsustained by any profound acquired sympathy with the great body of the Irish people.

O'Connell was none of these. He was a statesman as well as a patriot. He understood that in the briefest possible period he could get himself transported to the gibbet at home or to Van Diemen's Land, abroad, for the crime of loving or laboring for his beloved country. But he was too much of a statesman for a blunder like this. He comprehended from the beginning, that in order to effect great and radical changes of abuses in the community they must be made under the progress of more humane ideas, patiently urged and peaceably waited for in the amelioration of the social and political condition of a great State. Hence, with all the natural impetuosity of his individual character, he blended the calmest and wisest philosophy of statesmanship in arranging the relations of the means he intended to employ to the end which he was determined to accomplish. For twenty-three years after his admission to public life, and his recognition as a distinguished legal member of the Irish bar, he seems to have studied out the best means, whereby to realize the dreams of his life—Catholic emancipation and the repeal of the Union with England,

Let us begin with his idea of Catholic emancipation.

O'Connell brought no hereditary influence into the contest. He was not a peer, he was not the son of a peer. But he had the instinctive consciousness of greatness, which talent and immense acquirement were calculated to inspire. He wished to break the fetters that encircled the altars and the limbs of his Catholic conntrymen. The task was immense. The resistance which it compelled him to regard as being necessary to overcome, was simply the united resistance of the English monarch.

The house of Commons—the stolid prejudices of the English yeomanry—the sneers and contempt of the English aristocracy—the hostility of the Government in its various political departments of unspeakable power, namely: the Church by law established, the navy, the military, the cabinet, the judiciary, and, moreover the virulence of the dominant class in his own island, the hesitation and dubiousness of the Catholic clergy in both countries, and the cold apathy of the Catholic laity themselves.

All these obstacles no man was better qualified to comprehend and appreciate than Daniel O'Connell. But real greatness is never to be crushed by apparent obstacles, and accordingly O'Connell, in 1823, commenced the organization of that tremendous power which was fostered and fed and extended under his guidance until, in the year 1829, it had already subdued the apathy of Catholic Ireland, the hostility of Orangemen, the adverse sentiment of the British navy and army, the spurious patriotism of the House of Commons, the wicked obstinacy of the House of Lords, supported by the stolen surplices of the established Church, at the same into objects subserving Sir Robert Peel, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Lyndhurst, and last, but not least of all, the resistance of the British monarch himself, the antiquated vomptuary, George IV. Notwithstanding the inequality of the contest of an individual on one side, and an empire on the other, O'Connell triumphed. And his the lecturer continued, was the only case in history in which such great results have been brought about by means entirely moral and religious. O'Connell's task was at once to excite his countrymen up to a certain point of interest and zeal. And then to restrain and check their impetuosity lest it should go too far, because at any moment, if he had said the word, they were, impetuous people as they are, more ready for battle than for peace. (Loud cheering). The lecturer proceeded to give a brief but comprehensive resume of Mr. O'Connell's career from his entrance into public life in 1800 through the series of years that intervened until he obtained the measure of Catholic emancipation. He alluded to his duel with D'Esterre, his subsequent repentance, his religious character, and his liberal views. By the advice, it was said, of his spiritual director, Mr. L'Estrange, he got up a petition, signed by 800,000 Catholics, and sent it to the table of Parliament, where it reversed the decision of the ministers as to the bill for the relief of the Protestant dissenters, and thus enabled himself and his Catholic countrymen to see their Protestant fellow-citizens of the empire emancipated before they, themselves, were. [Applause.] O'Connell was not a bigot in religion. He was a liberal Catholic. And when he (the lecturer) said a liberal Catholic, he did not wish to be misunderstood; he meant a Catholic who recognizes in every other human being the same right that he claims for himself. [Loud cheers.] But in modern times a liberal Catholic had come to be understood as a man who makes no distinction between one creed and another. [Laughter.] The Archbishop then passed to the consideration of the traits of Mr. O'Connell's private personal character, and, in reference to this, related several instances that had come under his own knowledge. The first time he met Mr. O'Connell was in London, and he was introduced to him with a determination to have a struggle with him on a certain question; that was, on the asperity, as he thought, with which Mr. O'Connell spoke of certain social institutions in this country. He (the Archbishop) told him, after the ordinary introduction, "You are not surprised, Mr. O'Connell, that while you have many friends in America, there are some who are much displeased with certain of your public remarks."

He asked "What remarks?" It was replied that he (the Archbishop) thought he was too severe upon an institution for which the present genrration or the present Government of America was by no means responsible; he meant Slavery. He paused, and said it would be strange indeed if he should not be the friend of the slave throughout the world, he who was born a slave himself! [Cheers.] He silenced me, continued the lecturer, although he did not convince me. In conclusion he remarked, I do not say that Mr. O'Connell was infallible either as a politician or as a statesman; but I do say that, take him for all in all, Ireland never produced his equal before, and, I fear, never will again. And I say further that, be they few in number, or be they many, I, at least, shall ever claim to be one of those who cherish a profound respect, under every point of view, for the illustrious memory of the great Liberator of Ireland. [Vehement and prolonged cheering, amid which the lecturer retired.]

The Cork Examiner has the following with respect to Gen Williams, who as a hero under misfortunes, has been equalled in the magnanimity of success by Gen. Mouravieff, his generous Russian conqueror:—"It is not generally known that the gallant defender of Kars passed a great part of his youth in the immediate vicinity of this city. Queenstown is entitled to the honor of having given him his education. He is, as is known, a Nova Scotian by birth, and was sent to school to Queenstown where he remained six years. The man who taught him, and who little dreamt that he was instructing the defender of a kingdom, on whom the eyes of the world would in after years be fixed, still resides in Queenstown. The fact rests on Gen. Williams, our authority."

The presbyterian Synods of Belfast and Dublin met on the second Tuesday of May, the former in Rosemary-street, Belfast, and the latter in Kilkenny; and the Synods of Armagh, Ballymena and Coleraine, and Derry. On the third Tuesday of the month Dungannon, Coleraine, and Letterkenny, respectively.

There are only 484 paupers in the Clogheen union, being a decrease of 147 from the same period last year. The weekly expense of provisions was £47 14s 6d, and the average cost of each pauper, 1s 10d. The uncollected rates amount to £80, and the balance in favor of the Guardians is £660.

English News.

Of the "Music on the Sabbath" question, in the London parks, the Times says:

"So Exeter Hall has triumphed, and the working population of this metropolis is driven back to the public-house. The Primate and Mr. Baines, with their well-organized army of Sabbatarians, have silenced the bands, cleared the parks, and set the tap once more flowing. Their zeal has its reward. Among the many precious things that are thrown away in this world—things sweet and unsweet—there is nothing of which there is so little thrift as religious zeal. Go into any lane or court of this city, and along the whole way you hear mothers screaming the filial duties into their children, bawling obedience, inculcating quiet at the full pitch of their throats, recommending order with frantic gestures, and peace with blows. At another time you will find virtuous dames enforcing upon one another the Ten Commandments in the copious dialect of calumny and sneer. But it is the same everywhere. Wisdom cries in our streets. Fortiter in modo is everywhere the motto of virtue in these days. What magistrates, what gaols, what punishments, what enormous expense in a State which maintains as a fundamental maxim that for every good purpose 'Heaven's first law' is to let people alone! Our preachers somehow do not get the poor to church, but then they give it them well for not coming. Would they only come, they would hear a good account of themselves. In fact, religion is no longer a thing of grace, a home for the broken-hearted, a deliverance for the captives, or any of those sweet things it was once reported to be; it is all yelling and howling, abusing, stigmatizing, denouncing, anathematizing, sending men the wrong way all round, and for every imaginable reason. On the first provocation you have your cantankerous agitators, with their armies of signatures and three whole columns of pious grimace, screeching against the poor creatures who try to refresh themselves somewhat less coarsely than usual. What a start the world would make for the better if but a hundredth part of all this energy were employed in raising the fallen, in strengthening the weak, in soothing the afflicted, or in doing some sort of positive good, instead of these perpetual prohibitions shouted in the ears of people whose whole life is one of privation and sorrow! But this is pretty nearly all that most religionists and moralists can do. They can attend a meeting and hear one speech more stupid and harsh than another; they can sign a petition in a dozen places, if necessary; but they cannot do good to a single soul, nor supply anything better in place of all the ordinary sources of recreation they are so industriously withholding."

The Saturday Review gives the following deplorable account of the irreligion of the lower orders in the metropolis of moral and enlightened England: "Could the statistics of our existing Sunday observances be obtained, they would prove that in spite of, as many think by means of, this assumed traditionary reverence for a strict Sunday, the lower classes of London are almost to a man alienated from religion. The solid fact remains that the extant religionism of England, as it affects the lower classes, fails, and fails egregiously. The question is not between a Sunday keeping population with crowded churches and meeting-houses, and a possible or probable loosening of such vigorous and operative religious influences. We have to do with a population notoriously, palpably, and almost exclusively irreligious, sullen, apathetic, ignorant, and debased—untouched by the finer feelings, incapable of other than the lowest emotions, addicted to the vulgarest stimulants, unrefined by art, or by the higher susceptibilities of human nature. We have not to deal with a quarter of a million of church goers, but with a quarter of a million of dull, stupid, apathetic bodies, who either spend the Sunday in sottishness or sleep, or in the debasing attractions of the pot-house and the guingettes."

Mr. Russell, who was deputy chairman of the Albion Life Office, and late chairman of the Great Western Railway Company, retired to rest as usual on Wednesday night (14th ult.), and on Thursday morning, shortly after six o'clock, his servant, on entering his room, found him lying on the bed insensible. He had on his dressing-gown, and two pistols lay by his side. The deceased had discharged one of the pistols into his mouth, and the ball had passed into the brain, inflicting a mortal wound. He died at two o'clock. The other pistol appeared to have missed fire. Deceased was brother of the Rev. Whitworth Russell, Inspector of Prisons, who died by his own hand, and by the same means as deceased.

The Morning Post praises the financial abilities of Sir C. Lewis. His statements are so plain that everybody can understand them. Two brilliant Parliamentary orators, Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Gladstone, have been tried in the same office, but the Morning Post prefers the present occupant, simply because he is a steady man of business, doing it as a man of business, without pretension. With regard to the present budget, it is soon summed up. As to taxation, we remain as we were. We did not expect any diminution, and are quite content to escape an increase.

The Daily News remarks that while the Chancellor of the Exchequer does not pretend to make any revelations of novelty, he reveals much that is important and assuring as to the financial condition of the country. Upon the whole, no budget revealing no surplus of income, and announcing no remission of unpopular burdens, was ever better received than that of last night, the upshot of which was to tell us that after the reduction in war estimates, there would still be a deficiency.

The Observer says:—Palmer (the poisoner) is remarkably tranquil, indeed cheerful, under the circumstances. Neither his general bearing nor his countenance exhibit the slightest appearance of anxiety as to the result of his trial, which he does not hesitate to make the subject of conversation, or to express his confidence in its eventuating in acquittal. To such a degree is this felt, that there is a rumor in sporting circles of his having ("made" was the term we heard used) a characteristic bet of £800 to £100 that he shall be present at the Derby.

Sir Henry Berkley, after having passed seven years in the West Indies, and "conducted the government of both colonies with eminent success at a critical period," will, almost immediately, return to England, and receive his appointment as Governor of Victoria.

The English Court of Exchequer has decided that it is lawful for a candidate to pay a voter's travelling expenses to the poll.

King Cole, winner of the Chester Cup in 1838, died last week at Hednesford, England.

The protracted trial of Dr. Wm. Palmer, for the murder of John P. Cook, by strychnine, has been brought to a close. The prisoner is found guilty, and has been sentenced to death. This trial excited an unusual amount of interest in all classes of the community.

The jury retired at 2 1-4 o'clock, P. M., and at 3-35 o'clock, P. M., on their return into court, the prisoner was immediately placed at the bar. He appeared calm and collected, although, by the twitching of his lips, it was evident that his anxiety was at the highest point. He was to be hanged on the 14th.

A work has just issued, entitled "The Scinde Railway, and its relation to the Euphrates valley, and other routes to India." It is from the pen of W. P. Andrews, chairman of the Scinde Railway, and is published by Messrs. H. Allen & Co The author of this volume has a large conception to communicate. His design is to establish a steam and telegraphic communication between London and Lahore.

The Times remarks that the Chancellor of the Exchequer's financial statement will be read with great pleasure. The cost of the war up to 1857 bids fair to come within £80,000,000.

A meeting of Etonians was held at Willis's Rooms, London, to consider the propriety of erecting a monument to the memory of the Etonians who have fallen during the late war, and a resolution agreeing to erect such a memorial was come to.

The Highland Society of Newcastle have resolved to present Sir Colin Campbell with a large and elegantly-chased silver snuff-box, inlaid with gold, as a mark of their high estimation for his distinguished services in the Crimea.

The Daily News, in noticing the forthcoming performance of the Messiah at Exeter Hall, for the benefit of the Royal Society of Musicians, states that upwards of £2,821 were distributed last year amongst distressed musicians and their families by the society in question.

The week ending 10th May, the births of 886 boys and 815 girls, in all 1,701 children, were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1846–55 the average number was 1,521.

Gretna Green will be destroyed by Lord Brougham's new bill, which directs residence of three weeks in Scotland before marriage, and divorces in Scotland will be legalised in England.

The Town Council of Oxford have decided by 19 votes to 11 not to have an illumination for the peace.

European News.

European Summary by the Ericsson and Arabia.

The U. S. Mail Steamship Ericsson, Captain Lowber, from Liverpool, P. M. of Wednesday, May 27, arrived at this port at 11 1-2 o'clock, on the morning of 13th. The Arabia arrived the same day.

The news is again rather meagre. A new Russian loan is spoken of, part of which will be offered in London, but the greater part in Germany. Some of the Hamburg bankers have been invited to St. Petersburg to consult on the terms. From the late seat of war there is little or nothing new; the armies continue to leave the Crimea, and, as they leave, the Russians occupy their places.

The only feature of importance in the British Parliament had been the moving by the Earl of Elgin, in the House of Lords, for copies of the dispatches relating to the sending of troops to the Canadas. Lord Elgin expressed his regret that the present differences with the United States should have arisen, and hoped they would be speedily arranged.

Lord Clarendon stated in reply that Britain had made the amplest apology for the recruiting business, but could not consent to recall Mr. Crampton; that an offer had been made by the British Government to refer the Central American affair to arbitration, which offer had not yet been accepted; that Britain is animated by the most friendly feelings toward the United States, and such would eventually be admitted by the United States, notwithstanding language had been used in the Congress of the United States, which, if used in Britain, would have been denounced as tending to embroil the two countries; and finally, that as Lord Elgin had stated, five minutes conversation between Mr. Marcy and Lord Clarendon would suffice to settle the business, he (Clarendon) would willingly meet Mr. Marcy half way across the Atlantic!

Lord Panmure then stated that the troops sent to Canada were merely to replace those withdrawn during the Russian war. Great preparations were being made for the celebration of peace on the 29th.

From France the intelligence chiefly has reference to the coming baptism of the young Napoleon, and to schemes of his father with reference to the establishment of a Kingdom of Algeria.

The intelligence brought by the City of Baltimore of the recognition of Father Vijil, as Minister from Nicaragua, has not tended to diminish the anxiety with respect to relations with the United States. The London Times, after saying that "it really seems as if demands on the one side and concessions on the other had reached their utmost limit," suggests that the United States should send to London a special Embassador, or accredit the present minister with plenipotentiary powers to settle the dispute amicably.

There is to day a rumor that Lord Elgin is to be sent as Plenipotentiary to Washington to endeavor to arrange matters. Another rumor says that Sir H. L. Bulwer will be the Envoy.

France.

The horrors of war are about to be followed by indications of the progress of "the arts of peace" in the French capital. The Great Agricultural Exhibition promised to be the leading topic of public interest during the ensuing week.

The following, says Galignani, are some few details of the preparatians now in progress at Notre Dame for the baptism of the Prince Imperial. The whole of the church will be decorated with paintings to harmonise with the style of the building, and all the windows filled with colored glass so as to throw a soft light over the interior. The keystones of the vaulted roof and the capitals of the columns will be gilded. In the centre of the transept, and on an estrade approached by six steps, will be placed on the right and left the Legate, the Archbishop, the Cardinals, the Prelates, and other dignitaries of the church. In the centre will be seats for the Emperor and Empress, the Imperial family, the Ladies of Honor in attendance and the Ministers. The altar, which will be placed at the entrance of the choir, will be covered with a canopy, and on either side of the choir will be erected tribunes for the ladies of the high public functionaries. Between the altar and the prie-dieu of their majesties will be placed the baptismal font. The water for the ceremony will be put in the vase of St. Louis (now in the Muse des Soverains) and which will be placed on a table of white marble. The diplomatic body and the Senate will be placed, as usual, in the southern transept, the northern being occupied by the legislative body and the Council of State. On the right and left of the nave will be seats for the public. The orchestra will be placed, as on the occasion of the marriage of their Majesties, over the grand entrance near the grand organ. Outside, in front of the central entrance, will be raised a richly decorated porch, with masts ornamented with flags.

M. Jourdan, a barrister, has been arrested, and condemned to four years imprisonment and 5,000 francs fine, for having sent through the mail, from Brussels to Paris, five copies of a manifesto signed by Kossuth, Mazzini and Ledru Rollin. Other copies of the same document were smuggled into France in the interior of a lobster.

The sous subscription to present a testimonial to the Empress and her child had been brought to a close, and realized 80,000 francs.

Russia.

The Independence Belge gives the following as the substance of the Emperor Alexander's address to a deputation of the citizens of Warsaw:

"My plan of conduct toward your country is—absolute forgetfulness of the past. I am content with the Poles, not merely because, in spite of revolutions and wars in which all Europe has been entangled, they have not forgotten their duties to their sovereign and to themselves, but still more because those of them who have fought in the ranks of my soldiers have displayed a bravery and fidelity which have been proof against all temptation. I shall not cease to love the Poles as my children. Tell this, Messieurs, I pray you, to your fellow-citizens; but tell them also, that the time for idle dreams is at an end. No more of reveries! I wish Poland to be happy, and she can only be so by her union with Russia."

Italian affairs continue as before—in a state of vague uneasiness.

From other parts of Europe there is nothing of import, excepting the circumstance that Denmark is putting her fleet into an effective condition.

It has been announced in the Spanish Cortes that the Spanish Government will take energetic measures to obtain justice in the difficulty with Mexico, arising out of wrongs inflicted on Spanish subjects.

The Admiralty's new invitation for tenders for the Australian mail service is little more than a revival of the old route formerly undertaken by the Peninsular and Oriental Company. Screw vessels of not less than 2,200 tons each are to run between Suez and Melbourne, calling at Point de Galle. The contractors are also to state the additional amount they will require, if the service be extended to Sydney. The contract is to be for five years.

Literary and Artistic News.

The Museum of the Louvre has purchased a thick manuscript folio volume, filled with sketches and drawings by Leonardo da Vinci. It was the property of M. Valeardi of Milan, who sold it for 35,000 francs (£1,400 sterling). In 1797 thirteen other manuscript volumes of sketches, all by Leonardo, were brought from Milan to Paris—one of the clearest gains of Napoleon's Italian campaign. One of them, which was unluckily left at the Imperial Library, was taken possession of by the allies in 1815, and sent back to Milan.

There is now exhibiting in Cork says the Examiner of that city, a painting by a young artist, Mr. John Day, which is deserving of notice as well for the merit it possesses as the promise which it gives of higher achievements. it is a landscape, presenting some of the characteristic featrres of the scenery of Glendalough.

"By that lake whose gloomy shore,
Skylark never warbles o'er.

In the foreground are a group of trees, naturally and forcibly painted, in the middle distance a rustic bridge, and some broken water, with two children playing, which give interest and animation to the scene, the whole being shut in by rocks and wooded hills. There are good hits of painting and the whole forms an agreeable picture.

The interment of the distinguished professor, Sir W. Hamilton, took place, the 12th ult. in one of the vaults at St. John's Episcopal Chapel, Edinburg. The ceremony was strictly private, the company consisting of about forty gentlemen, personal friends of the deceased.

The Nottingham Journal states that a purse, containing £1,000, the result of a public subscription commenced some time ago, has been presented to Mr. Thos. Cooper, the Chartist poet.

The library of the late Professor Hermann, of Gottingen, the renowned philologist, has been purchased by the University of Prague. It consists of 11,000 volumes, of which 4000 are pamphlets.

From the 1st November, 1811, to the 31st December, 1855, or forty-four years and four months, no less than 271,994, books have been published in France. This number includes books written in foreign languages, as well as Greek and Latin authors.

Sir William Hamilton, the great Scotch metaphysician, died at Edinburg on the 5th inst. He had long suffered from paralysis in his right side.

Hugh Miller, the distinguished Scotch Geologist—the author of Red Sandstone and of recent biography—is about to visit America on a lecturing tour.

M. Thiers, the historian, is the greatest print-collector now in Paris.

The New Quarterly Review has a new editor and manager in Mr. Magregor, late M. P. for Glasgow, some time editor of Tait's.

The St Petersburg Academy is actively engaged in translating Ritter's great work, the "Description of the Terrestrial Globe," the first volume of which is ready for publication.

We hear that Mr. Lucas, a barrister, has succeeded the late Mr. Samuel Phillips as literary critic to the Times.

The original M. S. of Scott's Kennilworth has been added to the collections of the British Museum.

Count Gurowski is engaged upon a work to be entitled "Europe and America," discussing and comparing the social as well as the political aspects of the Old and New world.

American News.

The San Francisco correspondent of the New York Herald writes that Bhuddism has been formally inaugurated on American soil. After many disappointments, the Chinese population of that city have imported a wooden god and all the paraphernalia of their worship for the purpose, and erected them as a permanent institution in its midst. The festival, as it was called, commenced on the 4th, and was continued to the 8th, occupying five days. The edifice in which it was held was erected in 1853, and is situated in Pine street. It is of a singular style of architecture, the entrance being through narrow and devious passages, having on each side high walls. A general invitation was extended to the people of San Francisco, through the press, to visit the building, and all who availed themselves of it were treated with politeness.

This, of course, is very shocking to our Christian ideas. But, nevertheless, under our Constitution the Chinese have precisely the same right to worship their idols that we have to pay our devotions to the Infinite Author of Nature, so long as their idolatry does not disturb the civil or the religious privileges of others. And ultimately, this perfect freedom, with which the law cannot interfere except to do mischief, will be the means—aided by mild, Christian persuasion—of weaning the poor deluded Chinese from their debasing idolatry. Persecution and restraint would attach them to it, and inspire them with hatred towards the religion through whose devotees they were restrained or punished.

The mechanical facts respecting the atmospheric telegraph, as given by the inventor are, that the area of a two feet plunger is four hundred and fifty-two inches; the pressure of one-fourth pound on each inch is one hundred and thirteen pounds, and one hundred and thirteen pounds tractive force draws seven tons; a two-feet cylinder, forty miles long, contains about 640,000 cubic feet of air; one pump cylinder, twenty feet in diameter, and twenty feet long, contains six thousand cubic feet—two of which pumps, double-acting, will exhaust twenty-four thousand cubic feet of air at every turn of the shaft; therefore, twenty-seven turns of the same will exhaust the number of cubic feet contained in the forty mile cylinder. The plunger is to go forward without calculable friction, and its touch is not sufficiently great to create objectionable heat.

A destructive fire occurred in Placerville, Cal., April 15th, by which $60,000 worth of property was destroyed. Three hotels—the Placer, Orleans and Iowa—were burned to the ground. Mr. McKean Buchanan was playing Richelieu at the theatre, when the cry of "fire" was heard, and the aged minister of State, forgetting alike his trembling, the austerity of his manner, and the grief of Julie, followed the crowd out, in his robe of office, and worked industriously until the fire was checked. Adrian de Maupraz, and indeed all the members of the company, in the excitement, forgot to change their dress, and appeared in the street, in their gay costumes much to the astonishment and the no little amusement of the crowd. Pulling on the robes, carrying the ladders, handling water, they seemed to be present everywhere lending a helping hand. Their performance at the fire was entirely satisfactory.

Two hundred and four inhabitants of the counties of Mackinaw, Chippewa, Delta, Emmet and Sheboygan, in the northern part of Michigan, have addressed a communication to Governor Bingham, representing the suffering to which they have been subject by reason of Mormon depredations, and praying some relief from the nefarious conduct of their troublesome neighbors. They state that their property is not safe from the encroachments of the Mormons, who, by the convenient process of "sanctifying" chattels, appropriate to their own use whatever falls in their way. Cattle, fishing boats and apparatus, salted fish in barrels, wood, wagons, kettles, lumber, &c., all come convenient to the robbers, and are "sanctified" to their use by force and arms.

The Treasurer's report, read at the Session of the Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, shows that the receipts by contributions from various sources have been $771. The balance on hand last year was $34 50. The expenses were $600 for the salaries of two Professors, £21 for Student's Register, and for a charter, $21 25. The report was adopted, with the exception of the clauses providing for a fund for aiding poor students and for the erection of the building. A resolution was adopted asserting that Millenarianism is in no phase a doctrine of the Reformed Presbyterian Church.

The men belonging to the command of Col. Schlessinger who were taken by the Costa Ricans and executed by them, were made to perform an unwelcome service just before their exit. Having been condemned to death and their fate announced, the victims were compelled to dig their own graves and, when done, made to kneel upon the margin of the trench dug, when they were shot dead—falling readily into the pit their own hands had made.

Hon. John M. Niles, who died on the 3rd ult., bequeathed $20,000 to be held in trust for the poor of Hartford, one-half the income to be applied toward paying the wants of the deserving indigent, and the other half to supply them with fuel. He also bequeathed his library to the Historical Library.

A correspondent of the Albany Register professes to know, that there is now living in New York city a successful merchant, who is an illegitimate son of Napoleon the Great, brought to this country in 1804, when three years old, with his mother, who subsequently returned to France and left him here in the care of guardians, upon whom his support devolved after the disasters of 1815.

The Baton Rouge (La.) Gazette, states that a gentleman residing at Livingston Parish, La., has a very singular plant in his garden, which appears to be a sort of connecting link between the animal and vegetable worlds. The plant is about three feet high, and its stems reach the ground. At the end it is armed with a small sharp substance with which it pierces insects and lifts them into the calyx, where they are grasped by the plant and appropriated to support.

The Andover (Mass.) Advertiser states that Mrs. Mary Cooper, wife of Edward Cooper, got up during the night, while in a somnambulistic state, took a tub, pail and washboard, and went to a pond in the rear of the house, where her dead body was subsequently found. In the early part of the night she awoke, and said she had been dreaming of working hard.

The Ohio river between Pittsburg and Wheeling is getting very low and boats of the second class find great difficulty in navigating between these places. The Western waters do not seem to be in much better condition.

Ratification meeting in the Park.

A great mass meeting of the Democracy to ratify the nomination made at Cincinnati was held in the Park on the evening of the 11th. The concourse at nine o'clock numbered between ten and twelve thousand.

As early as 5½ P. M. the Rotunda of the City Hall was crowded with officers of the meeting and distinguished guests, among whom were the Hon. John E. Ward of Georgia, late President of the Cincinnati Convention; the Hon. Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois; the Hon. Howell Cobb of Georgia, late Speaker of the House of Representatives; Fernando Wood, Mayor of the City of New York; John Van Buren, Esq.; Gen. Ward Burnett of New York; the Hon. Rodman M. Price, Governor of the State of New Jersey; the Hon. Lorenzo B. Shepard, Horace F. Clark, Esq., the Hon. Augustus Schell, and a host of other eminent men from all parts of the Union and the Empire State.

About 7 o'clock, an immense concourse having already assembled, the procession of officers, speakers and guests was formed, and proceeded down the steps of the City Hall to the grand stand which had been erected in front of that edifice, from whose turrets proudly floated the National Ensign and the banner of the State. As the ascort approached, the vast assemblage opened a way on either side, and a magnificent brass band placed upon the platform struck up the Star Spangled Banner, while the air was rent with repeated and enthusiastic huzzas.

Horace F. Clarke called the meeting to order and nominated Lorenzo B. Sheppard for chairman, which was greeted with loud applause.

The following resolutions were then offered:

Resolved, that the Democracy of the City of New-York with one heart and one voice respond to and ratify the nominations made by the National Democratic Convention of Cincinnati, and they offer their congratulations to the Democracy of the Union that its representatives in that Convention have discharged the sacred trust committed to their hands in such a matter as to challenge the undivided approbation of every member of the great Democratic family.

Resolved, That in presenting, to us as the candidate for the Chief Magistracy of the country, the name of James Buchanan of Pennsylvania,—the devoted friend and unwavering supporter of Andrew Jackson,—the able statesman who has stood so clear in every trust and office, to which the voice of the Democracy has elevated him, that the tongue of detraction is silent at his name, they have not only honored themselves and us, but enabled us, even now, to claim victory for the object of their choice.

Resolved, That the gallant Kentuckian, John C. Breckenridge, the pride of his native State, whose personal energy and genius have raised him above all obstacles to a commanding position in the nation, is appropriately placed upon the ticket with James Buchanan, and that the high station to which he will be raised of Vice President of the United States, will only serve to make his eminent talents as valuable to the whole country as they already have been to the people of Kentucky.

Resolved, That we adopt and ratify the platform and resolutions of the National Convention at Cincinnati, in their entire breadth and extent, in the full confidence that the principles they so clearly and fearlessly enunciate will be accepted by every Democrat, and become the guide of his political faith and action.

Resolved, That it is the duty of every Democrat to accept with cordiality the decision of the National Convention—the High Court of Appeal for the Democracy of the Union—with respect to the party in the State of New York; and that we pledge ourselves to give such a majority, in November next, for the candidates of the Convention, as shall restore the unbroken ascendancy in the State of sound Democratic principles over sectionalism and fanaticism.

Resolved, That it is the duty of every National man to forget the differences between parties which have existed in the past history of the country, and to rally with enthusiasm to the rescue of the Republic from the disunion treason which has become so widely spread; and that we extend the hand of fellowship and amity to all, every where, who have declared their determination to unite with the Democracy in their support of Union principles.

Resolved, That we earnestly, and in a spirit of true regard for the real interests of the whole Democratic family, recommend to the State organizations to take such measures as will effectually promote the interest and well-being of the Democratic party, and urge upon the different county organizations the duty of united and joint effort, in order to replace the State of New York in the high position which she has hitherto occupied in the Democratic councils of the nation.

Unanimously adopted with three times three stunning cheers.

John E. Ward, of Georgia, President of the Cincinnati Convention, was introduced. He rejoiced to witness such enthusiasm. The late Democratic Convention (he said) assembled surrounded by dangers and beset by difficulties that never before environed the people of this land. No body of men since those who framed your Constitution have ever assembled with a more important work before them. When we met in that Convention there came from the North and from the South, from the East and from the West, delegates prepared to lay aside all sectional difficulties and adopt a platform upon which they might be triumphantly borne to success in November next. The great question came up, who is to be that giant statesman around whom the eyes of the whole nation are now fixed. They have done their part in selecting Mr. Buchanan, and you must now perform yours.

W. W. Avery, Chairman of the North Carolina delegation, next addressed the assembly. He said that he appeared before the great Democracy of the State of New-York to address them on a momentous occasion. He alluded briefly to the two sections of the party. He stood before them as one who contributed to establish the platform. It was strong enough to hold them and him, and every Democrat from the banks of the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. (Cheers.)

The Hon. Stephen A. Douglas was received with tumultuous and long-continued cheering.

When silence was restored he spoke as follows: When the newspaper shall have transmitted the intelligence to the remotest part of this Republic, that the New-York Democracy are united as one man in favor of James Buchanan and John C. Breckenridge, joy will be imparted to the heart of every national patriot. [Loud cheers.] New-York, the Empire State, now occupies a position which she is entitled to by her numbers, by her wealth, and, above all, by her devotion to those true constitutional State Rights principles, which have always prevailed whenever the party has been united as one man upon the platform adopted in Convention. [Applause.] I came here only when I found that there was a joint invitation sent by Hards and Softs. [Cheers.] Dissolving old matters of difference, and united in one common effort to redeem and save the country from the sectional agitation, strife, and discord to which our opponents wished to consign this Republic.

I have refused for four years to address either section of the Democracy of New-York, or to answer an invitation from either section, for the reason that I resolved, as a Democrat, I would never recognize the propriety of a division among men who ought to be united as brethren in a common cause. [Applause.] But when the joyous news arrived that New-York was a unit, that the Democracy were brethren, that past differences were forgotten, that the Cincinnati Convention had blotted out all remembrance of the past, and only presented the hopes and glories of the future, I was ready to come and extend the hand of fellowship to the New-York Democracy, who are united and ready to march to a glorious future. Already our enemies have abandoned the issues which they so defiantly presented when they first entered the canvass.

Bear in mind, my countrymen, that under the union of all the combined isms—Abolitionism, Free Soilism, Know Nothingism, Maine Liquor lawism, Woman's Rightism, and all the other baneful isms—under that combination they were enabled to throw a majority in the present House of Representatives, which gives them the control of that body. They elected Mr. Banks, a Know Nothing, Abolitionist, a Free Soiler, and Maine Liquor law man, who embodied all the principles, all the prejudices in his own person, Speaker of the House. Their actions show us that they got their present position by falsification and fraud; and they desire to play the same game until after the next Presidential election. With a majority elected by Abolitionists and Know Nothings, why do they not bring forward their bills to redeem their pledge to proscribe every man of foreign birth within the limits of this great Republic? They dare not. They wish to coax and deceive men of foreign birth to vote for the Know Nothing candidates under the name of Freedom, in order that the men chosen may be made instrumental in depriving every naturalized citizen of his constitutional rights.

After a lengthened episode in relation to Kansas, the speaker continued: He who resists the supremacy of the law of the land is an enemy to all free institutions. [Cheers.] The law is the guardian of all that is sacred to freedom, the law protects a man's life, a man's liberty, a man's property, a man's reputation, all that is dear to men in a civilized community. The great characteristic of the National Democratic party, is our attachment to the Constitution and to the law of the land as the people through their representatives shall make it and the Court in its jurisdiction shall explain it. In Kansas the Black "Republicans" place their hopes upon successful resistance to the law of the land.

But, my friends, I find that these Black "Republican" murderers and Black "Republican" newspapers have all begun to shed crocodile tears [laughter and cheers] over mine own humble fate, because they made a Douglas platform and put Buchanan on it. [Cheers.]

I wish to call your attention to a point for a moment, and that is whether it is not a Buchanan platform as well as a Douglas. [Cheers.] They say it is a Douglas, because it indorsed every position that I have taken not only upon the slavery question, and Kansas and Nebraska, but the foreign policy. [Cheers.] That is true, and because it is true, I stand with heart and soul ready to devote all my energies to the success of the platform and the candidate. [Immense cheers. Three cheers for Douglas.]

Mr. Douglas, with much eloquence and point proceeded to show that Mr. Buchanan and himself held the same position on the slavery question; and in conclusion said that there could be no discord when all rested on a common platform. New-York was the Empire State of the Union, and he trusted that in November next she will prove worthy of that consideration which the Democracy of distant portions of this country will reverberate on all sides to her in a unanimous award.

The Hon. Howell Cobb, of Georgia, said he would commence where Mr. Douglas left off. He delighted to extend to the Democracy of New-York his congratulations that they had united, and presented an open front in consolidated opposition to their enemies.

If the Know Nothing Convention which meets to-morrow had their way, they would strike out that provision which provides that no religious test shall be put to any citizen. If it be your faith to preserve that instrument, see to it that you do not encourage a party which advocates political or religious intolerance. Let the National Democrats of all States of the Union assemble together, and as in the days of our fathers, be devoted to the same principles, the same God, and for the preservation of our common country. He would appeal to them in the spirit of patriotism to rally around the banner of Democracy and insure the perpetuity of the Union and the Constitution forever. The opposition will seek to draw off the people from the prominent issues by asserting that there have been outrages in Kansas, but the Democrats should be true to the main issues and ignore those which would die with the canvass.

There was but one answer to all the outside issues, that if the law has been violated, the law will insure a remedy. Ours is a law-abiding party. No true liberty-loving man would cower at the issues presented; and if the united Democracy of New-York would prove true to themselves, the party was sure of success. [Cheers were then given for Cobb, the Empire State, &c.]

Col. Gardiner, of Georgia, was the next speaker. He was followed by Thomas Butler King, who predicted a majority of ninety thousand for Buchanan in November. Buchanan's knowledge, he said, of foreign affairs will insure peace abroad. Of all men who have distinguished themselves in our public councils, he is the representative of constitutional principles. He is eminently qualified to be our first magistrate. [Cheers.] The demonstration to-night will assure the South that the North is in favor of the perpetuity of the American Union. [Cheers.]

Hon. U. M. Churchwell, of Tenn., beheld in both Buchanan and Breckenridge, "fit exponents and supporters of Andrew Jackson."

Hon. C. Carrigan, of Penn., predicted fifty thousand majority in his state for the nominee. After which the meeting was declared adjourned.

This, altogether, was thelargest and most enthusiastic meeting ever held in the City of New-York, and if any have doubted the success of our ticket heretofore they will probably doubt no longer.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, May 24th, 1856.

Burke Roche and his Peerage—Maurice Power "a beautiful lad"—Tenant-Right Banquet at Navan—Speech of the "Member for Mayo"—Moore embraces the Tablet—Helen Faucit—A Head Repeal-Warden and Thackeray—Morgan John O'Connell and Pat Somers—The Archæological Society of Kilkenny—Sadleir's boast—Edmund Burke—Death of Father Strickland—Dr. Cahill—An "inexhaustible fountain of balderdash"—Smith O'Brien's return—Young Ireland still in the pillory—Longford Election—Stritch, Arkins and Reynolds—"Hurrah for Repeal."

Burke Roche, of Trabolgan, isn't to be a Peer after all. Eight of the English judges have pronounced an opinion, in the House of Lords, that the act of Union doesn't warrant the Government in the creation of a barony of Fermoy. The Chief Baron described it as an innovation on the recognized practice of half a century. The London Standard, of Tuesday last, intimates that Mr. Roche's political services will be rewarded with a peerage of less questionable legitimacy. Three cheers for Burke Roche!

That's the end of his patriotism. He's going to stuff his Repeal speeches into a gingerbread coronet, and hide his '82 uniform under a toga of red velvet and ermine. Who'd have thought it would come to this, when the handsome young squire was driving the boys and girls of every county in Munster half mad, in '43, with his national sentiments and dashing appearance? Next to O'Connell, there wasn't a more popular man that year in Ireland. Poor Davis greatly admired and trusted him. Until coming on towards the Secession, he was looked upon as a thorough Young Irelander. All through the "monster meetings" he spoke and bore himself as such. At the Limerick dinner, a couple of months after the release of O'Connell and the other Repeal martyrs from prison, it was Burke Roche who, amid deafening cheers, defended the Irish rebels, calling out in his manliest tone—

"Who fears to speak of Ninety-eight? Who blushes at the name?"

But he's become diseased, like the rest of them, with a love for the good things in the gift of the sweet Lords of Great Britain and Ireland. He has become sensible, and corrects the follies of his less matured years with protestations of devotion to the Government he was once tempted to disown and resist. His conversion has been slower, but is equally as sincere as that of his late colleague, Maurice Power, the Governor of St. Lucia.

Maurice was a beautiful lad! Succeeding O'Connell in the representation of Cork county, he's hardly a week in Parliament before he delivers himself over, body and soul, to the brutal, base old Whigs. As a compensation for his obsequious villainy, he gets this appointment (£2,000 a year) and bids good-bye for a while to the pleasant waters of the Lee, thinking it a devilish rich joke to have made the most out of the miserable jackasses who crowded to the polls, whisked their tails, kicked up their heels, and brayed for him. A rather vulgar fellow was Maurice, and as thorough a humbug as ever made a bad use of his tongue. And what a tongue he had! It was coated, two inches deep, with the finest drawn treacle. It could coax a milestone out into the road, it was so soft and so strong. To perdition, say I, with all such schemers. And to perdition, and the deepest depth of it, the country will slide, so long as it takes to blarney, instead of honest hard talk. Nations don't grow strong upon sweatmeats. Least of all upon such as are made up with Cork butter.

There's been a tremendous great Tenant-right banquet at Navan. The tables were laid in a mill—the property of Mr. Delany. It was the same old bill of fare. The Queen's health was duly honored. So the Nation informs me. Then the Hierarchy and Clergy. Mr. Moore, the Member for Mayo, gave them a spirited speech. He pitched brilliantly into the living slaves, and gave the dead ones an ignominious kick. Thus he deals with the latter:

"It is but a few months since our immortal leader departed upon his last mission, and since then vast machinations that he on earth opposed in vain—subtle schemes that he unravelled in vain, dark conspiracies that he exposed in vain—resources and combinations that appeared as inexhaustible as Hell itself, and which, like the earthworks of Sebastopol, appeared to grow up beneath his mighty fire, the vast fabric of wickedness all fell to pieces in a single morning, and the helpless corpse of one wretched villain, whose crimes to his country and mankind may God in his mercy pardon, with a white face uplifted to the sky, lay before all mankind, the fitting emblem of all that remained of Sadlierism. (Great cheering)."

He regrets to say "that the greater part of the Catholic constituencies of Ireland are already swamped below the lowest level of the lowest tide."

But he wakes up—a happy thought strikes him—he drives home the following question:

"What is to become of the lying Catholic lawyer and the crawling Catholic squire? What is to become of the corporation of 'Cawtholic soles,' whose nature is subserviency, whose god is political prostitution, who, like the toad, feed on the vapors of a dungeon, who cannot breath an unpolluted air? (Loud cheering.) Well, I have thought of that, and, in a spirit of commiseration and Irish hospitality, I offer them an asylum in my own country."

Then we have a pleasant description of the asylum to which he would munificently invite them:

"You have all heard of a certain mountain in Mayo called Croagh Patrick, to which our guardian Saint, of blessed memory, consigned all the venomous reptiles that in his day existed in Ireland! (Cheers and laughter.) As member for the county, I have taken the liberty of ordering the mountain to be got ready for the Sadleirites (hear, hear, and cheers.) I have told the snakes and the toads that they may expect new additions to their happy family, and I hope the vermin will give the new comers a warm reception (great laughter). I trust that Croagh Patrick will receive them as hospitably and keep them as safely as the last consignment he received from St. Patrick, and Mayo will be happy to contribute a representative to keep them company (loud laughter).

What will the exquisitely genteel, pious, and patriotic critics who deprecate the jokes and festivities you indulge in at the Friendly Son's dinner, on Patrick's day, say to this delicate adaptation of a popular legend? Heaven help us! I believe, even in your great republican home, you have just as many scheming hypocrites and conscienceless bigots as we have here amongst us in Ireland.

By-the-bye, Mr. Moore and the Tablet have fraternally embraced. I'd as soon have kissed Dobbin, the informer on Smith O'Brien's trial, as to have made up with these emasculated successors of Lucas. They haven't a drop of red blood in their veins. I doubt if they have a drop of indelible ink in their bottle. Their hearts and their inkstand are leaden deposits of the sickliest water.

Helen Faucit is with us again. She's a glorious creature. I agree heartily with Michael Joseph Barry, that she would be transcendent perfection itself were she an Irish girl. Will you ever forget her Antigone? I am greatly surprised she hasn't been, and doesn't comtemplate going to America for a few months. There's not the least doubt, her success there would be rapid and splendid. Or, to borrow a fine phrase from William John O'Connell, 'twould be "superlative." This distinguished patriot—once the Head Repeal Warden of England—met Thackeray, the other day, on his return from the United States.

"Permit me, Mr. Thackeray," says he, "to congratulate you on your superlative success."

Mr. Thackeray thanked him.

"I understand," continued the eloquent patriot, "that your lectures are very shuparior articles."

Morgan John O'Connell, I see, has very recently appeared as one of Pat Somers' counsel in behalf of the petition brought against Mr. Wynne, the sitting Member for Sligo, by the dainty and immaculate Pat. The petition alleges extensive and gross bribery against Mr. Wynne. The only evidence adduced yet to sustain the allegation is that of Bernard Killoran, who, it seems, somewhat suspiciously travelled up from London with Somers (the dilapidated old swell), a day or two before the election.

Isn't it a pity to see Morgan John drearily beginning, in this way, life over again? He deserved an easier and brighter fortune. Generous, gallant, highly accomplished and social, it would have gratified me sincerely to have seen him high up in the world, with everything about him calculated to bring out and show off to the best advantage the grand qualities of his heart and mind. How the deuce he didn't manage to walk off with some great heiress or another I can't, for the life of me, make out. A universal favorite of the House of Commons, he achieved by his apt, graceful, and telling speeches a foremost position there. Handsome, largely-built, gay and chivalrous in his tone and bearing, he was attractive enough in person, one might have thought, to captivate the Rose of England herself, (whoever she might have been), even though she bloomed in a flower-pot of gold, and was sprinkled with the dews of the Hesperides, out of a watering pot of platina, studded with pearls. His father, John O'Connell, of Grena, was a noble old fellow. I recollect meeting him one day in the Gap of Dunloe (of which you appear to retain the clearest recollection), and thought him the finest specimen of the old Irish gentlemen I ever saw upon horseback. John Francis Maguire, the Member for Dungarvan, was riding with me at the time; and Sir Thomas Esmonde, and a party of English excursionists, were astride of a lot of shaggy ponies a little way behind.

The Archæological Society of Kilkenny held a meeting on Wednesday last in the Tholsel of the "Marble City" of the Nore. There were a number of curiosities handed in, and many more were promised. Mr. John Dunne, of Garryricken, contributed an ancient religious seal, found in the neighborhood of Killamory; the Rev. William Mease, of Stradbally, an English groat of Queen Mary; Mrs. Purcell, a Russian bible plundered in the Crimea; and Mr. Hitchcock made a communication on a Vandalic destruction of a Megalithic circle and rocking-stone, somewhere in Scotland. It's pleasant to think they have leisure for such occupations in the smokeless city of St. Canice. After all, when our political men are so hideously corrupt and so loathsomely cancerous, it's better for the country to turn into the cloisters and caves of the past, dig up old coins, translate honeycombed bones, and bewail the explosion and splintering of the enormous monumental stones of our fathers. It's better to do that than be wasting breath and shillings in attending Tenant-League meetings in Navan, and producing not even a bundle of briars and weeds to compensate for the outlay.

The Kilkenny Journal says that a short time before the catastrophe at Hampstead Heath, Mr. John Sadleir was heard to boast, that on the next dissolution he would send four clerks of the Tipperary Bank into Parliament. I perfectly agree with the Journal, there was nothing wonderful in this threat of the swindler. Over and over again the same thing has been done. Over and over again, have such tools been thrust upon the Irish people by rascals of every color of cloth and profession; and over and over again, has this intelligent, quick-witted, highly discriminating people—"the finest peasantry in the world"—taken the tools to their hearts, and stamped them as "genuine!" The people—the Irish people, here and elsewhere—may fret and complain about their condition, their miseries and woes, the insults and wrongs they've incurred—but they're themselves to blame. They've invariably supported and stuck to the men who cajoled, flattered, sold and betrayed them. They have, just as obstinately, thrown off the men who sacrificed everything—their heart's blood, in fact—to serve and ennoble them. And all, because these men didn't smear their tongues with honey to tell them the truths they should know, and what they should do. They're perpetually howling at England, when it's their own fault—their own fault, and no one else's—that England has had them so long down. I don't mean to talk nonsense, however delicious it may taste, in these letters. I just write as I think fit, though the words may be sour. If you think they will injure the paper, fling me and my manuscript out amongst the "declined." Many an honest man has been hanged before this.

At a meeting of the Bucks Architectural and Archæological Society, held last evening at Aylesbury, in England, Archdeacon Bickersteth made a very feeling and affecting reference to Baconsfield church. He said he often looked on it with regret, for "there lie," he continued, "the remains of Edmund Burke, and yet, with the exception of a tablet, there is no record of that distinguished man." I may be very hard-hearted, but, as an Irishman, I find it difficult to participate in the sorrows of the sensitive Archdeacon. Edmund Burke, like Wellington and Canning, gave all his genius, services, and glory to the powerful land that slandered and wrecked the beautiful island of his nativity and childhood; and were it not that this island, even in her dark day, is made visible to the world by the reflection of his affluent genius, I would as soon think of kneeling devotionally on the steps of Nelson's pillar, or swinging up frankincense before the black image of George the Third on horseback, inside the wall of the Mansion House, in Dawson street, as of honoring by a scratch of the pen this ponderous apologist of monarchy and British supremacy. The world knows he set his face against Grattan, when Grattan went in for the Parliamentary independence of Ireland, and that's enough, in my mind, to disentitle him to a particle of Irish sympathy or reverence.

Your old schoolfellow, the Rev. Mr. Strickland, is dead. The last mail from the Crimea brought us the news of his death. He lies within the British lines on the heights above Sebastopol, making the seventh Catholic priest who has fallen a victim in the discharge of his consoling and holy duties, since the opening of that expensive and horrible campaign. The Roscommon people deeply feel his premature loss. There has been a High Mass for him in Gardiner street chapel, and I understand there will be the most impressive solemnities in his memory at Stonyhurst (where he was educated), next week.

Is it any news to tell you, that Dr. Cahill is still rolling out his huge letters to the Earl of Carlisle? Columns upon columns, with his name on the pedestal, spring up, day after day, heterogeneously encumbered with poetry, bad grammar, and all the stereotyped phrases of the O'Connellite school of orators. He's an inexhaustible fountain of balderdash. "Do you see," he exclaimed one evening at the Mechanics' Institute, "do you see the heavens, spangled with stars by one dash of the Almighty brush!" I was sitting right before him, when, with a grand theatrical shake of his head and long flowing black hair, and a flourish of the white demonstrative wand he held in his hand, he flung out those bedlamite words. Says I to myself, "Nash, the Waterford schoolmaster, never said worse."

The news of Smith O'Brien's return to Ireland is waking up the people. There have been bonfires and other illuminations in Rathkeale and Limerick, and they're talking of a great reception here, congratulatory addresses, and so forth. If I were O'Brien, I wouldn't receive one of them. This same people let him go without one hearty effort to save him the agony of eight years of exile. He was hardly gone, before they threw up their caps and hurrahed with all their might for the public pauper, called a Queen, who had ordered his wife into widowhood, and his children into a fatherless home. For seven years, his name was never once mentioned in a public meeting, nor was there (except by a very few here, and in Cork,) the least kind thoughtfulness or sympathy expressed for him. On the contrary, the vile writers and spouters who were humbugging the country in the name of religion and justice, order and loyalty, and everything else of the sort, were perpetually intimating that O'Brien was a traitor, had sold the country, pretended an insurrection, and was comfortably provided for by the Government out in Australia. I'd never receive an ovation from a people who haven't the heart and pluck to do honor to the memories of Emmet, Tone, and Fitzgerald; who till now have permitted their names to lie under a scandalous and cowardly proscription; and who leap out of their hospitals, fever-sheds, and graves, to run after the carriage of a very ordinary woman, in whose name a world of mischief has been done.

Some of your readers, I presume, won't like this sort of talk either. But, I say again, if it will hurt "THE NEWS," consign it without ceremony or remorse to the bottomless pit of bewildered minstrelsy and patriotism run mad. Open the window—out with it—and contribute it promptly to the bag of the tattered lank cormorants who prowl about Nassau street, picking up, in the shape of bones, pea-pods, slippers and lobsters' claws, the odoriferous vestiges of civilized life.

Young Ireland is still in the pillory. There was a meeting last Sunday, of the Young Men's Society of Wexford. The Rev. Mr. Furlong, of the order of Passionists, delivered a lecture. He conjured the young men to be peaceable, industrious, just, religious, and irreproachable in all things, and, above all, to avoid secret and illegal societies.

"It was by societies of this nature (said the Rev. gentlemen) that our country was brought to the verge of revolution and of being deluged in blood—that Young Ireland was simply Young Italy, which aimed at the subversion of all authority of Church and State. He lived in Italy himself for some time; and he knew the principles of Young Italy. If one happened to offend another, lots were drawn to see who would assassinate the unfortunate individual; and if the person so drawn, showed the white feather, he was assassinated himself. As to Young Ireland, every word that was uttered at their club-meetings in Dublin, was known at the Castle in half an hour afterwards; so that they could not trust each other and became spies and traitors on their own body.

With all possible respect to the Rev. Mr. Furlong, (who on earth is he,) I beg leave to say, he doesn't know much about Young Ireland. He but reiterates the aspersions of such papers as the Telegraph, the ugly offspring of a swindler, who considerately rid the world of his abominable presence. One of these days, when you have time, you must write the true history of Young Ireland, and contradict and shame into contrition, (into silence at-all-events,) the rampant as well as the sneaking slanderers of the party, the Rev. Mr. Furlong, the illiterate historian of Irish politics included.

The Longford election is over. Mr. Queen's Counsel Hughes is returned to Parliament. His principles are those of Judge Keogh; his success will be similar; there's a big, full-bottomed wig looming before him in the future, and its not his fault if he doesn't drive his head into it. The enthusiastic Repealer, Andrew Russell Stritch, seconded his nomination. Stritch is just as deplorable a creature as Tom Arkins, or Reynolds, or any of the other old Corn Exchange hacks—indeed, he's infinitely more offensive to the eyes and nose of an honest national man. Arkins and Reynolds never pretended to be anything but out-and-out O'Connellites. Stritch was perpetually itching to keep on good terms with the young and old parties, at the one and the same time. The former threw him off, for he neither had cultivated intellect or courage; the latter thought him too temporising and shifting; even for them, he was too unreliable. So he tacks on to a third party—a tertium quid, as O'Connell would say—and reverses his paddles to Whiggery. From this and other facts of an equally virtuous aspect, you will infer the healthy political condition of Ireland at present, and, of course, be highly encouraged. Hurrah for Repeal!

KILMAINHAM.

Another Letter from Dublin.

DUBLIN, May 31st, 1856.

A Tasmanian Alderman—The Phenix Park—Grand Review—Wellington Testimonial—Illuminations—The Liffey on fire—John B. Dillon in his wig and gown again—Parliamentary doings—Crime and Outrage Bill—Maiden Assizes—White Gloves—Peace, Law, and Order—Moral condition of England—Opinion of the London Leader—O'Doherty in Dublin.

Walking down Sackville street, a few days ago, I was much surprised to meet Alderman Phillip O'Reilly, of Hobart Town. You recollect O'Reilly. Transported some eight years for Molly Maguireism, he received shortly after landing a ticket-of-leave. By industry, and, I must say good conduct, he soon established himself in business, and, as the result, has now returned to Ireland with a little fortune. Whether he purposes to remain here permanently, or to return to what he terms his "adopted country," I know not. For some time O'Reilly was the bosom friend of Balfe, the informer. Of late Balfe has fallen so low, that even O'Reilly discards him. His masters, the very government officials, now repudiate the miserable wretch.

Yesterday all Dublin was in Phenix Park to witness the review in celebration of the Queen's Birth-day and the Peace. What a glorious park it is! London with all its wealth, Paris with all its magnificence, Vienna with all its splendor, St. Petersburgh with all its grandeur, has nothing to compare with it. At night there was a splendid display of fireworks from the mound on which stands the Wellington testimonial. Was it kind, was it generous, was it courteous towards "our gallant ally" to have chosen such a site? At the close of the display the entire monument from base to summit was illuminated—a grand spectacle! Conspicuous among the victories of the great Captain inscribed upon the pillar, there shone forth in letters of dazzling flame the word—WATERLOO! What earthly connection is there between Waterloo and the Malakoff, to say nothing of the Redan!

In the city, the government offices—the whole affair you know was governmental exclusively—were brilliantly illuminated. Thus you see the great Russian war begun in gas, in gas too has had its most appropriate termination.

John B. Dillon, one of the men of whom Ireland in this day has most reason to be proud, has returned to reside permanently I believe amongst us, and resume the practice of his profession. On Monday next I understand he will be once more found in the Hall of the Four Courts wigged and gowned.

"Cedant arma toga"

The Parliamentary proceedings of late have been very dull. I perceive, however, that it is proposed to renew the "Crimes and Outrages (Ireland) Bill." This, as you are aware, is an Arms Bill under another name. Its object is to prevent the acquisition of arms by the people of this country. What excuse (for there must always be an excuse) the English government can invent for renewing at the present season this unconstitutional and coercive measure, I am rather anxious to see. Ireland during the last two years has been most beautifully loyal. She has contributed more than an average quota of scamps to the Crimean army; she has organised a fine militia; she has illuminated; many of her sons, in the exuberance of their loyalty have forsworn their cherished principles; nay, some of them—the O'Connell's to-wit—the very principles of their fathers; and yet, oh! ingratitude—Ireland is to receive an Arms Act, a Coercion bill, a "Crime and Outrage bill," forsooth! 'Tis really too bad. But apart from the absence of any rebellious spirit, Ireland at present affords the example of a country almost wholly free from crime of a serious character. At the late assizes, white gloves were presented to the judges in either three or four counties, and everywhere the calendars were extraordinarily light. There is not a single prisoner in jail in Tipperary awaiting trial at the forthcoming assizes. Peace, law and order, universally prevail. On the other hand, crime of the most revolting character is prevalent in England. Unnatural mothers there pursue infanticide as a trade. Sporting physicians there deal in poison as a pastime. Murder walks abroad in the day-light, and strikes down his victims alike in the quiet country by-way, and the crowded alleys of the great towns. The poison-cup is passed around from hand to hand; from friend to friend; from sister to brother; from parent to child, from child to parent. Good God! such is the country which rules and governs us, disarms and coerces us. Do I exaggerate! Palmer, of Rugeley, has been found guilty—but is Palmer's case an isolated one! Take an English authority, the London Leader:

"Is Rugeley an entirely exceptional case! Is there anything in the configuration of the country in that part that should make the people monsters, in comparison with their neighbors! Is the water atrociously brackish! Do the people feed entirely upon pig's flesh, or on sausages of more malignant material? Have the virtues of the population been poisoned out of them by the adulterations of the grocer, the druggist, and the butcher! There is, in truth, nothing to establish the peculiar blackness of Rugeley in the moral map of England. Yet, what are the facts? We find that many of the inhabitants are accused, and by each other. Here is the respectable surgeon, and what is the story told of him by his neighbors! That his father-in-law disappeared mysteriously; that a visitor died under circumstances which rendered a Coroner's inquest necessary; that his wife was poisoned; that his brother followed the wife, his boon companion followed both, and his servant was to have been in the same retinue. Seven children have disappeared—seven, although his wife had but four."

And again:

"Yet again, we deny that the Rugeley is peculiarly criminal: it is only characteristic of English society, in the adulterations of its trade, the treacheries of its private relations, the subornation of its insurance, and the prostitution of its most sacred guarantees."

We hear of no Arms bill, no Crime and Outrage Act for England!

K. I. O'Doherty is at present in Dublin. He looks remarkably well. He will return soon to Paris to complete his medical studies. John Martin is expected here in a few days.

KILMAINHAM.

Irish News.

The Dublin Freeman gives the following account of ingenious robbery:—It appears that for some time past extensive robberies had been committed in the steampacket office stores, Northwall, notwithstanding the most rigorous precaution on the part of the several companies. At length the depredations became so extensive that it was found necessary to call in the assistance of the police. Yesterday, acting-Inspector Ryan, of the G. Division (the detective force), instituted inquiries into the matter, and after a vigilant investigation, he proceeded to a certain house, where he arrested a man and his wife, whose names we for the present omit, for having in their possession several bales of goods, consisting of cloth, silk, &c., valued at £200, for which they could not account, and which, it is stated, were purloined from the steam packet companies' stores. The prisoners will be brought before the magistrates this day. The mode by which these extensive robberies were effected is as follows: The male prisoner, it was supposed, secreted himself in a case shaped like a press, for which he had a key to open a lock on the inside This case, and several others of a different shape, were duly shipped from English ports to Dublin, and when landed on the North-wall were placed in the several steam-packet stores, to the address of the male prisoner. It is supposed that at night, when the stores were locked, he used to come out of the case in which he lay concealed, and stow away the goods into the empty cases, which he caused to be carried away the next morning. His supposed mode of avoiding detection was very clever. He used to wait until the porters employed in bringing goods in and out of the stores were busily engaged, when he availed himself of his opportunity and slipped from his place of concealment. The extent of the robberies committed by this means is said to be very great.

Under the head of "Movement in favor of the Irish Language, Irish History, and Ballad Poetry," an exchange gives us the following: "On Wednesday se'nnight a lecture was delivered, in Dublin, on the above subject, by Dr. O'Brennan, author of "Ancient Ireland." On the motion of S. Lalor, Esq., seconded by J. C. Campion, Esq., the chair was taken by John Bagnall, Esq. The citizens of Dublin got a rich literary treat on that occasion; one of the most lucid and interesting lectures delivered in the metropolis for some time past, was given by Doctor O'Brennan. The topics, so ably handled by the learned gentleman, possessed great interest for every Irishman—the lecturer's defence of the vernacular—his clear and lucid reasoning as to the early possession of letters by Ireland, 1,000 years A. C., the antiquity and veracity of her manuscripts and chronicles, Ollamh Fodhla, and the parliament of Tara, its beautiful system at so early a period as more than 900 years A. C., his description of the hall, the royal residences, the historical and bardic investigations, the Ternan chiefs, Fion MacCumhaill, Goll, Ossin, &c.—all these points kept spell-bound the highly respectable and numerous audience, which comprised the elite of the city, as well Protestant as Catholic clergy. The deep silence, interrupted with an occasional outburst of applause, was evidence of the appreciation of the lecture, and of the deep interest they took in it. The language was such as to win the esteem of all. After the conclusion of the lecture, T. C. D. Lyons, Esq., moved a vote of thanks to Dr. O'Brennan, which was seconded by Charles Grace, Esq., and carried by acclamation. The learned lecturer having returned thanks in a neat and appropriate manner, the meeting separated, greatly pleased with the eloquent disquisition.

The Limerick Observer of the 17th ult. furnishes the following obituary. February 8, at his residence, Geraldine, Sydney, after a short illness, to the inexpressible grief of his family, Garrrt Hugh Fitzgerald, son-in-law of the late Alderman D. F. G. Mahony. He was formerly Captain in H. M's 37th Regiment; was Mayor of the City of Limerick in 1838, and was City Treasurer for several years. He also filled the office of Vice-Guardian for some time, and in all the positions of life in which he was placed, he evinced untiring zeal and strict integrity. An effectionate husband, a fond father, a constant friend, and a kind hearted, benevolent man, his death is a source of poignant affliction to his sorrowing relatives and a subject of deep and sincere regret to a large circle of attached friends. Captain Fitzgerald was universally esteemed and regarded by all classes of his fellow-citizens. In private life his kind disposition and frank and affectionate manners attracted to him every one who came within the fascinating influence of his charmed circle. In all the vicissitudes of this varied life he met its crosses with the fortitude of a true man, and the resignation of a Christian, placing his confidence humbly in the Sovereign will of Providence. His remains were interred at the new Cemetery, Sydney, and his funeral was numerously attended, giving ample proof that, short as had been his residence in the country of his adoption and in a foreign land, he had earned the cordial approbation and the personal esteem of his fellow-citizens.

An attempt has been made to upset the Belfast and Ballymena Railway train; a local paper says: As the mail-train, which leaves Belfast for Ballymena at eight o'clock, was within three miles of the latter town, it received a shock from a large stone, which had been placed on the track by some malicious persons as yet undiscovered. The stone, which was about three or four feet in length, was cut in two parts by the wheel of the first carriage of the train, and whirled off the track to some distance. Fortunately, the only damage that was done was the smashing of the step-board belonging to the first carriage,

On Saturday, the 10th inst., the Pentecost "Retreat" commenced in Maynooth. On the following Wednesday Tonsure and Minor Orders were conferred by the Archbishop; on Thursday, Sub-Deaconship; on Friday, Deaconship; and on Saturday the 17th instant, Priesthood. The names of those who received Priesthood are as follows: Rev. James Connolly, Dunboyne student, Elphin; Rev. Pierce Power, do., Waterford; Rev. Phillip Connolly, do., Clogher; Rev. Patrick Bambrick, Elphin; Rev. Hugo Cullen, Raphoe; Rev. James Madden, Clonfert; Rev. Peter Clarke, do.; Rev. Alex. Kinsella, Ferns; Rev. Thomas Bergin, Ossory; Rev. Peter Kallegh-an, Meath; Rev. Edmund Walsh, Ossory; Rev. Michael Kavanagh, do.; Rev. Gerald Brennan, do.; Rev. Richard Rocheford, Ferns; Rev. Michael Waters, Meath; Rev. Henry M'Gee, Armagh; Rev. Dominick Groghan, do.; Rev. Peter Everard, Meath; Rev. John Walsh, Ossory; Rev. Patrick M'Donnell, Kildare; Rev. Joseph Dumphy, Ossory; Rev. David Walsh, Cloyne; Rev. Thomas M'Donough, Tuam; Rev. John Loftus, do.; Rev. Patrick Flatly, do.; Rev. James Meagher, Killalloe; Rev. Matthew Leonard, Achonry; Rev. Andrew Campbell, Castlenock; Rev. Michael Cody, do.; Rev. P. Aloysius Walter, O D C.

Of the Fermoy peerage case, the London Standard of the 20th ult. says: Eight of the learned judges, viz., Alderson, Crowder, Williams, Erie, Wightman, Coleridge, Pollock, and Cresswell, pronounced an opinion on Tuesday in the House of Lords, that the act of union with Ireland did not warrant the government, on the extinction of three peerages, in the creation of a baron of Fermoy in favor of Mr. Edmund Burke Roche; several of whom, including the chief baron, intimated that it was an attempted innovation on the recognized practice of half a century. Mr. Baron Bramwell and Mr. Justice Willis entertained the contrary opinion. The accusation against Lord Palmerston of having advised her Majesty to make an unauthorized exercise of her prerogative may, therefore, now be taken as sufficiently established that Mr. Roche is not a peer, for although there has been an extinction of an Irish peerage since the issue of the patent, that will not make a creation good which it appears was bad at its inception. If Mr. Roche's political services are to be rewarded with a peerage, there must be a new creation.

A few mornings since (says the Limerick Reporter), as Signor Bosco was passing through a street in Clonmel, he stopped to examine some fine eggs a countrywoman offered for sale. Taking up one he coolly removed the top, when lo! a sovereign glittered therein—another, and a similar golden yoke appeared. He then desired to purchase the entire, and offered a large price for the basket, but the woman refused to part with (as she conceived) her treasure, nor could a tempting price alter her determination. She tried the experiment herself subsequently, it is needless to say with what result; but the Signor having presented her with a gratuity exceeding her loss, compensated her to some extent for the disappointment she had undergone. Bosco and Rinoldi, both magicians, at last advices were holding trials of skill at the Cork Theatre.

We deeply regret says an Irish paper being obliged to announce the sad intelligence, that the Rev. Father Strickland has been added to the victims of war and its concomitant, pestilence, in the Crimea. He is, we believe, the seventh Catholic priest whose bones lie buried within the British lines on the fatal heights before Sebastopol. The Rev. Mr. Strickland's name is imperishably connected with the mission of Baroda, a district of India, almost unheard of by the great men of the British public, before his charitable efforts to raise funds for the mission where, young as he was, he had already spent some years of his life. He was singularly gifted by nature. Not only were his attainments vast, and his talents considerable, but his person was remarkably handsome. He was one of the few priests who wore the beard. He was a native of Roscommon.

On Thursday, says the Limerick Reporter of the 16th ult., the West York Rifles, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel the Honorable E. G. Monckton, were inspected by Major-General Eden, commanding Clonmel District. The men were put through several manœuvres, which they executed with skill and precision, and the General expressed himself much pleased with the efficient state of discipline in which this gallant regiment appeared. He also inspected the depot of the Tipperary Artillery, under command of Captain Kellett, and of the Tipperary Light Infantry, commanded by Captain Bell. After the inspection the General examined the barrack accommodation, and went through the several rooms, the orderly condition of which he pronounced highly satisfactory.

Saunders' News-Letter (Dublin) informs us that the important office held by the late Sir Edward Tierney, Bart. (the Crown Solicitorship of the north-west circuit) will be divided and given to three gentlemen. The salaries of each will average £800 a year, and two of the situations thus created, it is understood, have been already given away. Mr. Geale, whose sister is married to the Earl of Fortescue, and who is one of the solicitors to the Poor Law Commissioners, gets one of the appointments, and the second will be filled by Mr. D. Fitzgerald, the brother of the Attorney-General. There are very many applicants for the third, which is as yet vacant, or assumed to be so.

The King of Denmark has conferred on Paul L. Munster, Esq., of Belfast, the Knighthood of the Order of Danneberg, in consideration of his activity as Danish Consul at Belfast for a lengthened series of years. Mr. Munster is an eminent merchant, largely engaged in the Baltic Trade.

Mr. William Fitzgerald, of George's street, Limerick, son of David Fitzgerald, Esq., has canvassed the Dock Ward, for the Aldermanic gown, which we understand Alderman Russell has signified his intention of immediately resigning.

H. J. Bridgeman, Esq., late Accountant of the National Bank at Loughrea, has been promoted to the management of the Moate Branch.

Some drunken county Limerick militiamen kicked up a desperate row in Ellen street, lately, and threatened to do mischief were it not for the arrival of the police.

There has been no application for admission to the Irish Bar during the ensuing term—a circumstance which has not occurred for the last quarter of a century.

The report read at the annual meeting of the Provincial Bank of Ireland, was of a favorable character in respect to the trade and commerce of Ireland, and the profits of the bank had been larger than in any previous year, amounting to £99,370.

Three general reviews of the troops, at which the Lord Lieutenant will attend, are to come off next month at the Curragh.

(Irish News Continued on page 172)

Answers to Correspondents.

Our generous Philadelphia friends must forgive us for having delayed acknowledging until now the address they forwarded us on the 25th of last month. The delay arose from a desire on our part to reply fully, and in fitting terms, to the address in question. Having waited until this late moment, with the hope of finding a spare hour which would enable us to give effect to our good purpose, we are compelled to break silence, abandon in despair the expectation we cherished, and throw ourselves on the warm forgiveness of our friends. A newspaper (even though it only be a weekly one) keeps its editors in perpetual motion. It is a remorseless tread-mill. There's no pause for them. This, we are sure, will promptly secure us entire pardon for the want of courtesy, kindliness or gratitude we have been apparently guilty of. The sentiments contained in the address—eloquently expressed as they are—very gratefully affect us. We feel proud in having won the friendship and good opinion of such men as Messrs. Charles McDonough, Fagan and Loughlin, (whose names, on behalf of many others, are subscribed to the address,) and so long as we retain that friendship and good opinion, we shall care very little about the cowardly malevolence to which the address alludes, and be the more strongly confirmed in our old course of public action. Our friends, however, will heartily excuse us, (we're sure they will,) if we respectfully decline publishing the address. As much as possible, we are desirous to avoid making the News the organ for the promulgation of anthems in our own praise. Our friends will at once perceive the propriety of this feeling, and say we do right in withdrawing their eloquent attestation in our favor from the public gaze and lodging it in our private archives, where it shall be most gratefully and proudly treasured.

One of the editors of the News has received from a member of the House of Commons a very interesting letter, from which we give the following extract. There's a republican spirit slyly and satirically running through it:

"I had not heard before you informed me, that the Queen had been invited to visit her Canadian subjects. I agree with you, however, that she is not likely to do so, for some time, even though her reception in the States might be so flattering as to induce her to settle herself there with the Prince, as the wife of an American citizen. I believe that would be nearly as probable as that your countrymen would become so enamored of her that they would submit themselves again to be subjects of her crown. It may not be uninteresting to you, to hear in the mean time, something more of this remarkable personage. About a month ago, a message came from her to Parliament, announcing the ratification of the treaty of peace, on which occasion, as is usual, both Houses, as they are called, went up to her with addresses of thanks and congratulations. It being the privilege of members of the House of Commons to go to the Sovereign with addresses in ordinary costume and without presentation; and as I approved of the peace, tho'I did not of the war, I went up this time with the House. Two o'clock in the afternoon was the hour appointed for the Commons. The Speaker went in his robes in his state carriage, and attended by his officers in their proper costume. The other members, about a hundred, went, as they pleased, in carriages or on foot, in un forms, court dresses, or as most of them did, in their usual walking dress, partly for convenience, and some more exact in order to maintain their rights. The Lords had gone before us, and when they retired, we were ushered into the royal presence in the Throne room in Buckingham Palace. The Speaker, a fine tall gentleman above six feet, stood before Her Majesty, who was seated, and the members stood on each side and behind the Speaker, whilst he read the addresses, which, when concluded, he handed on bended knee to the Queen, who handed it to one of her Secretaries of State in attendance, who gave her the answer, which she read and delivered to the Speaker. He and we then made our bow, and walked backwards the whole length of the room, until the door closed upon and shut out the view of the Majesty of England."

The following hymn is not without a gentle and a truthful grace:

[For the Irish News.]

PRAYER.

To thee, O Mary, full of grace,
I turn in deepest grief;
Protectress of man's feeble race,
Obtain for me relief.
Virgin, with whom the Lord hath dwelt,
E'en from thy natal hour!
Through Thee are all his mercies dealt—
Aid me with thy soft power!

Brightest of all round God's high throne,
Compassionate and meek!
No child of thine hath e'er been known,
In vain thine aid to seek.
Mother, whose pure and gentle soul
Hath borne grief's keenest dart,
Pray that this dark cloud from me roll—
This anguish may depart!

But if God's wisdom hath decreed
The chalice I must drain,
Ask that this heart, resigned, may bleed,
And patient be its pain.
That unto Calv'ry's mournful steep,
In spirit I may go;
By Jesus' cross, with thee to weep,
Forgetting earthly woe!

Refuge of grief! in trusting love,
My prayer ascends to thee;
And thou, all women blest above,
Wilt hear and pity me.
Thy tender care, Christ's dying breath,
Unto his children gave—
Guide us in life—through shades of death—
To peace beyond the grave.

E. S. E.

It's amusing to see the multitude of letters lying on our desk, exhibiting the most comical varieties of writing and spelling, and all containing (what the writers modestly suppose to be) the most patriotic and valuable suggestions. One letter, for instance, suggests that we publish passages from Butler's Lives of the Saints—two columns every week. Another (with a very greasy red wafer) recommends us to clap a wood-cut of a Shamrock, a Wolf-dog, a Harp, or a Bag-pipe, on our title-page. A third document implores us (with innumerable new words, which have never yet been seen in any Dictionary, and never shall we presume) to come out "with a thunderin' voice, and raise the Sunburst once more." The fourth letter we tore open (it looks as if written with the feather instead of the nib of the pen,) complains that we don't give enough deaths, births and marriages. These letters are gratefully acknowledged and usefully disposed of. As long as they come in, we shall never want anything to light our pipe with.

We insert the following question and answer:

"Dear Sir: Will you inform me, through the columns of your paper, the first steps necessary to gain an entrance upon the Dramatic Stage? Supposing you to be acquainted with the ins and outs of stage life, I thought I would trouble you for the necessary information. Your answer to the above will be gratefully received by a "READER."

CAREFUL study and gook education should be the basis. Practice, in some of the numerous private dramatic societies might do good. Should adequate success follow these preliminaries, present yourself to Mr. Parsloe, dramatic agent, Burton's theatre, to obtain a country engagement, (in order to get familiarity with the stage,) but do not expect more than trifling characters and small wages for a long time to come.

DECLINED. An Ode on Oysters. Whoever writes in praise of oysters at this season, must be a hard-shell. A few Stanzas on Catawba, by a Returned Delegate. The strength of the vintage is evident. Farewell to Crampton. A miserable jingle of the sauciest brass. A Dirge on the Ruins of the Gothic Hall, Broadway. The Gothic is a pointed style. Your's is as blunt as a nine-pin. A Song for the King of Algiers. We want none of your nursery rhymes. On the Launching of the Niagara, by Ben Bolt. Ben deserves the stocks. Let him walk the plank. An Acrostic on the Big Tree of California, by Timothy Barker. Cut your stick, Tim.

A Monk of Kilcrea wants to know if Smith O'Brien's eldest brother isn't Lord Inchiquin. Yes—that's his present title. Until within the last three years, he was known as Sir Lucius O'Brien, of Dromoland Castle. His father had a seat in the Irish House of Commons the time the Union was debated, and voted against the measure.

In the friendliest way, we beg Dr. Cane, of Kilkenny, to accept our cordial acknowledgment of the copies he sent us, the other day, of the publications of the Celtic Union. We shall write to him in a few days.

RECEIVED—"On Smith O'Brien's Return." "Nial," you were mistaken; the allusion was not meant for you. We cannot say yet, however, whether we can use your communication. We are overpowered with contributions and shall come to you in turn.

SHINE BRADSTONE, Co. Cork, Ireland,—We print one of your favors to-day, and probably shall use some of the rest.

Michael Dunne asks us if Lord Norbury didn't always wear top-boots. So we've understood.

Mr. H. McCAWLEY has received our written authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "IRISH NEWS," throughout the Canadas.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 21, 1856.

Sermons in Stones—Burke and Grattan.

The Commons of Great Britain have voted niches in their new palace to the statues of Curran and Burke. In that superb pile of building, the public men and Ministers of England, strangers from all parts of the world, the envoys of prosperous republics and fortunate princes, will look upon the likenesses of two great Irishmen, and in imperishable sculpture recognise the consummation of their renown. The Queen who carries the sceptre of St. Edward, in her sumptuous diadem and robe, with her glittering crowd of lords and ladies, and heralds in grotesque gorgeousness announcing her approach, will pass beneath those statues, reminding her of a nation which is beautiful even in the tomb.

In less noisy and dazzling moments, there may come a visitor in humble garb, with no official consequence, but with a lofty spirit and inspiring memories, to meditate upon the story of those wondrous orators. Chance may bring him there, or a thoughtful love of the great dead, or, perhaps, a deep though sad desire to renew those feelings which the drudgery, gay giddiness, or tumult of the world may have subdued. It may be a son of one of those brave republicans who poured out their blood for Ireland on the battle-fields of Wexford and Kildare, or on the scaffolds of Dublin, who will thus pause in the presence of genius, philosophy and patriotism, eternalized by art. If so, it requires no divination to interpret the sentiments and emotions of the stranger.

The statue of Edmund Burke will affect him little. Coldly, though somewhat proudly, he will contemplate for a moment the graven image of a man whose services, splendid and prodigal as they were, sustained the credit, the monarchy and fame of England. The champion of India, exposing her wrongs and spoliation, and invoking chastisement on those who plundered and defiled her, he will be thought of with the pity of the philanthropist and the enthusiasm of the scholar. The powerful friend of the chained Catholics of Ireland, the foe of illiberality and fanaticism, the stately mediator between England and America, the grandeur of his heart, rhetoric and wisdom, cannot fail to elicit from all men, in all ages, a tribute of profound applause. But, at the foot of his statue, this is all the Irish heart will spontaneously contribute to his memory.

With Ireland he was no more identified than were any of the great Cromwellian squatters, the Wellingtons of a later, or the Palmerstons of the present day. Laborious and profound, meditative, methodical, composed in spirit and austere in morals, he had little of the impulsive brilliancy, the quick aptitude for public duties and displays, the generous enthusiasm which, with all his irregularities and vices, won for Sheridan the heart of the people, and arched his death-bed with a glory through which the tears of thousands fell prompt and full. A Celt, with all the characteristics of the Celt subdued within him, he trained himself to be a Briton, and succeeding, has become one of the supreme authorities of Parliament, and a trophied pillar of the empire whose ascendancy he amassed the treasures of his vast intellect to consolidate. His exclamation in reproof of Grattan, when Grattan with his sword by his side moved the Declaration of Irish Rights, never can be forgotten. Scornfully reiterated by O'Connell, until it came to be a familiar sentence on the Irish tongue, the name of Edmund Burke, in the mind of the Irish race, will ever be associated with the scheme of their provincialism, beggary, and dishonor.

Far different the feelings which the statue of Curran will excite. The child of the Irish Rebel will at a glance recognize the rugged features, the fierce powerful eye, the awkward restless frame—the dwarf agitated by a giant's soul—which passed through so many terrors, a tower of strength to the weak, a brave refuge to the hunted, a storm of vengeance to the enemies of Ireland. All the splendors of his genius and beautiful nature; his wit, poetry, sarcasm, the plaintive music or the appalling thunder of his varied eloquence; his intense love of Ireland, brave fidelity to her when she was down and trampled, haughty scorn of the beggarly condition to which they would reduce her; the sorrow which used to break from his heart when all was over with her, and the grave of his poor child, in the little grove near his garden, ever and anon reminded him of the fate that had overwhelmed the country; all will crowd back—a day of darkening and breaking clouds, occasional sunshine, the ripe music of birds, the rush and play of mountain waters, ruins, flowers, old trees, calm twilight and holy stars—all will crowd back upon, and like a new creation vitalize his mind.

The town of Newmarket, where, as he said himself, he was a ragged little apprentice to every sort of idleness and mischief; that miserable room of his in London, where an economy prevailed, as comical as that which Sir Joshua Reynolds blushingly witnessed in Oliver Goldsmith's room, in Green Arbor court, one morning, and where poor Curran, having no pleasanter thing to do, thumbed the Jew's harp over his dead neighbor once every day for three days successively; his magnificent speeches, phillipics and defences, flashing and thundering along the dark ridge of Irish history, like a chain of volcanoes along the Pacific; that ruined old house in Kevin street, where night after night he sat in his drab gown and cowl, with the horn-spoon and cork-screw dangling at his side, at the head of the Monks of the Screw, a convivial club of the choicest and grandest spirits that ever met together in any age or land at the social board; his heroic labors all through the dark and evil days, when, as Davis has with such solemn beauty said, he went forth inspired by justice, mercy, love and genius, and commissioned by Heaven to walk the waters with the patriots, and lend them a hand when they were sinking; the last night of the Irish Parliament, when clinging to one of the great pillars of the portico, and scowling silently on the whole scene—the English soldiers drawn up three deep around the building, the dishonored Senate, the cowed and breathless crowd—he cried out to one of the United Irishmen, in an agony of vengeance—where are now your three thousand armed men; these are the scenes, the achievements, the imperishable words which that statue of Curran in Westminster will vividly perpetuate.

Thus, in the very temple of their laws and constitution, the Queen, Lords and Commons of Great Britain shall be admonished of the frauds and cruelties which have brought Ireland low. Thus shall ambassadors, statesmen, soldiers and scholars of all climes be taught the truth, which false chroniclers have done their best to blot out, that, despite of prejudices, poverty, falsehood, the slavish and debilitating influences which a colonial condition ever generates, the Celtic soul of Ireland has triumphed over all, risen on tameless wing high above the death and sepulchre which shadowed it, and, having flooded the skies with glory, compels its enemy, even in its haughtiest edifice, to surrender a pedestal for its fame.

Noise in the North—A Kettle to the Lion's Tail.

There is an editor in Canada who must have broken loose from a lunatic asylum. If he has not, the soonor he is put into such a house of wet blankets for pyrotechnic brains, the better for his friends, not to mention the serious benefit it would be to himself.

We are induced to make this recommendation purely through a pride we take in the human race, and the consequent shame or pity we feel when one of that race is so visited by Providence or so reckless of himself, as to perform such antics before high Heaven as make the angels weep—with laughter.

The individual we refer to edits a paper which has enjoyed an obscurity, evidently well-merited, and is at present only recommended to attention by the advent of a highly ludicrous article, which some American papers, well known for their appreciation of the comical, have reprinted. Some people would be likely, under present excitements, to look with seriousness on the matter, as they would on a canine perambulation in the dog-days, to leap out of his way and make themselves just as great an object of pity as the animal, but all the creature wants is a muzzle, or a log round his neck, to render his yelping only a matter of happiness to the deaf; because he will exhaust his own patience much sooner than theirs.

As an evidence of the wildness of the animal, we make an extract. Believing that America is doing its best "to provoke a war with England," and being opposed not only to that idea, but to everything American, he says:

"The American eagle is a half breed between a carrion vulture and a dunghill rootser. He lacks the courage necessary for fair combat, and he crows the loudest when furthest from his enemy. The men of the Revolution are dead; their inferior children of 1812 are in their dotage; the present generation, raised on hot cakes and sweet fixin's, and stimulated with tobacco juice, is all talk and no cider, as destitute of the stamina on which courage is founded as its mothers are of flesh. Look at the women—charming at sixteen, faded at twenty, toothless at twenty-five, hideous at thirty, dividing their time between their rocking-chairs and their beds, incapable of exertion, incompetent to exercise, ever ailing, listless, lazy, straight up and down, like an old-fashioned clothes-pin, making up the deficiency of their developments with whalebone, cotton, and bran—are these the things to suckle heroes?"

Among birds, the natural philosopher would class the writer of the above as a tom-tit, among fish as a minnow, among animals a donkey, if not, indeed, that other thing so well known in Canada as being more remarkable for the repugnance of its perfume than the beauty of its shape.

Now, anybody who reads the above must be struck with the run-a-muck character with which truth, political history, and acknowledged beauty, are attacked with a falsity not more ambitious than mean, and with a callous want of gallantry the unquiet style of which is only equalled by its blatant cowardice.

We expect to hear such noise from Canada, for it is a wretched kettle tied to the old Bulldog's tail, and must make a rattle of some sort. But that the kettle, which, as all the world knows, costs more to keep it than it is worth, and only receives the remains of the used-up tea-leaves after reiterated "waterings" in Downing street, should spout such stuff, was more than we gave it credit for. Indeed it has gone beyond itself, in striving to edge in a word that would be listened to.

We pass over the Canadian's opinion on the Eagle, knowing that one so content to live in provincial obliquity could not see the Eagle even through Lord Ross's telescope. We pass over his sneer at the Jackson men of 1812–14, for the cotton bales of New Orleans rather stuffed the ears then, and for all time, of such "Anglo-Saxon" bipeds. They cannot hear anything of the period, and consequently must not be expected to know anything of it.

As for his attack on the beautiful women of America, who with a circle of light surround the more commercial characteristics of the nation their fathers fought and died for, like the halos in the pictures of the old masters glowing round the heads of their saints and martyrs—as for that, its putrid coarseness annihilates itself.

And as for troubling itself about Canada, America will only cross the Niagara and St. Lawrence when she wants a fresh supply of firewood and a few more tons of ice.

John Brougham and the Bowery.

Instead of the fever, with which misanthropic and morose prophets have threatened us, we are to have the happiest of summers. If the weather continues as it is now, we shall have the sweetest season that ever spangled with dew the grass-plots of the Park, or silvered at dawn the white spire of Grace Church. As for war—no one thinks gravely about that. Even if it came, it wouldn't much disconcert the Firemen, Militia, or Veterans. By the time Saratoga, Newport, Lake George, Lebanon, and other delicious, sunny, secluded, damp or dusty resorts returned their guests to the City, the fight would be over. The Narrows will choke the bulkiest monster any European prize-fighter may goad against the city. If the Narrows prove too loose, the pioneers of the First Division will be sure to finish him the moment he plants foot or hand upon the Battery. No other flag but the beautiful and brilliant Stars and Stripes, shall ever fly from the tall white shaft, from which a New-York boy cut the Union Jack adrift a few years ago.

In full anticipation of this glorious time, John Brougham lifts his hat, bows like the Knight of Arva, gracefully and gallantly bids adieu to Broadway, and, for the evening of the 30th of June, writes his name upon the portico of the Bowery. Not alone for that evening, but for all the mid-summer's nights, and all through the musical falling of the crisp and colored leaves.

Nor does Brougham fall with these. The shamrock is immortal. The Indian summer will be to him an Irish summer, in that great American hot-house, where so many pretty and gigantic flowers of mirth and tragedy have come to bloom. We shall have from him when the frost is in, and sleighs are chiming, and promenade boots are tramping it from damasked parlor to cobwebbed store, a Christmas Carol, and then a Winter's Tale, and after that the Carnival of Venice, not for this year only, but for many years, we warmly trust.

The Poetry of the "Post."

The Evening Post of last Monday, in an article purporting to give the opinion of the Dutch and German newspapers on the great question of the Presidency, informs us that the Staats Demokrat of this city clearly indicated its preference for Mr. Fremont in a leader last week. The Post, with an innocent delight, congratulates its readers, that Mr. Fremont was characterized in that article as the steadfast friend of the Germans, having had German companions with him on the prairies, and a very particular German acquaintance in one Mr. Preuss. We are left to infer, that for these reasons, the Germans will vote the ticket endorsed by the Post. For a Presidential campaign the reasons enumerated may be sufficiently weighty.

But calmly considering them, they seem to us to have as little to do with the election of Mr. Fremont, or his claims on the Teutonic vote, as the policeman we once heard cross-examined as a witness in one of the Irish courts had to do with a certain gentleman he was questioned about.

"You knew the gentleman?" said the counsel.

"I did, yer honor; I was intimate with him."

"How came you to form his acquaintance, and be intimate with him?" was the next question.

"I was at his grand-father's funeral," the bosthoon replied.

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

The letter from our California correspondent occupies the space which, but for its arrival, would have been filled by editorial matter. The sad and important interest of the circumstances it mentions, fully justifies us in giving it the prominence it exhibits in our columns. Did we not assign it this prominence, owing to the previously crowded state of the rest of the paper it should have to lie over for the next number. This, we came to the conclusion, it would not be fair nor wise to do. That our readers will approve of the decision and arrangement we have made, we rest assured.

San Francisco, May 20, 1856.

Having unexpectedly been dismissed from volunteer militia duty to-night, I avail myself of the opportunity to drop a few lines. It is not likely the chance will again occur before the steamer sails. As I have "something" to write about, it may not be amiss to premise the state of affairs as they have existed politically and socially in California for many years past. Office-seeking, which is a business with idle and worthless men all over the states, was more than usually attractive to the swarm of drones in this city, who were either too lazy to work in our mines, or who had neither inclination nor talent enough to earn a living in any honest way.

Without an issue involving a question of Whig or Democratic policy, the old war cry was raised, and Regular Nominations were made in the usual bang-up way. Early in the field were many whose names were once familiar in New-York politics, and a host of others more or less respectable, or more or less illiterate, but all who had no other interest in San Francisco than their own.

For many past elections that very curious little piece of magic has been shown, of taking a great many more votes out of the ballot-box than went in it, or were deposited by regular voters.

How it is done, I cannot explain; but we might ask any of the gentlemen alluded to, or any professional thimble-rigger who with the "shoulder-strikers" manage the business, and they might tell us. Suffice it to say, that by means of stuffed ballot-boxes or false returns, the Inspectors of Election elected their men.

And who do you suppose are Judges or Inspectors at our Polls? None but the same class of men who place themselves there, fight themselves there, vote themselves there, do any and everything to accomplish the seizure of the offices. The gamblers go hand and hand with them; and the courtezans, with their Bank accounts at the disposal of these men, have a large interest in perpetuating such a state of affairs.

Now imagine how we were placed. Illiterate men who could scarcely write their own names, but who, probably, knew best how to train a man for a fighting match, obtained offices of most important trust.

A certain Banking-house here are sureties for almost every one of our city and county officers—if not for every one. This is done on the straw-bail principle once in practice at the New-York Tombs. Of course, all monies passing into the hands of these officers were deposited with the Banking-house I mention.

These same gentry, that is to say the gamblers, shoulder-strikers, Sing-Sing graduates, &c., elected our judges, and the other officers, who looked after the right kind of juries; and finally, the Press were either so corrupted or so weak, that they would not lift their voice against such a state of things.

The result of this state of affairs became too obvious. Heavy and numerous defalcations, swindles, bills improperly audited, improperly paid, a bankrupt treasury, city scrip at a discount, officers growing valiant whenever any one proposed to examine their accounts, and using the bowie-knife and pistol to silence any questions. Murderers and assassins could not be punished, because witnesses, if they did not prove an "alibi," at least could testify it was done in self-defence, or could raise a doubt in the minds of the jury, of which the prisoner, of course, got the benefit.

Several months ago a gambler named Cora, placed a pistol to the heart of a gentleman named Richardson, and cooly shot him dead. The courtezan of the murderer, with her own wealth and with the money subscribed by the profession of which Cora was one, procured very eminent counsel.

The jury were empannelled in the usual way. I recognized one person identified with the gambling interest on that jury. Very likely there were more. The person I allude to, and one or two others, were for acquitting Cora, or for finding him guilty of manslaughter; consequently the jury disagreed, and in preparing for a new trial every exception was taken by counsel for the prisoner, with the determination to change the venue.

Who do you think obtains the office of which the murdered man was incumbent? McDuffie, a gambler, a peculiar kind of brother-in-law of Cora, the murderer! While Belle Cora gives nightly elegant receptions, distributes her cards among our moral population, and flaunts her silks and satins throughout our public streets.

Picture to yourself all this. Immorality, however, does not exclusively belong to this class of the people. We have had our worthies who have figured in the Insolvent Calendar—with whose names, doubtless, you are familiar—bankrupt merchants, forgers, and swindlers.

James King, of William, (son of William King,) was the first to attempt drawing a line of distinction between the rogues and honest men. There were men who might have passed for honest men even in their own opinion, if he had not placed them just where they belonged.

Have you ever read the San Francisco Bulletin, edited by James King, of William? It certainly had in it nothing to interest any one not acquainted with our local affairs. I did not altogether admire it. But, nevertheless, I not only believed the editor desirous of doing good (and perhaps of indulging personal pique), but was satisfied, in one month he achieved more good in San Francisco that any one man could have done.

He therefore represented the patriotic and good class of citizens. James P. Casey was the man who represented the class of "shoulder-strikers" and the rest of that "stripe." Casey assassinates King, after having interchanged a few words, some short time previously, in order to give the occurrence the appearance of a quarral. Casey's friends and witnesses carry him from the ground in a carriage in waiting, and King is laid out to die.

About five and a half or six o'clock a person came in with the news that King was shot. Five minutes after, we were on the spot, with thousands of others. All we could learn was, that Casey had been carried off by his friends, and the crowd had been foiled in an attempt to take him, as he was being removed from the City Hall to the Countay Jail on Broadway. His placing himself under the immediate protection of the officers of the law argued too manifestly the foregone conclusion of a premeditated crime, and expected immunity from punishment through this very protection.

Forbearance ceased to be a virtue; it was felt something must be done. It was immediately determined to re-organize the old Vigilance Committee. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, the new Vigilance Committee were sworn in. They were divided into companies of one hundred each, and making twenty companies.

On Saturday evening, after a short drill, they were dismissed until 8 o'clock on Sunday morning. At 11 o'clock, a general order was received. In the meantime, although suspected there was to be a general movement to seize Casey and Cora, yet it was not known what was going to be done. At the time the order was given to load, the men were served with three rounds of ball cartridge. One quarter or more of the men in the ranks never before handled a musket, and at the very first attempt to load, "bang" went off a musket, driving both the ball and ramrod through the ceiling. Fortunately no other damage than a hole in the ceiling was caused by this piece of bungling. But just imagine the stupidity of the greenhorn who asked seriously if there wasn't another charge yet left in the gun. This occurred in one of the muster-rooms, as I was credibly informed.

At about 12 o'clock the order was given to march, and soon the various companies were in position. The houses all round were cleared, and everything was looked to, to see that nothing should occur to provoke bloodshed. As the moment approached to demand the prisoners, the rifles of each company were ordered to mount the house next the prison. A large field-piece commanded the door of the jail, and in half an hour everything was so arranged that neither attack nor defence was required. It was not wonderful that 2,500 men, armed to the teeth, should be able to take two wretches who were not defended; but the action of their friends—desperate men—was such, that they would probably have defended them if they had not by this immense display been intimidated. Casey and Cora have not yet been tried by the Committee.

When the word passed round, "James King, of William, is dead," the stores closed up instantly. No one seemed to consult his neighbor. All seemed actuated by the same feeling and spirit. Nearly every store in the city displayed black cloth in festoons, or crape at the doors and windows.

An immense crowd assembled around the Vigilance Committee rooms. At the moment I am writing, it is supposed they are trying either Cora or Casey, probably the latter.

The night that King was shot was a night of wild excitement, but it has changed to a more durable one, which will be kept up until the drama ends. In this movement, so far, dangers have not been substantial; but whatever may happen in this good cause, my spirits would enable me to face them with a feeling of something like enjoyment. I altogether attribute it to my Irish blood, which always flows wildly at the prospect of a scrimmage.

Hoping to be able to communicate soon the happy termination of our revolution,

I remain yours truly, Humboldt.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.*

WILLIAM SMITH O'BRIEN.

The State trials were going on. O'Connell, branded as a conspirator, day after day sat in the Queen's Bench, facing the jury empannelled to convict him. The Attorney-General had relieved himself of his opening address. Two days were occupied in the work. The great meeting of Catholics, at which I saw Sheil for the first time, was a written chapter in history. The hall of the Four Courts swarmed with lawyers, politicians, officers of the army, attornies, and policemen. Dublin teemed with people of every description. Since George the Fourth's visit, the handsome capital of Ireland had not sheltered so dense and excited a crowd. The English garrison numbered ten thousand men. Lord Cardigan's Hussars were stabled in the Royal Barracks. The Fifth Fusileers were there also. Several troops of the Royal Horse Artillery, with the First Dragoon Guards, occupied Portobello. Three or four houses in Ship street had been converted into military quarters, and rang with ramrods and spurs from dawn to nightfall. AldboroughHouse underwent the same fate. The Beggar's Bush lodged two regiments of infantry. The Pigeon House mounted additional guns. There were double sentries on the gates. All the Martello towers from Blackrock to Dalkey Island; from Dalkey Island round to Duncannon fort; then round the bay on the other side to the Hill of Howth; and round that again to Malahide, and beyond it; were set to rights. A full complement of gunners was assigned to each of them, and the stores replenished.

Paris, during the days of the Provisional Government of February, hardly exhibited greater excitement, restlessness, and enthusiasm. Nothing that stimulates the spirit of a people was wanting. The theatres were enjoying the most affluent season. There were balls by the dozen every night, in Merrion and Fitzwilliam squares, and all the other sweetly-scented regions of wealth, aristocracy, and fashion. London reporters and editors filled every hotel in the city. A numerous staff from the Illustrated News were quartered in the Imperial, in Sackville street. Repeal orators thundered day and night from platforms, erected in the name of some parish or municipal ward. The contributions to the Repeal treasury dashed down in golden torrents from every part of the country. In the pages of the Nation, Davis was appealing to the people in tones, the grandeur and power of which far excelled the writings of Drennan, and were equalled only by the invocations of Grattan to the armed patriotism of Ireland.

It was at this moment that Smith O'Brien entered Conciliation Hall for the first time. It was the third Monday in January, 1844. The Hall was densely thronged. Thousands were wedged in within its walls. The galleries curved under the huge burden piled upon them. Blocking up the windows and doorways in every direction, the crowd shut out the light. They had to turn on the gas. It was a midnight gathering in mid-day. The indictment against O'Connell appeared to be borne out. For all the world, it looked like a convention of the blackest conspirators.

About one o'clock, Maurice O'Connell made his appearance. Ever a favorite with the people, he was loudly welcomed. Old Caleb Powell, the junior Member for the County Limerick, came next. John O'Connell followed. Immediately after him came O'Brien. The moment he was recognised, from the floor of the huge hall, from the galleries, from every place where they stood or sat, the thousands assembled there that day, leaped up with the wildest delight. A cheer, such as one could hear only in Ireland, shook the very stones of the building. Again and again was it renewed. Again and again did the enormous mass seem to leap towards the ceiling; and again and again did it sway to and fro, a black forest bending to the storm.

O'Brien's keen, deep-set eye filled with a beautiful sparkling light, as, erect, motionless, and dignified, he looked upon the scene, and felt himself the idol of a popular ovation. The truthfulness and loftiness of his character, qualities eminent in him from the first hour of his public life; the patient industry, with which for years he had drudged through Parliament, without any of that excitement which the championship of great popular principles so pleasurably kindles; his personal bravery, established and made widely known by his bearing on two memorable occasions; the memories evoked by his name and the close neighborhood of Clontarf; the consciousness which every man within there felt, that such an accession was of the utmost consequence to the national cause; every consideration which could delight and inspire a people, flashed through those thousands as he stood there before them. I was sitting on one of the back benches of the Committee box at the time—had a full view of the scene—noticed every emotion O'Brien betrayed—every incident of that magnificent welcome.

The day he was sentenced to death in the Court house of Clonmel, and he was brought back in that hideous prison-van to the gaol, escorted by a body of Orange constabulary with fixed bayonets and ball cartridge, and almost every man in the town shrunk back and cowered, and the women alone, filling the heavens with their passionate cries of grief and vengeance, followed him to the gates, and swore to be true to him, and not see him murdered; that day, as I sat with my noble young comrades in a low arched cell which from the top of the gaol overlooked the street, and those cries came to us upon the cold wind and echoed through the dismal corridors and dungeons of our fortress, I could not help calling to mind the scene in Conciliation Hall I have mentioned, and contrast the tumultuous enthusiasm with which O'Brien was then greeted with the bleak loneliness of the day he was sentenced to death. Did the contrast occur to himself? I never could bring myself to ask him. The question might have gone like a dagger to his heart. As it was, throughout his imprisonment and exile, he shut his eyes to the past, and with a noble calmness endured all that had befallen him.

Maurice O'Connell moved him to the chair.

"I have come here," he said, to tell the Attorney-General that, though not ambitious of martyrdom, if he wants another victim, I present myself to him." Then having haughtily defied the Government, he spoke exultingly of the national spirit which was rising throughout the country.

"Why are we," he exclaimed, "forbidden the name and rights of a nation? The Englishman is proud of his country. The Scotchman is proud of his country. The Frenchman thinks there is no country in the world like his own. The Circassian has encountered the colossal power of Russia in defence of his freedom. Shall Ireland be the only country in which nationality is forbidden?"

The cheers with which those manly words were received still ring in my ears. The reference to Circassia, up in arms on her mountains beating back the plunderers of Poland, sent the blood of every man present flashing through his veins. On that day, O'Brien stood before the only national assembly which has met in Ireland since the Rotunda Convention of the Volunteers, the stately impersonation of the proud spirit, patriotism, and chivalry of the country. On that day, influenced by his presence, his sentiments and virtues, the Association assumed a more determined attitude and tone. The proceedings grew to be more deliberate, intellectual, and dignified. A position in the future was asserted for Ireland, loftier than that which had heretofore invited the interest and called forth in rapturous anticipation the anthems and applauses of the people. Ireland rose from her bed, and got nearer to the sun. Bringing to its service a cultivated mind, an experience of many years growth in public affairs, a calm and indomitable industry, O'Brien purified the spirit of the Association, initiated its governing Committee into wise and fruitful labors, and whilst in a great measure silencing by his presence and example the vulgarities which had hitherto dishonored it, persuaded into public action those younger minds which had noiselessly watched until now the deepening and quickening current of national feeling.

That same day, McNevin appeared for the first time in Conciliation Hall. The people cheered him as, in the old Catholic Association days, they cheered Shiel. In manner, imagery, and voice, the resemblance between the orator of Young Ireland and the Member for Dungarvan was striking. There was the same richness of diction, vivid illustration, dramatic enunciation and gesture. Small in figure, abrupt in his motions, somewhat shabbily dressed, he had many of the imperfections and drawbacks, as well as many of the great gifts which ennobled the author of Evadne. Hailing the adhesion of O'Brien to the national cause, McNevin, with a nervous enthusiasm quivering through every limb and in sudden flashes lighting up his features, exclaimed—

"He was no foreign aristocrat. No Anglo-Norman-Saxon Noble. He was of Irish birth and Irish nobility, and they recognized in him the descendant of one of the best and bravest characters in Irish history."

From that day out, did O'Brien unreservedly devote himself to the service of Ireland. An arduous service, the love he bore the country sweetened labors which were incessant, and reconciled him to the many asperities which that service inflicted. Wholly free from envy, ambitious only of the success and fame of the movement into which he had thrown himself, he was the first to encourage to great efforts the gifted minds he discerned in the crowd about him, and the first to applaud the triumphs which signalized those efforts. Gentle, most kindly, and forgiving, he never permitted a syllable of resentment to detr act from the dignity of his demeanor, or ruffle the exquisite propriety of his opinions, sympathies, and language. Even when some of the Repeal editors sneered at his integrity in preferring the displeasure of the House of Commons to a deviation from a pledge he had made, and sought to undermine the popularity his goodness and grandeur had won, he had nothing for them but quiet regrets and the kindliest wishes. Even when these same gracious gentlemen assailed him violently after the Secession, imputing to an inordinate vanity and a brainless insubordination the course which an equivocal policy and a rude dictation alone compelled him to take, no one ever heard him petulantly or vindictively complain. Even when, on the very eve of staking his life in the last struggle, he was hooted by a malignant rabble, struck treacherously in the dark in his native city, and ignominiously disabled, he returned to Dublin, calm though downcast—downcast at the thought that Irishmen were still possessed with the fanaticism of faction—and without uttering a reproach against the cowards who struck him, or the more cowardly conspirators who inflamed them, resumed his public duties, the penalties they imposed, the great perils they conduced to, and the sacrifices they inexorably enjoined. But, it has long been remarked, that the bravest men are among the most gentle. It has long been remarked, that the most resolute in purpose are the least ostentatious in manner, and that a consciousness of being in the right softens the harshest blows, and preserves a sweetness and benignity of temper even in those who suffer injustice for justice' sake.

Concluding his speech in Conciliation Hall, that day in January, 1844, Smith O'Brien said—

"I have come here to offer you my services. Abilities I have not. But I have some experience in public affairs, a patient and persevering industry, and a resolute Irish heart."

The scenes known to me personally in which those fine qualities, as well as the abilities he disowned but which he so eminently possessed, were made so nobly useful to Ireland, shall rapidly follow this brief introductory chapter.

* Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1856, by THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the U. States, for the Southern District of New-York.

A NEST OF NOVELS.

PAUL FERROLL. By the author of "IX. Poems by V." Redfield.
ASPEN COURT. By Shirley Brooks. Stringer & Townsend.
THE HUGUENOT EXILES, an Historical Novel. Harper & Brothers.
PHILLY AND KIT, or Life and Raiment. By Caroline Chesebro'. Redfield.

Who the author of "IX. Poems by V." is, or may be, we do not know, nor can we guess. We have never seen the "Poems," and so much as hear the title of the said work we did not until we met it on the title-page of the volume before us. Whoever the individual may be, he need not be ashamed to put his name on "Paul Ferroll," however the anonymous may accord with the character of his nine poetic efforts, the musical oddness of whose title was no doubt suggested by the nine Muses. The former is a tale of what is known as "the intense English school," which differs very much from the French class from which it is in part descended. It is much more similar to the German novel, in which great metaphysical analysis of character at once dissects and fills up the portraitures of a few leading personages. The French, on the contrary, crowd the picture with figures, each one rivalling the other in the intensity of coloring and the individuality of its attractiveness. The French novel may be termed a variety of individualities: the German, the varieties of an individual. "Paul Ferroll" has more affinity with the latter than the former; but it is entirely free from that essay character, which is so inseparably woven round the German school. There are in reality but two characters in it—Paul and his wife; but they borrow such importance from the accessories, and weave such interest over them as make the picture excessively and excitingly perfect; commanding the wonder of the beholder at the masterly manner by which it is effected. The story is of marvellous interest. The action never flags for an instant; and although the climax is clearly anticipated from the second page—though we know what is coming—it is impossible not to read the author's account of its progress. Ths style is fresh, vigorous, and concentrated. The plot is so slender upon which this very remarkable work is based, that we would do injustice to the author to exhibit it. We will candidly aver, that however we might differ with the character of the story, its ability was such as to force the immediate perusal of it on us. It is not a book to be put down for an instant. It can only be closed at the "finis."

Mr. Brooks' novel of "Aspen Court" has been heralded with a more than usual flourish of trumpets; a very dangerous proceeding in any, but peculiarly ludicrous in the present case; as one unfortunately does not find out until he has forced his way through the rather disjointed amalgamation of sketches which are scattered between the leaves of this portly volume. After finishing the perusal of the work, one has a feeling of having been introduced to a number of people, of whom they knew scarcely any thing save their names, and consequently cannot take much interest in them. That they might be very good, very gallant, or very sociable people, is probable enough, but the acquaintance formed with them is of such an unsatisfactory nature as not to warrant us in either giving them a character, or taking what we have seen as just indication of their having any. Mr. Brooks gives us many sketchy things; but not one even tolerably grouped picture; notwithstanding his known facility in the light dramatic way. The characters are so numerous, because they are so useless to the story, that one wonders what the author intended them for. Two-thirds of the matter might have been judiciously omitted. As it is, the book reads like an agglomeration of tales, written originally without any idea of unity, but which, under the book-making mania, the author dovetailed together, changing the names of one to suit those of another, in the vague hope of sophisticating a reader into an idea of uniqueness. But the fact is, one plot spoils another. Just as you are getting interested in a pretty woman, you are jerked away, with fashionable rudeness, to be presented to somebody (rather a nobody), to whom, with ill-dissembled courtesy, you are obliged to listen. We will not pretend to portray these characters; for indeed that would be as impossible as to describe every individual that passes you on a tour from Trinity to Grace Church. All we can say is, that they have one point in common, which is—they walk Broadway: and so, of Mr. Brooks' variety, all that can be said is, they may be found in "Aspen Court." The great fault of the book is want of concentration. From the beginning, we are expecting something to "turn up;" but if the most anticipative and easily pleased Micawber would not be deceived by it, then the exuberant Wilkins must have changed his nature.

"The Huguenot Exiles" is one of those off-shoots of polemical excitement, which seek to continue, through the medium of an historical novel, the warfare which the writers, no doubt, conscientiously feel themselves unequal to, in the ranks of the pamphleteers. Whenever a dogma fails in the pulpit, the propounder of it immediately takes a bath in an inkstand, leaps up, shakes himself like a Newfoundland dog, and splashes and sprinkles about him, with indiscriminate fury, the element from which he has emerged, with an energy, if not a purpose, somewhat bewildered. With very few exceptions, those who are in the habit of making a perpetual hobby of religious toleration, ride the thing to death—if a hobby can be so ridden. Setting out on a tolerant jog-trot, they presently get into a slightly excited canter; a gallop becomes a necessary variety; the excitement increases; a few leaps but give it relish, a tally-ho soon becomes a vitalizing safety valve; the blood rises; and before the rider is aware he is irresistibly propelled, as well by his own instincts as the nature of the animal he is astride of, into a steeplechase of the wildest and most break-neck character. He set out with balmiest and most impartial and humanizing views of toleration—he ends in a briery quagmire of the most outlandish and obstinate intolerance.

The writer of the tale, or novel, before us intended to be very cool, no doubt, but he exhibits just as excitable qualities as those under the inspiration of which the objects of his fury, became, and acted furious. With the purpose of the novel, however, we have nothing to do; for we hold that the author has as good a right to his peculiar opinions as those who advocate the opposite side of the question. He also has every right to pen and publish them, and it is purely with the manner in which they are penned and pawned of as historical novel writing that we have anything whatsoever to do.

The story opens in Languedoc, in 1684, when it was under the rule of the Duc de Noailles, and ends with the landing of one hundred French exiles on a bright day in June, 1687, at Jamestown, Virginia. Between those dates, the fortunes of the family of Mr. Lefevre and the accessory characters are traced. The author informs us that he has for several years contemplated writing such a work, and devoted these same years in amassing the historical materials which are given to us now in this "novel" shape. He is a descendant of a Huguenot refugee himself and weaves into his narrative some family traditions, recounting the adventures and sufferings of his ancestors. We have no doubt but that the author is, as he believes, actuated by every good motive. We are inclined to honor his persistence in support of his opinions, but unfortunately, as he has put them into a shape which demands more the attention of the literary than the theological critic, we are obliged to look upon his work with serious discountenance. In fact, it will not repay perusal, notwithstanding the rather ill-advised, or if not advised, egotistical recommendation in the preface; to-wit, that "it is not the crude out-pouring of an unpractised pen." If the pen is not practised, the more blame should be visited on the author; for it is but too plain that experience has but taught him to be dull and heavy. With considerable self assurance, he says: "My object has been to render it popular by giving to its pages all the interest of a vividly-told story, while it yet possesses the merit of dealing more in fact than in fiction." The author need not lay the flattering unction to his soul that he can impress his reader with either of these statements, save only for the purpose of contradicting them. As to the vivid interest of fiction, it is one of the most turgidly written books it has been our misfortune to have met. The dialogues are verbose and spiritless to a really marvellous extent, in this day of mediocre smartness; there is great inaptness in the management, and it is only so far "novel" in being so unlike anything which might, could, would or should come under that head.

"Philly and Kit" is a work of very different calibre. After reading some of those over-strained sentimental novels, it is certainly refreshing to take up a work of this kind. It is like leaving the fetid air of the city for the green-fields and blue sky of the country. Here are no fine ladies in rose-colored boudoirs, listening to some flippant lover, while the husband seeks refuge in the club-house; no palling on the mind, making the heart dull and heavy with sumptuous wickedness. The heroine of the first story, Philly, gains her living by sweeping the crossings; that of the second, Kit, is an organ-grinder. But no more noble, disinterested, ingenuous hearts ever throbbed beneath costly lace and sparkling jewewls, than dwell in the bosoms of these simple girls. The author evinces much knowledge of human nature in describing these characters. They are most touchingly and beautifully portrayed. She evidently possesses a clear, bold brain, a heart sensibly alive to the throbbings and struggles which dignify humanity, and shed a halo round the lot of the poor and honest, and a pen fully capable of recording the emotions that so vividly and picturesquely encircle her meditations.

The following statement, according to the New York Independent, gives the present circulation of the principle Protestant and Dissenting newspapers published in this city: Christian Advocate and Journal, (Methodist,) 30,000; The Independent (Congreational,) 24,240; New York Observer, (O. S. Presbyterian,) 21,120; The Evangelist, (N. S. Presbyterian,) 15,000; The Examiner, (Baptist,) 11,000; Christian Ambassador, (Universalist,) 8,000; Christian Intelligencer, (Reformed Dutch,) 6,600; New York Chronicle, (Baptist) 6,000; Church Journal, (Episcopal,) 5,000; Christian Inquirer, (Unitarian,) 2,800; Protestant Churchman, (Episcopal,) 2,120; The Churchman, (Episcopal,) 1,000.

The play of Tortesa the Usurer, by N. P. Willis, Esq., with alterations made for the stage by Mr. George Vandenhoff, and approved by the author, has recently been produced with great success at the Theatre Royal, Dublin; Mr. George Vandenhoff and our fair countrywoman (late Miss Makeah) his wife sustaining the principal characters. The Dublin papers are unanimous in their approbation of the play, and of the manner in which it was represented. Mr. G. Vandenhoff and his lady have won golden opinions in the Irish capital.

Galignani says. The Committee of the Literary Society has resolved on dividing the new sum of 10,000f. placed at its disposal in the following manner:—Medals of the value of 15000f. each for the best articles on the "Criticism and Critics of the 19th Century;" on "Madame Emile de Girardin and her writings;" on a piece of verse of from 200 to 300 lines on "Paris Nonveau;" and on the best novel "Surles Mœurs Contemporaines de Paris ou de la Province." The remaining sum of 400f. will be divided according to the discretion of the examining jury among the second best articles. All articles must be sent in to the society from the first to the thirty first of December next.

Dix and Edwards announce a translation of Beauvailet's very amusing book on the late visit of Rachel and her dramatic company to the United States, a portion of which appeared already in our columns. The letters are highly amusing. The translation is by Dr. J. W. Palmer, of this City.

Dr. Mutter, the celebrated Professor of Surgery in the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, has resigned on account of failing health, and thereupon has received the distinction of Emeritus Professor. It is his intention to leave to the College his magnificent museum and $30,000 beside.

Astronomers will be glad says the Anthenæum to hear that the Admiralty has sanctioned the grant of £500 to defray the expenses of an astronomical expedition to the Peak of Teneriffe, to be undertaken by Professor Smyth, of Edinburg. The Admiralty has applied to the Council of the Royal Society for suggestions relative to the proposed expedition.

DEAR CAHERMONE!

Who has not known, in his dreariest time,
A feeling unbidden akin to sublime,
When a glimpse of the past has depicted anew
Some face long-forgotten that gladdens the view;
Some scene where the mind finds a sweet resting-place,
Which it flies to for comfort, and quits with fresh grace;
Some spot of the world which his mem'ry holds dear,
Where he nurtured high hopes of his future career?
Mayhap I'm deceived, and perhaps 'tis not so,
And there's no such enchantment in sweet "long-ago"—
But such glimpses, such feelings, I've known I must own,
And the place that they point to is dear Cahermone!

Dear Cahermone, when the night-gloom appears
And flings from its pinions the shadows of years,
When I call up the thoughts of the things that have been,
Not the last, not the least is thy well cherished scene:
Each leaf-shadowed streamlet, each time-severed stone,
Comes again as I knew it in dear Cahermone!

I stray through the flowers that graced thy green sod,
Where they blushed as they whispered each other of God;
I gaze on the piles by thy old Castle-wall,
Where they fell among beauties and frowned on them all;
And I list to the breeze with a chant in its tone,
Which alone could be sung me in dear Cahermone!

O ye who would estimate all things by rules
Of debit and credit, sometimes ye are fools;
Ye preachers of selfishness, say what ye will,
In this cold crafty world there's "sentiment" still—
For the wisest have visions; the coldest have gleams,
Which scare, though not often, their dull dollar dreams.
Though feeling is crushed and o'erburthened by form;
Yet something survives that is candid and warm.

What wonder if here in my boyhood's first fire,
Where nought might corrupt me but all could inspire,
That impressions then planted were made to remain;
That fancies then fashioned would sway me again;
What wonder some loves and some hates I have known,
Still cling round the image of dear Cahermone?

How well I remember the arch's high crown,
That looked from afar with so tempting a frown;
The cottage with woodbine festooned from its eaves,
And its window that peeped through a curtain of leaves;
The oak-dotted lawn and the deep purple glade;
And the walls of the ruins mysterious with shade!
Yet it was not all this that contained such delight,
But the forms that came teeming too fast for the sight,
And the thoughts that thronged with them, all wild to be sure,
Too refined to be practised, but all of them pure—
Long since from the dust of the world have they flown
Yet return with the image of dear Cahermone!

It was here I resigned to the trances of thought,
While rehearsing with Nature what study had sought,
For I loved her communings, and to her fond breast
My hopes were made known and my griefs were confest;
And she answered me well with a voice of her own,
And her eloquence filled me in dear Cahermone!

O dear Cahermone, there are many I fear
Who would give to thy well cherished scene but a sneer,
Who deeply would wonder if they could but see
And wag their wise heads at my passion for thee—
"They often saw much brighter beauties" forsooth,
And "I ranked thy attractions too far above truth."
Poor critics, how grievous their faults, since they try
To scan the high soul by the mere earthly eye!
But yet I forgive them, and yet I won't blame,
For I know, if our nature is always the same,
That there must be some bright little spot of their own
Which they love with my passion for dear Cahermone!

F. O'R.

SONG FROM BLARNEY LAKE.

These wide-spreading Laurels that bend to the Lee,
How snugly they shelter my Mary and me!
Now May brings their showers of blossoms to view,
And bathes the green sod in a noontide of dew.
The redbreast builds here on this moss-covered mound,
Here purple, and yellow, and white shrubs abound,
Here wavelets glide by, with a murmuring glee,
At foot of my cot, in this bend of the Lee.

O, white is the bosom of Mary Macroidhe!*
And low is the voice of my Mary Macroidhe!
And round is her form, her song sweet and free,
As chant of the redbreast that sings to the Lee!

The gay sparkling faggot that cheers our low hearth,
The bird that sings sweetly when close to the earth,
The trout seeking shadows where no eye can see,
All speak to my heart of my Mary Mocroidhe!
The star that falls back of the dark heaving cloud,
Cares less for the love of the star-gazing crowd;
The flower that breathes sweetly when no eye can see—
My Star and my Flower—my Mary Macroidhe!

O, white is the bosom of Mary Macroidhe!
And low is the voice of dear Mary Machroidhe!
And round is her form, her song sweet and free,
As the chant of the redbreast that sings to the Lee!

SHINE BRADSTONE.

*To be pronounced Macree.

AN IRISH DIAMOND.

IRISH ECHOES. By JOHN BROUGHAM, author of "A Basket of Chips." Derby and Jackson.

BROUGHAM'S DRAMATIC WORKS, consisting of Dramas, Comedies, and Farces. By JOHN BROUGHAM. Vol. I.; with Memoir of the Author by R. Shelton Mackenzie, Esq. Samuel French.

John Brougham's brain must certainly have received that gift from nature which the fairies bestowed upon the pocket of Terry Magra, the Tipperary piper. Terry's pocket was as fathomless, in shillings, as the wells in the cave of St. Michael, at Gibraltar, are to the plummet or the diving-bell. Broughams brain is just as inexhaustible, in its own especial coinage, those other treasures with which he so bountifully treats his friends, the public.

In light literature, the drama, and amid the dramatis personæ of the day, he has a remarkable, not to say purely distinct position. He has not only "been all things by turns," but continues to be almost every thing; still heightening a mentally ubiquitous character, which is at once many-sided and unique—many-sided from the diversity of the effects he produces; and unique for the reason that he is the centre of all, just as the dexterously carved and highly polished diamond is so profuse in its mute splendor, that, surrounded by beholders, each one argues his point of view the most beautiful.

His very versatility is rather annoying to your self-conceited critic, who, not being gifted with the eyes of Argus—or indeed with any more than can well be devoted to himself and what he intends to write, without the slightest regard as to what he writes upon—hates nothing worse than a diversity of talent. It is too much for him. He is be-fogged, bewildered, be-deviled. Poor fellow! he cannot see everything—cannot understand, if he did see, and must be excused if, like Lavender Kyd, in Romance and Reality, he finds it wise not to recognize a joke. Your regular, flat-footed, serious, cold-blooded "critic," who assumes a supercilious air of knowledgeableness in a non-committal adjective, and keeps up his impartial dignity with an "if," or a "but," immediately after some sickly words of commendation, is just like a human compass that measures all things by its own powers of extension. Old Robert Holmes, condemning the standing armies of Europe, said that the mere soldier, as regarded citizenship, was almost as passive as the sword with which he fights. He was a machine, and not a man. The critic proper, it would seem, is as free from those feelings which are supposed to influence the head and heart of humanity, "least-ways such as walk on two legs." Meeting a lively cricket—critic, we mean—the other day, he felt astonished that we had not yet noticed a large and important work lately issued. We hinted that we were reading it. "What d'ye want more than the title and the publisher's name?" he quickly rejoined, with a look of mingled astonishment and contempt perfectly indescribable. "But the author," we suggested. "Pshaw! you know better than that!" said he, and broke into an undecided humming, which, by a contraction of the mouth natural to his entire head-piece, ran into a distinct whistling of "Pop goes the Weasel," after which animal he popped off himself. We had barely turned the corner, when we confronted another gentleman well known in "literary circles." By an infernal dispensation of the muses, the same topic arose; when the critic—with a jocularity clearly assumed, to hide the deep seriousness of his remarks—avowed that he never read a book until after he reviewed it. "If you do it beforehand," he continued, in a strain of serio-comic defence of his position, "you destroy the impartiality of your judgment. Knowing the author's views, you will naturally go for him, or against him. If the latter, he is your enemy for life. If the former, all others are your enemies. No need to make enemies!" We left our friend in this blissfully self-protective mood. "Pierce Pungent," the other day, in one of those clever papers which do not belie the signature under which they are written, instanced as a remarkable truth, that a critic on a leading morning cotemporary, read the books he noticed. With such facts before us, is it astonishing that we have been led into a critical digression?

"Ay," quoth the reader, "just like those other fellows you talk about, who don't keep to the subject—and just as if the critics had anything to do with John Brougham!"

Right again, reader, right! Brougham has passed that Rubicon, where they have not the courage to venture, and where, if they did, they had "betther keep a silent tongue in their heads," for the popular voice is the only element that rules there. Favorable criticism will not draw the attention of the public to him more fully than his own merits have done. Unfavorable criticism has only the effect of stirring up the public pride, as was evidenced some months ago, in the case of Mr. Edwin Forest. A series of brilliantly written papers in a morning journal, directed against Forest, attracted considerable attention. Picturesque in style, and grotesque in analysis, the articles were capital things for a paper, but could not be truly called criticisms. With some admirable remarks on the plays, the allusions to the player were generally so far-fetched as to be entirely foreign to him. The consequence was, the house was crowded more than ever. It became, not a question between the actor and the critic, but between the public, who had given the former his position, and the latter, who wanted to pull him down. Of course the actor was placed on a higher pedestal than before. Here we are digressing again, but begging "all sorts o' pardons" return to the subject.

Taking Brougham individually, as either an actor, dramatist, story-writer, or humorist, he is not only commendable but remarkable. Taking him as all, he is actually without compeer. What actor has been so undeniably successful in the author characters off the stage? What successful dramatist has been so talented and useful an actor? Where can you find so volunminous a dramatist or so versatile an actor, with such capital powers as a story-teller? or where, through the united capacity of all three, such a continued and irresistible flow of humor—such a hearty amalgamation of quips and cranks and wreathed smiles? Of such exaggerated drollery; such quick eye for the temporary ills that fashion is heir to; such sententious tongue to hold them up to the good-natured ridicule of common sense? His satiric shafts being hurled at that tough-hided monster, the Public, cannot sting; but they, as it were, strike under the short ribs; nudge it with graceful vehemence, and provoke it to laugh at its own foibles and to "mend the town."

The first volume of his dramatic works, now before us, contains eight of his most successful productions for the stage. The Game of Life, Game of Love, Temptation, Romance and Reality, his adaptations from Dicken's Dombey and Copperfield, the farce of Love and Murder, and the recently produced and uproariously-received extravaganza of Pocahontas.

It would be a waste of words to enter upon an analytical disquisition as to their various merits. They are so fresh in the minds of people who take an interest in such things that scarcely more than a word of generalization would be discreet, in a matter on which the town has spoken so distinctly. To say that he is the most successful writer for the stage in this country, is only to give an Irish echo to the American opinion. A thorough master of stage effect, and of the necessities which suggest and govern stage dialogue, he has a hold on the public and the "boards" which no other writer has yet attained here. The versatility of his genius gives him a ready key to the varieties of passion, action, humor, and nonsense, that typifies the mass; and thus the pleasure, with which all view his pieces, may be accounted for. They behold themselves in Brougham's mirror with great delight, even though the glass be a magnifier, throwing back the counterpart with exaggerated outlines and tints. The vanity is flattered in being represented as a type; and for the same reason that dandies carry a glass in their hat, the people go to see Brougham's comedies. They will be sure, also, to behold their neighbor held up on the stage, which is a great comfort to a Christian's spirit.

Brougham, as a dramatist, is the O'Keeffe of his day. He has the same brilliancy and sincerity; for throughout his works their is a hearty affinity with good purposes, and a keen and equally hearty denunciation of the evils that transform nature and society. In his sentimentality, also, Brougham is a twin brother of O'Keeffe. Leigh Hunt, in a piquant notice of the works of the latter, gives us a good index to the character of the former:—"In his plays we have a sort of young and pastoral taste of life in the very midst of its sophistications. Animal spirits, quips and cranks, credulity, and good intentions are triumphant throughout, and make a delicious mixture." One of the highest compliments paid by Hunt to Morton was his opinion that Young Rapid, in A Cure for the Heart Ache, "was worthy of O'Keefe." In one respect only is Brougham different from his Irish brother dramatist, and that is not so much his fault as that of the day in which he lives and writes. Our day is more excitable and excitement-loving than that in which Sheridan, Goldsmith, Murphy, and O'Keeffe gave the English language its best comedies. "Startling situations" have invaded to a feverish degree the simplicity of slow-coach times. Audiences are getting so cunning, so quick, so telegraphic in their apprehension, that a play wright must stoop to conquer them; and devise something to baffle their most arrant cuteness. Yet, in the midst of these deteriorating, but bread-and-butter-inspiring necessities, Brougham give us some charming illustrations of nature and observation; for instance, Tom Bobolink and his wife, and that "bit of an Irishman," O'Bryan, in Temptation; and Asper Manly and his strong-minded, long-winded sister Barbara, in Romance and Reality.

"The Irish Echoes" are very clever, have all the various characteristics of his comedies, in the dialogues, with the rich addition of the descriptive portions of persons, scenery, and the quaint and comical, filmy and fanciful realms of Irish Fairy-land. They are excessively racy, full of sparkling fun, breaking out oftentimes with true Celtic nature, from a pathos as tender, deep, and touching as the melodious soul of Carolan. The scenes and experiences in Fairy-land, so delicately tinted and so humorously told in The Tipperary Venus, the Fairy Circle, and Dan Duff's Wish, contain eloquent commentaries on the human greed for gold to the expulsion of purity, comfort, and ease. And in the jovial and witty conversations between the fairies and the respective heroes, many a sturdy moral is told in a jocularly blunt way.

Sydney Smith said, "There are two questions to be asked respecting every new publication. Is it worth buying? Is it worth borrowing?" We have asked ourselves both of these questions regarding Brougham's books; and our conclusion is—notwithstanding a profound veneration for the Revised Statutes—that not only are they worth buying or borrowing, but that, as a hearty laugh is the best of physic, a dispeptic would be justified in stealing them.

Books Received.

The Life and Travels of Herodotus in the Fifth Century before Christ: an Imaginary Biography, founded on fact, &c. &c. By J. Talboys Wheeler, F. R. G. S., &c. 2 vols.	Harper & Brothers.
The Last Seven Years of the Life of Henry Clay. By Calvin Colton, LL. D.	A. S. Barnes & Co.
Wit and Wisdom of the Rev. Sydney Smith; being selections from his writings, &c., with a biographical memoir and notes by Evert A. Duyckinck,	Redfield.
Calderon, his life and genius, with specimens of his Plays. By Richard Chenevix French, B. D. S.	"
The Old Corner Cupboard; or the every day life of every day people.	Truman & Spofford, (Cincinnati.)
Rachel and the New World. A trip to the United States and Cuba. From the French of Leon Beauvallet.	Dix, Edwards & Co.
Gentilluccl's Life of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Illustrated. Part 2.	Jas. B. Kirker.
Poems. By Richard Chenevix. French.	Redfield.

DEATH, OR SLEEP?

A. R. A., May 10, 1856.*

Is she dead, or sleeping,
Our dear babe, Regine!
She lieth in a rapt repose,
In her hand an early rose,
Fit to grace a queen!

By her bed we linger,
Thinking she will wake;
"She must wake," we say at last,
"And undo this dreadful Past,
Or our hearts will break!"

See! the hair is stirring
On her broad white brow!
There's a tremble in the rose,
And her drooping lids unclose—
She is waking now!

No! it was but fancy;
Our dead child, Regine,
Will not wake, or stir again;
We have watched and wept in vain
For our little queen!

R. H. Stoddard.

* These sweet death-verses are from the Albion, and were written on the departure from this life of Abbie Regina Ahern, daughter of Mr. S. J. Ahern of the journal mentioned.

MILITARY CORRSPONDENCE.

THE SHIELD'S ARTILLERY, BOSTON.

Company formed in April, 1853. Name, "The Shield's Artillery." Composed of citizens both native and adopted, in about equal proportions. The company is attached to the first Division, first Brigade, 5th Regiment, Artillery, (but armed as Infantry,) of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia.

The officers are—Captain, Edward Young, a native of Boston; Lieutenants, W. F. A. Kelly, James O'Brien, Christopher Plunket, Martin Flaherty, natives of Ireland.

State Regulation uniform; frock coat, dark blue; pants, light blue; red trimmings, regulation cap with red pompon. The officers are equipped with army regulation swords; non-commissioned officers and privates with muskets, knapsacks and the usual accoutrements. Company drills every Monday and Friday evenings; squad drills on the other evenings of the week Parade days, last Wednesday in May, 4th of July. Division encampment, 3 days. Company day, 10th October.

The company had two splendid balls; and was the Color Company at one of the Regimental parades, at the encampment of 1853.

Performed active service at the time of the Slave Riot, in May, 1854, and was on duty day and night from May 26th to June 3d. The company was at the Division encampment three days in two consecutive years.

The company, as above stated, was organized in 1853, and from the outset continued in a flourishing condition. The roll of active members numbered about seventy; all young, active, intelligent and respectable men—"the stuff" of which soldiers are made.

The history of the corps, during its comparatively brief existence, was honorable in every respect. The uniforms and equipments (except muskets) were bought and paid for by the individual members, and no debts were incurred. The assessments were paid in with cheerful alacrity, and business, as well as military matters, conducted with entire harmony on all occasions.

Each man's outfit cost about thirty dollars. The officers' one hundred dollars each. The uniforms, equipments and paraphernalia, were of the best materials and finish, and when in array, presented a splendid appearance. As a military organization, the corps was highly esteemed in the community; and on no occasion did its members ever prove derelict to the laws either civil, social or military. The officers took great interest in the character and position of their charge, and sought by every means to give tone and influence to their name.

The advent of Know-Nothingism heralded the destruction of the "Shield's" as well as other fine companies. On the 12th of January, 1855 a Council order (based upon the urgent recommendation of Gov. Gardner,) was promulgated, declaring their disbandment, and notwithstanding the earnest efforts made by the commander to secure a "hearing," in order to refute the alleged cause for said order, no satisfaction could be obtained. The officers sent in a written protest against the order, and refused to surrender their commissions or the company's arms. After the lapse of a few weeks, in which the puzzled officials "were making up their minds what to do," on a rainy day, at an early hour, the valiant Adjutant-General, and a dozen of the Dark-Lantern party, came with crowbars and picklocks and broke into the Armory, and carried off all the "State property."

An action was brought in the Supreme Court, with the design of testing the Governor's power in the matter, but after taking counsel, and knowing the hostile elements which were battling about, the game was not deemed worth the powder, and the matter was dropped.

The company expended some two thousand dollars, out of their own pockets, during the brief period of their career—not one cent of which, although invested in uniforms and other articles adapted exclusively to military service, has ever been allowed them by the State.

To be sure, an order was passed by the Legislature for the payment of NINE dollars to each man, as commutation money, but, with a proviso, that the company had respectfully given up their arms, per order, and had quietly pocketed the Executive insult. As the gallant "Shield's" had not had this crowning grace, the beggarly K. N. crumb was not tendered to them, so that, besides being knocked down, they were robbed, too, by the jackals in power.

(Irish News, continued from page 167.)

The select committee appointed to inquire into the merits of the petition presented by Mr. Somers against the return of Mr. John Wynne, the sitting member for Sligo, on the ground of treating bribery and intimidation, met on the 20th ult. for the first time. The members of the committee were—Mr I. Butt, in the chair, Sir J. Hanmer, Mr. Moody, and Mr. Clive. Mr. James, Q C, Mr. Morgan, J. O'Connell, and Mr. Lewis were retained for the petition, and Mr. Slade, Q C, and Mr. Huddleston for the seat.

Mr. O'Connell made an ineffectual attempt to postpone the inquiry, on the ground of the absence of Mr. James, Q C, who was engaged in prosecuting Palmer, of Rugeley, opened the case.

Mr. M'Niffe was the first witness. He deposed that he had not power to make any arrangements for that gentleman; he never saw Mr. Mostyn at Mr. Ferguson's house; the witness proved nothing. He was not cross-examined.

Mr. Abraham Powell, solicitor and farmer, deposed that he was one of Mr. Somers' agents at the late election. Witness was so excited that it was impossible to examine him, and he proved nothing.

Mr. Thomas Mostyn, solicitor of Dublin and Sligo, deposed that he was Mr. Wynne's sole acting agent, at the late election, and there was no bribery or treating on the part of Mr. Wynne or any of his agents.

Cross-examined—I am aware that Mr. Wynne declined to come forward as a candidate when he had a requisition signed by a majority of both Catholic and Protestant electors. The sum total of Mr. Wynne's expenses were under £144, of which the mayor received £53. There was no bribery or treating by Mr. Wynne or any of his agents.

Robert Mahony, cabinet maker, an elector of Sligo, was next called, but as he proved nothing, the petitioners at this stage of the proceedings withdrew that part of their petition which related to treating.

Edward Killoran, a baker of Sligo, was called to prove bribery in his own case. He said—I saw Mr. Wynne during the election; I told him that I was exceedingly poor, and that if he would give me some money I would vote for him. He gave me a pound note, and said that if he was returned he would make a man of me. James Ward saw that. On cross-examination, witness said that he had been two months in London, and that he came up in the same carriage with Mr. Somers, and had been living in London with Mr. Somers, and had taken his meals with him.

James Ward, baker and butter buyer, of Sligo, corroborated in the same measure Killoran's evidence. He also had been in London for the last two months, living at the house of Mr. Somers.

Mrs. Catharine Killoran swore that at the time of the election her husband gave her a one pound note, and told her that he should make more out of the election.

This was the case for the petitioners.

For the defendant,

Hon. John Wynne, M. P., was called. He said—I have heard the evidence of Edward Killoran; there is not one word of truth in any thing that he has said; I had not a pound note in my possession throughout the whole of the election.

After a few minutes' consultation, the Committee unanimously declared that the Right Hon. John Wynne had been duly elected a member to serve for the borough of Sligo, and also that the petition was frivolous and vexatious: and the Committee also resolved, that, in giving their evidence, Edward Killoran and James Ward had been guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury.

We are informed, says the Kilkenny Journal, that the Crown, on the memorial of creditors to the extent of £250,000, has agreed to appoint Mr. Anthony Norris, of Bedford row, London, one of the creditors, to be administrator for collecting in the assets of the late Mr. John Sadleir. Mr. Norris, in compliance with the earnest wishes of the creditors, has consented to act under the authority of the Crown, and will lose no time in realising for the benefit of the creditors large sums stated to have been invested by the deceased gentleman in various securities both at home and abroad.

The argument on behalf of the English Shareholders in the Tipperary Bank, was resumed on the 15th ult., by Mr. Fitzgibbon, Q. C., who was followed by Mr. M'Donough, Q. C. The final reply was confided to Mr. Fitzgerald, Q. C. An anonymous letter in the Freeman's Journal, attacking the Master, was the subject of the strongest and most indignant commentary on the part of the Master, Mr. Fitzgibbon, &c., &c.

A man named Patrick Christopher, who was formerly the leader of a faction called "Polleens," was returning from a fair at Mountaincastle, County Waterford, in a state of intoxication, and shouting defiance towards some members of an opposing faction, when a heavy stone was hurled at him from behind a ditch, and struck him on the head. He fell immediately on receiving the blow, and soon afterwards expired. The murderers have not been discovered.

The total expenditure in Ireland (poor relief) during the year ended Michaelmas-day, 1855, for the relief of 269,800 paupers relieved in-doors and 35,432 out-of-doors, amounted to the sum of £683,597. The cost of the in-maintenance was £432,841; that of the out-relief, 4,701; the salaries of officers and their rations, £119,£832; and all other expenses, £126,219. The valuation was £11,565,460 and the average poundage of the expenditure on the valuation 1s 2¼d.

At the last meeting of the Guardians of the Cashel Union. John Greene, Esq., J. P. presided, and thirteen other guardians were in attendance. There was 982 paupers in the house, being a decline of 311 from the same period last year. The weekly expense of provisions was 921, and the average cost for each pauper 1s 9½d. The uncollected rates amount to £1,155, and the balance in favor of Guardians was £1,927.

Mr. T. Flood, Newhall, county Kildare, will, at the approaching presentment sessions for the barony of Connell, seek for compensation to the amount of £1,138 19s. 10d., for the wanton and malicious burning of his mill, together with a large quantity of oats, wheat, and property belonging to other parties. Richard Ennis, Esq., solicitor, of Dublin, is retained by the claimant.

Miss Casey, of Kilmacthomas, has been received into the Presentation Convent, of Lismore, by the Right Rev. Doctor O'Brien. The Very Rev. Dr. Fogarty, P. P., V. G., and several of the clergy of the diocese were present.

Four clergymen of the established church and five Catholic priests perished with fever, exposure to cold, and hardships, in the Crimea, during the war.

The Dublin Nation has accurate authority for stating that the memorial of Frederick Lucas, on the condition of the Catholics in Ireland, and their relations to the British Government, and the Holy See, has been presented to his Holiness the Pope, at whose direction it was composed. The Holy Father (says that journal) took the occasion of expressing to the eminent divine who laid the memorial before him, his sincere and intense regret for the death of Mr. Lucas, and his sense of the severe loss which Catholic interests in Ireland and throughout the British Empire had sustained thereby. We have received still later and equally authentic information, that the memorial had been very carefully examined and very favorably considered. We have every hope that it will excite a careful and immediate inquiry upon the part of Rome into the state of affairs here; and, if so, we have not the faintest fear for the result.

The Irish papers inform us that, "on Wednesday, the 7th inst., his Grace, the Most Rev. Dr. Dixon, Primate of all Ireland, held full Synod of the clergy of the arch-diocese in the cathedral church of Armagh. This was the first public function of the kind witnessed for many centuries in this ancient city, and is a commencement of the renewal of the splendid ceremonies and discipline of the Catholic Church, which had been interrupted in this country for a long and sorrowful period."

The officers of the Synod were: Rev. Patrick Hanratty, promoter; Rev. John Levins, and Rev. James Powderly, masters of the ceremonies; Rev. James Campbell, Secretary; Rev. Canon McConville, Deacon; Rev. Canon O'Brien, Sub-deacon; Revs. John Gallogly and John Rafferty, Prefects of Lodgings. Chaunters, Rev. R. O'Sullivan and Rev. P. V. Meadth, O. S. D.

Of the Tracy Peerage, the Leinster Express says:—"We have been informed that within the past week important information has been obtained, and most conclusive facts brought to light which leave not the shadow of doubt as to Mr. Tracy's (of Streamstown, Co. Westmeath,) ultimate success in establishing his claim to this ancient viscountcy. The family of Tracy is well known in the parish of Horseleap, where the father, Mr. James Tracy, of the present claimant, cultivated extensive farms and was much and actively engaged in other business pursuits during his long life—he having reached the patriarchal age of ninety, and died only a few years since a reputedly wealthy man.

We understand that Mrs. Catherine Clarke, of Meldrum House, a lady of superior intellectual acquirements, who is granddaughter of William Tracy, third son of Judge Tracy, and is still in the enjoyment of excellent health and unimpaired faculties, entertains a distinct and clear remembrance of her grandfather. As far as we have been able to learn, the family of the claimant are not allied to any family bearing the name residing in this or adjoining counties, but stands perfectly distinct as the real descendants of the first Viscount Tracy, of Rathcoole, created a peer for services rendered the crown by raising a regiment.

A young boy found £160 at the fair of Ballina, county Mayo, which he restored to the owner, who liberally rewarded him with six-pence.

Congressional.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

June 9.—The bill to amend the Naturalization law was made the special order for Saturday next. Mr. Trumbull introduced a bill to restore order and peace to Kansas, proposing to bring it under the Territorial Government of Nebraska, which was debated.

June 10.—Mr. Crittenden submitted a resolution requiring the President to send Lieut-General Scott to take command of the troops in and near Kansas, and to restore order in that Territory. Mr. C. supported his resolution in a brief speech, wherein he spoke highly of the character and influence of Gen. Scott. Mr. Mason was not ready to vote upon the resolution. He doubted the propriety of dictating to the President, who already has full power. Mr. Seward was in favor of sending Gen. Scott, but suggested that it be done by joint resolution. The further consideration was postponed for one day. It was proposed to refit and present to the British Government the bark Resolute, found abandoned in the Arctic Regions. Adjourned.

June 11.—The resolutions of the Legislature of Massachusetts on the Sumner outrage were received and ordered to be printed. Motion was made to take up the resolution to send Gen. Scott to Kansas. Mr. Yulee wanted a better attendance. Mr. Clayton urged that something should speedily be done to quiet the public mind. Mr. Brown did not wish to interfere with the duties of the President. Mr. Bell, of Tenn., thought the matter demanded immediate consideration. Mr. Toucey was afraid it would not be dignified to place Gen. Scott in so insignificant a position; nor did he think it proper to meddle with the President's privileges. Mr. Mallory thought that if Congress would stop talking about Slavery, Kansas would soon be quiet. The debate was continued by Messrs. Crittenden, Mason, Clayton, and Seward. Mr. Seward said that peace would come as soon as the people of the Territories were guaranteed the full and ample privileges enjoyed by the people of the organized States; but if they are required to submit to usurpation and disfranchisement, then we have reached the point where peace is impossible. The Senate adjourned before coming to a vote upon the motion to take up.

June 12.—Mr. Hamlin of Maine formally renounced all sympathy with the Pro-Slavery Democracy, and declared that whatever power God had endowed him with should be used in opposition to that party. Mr. Butler then commenced a reply to Senator Sumner's speech but had not concluded when the Senate adjourned.

June 13.—Mr. Butler continued his speech in reply to Senator Sumner. Mr. Wilson briefly rejoined. Adjourned to Monday.

House of Representatives.

June 9.—No quorum.

June 10.—No business was done, except to print the resolutions of the Massachusetts Legislature on the Sumner outrage. Adjourned.

June 11.—The president informed the House, that no official information had been received of the action of the late Peace Conference on the subject of privateering.

June 12.—No quorum, only 106 members answering to their names. Adjourned.

June 13.—No quorum. Adjourned to Saturday.

Buchanan and the Press.

The N. Y. Daily News, reviewing the progress of the Democratic party, says "the era of Jefferson established the great truth, that the people were the source of sovereign power."

"Seven presidential terms passed away, the seventh introducing a period of apathy and indifference, when the monied and manufacturing interests were preparing to saddle the country with monopolies, and to erect a monied oligarchy, in place of the brilliant circle of statesmen like Hamilton, Jay, and King, who opposed the sage of Monticello, and who were foiled by the devotion of the Democracy to far other views than they advocated, with a talent and eloquence that have gilded and adorned a cause that liberty and the Constitution did not sanction. But a mightier hand than man's swayed the destiny of the nation, and raised up our glorious Jackson. Monopoly fell, with all its allurements, as the ideal aristocracy of Federalism had fallen, never to rise again. The struggle was terrific, but the iron will of Jackson never faltered, and the Democracy followed him to victory. Among the illustrious statesmen who aided the Democratic hero, was James Buchanan. Where is the Democrat who will not support the long-tried Buchanan and the eloquent Breckenridge on the manly, explicit, and constitutional platform of the Convention? We have not yet heard of such a one, but we do hear the thundering Aye of the Democracy shouted through every street of the metropolis, and flashed along the wires with the speed of lightning, assuring the nation that the party of Jefferson and Jackson is everywhere up in arms for Buchanan and Breckenridge.

The Cincinnati Daily Inquirer says: "As to Mr. Buchanan's eminent claims and fitness for the Presidential chair, it is needless to speak. For a third of a century he has been an active participant in political affairs. He is the worthy compeer of the great and illustrious race of statesmen of whom Calhoun, Webster, Clay, Wright, and Cass are the representative men. In point of talent, political experience, and personal integrity, he stands at the head of our living statesmen. No man can breathe aught against the pure and unsullied name of James Buchanan. His whole political career has shown him to be a man of true and tried integrity. We have every confidence that he will give the country a firm, wise, and patriotic administration. The friend and early supporter of Jackson, for more than thirty years he has been 'a bright particular star' in the Democratic galaxy."

Again, in allusion to the assertion that Mr. Buchanan once said that "if he had a drop of Democratic blood in his veins he would let it out," the Enquirer says:

"It is hardly necessary to say that this is a pure and naked fabrication, and is utterly without even the semblance of truth. It is true that Mr. Buchanan, when a young man, commenced his political life as a Federalist. But Federalism was not of that unpatriotic kind which characterized that faction in New England, and induced it in the war of 1812 to oppose its own country and take sides with England. On the contrary, among the patriotic volunteers from Pennsylvania who marched to Baltimore to defend that city, when it was attacked in 1814 was James Buchanan.

The Troy Budget is of opinion that "no other candidate would have combined all the elements of strength, which will be secured by the action of the Convention. Mr. Buchanan has undoubtedly had more experience in public life than any other American statesman now living."

The Richmond Examiner believes that the selection of the Convention is "a happy omen for the continuance of the fraternal feeling which has rendered the Democracy invincible. Believing that the crisis demanded such a nomination, it concludes its article thus:—"Identified with the political history of the country for thirty years, familiar with the domestic as well as with the foreign policy of our government, his administration will prove one of the wisest which we have had since the days of James Madison."

The Lowell Evening Advertiser thinks that "no fitter candidate could have been selected," and in a eulogistic sketch of his career says:—"He has not a political character to create for himself by his administration of the offices of the general government, in the executive chair. His opinious on all questions of public interest, are easily ascertained, for he has so identified himself with the public measures of the government for the last twenty years, that there can be no danger of mistake in ascertaining what those opinions are."

The Savannah Georgian without any "personal preference" for Mr. Buchanan over Pierce and Douglas, "is not ashamed to confess, that he is unquestionably more acceptable to the South than either. His high character, long services and approved patriotism, make him the most formidable of all the opponents of Black Republicanism in the North. Fanaticism may swell, and rage around him and dash against him, it cannot overwhelm him."

The Boston Constitution says, "He will (Buchanan,) reconcile the local differences existing in the Democratic ranks, and enable us to present an unbroken phalanx with which to meet the traitors who seek to destroy the freedom and happiness of our country. James Buchanan is our leader. To his hands the banner borne by Jefferson and Jackson is committed. We fight under one well known for his services in the cause of Democracy; talented, trusted, tried and true."

Chronicling the telegraphic announcement of the nomination, the Madison (Wis.) Argus and Democrat says, "It will fall like a wet blanket upon the hopes of Northern disunionists, and be the death-warrant of Black Republican Know-Nothingism once and for all."

The N. Y. Express says:—"The nomination is personally respectable, politically consistent, and probably the strongest that could be made."

The N. Y. Mirror says,—"Mr. Buchanan is a man of eminently respectable character and talent, and the very best and strongest man the Democrats could have named. He will be a hard candidate to beat."

The Journal of Commerce says,—"The selection of Mr. Buchanan will tend to strengthen the the public faith in the fitness of the people for self-government."

Obituary.

Died, on Tuesday, the 3d instant, at his residence in Yonkers, in the 63d year of his age, Mr. James M'Sweeney, a native of Dungarvan, county Waterford, Ireland. He was a true and unselfish patriot, whose fondest aspirations were given to the land of his birth.

MARRIAGES.

At Haddington road, Mathias Sisk, senior master, R. N., to Mary Jane M'Donnell, daughter of Peter M'Donnell, formerly of the Common Pleas Office, Dublin.

At Askamore Church, Michael Kinsella, of Ballylahon, near Gorey, to Miss Doyle, daughter of James Doyle, of Askamore, Wexford.

At St. Mary's Church, Clonmel, Percy Hunt Cullimore, of Cleary's Town, county Wexford, to Catherine, daughter of the late Joseph Cochrane, of Clonmel, Veterinary Surgeon.

At Islington, Donald P. Campbell, Captain 92d Highlanders, of Balliveolan, Argyleshire, to Harriet Elizabeth Hale, daughter of Charles Hale Munro, of Ingsdon, Devon.

At Sixmile-bridge, county Clare, Michael, son of Michael Killeen, of Moloskey, to Mary, daughter of Robert Frost, of Rossmanaher.

At Tulla, county Clare, Edmund Murphy, of Mantle Hill, county Tipperary, to Anastatia, daughter of John O'Brien, resident magistrate.

Hugh Hall, of Cottage-hill, Rathfriland, to Margaret, daughter of Robert Magill, Rathfriland.

At St. Peter's Church Drogheda, James Thomson, merchant, Drogheda, son of the late Mr. Thomson, of Garristown, county Dublin, to Miss Eliza Faulkner, daughter of the late George Faulkner, manufacturer, of Dublin.

DEATHS.

At Ballincara, Templederry, on the 22d inst., Mr. Dennis Crow, aged 70 years, father of the Rev. Patrick Crow, R. C. C., Toomavara. His remains were followed to the grave by one of the largest funerals ever seen in the county of Tipperary.

At Harold's Cross, Mary, the daughter of the late Josiah Anderson.

In Belfast, Jacob Bell, a member of the Society of Friends, a leading merchant in that town.

In Kilkenny, James Seahill, for many years an honest and a faithful assistant of D. Ferguson & Co.

In Limerick, aged 86 years, John Samuel Travernor Baylee.

At Mullagh glebe, county Cavan, aged 76 years, the Rev. Atkinson Coffey.

At Westbourne grove, Colonel James Lewis Basden, formerly of the 59th regiment.

At sea, on board the Blenheim, on her return to England, Harriet, wife of Dr. Graham, of the 81st regiment.

In Denmark street, Limerick, William M'Donnell, aged 33 years.

In Broad street, Nenagh, Catherine, relict of the late John Molony tobacconist.

At Castlebar, Francis, the beloved wife of Charles Malley.

At Tuam, in the 72d year of his age, Charles Blake.

At Clonmel, aged 65 years, Margaret, relict of Thomas Ryan, late of Cottage.

At Castle House, Bray, Brindley Hone, infant son of the Rev. Thomas Moore.

Of brain fever, while on a visit at Rathurles, near Nenagh, Samuel Ashton Yeste Benyon, Lieutenant in H. M's. 63rd Regiment of Infantry, aged 22 years, son of Ashton Benyon, of Stetchworth Park, Newmarket, Cambridgeshire.

At St. Leonard's-on-Sea, Hastings, William Lawson Kennedy.

At Wilton-place, Richard Bourke, Divisional Police Magistrate.

At Bengal-terrace, Finglas road, Edith, relict of Ranual Cooke, late of the Bank of Ireland.

Major-General James Campbell, late of the 51st Regt. Light Infantry.

At the Monastery, Mount St. Joseph, Clondalkin, James Madden.

In Lower Leeson street, Ellen, daughter of the late Francis Cruise, Belgard Castle, county Dublin.

Major-General Sir W. H. Sleeman, of the Hon. East India Company's Service.

Elizabeth Edgar, second daughter of William Reid, 73 High street, Belfast.

At Silverstream, Belfast, Andrew Rowan, of the firm of Messrs. John Rowan & Sons, York street.

Suddenly at Bishop's road, London, Jane, wife of the Rev. J. R. Moore, of Newcastle, Down.

At Ballymacash, near Lisburn, John Jefferson, in the 89th year of his age.

At Fitzwilliam square, West, Dublin, aged 65 years, Colonel Archibald Inglis, late of Carlingwark House, N. B., son of the late Admiral Inglis, of Red Hall, near Edinburgh.

In London, the Rev. G. Grant, Wesleyan Minister, late of Limerick.

In Fishamble street, Thos. Walsh, formerly of Sabine Fields, county Dublin, aged 70.

At Holywood, Anna Maria, relict of the late Joseph Wood, of Belfast, aged 62 years.

Fireworks.

FIREWORKS!

THE only Depot and Agency in this city for RELIABLE FIREWORKS, is at No. 83 LIBERTY STREET, corner Broadway. The assortment (as per sample) comprises a great variety of new designs in Exhibitional Pieces, of the most brilliant colored fires, together with SMALL FIREWORKS of every description. Our patrons, also Committees for City and Country Displays, supplied on the most reasonable terms, by applying direct to Glenn Putnam, Agent for Edge's Exhibitional Fireworks, at 83 Liberty street, New-York. je21 3t

Gould's Eating Saloon—THE BEST AND CHEAPEST EATING-HOUSE in New-York.—"Strawberries Smothered in Cream."—Can anything be more delicious than a "dish of ripe strawberries smothered in cream?" particularly if you drop in at Gould's Saloon, No. 144 Fulton street, and enjoy it in perfection. The berries served here are perfect pictures, large, and of the most tempting lusciousness, and the lacteal accompaniment is none of your sky-blue apology for milk, but the pure article, fresh, thick and creamy. Mr. Gould has one of the best dining places in the city; he serves up daily everything in season, in the cleanest and nicest style. je21 4t

SARAH McFADDEN,
Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,
198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

☞ Mrs. McFadden justly baasts of having made up, for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also, the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport. y21june

CALL ON
THOMAS LYNCH,
OF the "FULTON SHADES," Fulton Ferry, Brooklyn, for the best XX and XXX ales, brandies, and segars.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
No. 13 Chambers Street, New-York.
y2 1ju Collections promptly attended to, and Liens carefully filed, &c.

SYDNEY SMITH.
Published this day,
WIT AND WISDOM OF REV. SYDNEY SMITH.

Being selections from his Writings and Passages of his Letters and Table-Talk. With Notes and a Biographical Memoir, by Evert A. Duychinck; a Portrait on Steel, after G. Stewart Newton; and an Autograph Letter. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

The most important of Sydney Smith's Writings will here be found given entire; while the selection generally presents the most characteristic passages of his "Wit and Wisdom" from the whole. Numerous Miscellanies, of much interest, are included, which are not to be met with in any previous collection of the author's works.

CONTENTS:

Biographical Memoir, by the Editor.
Articles from the "Edinburgh Review" (including the Papers on Female Education, Professional Education, Notices of America, &c., &c.)
Sketches of Moral Philosophy, (including the Essays on the Conduct of the Understanding; on Wit and Humor, &c., &c.)
The Peter Plymley Letters.
Passages from Sermons.
Speeches on the Reform Bill. The Ballot.
Letters on American Debts.
Passages from Letters on the Ecclesiastical Commission.
A Fragment on the Irish Roman Catholic Church.
Letters on Railway Management.
Character of Sir James Mackintosh and of Francis Horner.
Practical Essays, &c.
Passages from Letters.
Table Talk, Personal, &c., &c.

je 7 J. S. REDFIELD, 34 Beekman street, N. Y.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The MAILS FOR EUROPE, via Southampton and Havre, per U. S. steamer Ericcson, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 21st day of June, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.
my17 Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for California, per United States steamer George Law, will close at this office on Friday, the 20th day of June, at 1 o'clock P. M. Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

From California and Nicaragua.

By the arrival of the Daniel Webster, at New-Orleans, we have two weeks' later news from California. Great excitement had been created in San Francisco by the murder of James King, editor of the Bulletin, by one Casey. On the 18th of May three thousand citizens, fully armed, took possession of the jail where Casey, who had been arrested, was imprisoned, and took him, together with Cora, the murderer of the late United States Marshal Richardson, to the Vigilance Committee rooms, where, it would seem, they were investigating their crimes. It was supposed that both the wretched beings would be hung by the people. The old Vigilance Committee has been revived, and they have expressed their determination to put down gambling in the State. The George Law, which is about due at this port from Aspinwall, has nearly two millions in treasure on freight.

From Nicaragua we learn that General Walker had removed his head quarters to Leon. It was rumored that a revolution had broken out in Costa Rica, during Mora's absence with the army in its invasion of Nicaragua. Further particulars may be expected on the arrival of the George Law.

The Dublin Freeman has a "street preaching" paragraph as follows:

Information having been conveyed to the Dublin police that the Rev. Graham Campbell, (one of those persons known as street preachers) was to hold forth at Beresford place, in rear of the Custom-house, at four o'clock Sunday evening, a large concourse of persons assembled in the neighborhood for the purpose of amusing themselves at the expense of his reverence. As the hour approached which was fixed for the commencement of the discourse, a band of wind instruments made its appearance, playing all kinds of airs in every kind of time and tune, the drum, of course, being one of the most prominent features in the musical display. This band was intended to serve as a running accompaniment to the preacher's discourse. The juveniles began to muster very strong as it drew up to four o'clock, one and all full of excitement at the prospect of the fun. A large body of police, under the command of Mr. Superintendent Guy and Inspector Gerrarty, were in readiness at the station-house for the purpose of preventing a breach of the peace. A few minutes before four o'clock three or four gentlemen, wearing white chokers, and dressed in black, made their appearance, and seemed to have only come for the purpose of reconnoitreing; but, for some reason which we were not able to discover, the preacher did not make himself visible, much to the gratification of the police, and to the deep disappointment of the young urchins who had assembled for an hour's harmless enjoyment after dinner. The greatest good humor seemed to prevail, and there was not the slightest indication of riot or disorder.

Amongst the Regiments that took part in the Proclamation of Peace in Dublin, on Tuesday, was the Tipperary Artillery, under command of Major W. H. Massy, and the appearance of this slashing corps created unqualified admiration. While the troops were passing in review before the Lord Lieutenant, a quick-witted move of the band of the South Tipperary won them popular favor.

NEW-YORK CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

"The objects of the Association are, 1st. The dissemination of Catholic and useful knowledge. 2d. To forward the moral and intellectual advancement of ts members. 3d. To create among its members a spirit of harmony and good feeling, that will be conducive alike to their interest and pleasure. These to be attained by establishing a Library and Reading Room, and by Readings and Lectures when practicable."

Contributions of either books or money received at the office, No. 107 Nassau street.

M. T. COZANS, President.
JOSEPH MCGUIRE, Vice-President.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, D. Quinn.
RECORDING SECRETARY, James Fabb.
TREASURER, John Russell.
LIBRARIAN, T. S. Haughey.
DIRECTORS, R. T. Kelly, J. J. Mullen, M. B. Lynch, L. T. Cozans, P. J. McGuire.
m8jun14

HERRING'S
PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

WEEMAN'S IRON RAILWAY MANTFACTORY.
No. 26 Merrimac street, Boston, Mass.
Where he has been for the past thirty years.

ALL persons in want of IRON FENCES, suitable for cemetery, house, garden, Balustrades, &c., can, by calling on the subscriber, purchase a better fence at a lower price, than at any other establishment in the state, as he makes it his entire business.
Jun14m6 EBENEZER WEEMAM.

HANNA & BEEBE,
COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,
No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS
Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists' Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers
Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.
ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.
They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,
Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, O Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather belting.
☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON all CONSIGNMENTS.
Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.
ap193m*

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, May 23, 1856.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Complaint Book, opened at this office on the 1st of January, 1855, is still open for the reception of complaints of municipal abuses of all kinds. So far as the Mayor has the power, he will continue to exercise it for the abatement of any such evils, when brought to his attention through the Complaint Book, or otherwise. The Mayor invites all persons to take this method of reporting to him all violations of corporation ordinances, nuisances, or dereliction of duty upon the part of the officers of the Corporation, and he will, as heretofore, use all the legal means at his command to see the laws enforced, and the interests of the public protected. By order of the Mayor. ALEXANDER MING, Chief Clerk.

Amusements.

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL,
596 BROADWAY,
TWO DOORS ABOVE THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL.
GREAT ATTRACTION.

Monday, June 16th, and during the week—
GALLATEA, FAMINE, VICTORY OF THE AMAZONS, WASHINGTON ENTERING NEW-YORK IN TRIUMPH, THE BENEDICTION, THE DESCENT FROM THE CROSS.
Doors open at 7½ P.M. Performance commences at 8.

Extra Advertisement.

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL, 596 BROADWAY.—Mr. Keller respectfully announces to his friends and the public generalfy, that his BENEFIT will take place on WEDNESDAY EVENING, June 18th.
For full particulars, see programmes.

Mrs. Luby's Academy for Dancing, Deportment, and the Calisthenic exercises, 275 Bleeker street. A Private Class for the above exercises has been formed, and will continue to meet during the month of June, on Wednesday evenings, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Mrs. Luby gives lessons on the Piano Forte, and in the French language. 2tJun2

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening.
JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." —— KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each —— evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. GEO. B. MAGRATH, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (—— ——,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. M. KEATING, Com'dt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White st. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. W. H. LYONS, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 88 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 104 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. PATRICK O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa. M. W. MORRISS, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

Business Directory.

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.
The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,
No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,
AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,
AND
MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,
WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and actien, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,
SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,
OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durab quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

HEAD-QUARTERS OF
BARGAINS IN DRY GOODS!
AT RODGER'S, 340 BOWERY,
Between Bond and Great Jones Streets.

CONSISTING of an elegant assortment of Embroidery and Lace Goods, Barages, Lawns, and Barage-Delaines. With a splendid assortment of Stella Shawls, and the latest styles of Mantillas.

Ladies, bear in mind, we always carry out the adage, that "the nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling" 1m Jun7

REMOVAL.
McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks
Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 86 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

Special Notices.

To the lady readers of this paper.—Ladies, if you wish to get Linen and other Gaiter Boots from 12s. to 20s.; Slipper Ties and Buskins, 1st quality, 8s. to 10s.; second quality, same styles, 6s. and 7s. per pair; boys', misses', and children's Boots & Shoes of all kinds and prices, Patronize
4tjun21 J. B. MILLER & CO., 134 Canal street.

Strawberries and Cherries, Or any other fruit or vegetable, may be effectually preserved in a fresh state for years, by the use of Spratt's Patent Self-Sealing Cans. Full directions for preserving accompany the cans. They are easily opened or closed by the hand with a patent screw attachment, and are guaranteed always to fully answer the purpose represented.

N. B. The Genuine Self-Sealing Can has cast in letters on the cap, "Spratt's Patent." This is mentioned to prevent imposition upon the public, by any spurious or worthless article in imitation. For sale by the proprietors.
2t21ju WELLS & PROVOST, 321 Pearl st.

$30 Dollars Reward will be paid for any information which will lead to the discovery of John Scantling, who left 326 Madison street, N. Y., on the 20th May. He spoke of going to Michigan. He has blue eyes, dark hair, no whiskers, and is slightly lame of his left leg. He is about five feet high, and is a native of the county Kilkenny, Ireland. The subscriber will pay the above named reward.

his
JOHN ⋈ WALSH,
mark
2tjun12 326 Madison street, New-York.

Information Wanted—of MICHAEL CARROLL, and ELLEN CARROLL, otherwise SWEENEY, his wife, late of the town of Galway, Ireland, who left that place in the month of July, 1851, for New-York, and who when last heard from in the month of July, 1858, were residing in New Orleans. Any information of their whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, will be thankfully received.
☞ New Orleans papers please copy. je14 1t

Information Wanted—Of MICHAEL BOODEN, a native of the Parish of Urlingford, near Johnstown, County Kilkenny, Ireland, who left his residence in Ireland for New-York last December. Amy information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, N. Y., will be thankfully received by his wife.

Information wanted. If Patrick Mara Currier, and Michael Mara, Blacksmith, both supposed to be living in Newark, N. J., will forward their address to the Commissioners of Emigration, New-York, they can hear of their brother, who has recently arrived in this city.

Wanted, A situation as Engineer, to run a stationary engine, in any part of this city. Apply to James Casey, 405 Ninth street, opposite the Morgan Iron Works, who will give most satisfactory references.

Information wanted of John Duffy, a native of Castleblaney, county Monaghan, Ireland, by trade a carpenter, who arrived in this city about five years ago, and when last heard from was living at Staten Island. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, will be thankfully received by his wife Alice Duffy.

OFFICE of Receiver of Taxes—New City Hall, Park, May 29, 1856.—Public notice is hereby given that there is no such office as Collector of Arrearages on Personal Taxes, and that no person but the undersigned, or HENRY B. VENN, Esq., appointed for that purpose, to be found at this office, is authorized to receive any moneys due for arrears on Personal Taxes.
je7 6t HENRY H. HOWARD, Receiver of Taxes.

Information Wanted—Of WILLIAM KELLEY, a native of the county Cavan, Ireland, who left this city about three years ago for the State of Pennsylvania. Any information concerning him will be thankfully received by his sisters, Rosie and Anne Kelley, at No. 15 Rose street, in care of Thomas McManus. je14

Business Notices.

Reed's Celebrated London Cordial Gin, having gained much popularity in this country, being distilled the same as that in London, as he was formerly a distiller of the same kind of Gin in England, under the EXCISE LAWS.

This article is used in every hospital in and out of England's great metropolis. Its medicinal properties are invaluable.

☞ This Gin is not an imitation or a mixture of raw materials, of which much is sold in this city, under the name of London Cordial Gin, but a genuine and pure article, equal to any imported.

W. R. takes the opportunity of thanking the public for their liberal support, support, and begs a continuance of the same.

DISTILLERY,

118 East 29th st., New-York, between 2d and 3d avenues.

{ LABORATORY AND CHEMICAL OFFICE,
{ 18 Exchange Place, N. Y., March 4, 1856.

MR. REED: Sir—I have submitted to close examination two samples of London Cordial Gin, manufactured by you, and purporting to equal the English article. I find on comparison with samples of Hodges' and Burnett's previously examined by me, and which I know to have been imported direct, that the quality of yours is by no meansinferior to their celebrated compounds, while the perfect method you posess of rectifying, insures an article of a higher degree of purity and flavor, when it has the equal advantage of time to soften it, than much of the so-called imported London gin. As a medicinal agent and cordial, under proper advice, it may be depended upon, from the care with which you select the essential oils combined with it in the distillation.

Yours, respectfully,
ISAIAH DECK, M. D.,
Consulting and Analytical Chemist.

MR. REED'S Distillery, 118 East Twenty-ninth st., New-York. [my31 3m

"Hereditary bondsmen, know ye not
Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow?"

RICHARD KAVANAGH,

132 and 134 FEDERAL STREET, BOSTON.

THANKFUL to his numerous patrons for past favors, is desirous of letting them know that he has given up the Grocery and Provision trade, and intends in future to devote his untiring exertions to promote their terrestrial happiness in the shape of good Liquors, Segars, to say nothing of a Free Lunch every day at 11 o'clock. Attached is a very handsome Sitting Room, and a splendid Room for Committee Meetings. my31 4t

Smiles many a long, bright sunny day,
When heaven puts on the blue of May.

Ladies, if you wish Gaiter and Button Boots, of all the fashionable styles, at 12s. to 20s, or if you wish slippers, ties and buskins, from 6s. to 10s. per pair, with boys', misses' and children's boots and shoes of all kinds and prices, patronize J. B MILLER & CO., 134 Canal street. [my31 4t

I. E. Tate's Pannus Corrium Boot and Shoe store, for tender feet. A large stock of Boots, Shoes and Gaiters always on hand, in great variety, and made to order at the shortest notice, for Gentlemen, Boys and Youths—wholesale and retail, at the lowest Cash prices. Particular attention is requested to the Pannus Corrium or Leather Cloth Boots and Shoes, for those troubled with corns, bunions or tenderness of the feet. Its qualities for summer boots or shoes, surpass anything ever got up in this country for real comfort, as it keeps the feet perfectly cool, and at the same time is susceptible of the finest polish; for a dress boot more so than any French calfskin, with one half the labor. ISAAC E. TATE.
my 24, 3 mos. 427 Broadway New-York.

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.
Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my3 3m

Furniture.—F. FITZSIMMONS respectfully calls the attention of his customers and the public to his stock of elegant and substantial FURNITURE, (not made for the auction room) consisting of rich Parlor Suites in rosewood; oak Dining and Chamber Sets of every description; Upholstery in all its branches executed in the best mechanical manner. Prices unexceptionable. Warerooms No. 8 Astor place, near Broadway. my24 3m

Lumber and Timber for Export and City Trade.—THOS. RIGNEY & Co. offer for sale AT THEIR YARD FOOT OF THIRTIETH-STREET, North River, a general assortment of LUMBER AND TIMBER, suitable for export and the city trade. SHIPPERS AND BUILDERS will find it to their advantage to examine their stock previous to buying. Apply as above, or to J. PICKARD, Agent, 26 Bridge street. my17 3m*

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and Single counting-room DESKS, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office Desks from 3 to 6 ft., of Mahogany, blackwalnut and oak; cases for Books and pigeon-holes. Office chairs, cushions, lounges and Office Tables of every description. my17 tf

STATEN ISLAND

FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 8 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.
Also ladies and gentlemen's garments, Shawls, &c., &c.
BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 3 John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

$100,000 WORTH OF NEW GOODS!

FROM AUCTION, at LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY. EGAN & CO. have just purchased an entire new lot of Spring and Summer Dress Silks of all styles and qualities, and will sell them at Low Prices in their New Store. In consequence of Overstock of Goods being Imported, Silks have reduced in value full 30 per cent., and we buying them at the reduced prices, can afford to sell the most desirable styles and qualities lower than those that have purchased when goods were high and scarce. We have no Old Stock—no Damaged Goods—no Bankrupt Sale—none of those Humbugs—but we have good PLAID SILKS from 4s. 6d. to 12s per yard; new and splendid Striped Poplins, from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per yard. A large assortment of Black and Colored Silks. We ask but one price, and sell in dollars and cents. Some of the newest STELLA SHAWLS, from $2 50 to $20. A large and splendid lot of CRAPE SHAWLS, and a general assortment of spring goods. Being the only LINEN HALL in the city, and having a buyer in Belfast, Ireland, we are always supplied with the best qualities of LINEN for Shirting, Sheeting, and Damask Table Cloths, by the cloth or yard. Some splendid Damask and Snow-Drop Napkins at $1 50 per dozen. Ten cases of French Printed Lawns for Dresses, will be opened tomorrow and the following day, from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per yard. Marseilles Quilts from 14s. to $5 each. 4tjun7

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street,
ap26 3mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

Analytical and Metallurgical Chemistry and Mining Geology.

DR. ISAIAH DECK,

No. 18 EXCHANGE PLACE, NEW-YORK.

MAY be consulted on all subjects relating to Practical Chemistry, Mining- and Metallurgy. Assays of Ores, Analyses of Minerals, and Mining Products in general carefully and expeditiously conducted, and sound opinions delivered upon the most economical methods of working them, based on the latest chemical discoveries. Geological and Mining Surveys undertaken in any part of the world—Dr. DECK having had considerable experience in this branch of his profession. my31 3m

RAGLAN HATS—Public approval of our efforts as hatters, to supply the lightest neglige hat, at a low cost, in 1854 and 1855, led us to seek among the Paris fabricants for quality and tint suited to our special sales. In announcing the Raglan hat, we deem it due to ourselves to state that, originating with us, we have control of the entire importation, as received per Barcelona and Fulton. The number being limited, gentlemen will do well to make their selections early. For sale at our counters only.
Leary & Co., Leaders and Introducers of Fashion, Astor House, Broadway, New-York. 8tJun7

Medical.

THE CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

BRONCHITIS.—WHAT PRODUCES BRONCHITIS?

FIRST STAGE OF DISEASE.

COSTIVENESS is the first link that connects disease in the System. It creates, induces, feeds and supports Bronchitis; and is slightly or indifferently treated, as though it was of no serious tendency: nevertheless, it has laid the foundation of that destroying disease, without the knowledge of the sufferers, undermining and sapping the very vitals of their constitutions.

Among the numerous class of diseases which afflict man, there is none more silent or treacherous in its approaches or more certain to triumph over its slowly consuming victim, than that formidable and insidious leveller of humanity—Bronchitis, which is produced by catching cold, through a neglect of regulating the state of the bowels when arriving to adult age. It seldom excites attention or alarm in the mind of any person, until it has sown the seed of disease and suffering in the human system, by checking the circulation of the blood; and it is to this source alone that we attribute the awful mortality of Consumption.

The following is a simple but correct illustration, namely:—If the culverts and sewers of the city were choked or clogged up, accidentally or otherwise, what would be the result? An overflow of accumulated filth and slush on the surface of the earth in its neighborhood, until it fills every hole, corner and crevice. This is quite similar to the human body, when the channel or sewer of life, as I may term it, which is the bowels, is checked or confined through constipation or some unnatural obstruction, which prevents the blood from circulating through the general system.

What, then, is the consequence? An accumulation of diseased matter and bile. Where will this bile and poisonous substance go to when it is prevented from taking its natural exit, through the bowels? It must surge itself back again into the blood, to be infused through the entire frame by the agency of the blood, bringing in its passage disease and suffering, and exhibiting itself by pain, nervous sensations and irritation all over the body—producing a bad feeling at the stomach, sourness of the food, a rush of blood to the head, catarrh, bronchitis, a short dry cough, dizziness, pain in the shoulders, and through or under the shoulder blades, cold feet, a peevish and irritable temper, annoyed by this hacking cough, and then gradually begins the expectorating from the throat of a lightish phlegm, resembling boiled starch or tough jelly of various colors, from a light to a darkish substance, and hawked up like a string.

SECOND STAGE.

From this period the patient is aware of some unusual and disagreeable feeling, though he seldom takes the hint till it goes from bad to worse. Catching cold from the slightest exposure, which he cannot avoid in consequence of the blood being in a diseased and corrupt condition for a long time previous to the appearance of those troublous symptoms, through the impure state of the blood, that at every breath the patient draws he inhales a similar quantity of fresh air by the nostrils and mouth, which keeps the tickling that exists in the throat and bronchial tubes in a ferment of irritation—this is the reason why some people complain of catching cold, even when confined to their room. Hence the sufferer is hacking, hawking, or expectorating a little at a time, with the impression that there is something in his throat that wants to come out; and which he desires to get out. There is a frequent desire for heavy sighing, with a dryness of the nostrils, which inclines the patient to pick or scratch them; sleepy, drowsy, dull, and heavy loss of appetite, and confused memory; a stuffing, tightness, and oppression of the chest, with a rawness and soreness of the gullet of the throat. This is caused by the silent enemy that has lurked in the system for months, and even years, and has at last aroused your fears, and well it might; for out of one hundred persons who die of Consumption ninety-nine are owing to disease of the throat alone, though simply called Bronchitis; and wretchedly treated by this self-pretended and dignified class of sheepskin physicians termed M. D.'s, who have proved a curse to the human family. They treat their patient on the following abusive principle, by cutting the tonsols and palate from the throat, as you might cut the gills out of a fish—next comes the solution or wash of nitrate of silver or caustic, and the whalebone swab, to wash and burn away the disease that has occupied the throat. Then comes the application of blister, and Croton oil externally to the throat and neck, to draw out the inflammation, as the physicians suppose (what blind philosophy.) Then comes the quack sheet of their MATERIA MEDICA—Calomel, Antimony, Morphine and Opium, to salivate and lull the feelings of the patient, which adds to the disease and increases the suffering, by giving the disease an opportunity of triumphing over nature. What a delusive idea to think the above treatment would be available in having recourse to those debilitating and irritating remedies of cutting, burning, blistering, purging and starving, which is of itself sufficient to lower and reduce the constitution of an ox.

THE THIRD STAGE

Confirms the above remarks. While undergoing this torturing treatment, the constitution is gradually failing and giving away, in giving rise to more alarming symptoms, evidently preparing its victim for the shroud, while the physician and friends fail to see the cause until those confirmed symptoms of consumption set in, but foolishly assign the cause to some other besides the genuine one, till the disease has reached its meridian, with a complication of fresh symptoms, breathing short and hurried, cough frequent, with an accumulation of corrupted matter, sometimes streaked with blood; profuse night sweats, emaciation and debility; cold chills in the forenoon, with a burning fever after; flesh soft and flabby, the limbs scarcely able to support the body; a susceptibility of catching cold on the least exposure, attended with a hoarseness and loss of voice, with a very heavy expectoration in the forenoon; flying pains in the chest, sides and shoulders, with a severe fit of coughing in the morning, or awaking from sleep. The painful crisis is fast approaching, with a swelling and puffing of the feet and ankles, and frequent attacks of diarrhœa. In females, the symptoms are more distressing at an earlier period than in the male, with a weakness in the back and loins, a sinking and exhausted feeling at the stomach, nervous and excitable, with gradual and frequent interruptions of the monthly flow, and as the disease progresses, a total or final cessation of it, with the harbinger of a broken down constitution which is a discharge of whites, a symptom that proves very debilitating and irritating to females.

All the above symptoms and sufferings are the fruits of costiveness at an early period, accruing to the sufferer through neglect of keeping the bowels in gentle operation, which would circulate the blood, and prove as ventilation to the general system, from the age of 18 to 26, when this disease creeps on and grows on, until every organ in the body is totally disorganized.

My long experience and observations, and my unprecedented success in treating consumption, inclines me to devote the remainder of my life to the cause of suffering humanity. I have cured more consumptive patients in the last ten years than any other doctor in the world in that time, and not by steam, smoke or vapor, nor by smelling medicine through an India rubber or glass tube, but through the selection I make from the forest and verdant meadows. I can always determine on examination whether I can be successful or not, and I speak accordingly. I have made it a rule to treat no disease longer than three weeks. If I cannot check the fatal progress of the disease in that time, I give up the patient as lost, and lead the sufferer to no further expense.

☞ In compliance with the repeated solicitations of consumptive patients living in remote parts of the country, I have opened an hospital at No. 173 Bowery, for the exclusive treatment of those laboring under any species of the above disease, where I can bestow on them the unremitted attention which the seriousness of their cases require; where I can be able to regulate their diet and regimen according to circumstances. Three weeks under the supervision of my especial care is worth four months at a distance.

All persons desirous of medical information can obtain it by enclosing one dollar, when all information and communication will be forwarded on receipt.

D. Durkin, Chronic and Consumptive Doctor,
my31 No. 173 Bowery, New-York.

DR. B. F. ADAMS,

SURGEON DENTIST, (formerly of Barclay street,) feeling grateful for the patronage so liberally bestowed upon him for the last fourteen years, respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he has taken an elegant suite of rooms, at

NO. 122 CHAMBERS STREET,

(near the Sixth and Eighth Avenue Railroads,) where he may always be found, ready to perform all operations pertaining to his profession, in a manner unsurpassed, and on the most reasonable terms. Whole or part sets of incorruptible teeth inserted without pain, on gold plate or gutta percha, excelling nature in beauty and durability. No impure gold or dangerous amalgams used. Irregularities in children's teeth prevented, or of adults remedied. Cleansing, extracting, &c. &c., all at reduced prices. Sets of teeth inserted on Silver or Gutta Percha, for six shillings each. Teeth examined, and advice given free of charge. Please call.
3m7jun B. F. ADAMS, 122 Chambers street, New-York.

DR. J. VOORHIES,

MEDICAL ELECTRICIAN,

NO. 69 SANDS STREET,

Brooklyn.

Office hours from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M.

N. B. All chronic or nervous diseases cured by Electricity in some form. Electro Medicated Vapor Baths ready for operation. Dropsy can be cured by this treatment. Consultations free. m3jun14

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,
ap19 6m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

Medical.

DRS. GILBERT AND KENNEDY,

TREAT

CANCERS, TUMORS, ULCERS, &c.,

WITHOUT SURGICAL OPERATIONS.

OFFICE 746 BROADWAY, COR. ASTOR PLACE, N. Y.

CERTIFICATES FROM

Ex. Gov. T. M. Tucker.	Hon. T. Butler King.	Judge Alex. Walker.
Judge F. W. Huling.	Gen. Narcisso Lopez.	Col. Maunsel White.
Capt. Isaiah Sellers.	Capt. Wm. Leathers.	Thos. E. Bond, M. D.
A. S. Baldwin, M. D.	W. P. Allison, M. D.	J. S. Peacocke, M. D.

PERMISSION TO REFER TO

Ex. Gov. Jas. C. Jones. Hon. Fred. B. Stanton.
B. F. Palmer, Inventor of "Palmer's Artificial Leg."
Francis Grice, Naval Constructor, Navy Yard, Phila.
Proprietors of the Girard House, Philadelphia. my24 1m

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Bosten remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.
ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

"Eye and Ear."—DOCTOR HENDERSON, Oculist and Aurist, 419 Broadway, corner of Canal street, treats all diseases of the eye and ear, without cupping, leeching, blistering or the use of calomel. Within the past two years upwards of thirty cases of blindness from inflamation have been restored to sight, to whom reference can be given, (hundreds of which can be seen in my circular,) by inclosing three postage stamps. Electro-chemical Medicated Vapor and Sulphur, hot and cold water BATHS. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Sundays and evenings by appointment. 419 Broadway, corner of Canal st., New-York. my17 3m
ARTIFICIAL EYES inserted.

H. G. LUTHER,

SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST,

No. 698 BROADWAY, Second House above Fourth st.

HAVING enjoyed an extensive practice during the last twelve years, feels confident of his ability to give perfect satisfaction to all who may honor him with their preference. He is prepared to perform all operations connected with his profession, in the most faithful manner, and in strict accordance with scientific principles, embracing all the recent improvements of the day.
References of the most respectable character given if desired. Patronage respectfully solicited.
☞ N. B. Teeth extracted without pain. my17 3m

Dr. J. J. McGowan, Physician and Surgeon, Graduate of Harvard University, Fellow of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Medical Societies, etc., has removed to No. 69 Canal street, New-York, a few doors from Broadway, where he will attend to calls in every branch of the medical profession. Dr. McG. will devote particular attention to chronic diseases, and those of women and children. m10 1t

New School of Medicine and Pharmacy. The last Unfolding of the Art of Healing. My daily practice proves that I CURE CONSUMPTION, in all its varied forms and most advanced states, as readily as any other disease. Therefore I desire to treat all Consumptives, but particularly those who have tried all other physicians without relief. Mrs. M. J. MARIN, M.D., No. 37. Lafayette place, N. Y. (First street east of Broadway, between 4th and 8th sts.) Office hours: from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., exclusively for Ladies; and from 2 to 5 P. M., for Gentlemen, Wednesdays excepted. All other hours by appointment. my31 3m

THE GREATEST WONDER OF THE AGE!

A REMEDY WHICH CURES IN FIVE MINUTES.—M. LEROUX'S FRENCH CHOLERA COGNAC BITTERS.—This wonderful and scientific compound is recommended by the most eminent and learned physicians of all Europe and America, and enjoys the best reputation of anything similar ever offered. It is without doubt the best, most efficient and generally acknowledged remedy against Cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, and complaints of the stomach in general. The numerous patients who have tried it according to directions, have invariably found relief in a very short time, and the best proof of it is, that since this standard remedy was introducee in the armies of the allies in the Crimea, the mortality of the soldiers from Cholera and similar diseases was reduced by over 75 per cent.; in consideration of which, the inventor was presented by the French and English governments with a gold medal, bearing the inscription, "Hail! M. LEROUX, the great Chemist and inventor, by whose knowledge our armies are preserved from Cholera."

This invaluable preparation is also a remedy for biliousness, indigestion, weakness, and general derangement of the stomach. Upon being taken, it creates appetite, and prevents the heaviness attendant upon eating, by persons who are dyspeptic.

In this city, also, this remedy has been tried with the most undoubted success, and the undersigned can produce the best testimonials of our most celebrated physicians, as to its immediate and complete success, which he will be happy at any time to show to any that may wish to see them. S. STEINFELD, sole agent for the United States, No. 70 Nassau street, corner of John.

P. S.—Those not having money to pay, may call at my place from 3 to 5 P. M. and receive this remedy gratis. my17 3m

TO NERVOUS SUFFERERS.

A Retired Clergyman, restored to health in a few days, after many years of great nervous suffering, is anxious to make known the means of cure. Will send (free) the prescriptions used. Direct to
Rev. JOHN M. DAGNALL,
my10 3m No. 59 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Best Hair Dye.—DR. O. M. BALLARD'S new article received the highest premium at the World's Fair and American Institute, where it was examined by the distinguished Chemists, Dr. Chilton, and Prof. John Torrey, and pronounced the best. For sale by the best Druggists. Principal office and store, 498 Broadway, New-York. my17 3m

The undersigned announces to the legitimate faculty that he has opened a store for the dispensing of pure medicines, chemicals, &c. Having obtained a knowledge of the profession in the best schools in the world, during twelve years, he will be able to compound prescriptions precisely as they are ordered. JOHN. C. GILES, Apothecary,
21ju3m 285 Bleecker, two doors above Barrow.

☞ A CARD.—To the Medical Profession.—A Physician residing in a large and wealthy city, west of New-York, is desirous of selling his Practice, the actual receipts of which amount to $4000 per annum. The appointment of Physician to a Large General Hospital would be also available,—thus securing at once a prominent professional position. Satisfactory reasons will be assigned for the disposal of this fine practice, and a reasonable introduction in the form of a copartnership for a limited period, will be given. Address, &c. &c., to the office of the "Irish News," 29 Ann street.

"TERRA COTTA"

CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental. Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture, lowest rates. LONG ISLAND POTTERY. Depot, 82 Nassau street, New-York. my10 3m

JAMES O'FLYN.
HOWARD HOTEL,
176 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

Advertising Envelope Manufacturer, Embosser, Die Sinker, and General Engraver. Notarial and Lodge Seals, Crests, and Coats of Arms. Seal Presses of every description constantly on hand. 14ju3m

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

Is now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	8s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 8s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

ap198m

NEW STORE

AND

NEW GOODS.

THE subscriber having leased for a term of years the premises

374 Hudson street,

and made exthnsive additions thereto, and having laid in a large stock o

Carpeting and Oil Cloths,

mostly bought at Auction, for CASH, is now prepared to sell them at the following extremely low prices:

Tapestry Brussels, 8s.	usually sold at	10s.
Three Ply Ingrain 8s.	usually sold at	10s.
Superfine do 6s.	usually sold at	8s.
Fine do 5s.	usually sold at	6s.
Common do	All WOOL 3s. 6d. per yard, a price abso-

lately unheard of.

Ingrain, Cotton Warp and Wool Filling 2s. 6d.
Oil Cloths 8s. per yard, usually sold at 5s.

Mats, Matting, Table and Piano Covers, Venetian and Hall Carpetting, Stair Rods, &c. &c.

Clergymen and Churches furnished at wholesale prices.

Goods in all cases warranted as represented.

J. R. Landon, 374 Hudson street, New-York,
3mjun a few doors from Hamersly.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap263m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

P. L. ROGERS,

FOUNDER OF THE ONE PRICE SYSTEM,

invites an inspection of the extensive

SPRING STOCK OF FASHIONABLE CLOTHING,

at his great central wholesale and retail warehouse,

CORNER OF FULTON AND NASSAU STREETS,

opposite the Herald office.

There any gentleman can procure an elegant outfit in twenty minutes Every garment is warranted of the newest cut and of good workmanship.

Parents can fit out a family of boys with equal dispatch from a stock that includes every style, size, color, material and quality.

The selling prices, which are guaranteed to be 25 per cent. under market average, are all affixed in plain figures to the articles, and NO DEVIATION can be made.

The Order Department is stocked with the finest CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, etc., and the Clothing made to measure cannot be excelled in the world, although the prices are far lower than at other establishments.

my24tf P. L. Rogers.

TO THE LADIES—MILLINERY.

A large and beautiful assortment of Ladies' and Misses'

BONNETS, STRAW TRIMMINGS, RIBBONS, FLOWERS, AND MANTILLAS,

At William S. Irvine's No. 112 Canal street.

my31 1mo

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.

my31y

GEO. McDONNELL,

BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURER,

32 PARK ROW, NEXT DOOR TO LOVEJOY'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK.

Boots, Shoes, and Gaiters of the best quality made to order.

3m.my10 Geo. McDonnell.

ROBERT IRWIN,

CHEAP BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

my10 156 Chatham street, opposite James' st., New-York. 3m

R. HOGAN,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

UMBRELLA AND PARASOL MANUFACTURER,

374 BOWERY, NEAR FOURTH STREET.

Repairing neatly executed. my17 3m*

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 193 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap193m

---

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co., C. Meletta, | Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co., James Cook & Co. 6m

---

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHES,

NO. 202 BOWERY.

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jeweled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a ju12m6 workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to.

J. McCARTEN,

WATCH AND CLOCK MAKER,

154 SEVENTH AVENUE.

Between 20th and 21st streets, New-York.

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry carefully repaired and warranted. A good 7jun assortment of watches and clocks always on hand. 3m

---

JOHN FOLEY,

MANUFACTURER OF FINE GOLD PENS

BEST QUALITY ONLY.

GOLD AND SILVER PENCIL CASES.

my24tf No. 168 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

825 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK. 6mJune7

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOLITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

OFFICE, 28½ SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANBURY, Secretary. my31y

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattresses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1 yr E. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this conntry, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

"The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN & McSHANE,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

NEW-YORK. 3m

SHIP STORES SUPPLIED.

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,

at 333 Broadway,

tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

Office 188 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap263m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap263m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

HOSEY & RILEY,

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,

600 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

Private entrance on the first floor, 134 Crosby street.

Hosey & Riley invite their friends to give them a call.

my24 3m

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

DRY-DOCK DISTILLERY.

No. 291 East-thirteenth st., near Avenue B.

JAMES RUSSELL,

Rectifier and Manufacturer of Cordials,

IMPORTER AND DEALER

IN Foreign and Domestic Wines, Liquors, Cordials, &c. J. R. having had long experience in the liquor trade, he has facilities of selecting wines and liquors of the most superior quality, which he offers to dealers and families at the lowest market prices, and flatters himself that a single trial will be quite sufficient to secure custom.

Goods delivered free of expense in any part of the city, and country orders promptly attended to. 3m junl4

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES 6 CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 28, 1856. NO. 12.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XII.

Editorial.

DOWNFALL OF THE AMERICAN REPUBLIC!
IRISH ARM'S BILL!
THE "DIFFICULTY" WITH ENGLAND.
PAYING THE PIPER.

Literature.

Personal Recollections.—The Galway Election—Monahan, the Solicitor-General.
Rise of the Dutch Republic—Motley's History.

Correspondence.

Letter from London—by "Fontenoy."
Letter from Dublin—by "Kilmainham."
Letter from Kilkenny—by "St. Canice."

Poetry.

Reading of the Arabian Nights—by "Enul." Song, to Annie—by John Mahon.

Military.

Military Memoirs.—"The O'Brien Columbian Rifles," of Orange, N. J.
"Columbian Guard," Troy, N. Y.

Miscellaneous.

Latest Irish, English, and American News—The London Press on the Dismissal of Crampton.—Buchanan and the Press—Irish Deaths and Marriages.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. MAHONY, Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. P. WALSH, Cincinnati, Ohio.
—— COURTNEY, Charleston, South Carolina.
BRICE, 100 Exchange Place, New Orleans.
JOHN PLASTO, 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me. — ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O. — DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y. — MORRISEY, " "
McGOWANS, Portland, Me. — DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.
JOHN C. CLARKE, 38 Newark avenue, Jersey City.
B. E. DOWLING, Jefferson st., next the Post Office, Newport, Ky.
M. GRADY. 27 Fayette st., Lowell, Mass.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.
POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

WILLBEPUBLISHEDEARLYINJULY,

THE MAN FOR THE TIMES,

THE LIFE OF COLONEL JOHN CHARLES FREMONT,

And his Narratives of Explorations and Discoveries in Kansas, Nebraska, Oregon, and California.

With a new and accurate

STEEL PORTRAIT,

and other illustrations. One large 12mo. volume, 500 pages. Price $1.

This will be decidedly the most

COMPREHENSIVE

as well as the

CHEAPEST EDITION

of the Life and Adventures of

THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE

that will be published during the campaign; and being mainly his own Narrative of Explorations and Discoveries, it will of course be Authentic.

Liberal discount will be given to persons ordering the work in quantities.

2t28je Miller, Orton & Mulligan, Auburn and New-York.

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.

tf JOHN HAMILTON, S. W. JOHNSON.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL. 4 vols., very scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
HAYES' BALLADS OF IRELAND. 2 vols. in one, 12mo. cloth, $1.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornellan. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.
O'BRIEN'S ROUND TOWERS. Scarce.
MUSGRAVE'S IRISH REBELLIONS. 2 vols., 8vo.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 62 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Shandy Maguire, 50 cts. Griffin's Adventures of an Irish Giant, 18mo., cloth, 25 cents. Wild Irish Girl, 12mo., cloth, 50 cents. Ireland's Welcome to the Stranger, 12mo. cloth, 62c.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street, New-York.

In press, Madden's Lives of Robert Emmett and Thomas Addis Emmet.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

VOLUNTEERS ASSEMBLED IN COLLEGE GREEN—A copy of this rare engraving, (described in No. 10 Irish News) for sale. Price $5.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory, By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to

A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

SYDNEY SMITH.

Published this day,

WIT AND WISDOM OF REV. SYDNEY SMITH.

Being selections from his Writings and Passages of his Letters and Table-Talk. With Notes and a Biographical Memoir, by Evert A. Duychinck; a Portrait on Steel, after G. Stewart Newton; and an Autograph Letter. 12mo., cloth, $1 25.

The most important of Sydney Smith's Writings witl here be found given entire; while the selection generally presents the most characteristic passages of his "Wit and Wisdom" from the whole. Numerous Miscellanies, of much interest, are included, which are not to be met with in any previous collection of the author's works.

CONTENTS:

Biographical Memoir, by the Editor.
Articles from the "Edinburgh Review" (including the Papers on Female Education, Professional Education, Notices of America, &c., &c.)
Sketches of Moral Philosophy, (including the Essays on the Conduct of the Understanding; on Wit and Humor, &c., &c.)
The Peter Plymley Letters.
Passages from Sermons.
Speeches on the Reform Bill. The Ballet.
Letters on American Debts.
Passages from Letters on the Ecclesiastical Commission.
A Fragment on the Irish Roman Catholic Church.
Letters on Railway Management.
Character of Sir James Mackintosh and of Francis Horner.
Practical Essays, &c.
Passages from Letters.
Table Talk, Personal, &c., &c.

je 7 J. S. REDFIELD, 34 Beekman street, N. Y.

OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE.

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

(JAMES B. KIRKER,)

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK,

PUBLISH the largest and finest assortment of Catholic Bibles, Testaments, Prayer Books, Tales, School Books, and other works, to be found in the United States.

An extensive supply of all other Catholic articles always on hand.

Catalogues of their publications sent free of postage.

E. D. & BROTHER HAVE JUST ISSUED

1. THE LOVE OF MARY. Devotions for the month of May. 38c.
2. THE YOUNG CRUSADERS. A tale. 38c.
3. HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR; or Meditations on the Blessed Sacrament. 25c.
4. THE CONVERSION OF RATISBONNE. 25c.
5. CONSCIENCE, or the Trials of May Brooke, a tale by Mrs. A. H. Dorsey. 2 vols; each 38c. 4t May 24

P. O'SHEA,

789 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth,	$0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth,	0 87½
Life of St. Francis of Assiscius. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl.,	0 87½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each,	0 87½
Edma and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth,	0 87½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to	4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to	12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to	12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to	25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

8mos P. O'SHEA, 789 Broadway, New-York.

FOUR NEW VOLUMES

OF

SADLIER'S POPULAR LIBRARY.

☞ These and other books for popular reading, libraries, &c., issued by the publishers, are sent free by post, on receipt of the amount; and if ordered in any considerable number for libraries or prizes, a very large reduction is made. It is hoped that the low terms will induce a very general use of these books.

Just Ready—Volume 10th,

HISTORY OF THE WAR IN LA VENDEE, and THE LITTLE CHOUANNERIE. By G. J. HILL, M.A. With two maps and seven engravings. 12mo, cloth, extra, 75 cents; cloth, extra gilt edges, $1 12.

Volume 11th,

TALES AND LEGENDS FROM HISTORY.

CONTENTS—1. Gonsalvo of Amaranta—2. The victory of Muret—3. The Dominicans Ghent—4. The Martyrs of Stone—5. The Abbey of Premontre—6. Legends of St. Winifride—7. The feast of the Immaculate Conception—8. The Consecration of Westminster Abbey—9. The Monk's last Words—10. The Martyr Maidens of Ostend—11. The loss of the Conception—12. Foundation of the Abbey of Anchin—13. Our Lady of Mercy—14. John de la Cambe—15. The Carpenter of Roosendael—16. The Widow of Artois—17. The village of Blankenberg—18. St. Edward's Death—19. The windows of San Petron o—20. The Vessels of St. Peter.

12 mo. cloth, extra, 63 cents; cloth, gilt, 88 cents.

Volume 12th,

THE MISSIONS IN JAPAN AND PARAGUAY. By CECELIA CADDELL, author of "Tales of the Festivals," "Miner's Daughter," "Lost Genoveffa," &c. &c. 12mo, cloth, extra, 63 cents; cloth, extra, gilt edges, 88 cts.

Volume 13th,

CALLISTA, A Tale of the Third Century. By Very Reverend JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, D.D., Rector of the Catholic University, Dublin. 12mo. cloth, extra 75 cents; cloth, extra gilt, $1 12.

The following extract is from a very long notice of the work in the Dublin Tablet:

"The story is partly interwoven with historical facts, but its author professes, at the outset, that as a whole it is a simple fiction from beginning to end. However that may be, as an instrument of conveying a real and genuine historical knowledge of the days of which it treats, in their aspect toward Christianity, it will probably remain without a rival in the literary world."

Just Ready, the eighth thousand

1. FABIOLA, or the Church of the Catacombs. By Cardinal WISEMAN. Cloth, extra, 75 cents; gilt, $1 12.

"In "Fabiola" it is not difficult to recognize the learning and brilliancy of an eminent person, whose perfect knowledge of the Rome of to-day imparts to his description of the primeval remains of Christian antiquity a truthfulness and value, independent of the rich stores of erudition which he has applied to their examination."—Catholic University Gazette.

2. HEROINES OF CHARITY. With Preface by AUBREY DE VERE, Esq. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

CONTENTS:—1. The Sisters of Vincennes—2. Jeanne Biscot—3. Anne de Melun—4. Louise de Marillac, Duchess de Aiguillon, Madame de Pollalion, Mademoiselle de Lamoignon—5. Madame de Moramion—6. Mrs. Eliza A. Seton—7. The Little Sisters of the Poor.

3. THE LIFE OF ST. FRANCES OF ROME. By Lady GEORGIANNA FULLERTON. With three others; and an Essay on the Miraculous Lives of the Saints. By J. M. CAPES, Esq. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; cloth, gilt, 75 cents.

4. CATHOLIC LEGENDS AND STORIES. A varied and beautiful volume, containing 31 of the choicest specimens, for the most part new to English readers. Cloth extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

5. THE WITCH OF MELTON HILL. By the author of "Mt. St. Lawrence," &c. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; cloth gilt 75 cents.

"We have seldom read a better story than this. If all the volumes of the 'Popular Library' are as good as this, the series will have an immense success. As for the moral and religious tendency of the book, it is excellent. We can conscientiously recommend it.—Catholic Leader.

6. PICTURES OF CHRISTIAN HEROISM. With Preface by the Rev. H. E. MANNING, D.D. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

CONTENTS:—1. Father Azevedo—2. Sister Honoria Magaen—3. Blessed Andrew Bobola—4. Blessed John de Britto—5. The Nuns of Minsk—6. A Confessor of the Faith, 1793—7. The Martyrs of the Carmeg—8. Gabriel de Nailac—9. Margaret Clitherow—10. Geronimo at Algiers—11. Martyrdoms in China—12. Father Thomas of Jesus.

Cloth, extra, 12mo, 50 cents; gilt edges, 75 cents.

Just published, the 5th thousand of

7. THE BLAKES AND FLANAGANS. A Tale illustrative of Irish Life in the United States. By Mrs. J. SADLIER. 12mo. 400 pages, cloth extra, 75 cents; cloth, extra, gilt edge, $1 12.

"The style is excellent, thoroughly natural and unaffected, the narrative flowing, the conversation full of vivacity, and the characters well sustained. ....We cannot but wish it the widest circulation that a book can have."—St. Louis Leader.

8. THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ST. BERNARD. Translated from the French of M. L'Abbe RATISBONNE. With a Preface by Henry Edward Manning, D.D., and a Portrait. 1 vol. 12mo. 500 pages. Cloth, extra, $1; gilt edges $1 50.

9. THE LIFE AND VICTORIES OF THE EARLY MARTYRS. By Mrs. HOPE. Written for the Oratorian's Schools of our Lady's Compassion. 1 vol. 12 mo. 400 pages. Cloth, extra, 75 cents. Gilt edges, $1 12.

D. & J. SADLIER & CO., 164 William street, New-York; 128 Federal street, Boston; and cor. Notre Dame and St. Francis Xavier streets, Montreal, C. E.

THE LONDON JOURNAL

Is now printed in New-York, and published weekly at 60 NASSAU STREET, by J. SMITH. Price two cents each. Subscription terms, one dollar per annum. N. B. All the back numbers, from the commencement of the new volume, can be obtained by applying as above.

Agents wanted in every town in the Union and the Canadas. 2tju21

A VALUABLE BOOK OF REFERENCE.

Will be published in July,

In one volume, 8vo. cloth, price $1 50,

HISTORY OF IMMIGRATION

TO THE

UNITED STATES,

EXHIBITING THE

Number, Sex, Age, Occupation, and country of birth,

OF

PASSENGERS ARRIVING IN THE UNITED STATES,

By sea from Foreign Countries, from September 30th, 1819, to December 31st, 1855.

COMPILED ENTIRELY FROM OFFICIAL DATA.

With

An Introductory View of the Progress and Extent of Immigration to the United States prior to 1819.

And an appendix containing the

NATURALIZATION AND PASSENGER LAWS

Of the United States, and extracts from the Laws of the Several States relative to Immigrants, the Importation of Paupers, Convicts, Lunatics, etc.

BY WILLIAM J. BROMWELL,

Of the Department of State.

tf28je J. S. Redfield, 34 Beekman street.

Wanted.—Good hands to embroider on linen. Apply at GENIN'S Bazaar (under St. Nicholas Hotel,) 513 Broadway. my17 3m

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC.....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC.....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC.....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC.....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $825. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
88 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,
OLD LINE PACKETS,
Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap26 3m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

Shipping.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP LINE.

CITY OF BALTIMORE....CITY OF WASHINGTON.
CITY OF MANCHESTER...KANGAROO.

THE magnificent new steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Leitch, 2,867 tons, 500 horse power, will sail from Philadelphia on the 26th June, and from Liverpool on the 16th July. Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including cooked provisions. Persons wishing to send for their friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—F. S. Saxton.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati————.....Toronto, C. W.—D. K. Feehan.

BLACK BALL LINE

OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,
Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

---

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING,
ROBERT J. DILLON,
HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, } Vice Presidents.
ARTHUR M'AVOY, }
NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICBY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.
Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury,

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

Business Notices.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap26 3m

---

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my3 1y

---

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

3mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

---

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE FOR SERVANTS.

275 BOWERY, NEW-YORK.

MALE and Female Servants can be promptly suited at the above number, with any situation in the city or country, at good wages, in first-rate families, without delay.

N. B. Employers quickly supplied.
3m may 31 ALEXANDER F. RUNGE, Agent.

Wanted, at 766 Broadway, (near 8th street.) Places procured for conductors, Bookkeepers, Clerks, Salesmen, Firemen, Brakemen, Barkeepers, Porters, Waiters, men on Steamers and Railroads, boys for trades, and girls of every description. 21my 3m

French, English, and German spoken. LOUIS KAUFMAN, Agent.

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE for Servants, 129 Waverley Place, two doors from Sixth avenue, New-York.—A large number of competent help can be suited with good situations, in city and country, without delay. Employers in the city and country supplied with the best of female help. [my17 3m] WM. O'BRIEN, Proprietor.

NEW-YORK EMPLOYMEMT OFFICE.

480 Broadway.

HONEST, capable, and faithful servants can at all times find good situations at this office. Protestant and Catholic have equal privilege. Established in 1844 by [3m21ju] T. P. SAUNDERS.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9ih Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap19 3m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap19 1y Thomas Maher.

NEW-YORK CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

"The objects of the Association are, 1st. The dissemination of Catholic and useful knowledge. 2d. To forward the moral and intellectual advancement of ts members. 3d. To create among its members a spirit of harmony and good feeling, that will be conducive alike to their interest and pleasure. These to be attained by establishing a Library and Reading Room, and by Readings and Lectures when practicable."

Contributions of either books or money received at the office, No. 107 Nassau street.

M. T. COZANS, President.
JOSEPH MCGUIRE, Vice-President.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, D. Quinn.
RECORDING SECRETARY, James Fabb.
TREASURER, John Russell.
LIBRARIAN, T. S. Haughey.
DIRECTORS, R. T. Kelly, J. J. Mullen, M. B. Lynch, L. T. Cozans, P. J. McGuire. m3jun14

HERRING'S

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 185, 187 and 189 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

European News.

By the arrival of the U. S. steamer Arago, on the 17th, and the English steamer America, on the day following, we have full files of British papers.

The recognition of the Nicaraguan minister, and the impending dismissal of Crampton, form the leading topics in the papers. We devote considerable space to a full representation of the opinions and speculations in England on the subject.

There is little other news of interest. Spain is said to be preparing in earnest for a war with Mexico. The London Times ridicules the idea as preposterous. The Italian question remains unchanged. It is still discussed in the English papers, though, for the time being, it is superseded by the more engrossing topic of a threatened diplomatic rupture with the United States.

THE DIFFICULTY BETWEEN AMERICA AND ENGLAND.

The London Times of June 2d is much excited in the recognition of Padre Vijil, and believes that "The administration of General Pierce has taken another step in that downward course to which it has resolutely addicted itself ever since its entrance upon official duties." Thus opening, the writer announces that "the matter seems not to be well understood;" of which no better evidence could be given than his own article, a portion of which we extract. It will be seen that the Times but makes it a plea to republish its previous misrepresentations of the Nicaraguan movement, as follows:

"About six months ago a band of adventurers from the United States, under the command of a freebooter named Walker, invaded the Republic of Nicaragua, with no claim or pretext that we are aware of, merely relying on the power of the sword and the superiority of might to right. Success crowned their efforts; they overthrew the existing Government, by what acts of blood and treachery it is not now necessary to state, and installed themselves, for a time at least, in the position of sovereigns of Nicaragua. But the neighboring States of Costa Rica and Guatamala became alarmed, and commenced an attack upon the American invaders, the success of which, according to the last accounts, had declared in their favor and against the piratical occupiers of the country. Walker and his followers have appealed to force, and force seems on the point of deciding against them. The Clayton-Bulwer Treaty binds the American and English Governments alike not to occupy any portion of Central America, and this doctrine has been applied by America with the most unrelenting precision to our proceedings. It was therefore impossible for the United States to take any direct share in Walker's invasion without a most flagrant breach of existing treaties—nay, they are bound by every principle of international law to prevent, by all means in their power, the sending of any support to those of their citizens who are disgracing the American name by deeds of blood and rapine worthy of the most condign punishment. More than this, they have been, recently, insisting, not only on the strictest observance of their neutrality laws, but on a respect for their sovereign rights, which obliges every nation, in its conduct towards another, to consider not merely what is legal, but what may be agreeable and acceptable. No nation had ever bound itself by its own conduct and declarations to more scrupulous and even punctilious reverence for the rights and feelings of others. The course of the American Government, therefore, would seem to have been exceedingly plain—to have left Walker and his followers to undergo the fate they so richly merited, and to take credit to themselves for the rigor with which they observed that neutrality and respected that treaty, which they accuse us of violating and disregarding. * * * *

"The President has sent down to the Senate a message, in which he broadly professes the doctrine of recognizing a Government de facto, whatever its origin, and thus has no difficulty in concluding that the Government of Walker is entitled to this recognition. Consequently, though there is now residing in Washington a certain Mr. Marcoleta, representative of the late Government of Nicaragua, who protests loudly against the proceeding, the President has received the Ambassador sent by Walker, and thus recognized his Government as one with which the United States may enter into an alliance, and one in whose service her citizens may enrol themselves without any violation of neutrality. The effect of such a step will, of course, be to send to the assistance of Walker and his associates hundreds of unquiet spirits from every part of the Union, and to involve the United States virtually, though not ostensibly, in war with Costa Rica and Guatamala.

* * * *

"The recognition of such a power is a melancholy proof of the state of political morality which could counsel such a step, and the impotence of considerations of right and justice to restrain the Government of the great Transatlantic Republic from the most dangerous and unjustifiable courses.

"At the same time, the real nature of this proceeding must not be misunderstood. It is an alarming manifestation of the ideas that actuate the American Government, and leads to most disagreeable anticipations as to the possibility of an amicable solution of any dispute with men who seem to recognize no other law than their wishes and their passions. But it is no cause of war, it is not even necessarily a ground of diplomatic complaint. The Clayton-Bulwer Treaty has not been in terms violated, and it may probably be expedient in the present critical state of the relations between the two countries rather to pass this matter by in silence than to incur the risk of introducing fresh difficulties into a discussion already sufficiently perilous, or give an excuse to those who are even now only too ready to seek an occasion of quarrel. If war do come, we must seek it as we may. Let us, at any rate, have the satisfaction of reflecting that this greatest of human calamities has not been precipitated by any undue sensitiveness or any avoidable interference on our part.

The money article of the same date says:

"The confirmation from the United States this morning of the recognition of the piratical Government in Nicaragua caused the funds to open at a further decline of three-eighths per cent., but a recovery almost immediately took place, which was in a great degree maintained throughout the day. * * * The fact that the Democratic nomination for the next Presidential term was to take place to-day, the 2d of June, at Cincinnati, rendered it probable, however, that a less violent course would soon be adopted, as after that date President Pierce and his rivals will have less inducement to pander to the popular passions. Meanwhile, the nature of the arguments used to justify the recognition of Walker is clearly seen. In professing to take legal proceedings against Walker's agents and followers at New-York, the Government had already denounced him as a pirate, and since that time nothing has occurred except his defeat in the war waged by the Costa Ricans in defence of their independence, and which has resulted in his being threatened with extermination."

In its issue of the 3d, the Times continues its criticisms and speculations on the policy of our Government in general, and the dismissal in particular:

"The yet more recent intelligence which we have received from the United States leaves us little reason to doubt that the Government of General Pierce will not stop short in the career on which it has embarked, but will follow up the reception of the Minister of General Walker by the dismissal of the Minister of Queen Victoria.

"The same electioneering necessities which make the representative of a band of lawless freebooters a fit guest and companion for the chief magistrate of a Christian and educated Republic have decreed that, in spite of our earnest wish to atone for the offence we have unintentionally given, and our abstinence from any thing which could by any possibility aggravate the dispute, we must undergo the indignity of seeing our Minister dismissed from the diplomatic circle at Washington for offences supported by testimony on which we should never dream of convicting the basest of mankind. The Presidential election must be carried, at whatever price, and it is deemed by the present Ministry better to plunge their Government into any amount of disgrace, and their country into any degree of danger, than to lose a single vote which may be gained by insolence to allies or union with criminals.

"At this critical time nothing is more melancholy than the attitude of the American press; at least of that portion of it which we have seen.

"We seek in vain for something on which to anchor our faith; something animated by a higher principle than that of the most momentary and groveling expediency, and we seek in vain.

"Still, even the dismissal of Mr. Crampton and the dismissal of Mr. Dallas, which must immmediately succeed it, by no means imply a state of war, or are even necessary preludes. We may be at peace with America, though without any diplomatic representative; and, perhaps, at the point at which matters have arrived, the absence of an Ambassador may in some degree diminish the apprehension of danger. When one party is bent upon fixing a quarrel upon the other, the fewer points of contact they have the more likely is the desire of the more pacific party to be attained. The less they see of each other the less likely will the embers of smouldering discontent be to be fanned into a flame. Besides, with us time is of the very essence of the case. As war is threatened for electioneering objects, if the rupture is adjourned till the elections are over we are comparatively safe.

"The American papers anticipate that, after a meeting which was to take place on the 2d of June for the purpose of naming a candidate for the Presidency, the fever in the blood of the Washngton Cabinet would begin to subside. At any rate, when the Presidential election is over, we may reasonably conclude that the urgent necessity which is felt for a quarrel with England will be over too, and the new incumbents of office will turn their attention to filling up places, rewarding friends, and punishing enemies, and leave us, if they have left us at peace so long, in undisturbed possession of the blessing of which they now seem so anxious to deprive us. Everything, therefore, combines to inculcate upon our Government a temperate (we had almost said a temporizing) policy, which may give angry passions time to cool, selfish objects time to be realized, and popular good sense time to decide on the merits of the dispute.

"We can assert our own dignity without peevish haste; nay, all the better that we do not feel driven to show an irritable or quarrelsome spirit. We must endure no insult, but we must not be eager or anxious in endeavoring to discover offence, even where it may perhaps be intended. It well becomes us, as the elder, and certainly not the less powerful State, to be slow to believe that any Government can deliberately intend to seek a quarrel with us, and, even if satisfied that this is the case, to leave them up to the very last moment the most ample opportunity of reconsideration and retreat from a position hastily and unadvisedly taken up. The consciousness that we are equal to any encounter that may be forced upon us may well teach us patience and long-suffering. Still it must be confessed, though recent events in the United States do not menace us with immediate war, and though a strong effort on behalf of their country made by those classes which take little interest in ordinary politics may, perhaps, still arrest the course of the Government, that each new account we receive shows more and more clearly the predominance of a spirit fatal to relations of permanent goodwill and amity between the United States and any Government faithful to those principles and traditions of which England may not unreasonably boast to be the representative. We have to do with men who habitually subordinate foreign to domestic politics, and who have now finally deserted the safe and honorable course of trusting to internal growth and development to secure their greatness, and have embarked on the endless and resistless career of territorial conquest and annexation. If we be so fortunate as to get over the present danger, we cannot, therefore, hope for a long respite. Some new nation may be found, weak, disunited, and tempting—some new combinations of parties which can only be secured by raising anew the war-cry against England, until at last, in some unhappy moment, the pretence so often repeated will turn into grave earnest, and both nations will be condemned to walk in tears of blood—the one that she had advanced so far; the other that without dishonor she could recede no further."

On the succeeding day the Thunderer follows up with "fresh intelligence" regarding the ministerial movements in the United States:

"We fear," it says, "that the letter notifying to this Government the dismissal of Mr. Crampton may be every day expected in England. This event, which, seen through the mist of the future, was calculated to inspire the most gloomy apprehensions, seems to have lost a little of its magnitude as it comes nearer, and to be, after all, a not unendurable evil. Considering how much we have already borne—how we have apologized and reapologized—how we have offered to refer our case to arbitration, and submitted to see that arbitration refused—how we have argued, expostulated, and remonstrated, and all to no purpose, we may well allow this incident to pass over with the rest. We have, at any rate, in this case the melancholy satisfaction that we are able to make a complete reprisal, and that a fortnight after Mr. Crampton has ceased to represent us at Washington, Mr. Dallas will no longer exercise his functions as Representative of the United States at the Court of St. James. There will, however, be this remarkable difference between the two cases—that Mr. Dallas has been treated with all respect, while Mr. Crampton will be ordered to leave the territory of the Union after having endured more than probably any British Representative in any foreign Court during the present century has been called upon to submit to. Not only has Mr. Crampton been subjected to a virtual trial in the persons of Messrs. Hertz and Strobel, whose veracity he has publicly and solemnly disputed, apparently not without very sufficient reason, but a new method of annoyance has been discovered, by which it is sought not merely to give a color to his dismissal, but to affix an indelible stain on a hitherto spotless character, and to send our Minister back to England not only dismissed, but degraded. Mr. Crampton has advisedly stated in his letters to Lord Clarendon that Mr. Clayton, Mr. Marcy, and Mr. Cass have severally admitted to him that Ruatan is an undoubted British possession, with which America has not the slightest claim to interfere. This statement is met with denials more or less earnest from the different persons implicated by it. But, besides these, evidence is now produced that Mr. Crampton has himself admitted the falsehood of his own statements. What answer our Minister may be able to make to these accusations we do not know. In the meantime it seems very difficult to believe that a man of experience and ability should make deliberately and advisedly official statements which he has felt himself, subsequently, when challenged, obliged to withdraw. Here are Mr. Crampton's own words in the very last letter of the blue-book on Central America: "It will be within your Lordship's recollection that Mr. Clayton was informed by Sir Henry Bulwer, before the treaty of 1850 was signed, that Ruatan was de jure and de facto a British possession; and Mr. Clayton has on various occasions since, in conversation with me, stated that he considered Ruatan as much a British possession as Jamaica or any other British West Indian island." It seems incredible that such a statement can have been disavowed so soon after it was made, and under circumstances so critical, and yet this is now the accusation which is pressed against Mr. Crampton, and which we have reason to believe the United States Ministry intends to support. We must hear both sides before we condemn any one, but to us it certainly looks as if—the attempt to injure Mr. Crampton by the evidence of Hertz and Strobel having failed—some new device was to be hit upon in order to justify, in the eyes of the American people, the determination of the Government by some means or another to remove the representative of Great Britain. At any rate, if Mr. Crampton only remains at Washington to be held up to the American people as a man perpetually striving to undermine them by intrigue, or traduce them by calumny; if an institution, introduced and devised in the interests of peace, is to be perverted for the purposes of mutual irritation and recrimination, it would seem far better that, for a time at least, diplomatic intercourse should cease, and, at any rate, that this ground of offence should be taken away from between us. The American Government is doing its utmost to reconcile us to the impending dismissal of our Minister, and to convince us that his absence, however much to be regretted in ordinary times, is now a less evil and danger than his remaining in a place where offence seems so sure to be given and taken.

All we can say is, that we have waited and appealed in vain; that step after step has the Government of General Pierce advanced in its career of violence and aggression, while no voice has been raised, no hand stretched out, to arrest a course so full of danger and discredit. America will not submit to arbitration, because she is determined to seize Nicaragua whether the true terms of the Clayton Treaty authorize the seizure or not, and every advance we make is sure to be met in a spirit which seeks grounds for provocation out of every effort to conciliate. From the people of America, in whose name these things are done, but with whose consent and assent we firmly believe they are not done, we seek for aid in vain. They give their Government but little support, but they do nothing to control it, and by their Constitution they are unable to remove it. Under these circumstances, we can only reiterate the suggestions we have made before—that we should avoid all occasions of offence, withdraw all points of contact, and wait with patience to see whether the objects of the American Government may not be satisfied by something short of the last extremity.

The following article which we reprint almost complete is something different in its nature. It is from the London Telegraph of the 2d inst.

ALARM OF THE POPULAR PRESS IN ENGLAND.

The question is a simple one, and easy of solution. Is it worth our while to expend several millions of money, sacrifice several hundred thousand lives, jeopardize our commerce, lose our colonies, impoverish our country, and grind down with almost unbearable taxes, imposts and exactions, the hard-worked millions of these islands, all for one object—the retention of a Mr. Crampton, formerly a government clerk, as our Minister at Washington—a Mr. Matthew, formerly a sporting officer in the Guards, ejected for bribery from a seat in Parliament, and then a Governor of the Bahamas, which post he resigned in consequence of the dissatisfaction caused by his conduct as our Consul at Philadelphia—a Mr. Barclay, who has held a snug berth for years as Consul at New-York, and who, during that period, must have amassed enough money to retire with competence for the remainder of his days—and, lastly, to retain a Mr. Rowcroft, of whom we know nothing, as our Consul at Cincinnati?

For the purpose of retaining these four individuals as our accredited agents in the United States, against the express wishes of the American Government, shall England go to war with our powerful trans-Atlantic cousins? Surely the war just terminated by a disgraceful peace, which we were obliged to accept, ought to be a lesson to curb the overweening pride of our countrymen. As to the performances of our army, the least said the better. Our men were brave to a fault, and that is all that can be conceded to the service. As to the genius of our officers, it has been proved to be beneath contempt. We had not enough military tact to keep a brigade of horses from starving; and the entire staff of the British army—engineers, artillery, cavalry and infantry—were unable to devise a scheme to place under shelter a squadron of dragoons in the field. Civilians could construct a railway in an enemy's country, several miles in length, hut and shelter the navvies employed, feed their men, and perform their duties without one single instance of failure. Civil engineers did this, because they were practical men, and because they were not checked and curbed by spurred and plumed staff nonentities. If the construction of that railway had been left to the army, not one mile of it would be at the present moment finished; and, during the progress of that mile, some hundreds of men would have been flogged at the triangles by our Provost Marshals. So much for the proved military genius of our officers. As to our Navy, we had old Admirals suffering from the gout, living on port wine, and, in inspired moments, under the influence of the juice of Oporto, raving about "sharpening their cutlasses," bearding the Muscovite in his stronghold, and threatening to bring forth the reluctant Russ, and make him fight! And how did we manage that fight? Our wooden walls battered down, at long range, Bomarsund; did not venture to Cronstadt, but sacked and burnt some dozen Finnish villages—and here we have the sum total of our naval achievements. We had 70,000 gallant sailors ready to fight, and not one head to direct our floating armaments. At home we bungled at the Admiralty, and on the eve of signing a humiliating peace we had launched when too late a swarm of gunboats. The peace concluded, we had a grand bungle, called a review, at which we paraded several scores of ugly mortar and gunboats, all nearly gunwale under with the weight of metal on board, and in smooth water, with wind and tide, not progressing at the rate of above a mile and a half per hour. We made a grand parade when the steed was stolen, a day after the fair, of what we could do on some future occasion, and thus terminated our naval triumphs.

There is no use concealing the fact, we are not now in a position to go to war. Our military and naval establishments require a remodelling before we can safely cope with another enemy. As the services are at present constituted, officered and handled, we have no hope from their prowess when placed in antagonism to a young, brave, and powerful nation. Poor Russia! at the best she was but a heavy enemy. There was no vitality in her. Her armies were slaves, and the knout was the only incentive to action. Her navy was only for show. Her sailors were fresh-water salts—a sort of brackish imitation of the nautical tar. And yet we failed to humble Russia, backed as we were by France, and, after the expenditure of some hundred millions of money, and the sacrifice of a gallant army by gross mismanagement, we captured half a fortress, and, satisfied with that triumph, we concluded peace, and left the enemy not minus one yard of territory formerly possessed by her, and paid ourselves all the expenses of the war. This should be a sufficient lesson to curb our belligerent propensities.

A war with the United States would be a very different kind of affair. In that Republic we have a powerful foe—the American flag floats in every sea. Her sailors are sailors. Her ships equal our own in tonnage. There is no cooping up her ships in a Sebastopol harbor—ior the American harbors are numberless, and her steamers and ships are the finest specimens of naval architecture afloat. It was all very well our "talking big," and bragging in the Bunkum style, when the war with the United States was only an idle rumor. We could then afford to reciprocate a joke with our cousins, who talked of "beating all creation," and rattle on about bombarding the Atlantic cities. That was all, however, very "big talk," and is much easier said than done. In the war of 1814 we never succeeded in firing a broadside into an Atlantic City, and our nearest approach to such an achievement was at New-Orleans, the remembrance of which should crush our high-flown ideas of battering down American towns. It must, further, not be forgotten that there is not one harbor on the Atlantic coast which could not easily be closed to all approach from the sea, and that as effectually as Sebastopol harbor was rendered inaccessible to our fleet. As to any hope from the diversion in our favor of the slaves in the Southern States, we must not forget that in 1814 the slaves remained true to their masters, and we are not aware that the "darkie" element is one whit more enlightened now than it was then. A war with the United States would, in fact, be a guerilla war upon the ocean. Her ships would prey upon our commerce, and countless privateers would swarm the ocean patch. In fact, during that war, all our commerce would be at an end. Our mills in the north would stop for the raw material—the cotton of Louisiana would be wanting to feed them. Hundreds of thousands would be thrown out of work. Then, as for our colonies, the first act of war would be tantamount to a "declaration of independence" for Canada, the West Indies, Australia and the Cape. The Muscovite would again sniff the tainted atmosphere of blood. Persia with the Russ would then indeed have a fair chance of an invasion of India, and could we then hope that our gallant ally will remain faithful to England in the immensity of her fresh warlike entanglements? The idea is absurd. No one expects it. A war waged upon the great powers of the earth must necessarily place France in antagonism to England. Then let us see how we would stand: England versus the world. The struggle would be a fearful one, and we tremble to contemplate the contingencies of a termination to it. To expect that our own shores would never experience the horrors of war would be to hope for too much. Half a million French soldiers would, doubtless, not remain inactive, viewing the smiling fields of England only from the Napoleon Column at Boulogna.

The Daily News follows in a tone somewhat between the Times and Telegraph. It has much of the impertinence of the former, but the well-founded fright of the latter is plain enough in it. It is not, however, so outspoken or candid as the Telegraph. It says:—

The aspect of the latest news from the United States is undeniably ugly. Still we will not believe that the Governments in London and Washington can be so insane as to risk a war, the results of which must be so tremendous, on such miserable grounds of quarrel as they are debating about. If there is a war, it will be a mere buccaneering war. The United States have no standing army; they cannot invade England; the immense extent of the Republic's territory, and the thinness of the population, enable it to laugh an invasion to scorn. But, on the other hand, the coasts of England and the United States are equally destitute of fortifications, and open to predatory incursions; and both nations have hordes of unarmed ships in every sea that would be an easy prey to vessels of war.

The only way in which either state could harm the other, would be by shelling and burning seaport towns, by sinking and capturing merchant vessels. Fights there might be between single men-of-war or small squadrons, but there would be no battle like the Nile or Trafalgar, for the simple reason that the United States have not a large enough fleet. While the war lasted, therefore, the efforts of the belligerents would be almost exclusively confined to predatory and destructive operations against private combatants to the level of the moss troopers or buccaneers of former centuries. The loss on both sides would be enormous. The mere paralysis of productive industry produced by the cessation of commercial intercourse, would spread bankruptcy and beggary through every district of England and the United States. And all this waste and misery to be incurred on flimsy points of honor, about which a brace of Irish fire-eaters of the olden time would have hesitated to exchange shots!

With regard to the enlistment question, the United States have suffered no detriment from the operations of the English Government. The Cabinet of St. James' has again and again declared it had no intention to injure or affront the Government of Washington, and that it is sorry that it should innocently have given occasion for umbrage. As to the American Isthmus, both Governments are loud in their protestations of thair determination not to acquire any new territory there; and in truth, such acquisition by either would be gaining a loss. The pecuniary interest of both countries in the questions at issue would be outrageously over-estimated at a penny sterling. England, we know has no desire to act uncourteously towards America; and America, we hope and believe, has no desire to act uncourteously towards England.

The whole controversy between the two governments arises from their reluctance to express the same ideas in the same words and phrases. How the despots of the world will laugh to see the two most free and enlightened nations of the age cutting each other's throats and destroying each other's property for such pitiful no-reasons! Such, they will exclaim, in scornful triumph, are the fruits of free institutions; these are the consequences of allowing people to govern themselves!

We address these considerations alike to Englishmen and Americans, for we cannot regard any war between England and America—and that is our great objection to one—in any other light than as a civil war. We know that any English Government that by unjust or even discourteous conduct towards America shall render war inevitable, will be driven with disgrace from power. On former occasions, we do not deny that English Governments have been too apt to treat Americans with a supercilious affectation of superiority. We admit that some of Lord Palmerston's antecedents warrant suspicions on the part of Americans that he has still some of the Old World leaven about him. But we have every reason to believe that his colleagues are superior to all such silly and antiquated prejudices; and we know that his lordship is not the man to allow any personal feeling (or principle) to interfere with his tenure of office.

We say, that on the whole the conduct of the existing English Government throughout this disagreeable controversy, if not always remarkable for prudence, has always been fair and courteous. The difficulties regarding Central America they offer to refer to arbitration; they disclaim any intention to act in contravention of the laws of the United States in the unlucky enlistment affair.

The News also takes refuge in the "Presidential necessity" to excuse the American action to its readers. It relies much on the cordiality which does or should exist between the two countries, and thinks that the reception of Padre Vijil demonstrates that "as little confidence can be placed in the prudence as in the principle of President Pierce."

The London Morning Post, which has published several false reports recently respecting American affairs, caused a great excitement by making the following editorial announcement:—

"The Government of the United States has intimated to Mr. Crampton its desire that he will forthwith quit the American territory, and His Excellency, in consequence has retired from his post and arrived at Toronto, Canada." The Globe and other journals immediately contradicted the statement, and said it was merely a random statement by passengers per "Atlantic."

The Paris correspondent of the same paper writes:—"I believe I am corrrect in stating that the French Government has used every effort to remove those unhappy complications, which have lead to the suspension of diplomatic relations between England and America. The Government of the Emperor will I understand, continue to exercise its good offices in the same spirit of reconciliation, and should the two nations be found in actual war, no doubt England may reckon on the active alliance of France."

On the succeeding evening, Mr. Disraeli put the question direct to Lord Palmerston, who made a shuffling reply, to the effect, that he understood so from an indirect source, but Mr. Crampton not having himself said so, he (Palmerston) had no statement to make.

In the House of Lords the Earl of Hardwicke put a similar question, to which the Earl of Granville replied that the Government had no information on the subject.

Sir E. Bulwer Lytton said in the House of Commons:—that he would put a question of importance—namely, with regard to relations with the United States. The House would remember that some time ago he had withdrawn a motion of which he had given notice, on the Central American question, because the Government then stated that they had made an offer of arbitration to the United States, and that they were in daily expectation of a reply. Since that period, however, grave events had occurred. The proceedings of Gen. Walker in Nicaragua had been recognized by the Government of the United States, which had sent a vessel-of-war there, he would fain hope for the purpose of observation, and there was by the last accounts from America every prospect of an invasion of the Mosquito Territory on the part of that power of which Gen. Walker was the head and dictator, with the view to annex it to Nicaragua, and the House would remember that this country was pledged to protect that Territory from external invasion. A grave responsibility rested upon the Government, and he would ask in this state of affairs, whether in the interval which had since elapsed, any steps had been taken to press the Governmen of the United States for a reply.

Lord Palmerston said, I am unable to give any definite answer to the question with which the honorable Baronet concluded his statement, namely, "What particular steps had been taken during the last few weeks to obtain an answer from the American Government, with regard to the subject of arbitration on the Central American question."

I can only say this, that the American Government have been made fully aware of that offer having been made on the part of her Majesty's Government, and we have not thought it necessary as yet to press, in any special manner, for a reply. With regard to the general tenor of the honourable Baronet's observations, I quite agree with him that in the present state of things between the two Governments, it would be inexpedient if the opinion of the Government was to be expressed. I have no hesitation in saying, that I feel the interests of the country and the prospects of the permanent maintenance of amicable relations between this country and the United States, would be best promoted by the continuation of that forbearance, that judicious forbearance, which the House has hitherto shown.

Upon other occasions of somewhat similar character, when questions of importance were pending in reference to the last war, or the negotiations by which it was concluded, this House has acted in a manner most honorable to its judgment, by abstaining from throwing any possible difficulties in the way of the Government by entering into premature discussion of such questions. The questions now pending may be of a very grave character, and I hope—I sincerely hope, and not without good reason—that these discussions may terminate without any interruption to the peaceable relations between the two countries (hear, hear.)

Whatever cause there may be for collision, it is to be hoped that the good sense of both sides of the water may prevent any unnecessary collision; but certainly discussion in this House which must be productive of a conflict of opinion—some too much upon one side, and some too much upon the other—could not fail to be attended with injurious results. Now I may be permitted when upon my legs to refer, though I am not quite sure whether the honorable Baronet alluded to it, to a question put yesterday whether Mr. Crampton had retired from Washington. I stated that we had indirectly received information that such was the case. I learn from my noble friend at the head of the Foreign Department that the information came by the Cunard steamer which left Halifax on the 22d of May. Yesterday evening there was another packet from New-York, which left there on the 24th. This packet did not bring any confirmation of the report of the 22d. We are therefore not in possession of any official information on the subject (hear).

The arrival of the Atlantic was anxiously awaited as Mr. Crampton was expected to be on board, and when it was ascertained that he was not, considerable relief was manifest.

Russia.—The Czar has made the following diplomatic appointments: M. Budberg, Ambassador at Berlin to Vienna, replaced at Berlin by Baron Brunow; Prince Dolgorowski, formerly Minister of War, Ambassador to Paris, and Count Chreptowitch Ambassador to London. The Central Committee of the Polish Democracy have have published a protest against the terms in which the Czar granted an amnesty to Polish refugees. They assert that in taking up arms for their national independence in 1830 they fulfilled a duty—not anything to be pardoned—and they could not now, without renouncing their country's claims, accept the title of pardoned rebels.

France.—The French papers are filled with accounts of destructive inundations. The Emperor's visit to Lyons and other scenes of the calamity, has gained him immense popularity. The exent of the disaster is very great. Five hundred houses were destroyed at Lyons, and one hundred and fifty at Avignon. At the latest accounts the waters were subsiding. Ten millions of francs had been voted by the Government for the relief of the sufferers, and the Empress had opened a subscription list also for their benefit. The Agricultural show at Paris continued to be a great source of attraction. The liabilities of M. Place, bankrupt Director of the Credit Mobilier, was estimated at eighteen million francs.

Italy.—A Paris dispatch states that the notes presented by France and Austria to the Neapolitan Government are nearly identical. Austria objects to foreign active interference, and hints that the present crisis has been planned by Sardinia, stating, however, that Austria has no desire to interfere with the liberal institutions of Sardinia. France, however, hints at an intervention, should an outbreak take place in Naples or Sicily.

In the British Parliament Lord Clarendon has consented to produce the papers addressed by Sardinia to the Conferences. He added that he had reason to believe that both France and Austria were desirous of removing their troops as soon as possible from the Italian territory.

The Piedmontese Chamber of Deputies has presented Gen. Marmora with an acre of valuable building land within the City of Turin.

Mazzini announces his intention of withdrawing altogether from politics and emigrating as a private citizen to the United States.

Spain.—The fleet to be sent to Mexico was reported to number eleven ships-of-the-line, three frigates, two corvettes and four steamers.

The East.—The dates from the Crimea and Constantinople are to the 21st ult., but nothing of importance had lately transpired at either place.

"A Damned Irishman."—It is painful to hear such an expression, containing an invidious allusion to a nationality. It is not inconsistent with those whose narrow views herd them in Know-Nothing organizations, to employ such language, but we regret to hear it sometimes outside their ranks, from those whom we presume use it thoughtlessly and as a ready escape of a sudden petulance, rather than with any serious implication. To reflect one moment upon making the nationality of an individual the basis of contemptuous expression it will be seen that it is one of the meanest acts one can be guilty of—as is the use made for a similar purpose of any accidental circumstance peculiar to an individual over which he can have no control.

In some parts the world Americans and Yankees are so called in contemptuous derision, and at Panama the miserable demi-devils rushed with gun and machete upon their victims with what is translated "damned Americans," and "damned Yankees!" Such epithets are easy, and while in themselves meaning nothing in the motive, so far as any exists, of their use, they show a mean, contemptible spirit, and on those they are addressed to, they fall with galling irritation.

If Irishmen are not so well educated and of as good habits as older citizens, the fault is not theirs, but of oppression which has kept a really brave and generous people under for so many years, and from which, by the fortunate aid of our geographical position in a great measure, it is our happiness to have escaped and to have established here, by fraternally banding together without national distinctions for the common defense, a republic which as the common inheritance welcomes to its soil and its privileges the oppressed of the eastern world, where being educated and nurtured by our institutions they may become as worthy as the worthiest.

No better blood than the Celtic flows in the human family; it has produced the most commanding types of intellectual and moral worth—men eloquent in forensic debate, fascinating in the exuberance of poetic fancy, and above all, men who have greatly dared and nobly died for their country. And it is here, as we believe, the free platform of the world, that by the intermingling of bloods, which will naturally follow the fusing of national distinctions, there is to be developed in the future a grand and glorious American race and character, vigorous in stock, and wonderful in energy and genius, surpassing either Greek or Roman types, and swaying the destiny of the whole western world.—Bangor (Maine) Journal.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, June 1st, 1856.

You never saw such a day as we had celebrating the Peace! It beat the day of Dan's levee at the Rotunda all out. There wasn't a shop that hadn't its shutters up and the door locked. One would have thought the Parliament was sitting in College Green, there was such a row and rejoicing all round. Every hack car (inside and out) chaise or shandradan, gig or coach, that could be found (anywhere anyhow) within the Circular road, was out for the Phœnix Park, immediately after breakfast last Friday. Long before one o'clock, the whole of Dublin was "convained" on the Fifteen Acres—"be that more or less." The Freeman's Journal fills five columns with an Homeric account of the epic occasion. Nothing is omitted. We are told, for instance, that "one poor animal of a horse, drawing a car heavily laden, amidst a long line of others, stopped suddenly short, and the result was nigh being serious." Here the breath is taken out of the reader, as well as the horse. What was near happening? What awful catastrophe was on the verge of explosion? These are the questions instantly prompted by the intimation, that "the result was nigh being serious." The Freeman dissipates all fears and doubts. "The succeeding car ran into the stationary vehicle, smashing the back panels."

The Lord Lieutenant, in a plain black trowsers, sparrow-tailed coat (same color as trowsers) and waistcoat (same color as trowers and sparrow-tails) with the Collar of the Order of St. Patrick and a blue sash round his neck, and a star over the left ribs, rode in upon the "coorse," shortly after one o'clock, accompanied by his aides-de-camps, chaplains, and secretaries, all in full uniform. Lord Seaton (who is here, as Commander of the Forces, in place of old Blakeney) was accompanied by Major Fryth, of the Life Guards. This officer was, far away, the most splendid-looking fellow on the ground. The great black jackboots; cuirass of the clearest steel, embossed and mounted with silver and gold; flashing helmet of the same materials and metal, the glare of which was richly subdued by the white and red mane sweeping in a curve from its crest; the full-blooded charger he rode; his own handsome look and big shoulders; his perfectly fine seat in the saddle, so free and so firm; everything concurred to render him the most conspicuous and admired figure of the magnificent tableaux. Lord! how the ladies (married and unmarried) ejaculated their superlatives of praise, in adoration of his boots, breast-plate, breadth across the shoulders, the white and black of his eye, the sweep of his horse tail, the beauty, size, and strength of all his other appendages and trappings!

Accustomed to daily parades and reviews, as you are in New York, I don't intend saying more of the review than simply this, that it distanced (I like these sporting old phrases—they're racy of the soil—they smell of the turf of the Currah) every other display of the sort we've had in Dublin since I was a boy. There was a tremendous mass of field Artillery and Cavalry on the ground. Of the latter, we had the 3d Dragoon Guards, the Queen's Bays, and the 16th Lancers. Eight hundred Peninsular and Crimean soldiers, under the command of Colonel Harris, ("enrolled pensioners" they call them at the War Office and in military circles) took part in the movements. Many of them were covered with medals. Many of them had faces as hard and as brown as mahogany.

After nightfall the Park, all round the Wellington Testimonial, (the "over-grown milestone" as O'Connell used to call it) was alive with people. One might have thought (but for the fun and divilment that everywhere was heard) it was the "last day" and the "Phaynix" the Valley of Jehoshaphat. Such a crowd I never laid my eyes upon before! "Even mothers with infants in their arms," says the reporter of the Freeman, "were there."

During the Review, the Lord Lieutenant was posted at a flagstaff. During the fireworks, he had a tent for himself and his household. We're indebted again to the Freeman for another thrilling incident. "One rocket," we are informed, "after rising to a vast height, took a direction in its descent which brought its burning remnant down upon the roof of the pavilion (the Homeric chronicler wouldn't for the world call it a tent) wherein the Lord Lieutenant and party were stationed. No damage, we are happy to hear, (the beggarly flunkey of Prince street continues) ensued either to the building, or to its distinguished occupants." So you see, the English Government (this time also) escaped going to blazes, near as they were to it, and much as they deserved it. But this is a Red Republican sentiment; and as the Napoleonic stock (though consisting only of one red-haired spalpeen) is still high in the market, I beg to withdraw it.

"In peace there's nothing so becomes a man as modest stillness and humility."

Beside the Chinese crackers, Catharine wheels, rockets, and Bengal lights, which fizzed, sputtered, wriggled, shot up, and played blazes generally, (I can't for the life of me get that infernal word out of my head) there were illuminations all through the city. I'd waste ever so many hours of sunlight, gaslight and candle-light, were I to give you the particulars. Suffice it to say, that the city and suburbs, from the Castle to Mud Island, and from the Hole-in-the-Wall (on the road to the Strawberry beds) to Tim Doolan's (the extreme end of Stonybatter) was all one immense sheet of brimstone and blazes, (there it is again!) and from the Bank of Ireland (it wouldn't be loyal to call it the Parliament-house any more) to Peter Donohue's, (where you get the best Malahide oysters and Power's best whiskey in town) there was nothing but colored devices in gas, variegated lamps, transparencies of the Queen and Prince Albert, banners, Drummond lights, illuminated Irish harps, (all as big as the biggest clothes-horse you could see, and just as national in design and significance) roses, thistles, and shamrocks. Sconces were plentiful; and "yallow dips" stuck in potatoes supplied the place of glass-cut chandeliers, where the furniture of the subject fell short of his loyal intentions. Mr. Arkins (tailor to the Liberator and Hierarchy of Ireland) had a full-length likeness of O'Connell (eight feet and a few inches in height) over his shop-window, and, to show it off to the best possible advantage, consumed a power of wick and tallow. O'Connell was represented as sitting on the Hill of Tara (the hill, for all the world, looked like a grass-cock, full of honeysuckles and clover, the latter supposed to be shamrocks), and the Man of the People in a cabbage-green coat, (which reached to his heels) had an Act of Parliament (rolled up like a map, three feet long,) in his hand, and was imploring an immense crowd (out of sight and hearing) to keep the peace, and he'd give them Repeal in six months.

I mentioned Stonybatter a while ago. You recollect the story they used to tell at the Club-house in Dawson street, about Pat Costello (I can no more get him out of my head, than I can that milk-and-water word "blazes") and his jaunt one day to that exquisite spot. Pat was sitting one evening on the side of a jaunting-car (going out, as he said, for the benefit of his health to take a little fresh air,) and an acquaintaoce of his, (a double-dyed Orange attorney) was sitting (with his back to him) on the other side of the vehicle. 'Twas to Stonybatter they were bound. They didn't say much till they were passing a Protestant church they were building on the edge of a quarry, which had (evidently) been hard worked, and was nearly exhausted.

"You see that, Pat," says the Orangeman, brightening up a little out of his "blues."

"See what?" says Pat, pretending he saw nothing though he'd been winking like old Nick at the Church for the last ten minutes and a half, and was half blind with the sight of it.

"That church!" said the Orangeman.

"What about it?" asks Pat.

"Don't you see its the true church," the Brunswicker says, giving Pat a dig close to the back-bone, and chuckling with glee — "don't you see its the true church, for its built on a rock?"

Pat, without changing a muscle, leant across the well of the car, and in the sweetest way whispered—"It's built on a blasted rock, and that's true enough."

Nearly as good a thing was said by one of the "jarvies" the night of the illumination (about which, by-the-bye, I've been wasting such time) when that stupid obelisk in memory of Wellington was lit up with Roman Candles, from top to bottom.

"Bedad" says he "we're giving the ould Duke the best wake he ever got."

Palmer's (the poisoner's) trial, occupies more than the half of every paper I lay my hand upon. It appears to be as interesting an event, as the siege of Sebastapol, or the birth of Rufus, the King of Algiers. Lord Campbell sentenced him to death, and did so in the driest, curtest style possible. What an uninteresting production this Scotch thistle is. 'Tis only fit for for donkeys, and they make the most of it. By-the-bye, it appears, that the Government prohibition to the bands playing on Sundays in the London parks, was brought about mainly through the pertinacious instrumentality of a deputation of Scotch members, and other crusty unmusical saints from the land of the Kirk. The Scotsman is my authority for this. May Heaven forgive them! A beautiful sort of hereafter, 'twould be, if such Bare-bones and Cat-guts had the arrangement of it. They'd stop the Last Trumpet. They'd convert the celestial Jerusalem into such another Glasgow, as Walter Scott in his glorious Rob Roy has described, and as still (on Sundays at-all-events) in a state of the dullest beatitude exists. Gracious Goodness! what a flatulent interpretation of the Commandment appointing a day of rest. Brains, arms, and hearts—men, women, and little ones—thousands that have been toiling, suffering, replenishing life just as quickly they pour it out in tears and sweat, or, to speak more truly, but barely keeping with its vital stream the channel wet, which otherwise would be a hard, dark, howling ravine, choked with dead fallen branches, fossils, and every sort of parched weed and ruin—to think, that after their weary round of hardship, labor, gnawing necessities, tear and wear of muscle, and the stifling smoke, emaciating drudgery, brain-deadening imprisonment of the live-long week—to think they shall have no bright, joyous, refreshing, heart-enlivening, strength-imparting, sweet, gentle, grateful, holy, God-like, thought-inspiring day of rest! Out upon you, ye Pharisees in broadcloth, pulpit auctioneers, who knock down souls peremptorily, and Members of Parliament who intrude yourselves on the passing life with white cravats, uplifted spectral eyes, lank legs, and hearts which are but gizzards (the size of nutmegs,) filled with gall—out upon ye all!

The Day of Rest is to be a day not of darkness, nor of death, nor of stagnant waters, nor of trees that neither bloom nor rustle, nor of birds sleeping in suffocating groves with hushed voices and furled wings. It is a day when, as we all (the humblest reader even) can learn from the Golden Book of God, Creation has been ordained in its perfection and harmonious plentitude to smile, and array itself in sunshine, and the flowers, the mountains, the rivers, and the stars rejoice. I wish to Heavens I had been a preacher, or a Member of Parliament even! Wouldn't I have given them upon this question—the beauty, holiness, and devine prerogatives of labor—the "music of the spheres?"

The Royal Agricultural Improvement Society of Ireland (Lord what aname! It reminds me of the Hot Muffin and Crumpet Baking and Punctual Delivery Company, mentioned in Nickleby) has had a reorganization. That is, the Council or governing part of it has been reconstructed. The old Council, owing to numberless inexplicable quarrels, broke up or "dissolved" months ago. An Investigating Committee was appointed. The Duke of Leinster, it appears, stuck to his old hobby, and the result is a new Council and settled prospects of unity and success. This, you recollect, was the Society got up by Peter Purcell (every Irishman knows who he was) as an offset (so O'Connell, with whom he quarrelled about the funds of the Precursor Society, thought) to the Repeal Association. Whether this be the fact or not (not being intimate with Peter's conscience) I shan't undertake to say. But, whatever the cause or origin of the Society, all the good it does, or has done, is told in a jiffy. Every man who can afford it, fattens a pig or a bullock, a goat or a brood-mare. Clover, mashed turnips, stewed mangle-wurzle, sweet hay, cut with elaborate evenness, (cut with something like a magnified razor worked with a foot-board, as you'd work a spindle or the wheel of a knife-grinder) every delicacy that can be possibly supplied (in this Nineteenth Century) to the pig-trough, cow-stall, manger or paddock, is brought into use and consumption. Some fine day early in summer, the Society placards a meeting in Dublin, Belfast, Kilkenny, Nenagh or Ballinasloe. Long lines of sheep-pens, sheds, and other appropriate buildings of rough deal, are put up in some spare spot—some old orchard, pump-court, or common, within or close to the town. There's an abundance of clean straw for the beautiful beasts, and every other comfort and convaniance supplied. They come into town (some in vans cosily padded, and some on foot, at the pace of the Druids in Norma, a mile a minute,) and are luxuriously lodged. There's not a Poorhouse, from Lough Neagh to Blackpool, that's seen after better. Indeed, it would be well if they were seen after so well. A day or two after they've rested, three or four gentlemen go round, digging their fingers into the fat of the craythures examining their tongues, feeling their pulses, twisting their tails, (to see if they'd come upon coaxing) and in every other conceivable way testing the purity, progenitiveness, solidity, and general utility and good health of the dumb and big-bellied candidates for medals, ribbons, framed certificates, silver slop-basins and cups.

Of course (as the simplest simpleton in Ireland can see) the whole is a show—a "holy show," faith! But the English garrison in Ireland (parsons, army-officers, stupid old magistrates, red-nosed judges, flunky or cowardly newspaper editors,) the whole "bag and baggage" of them, make wonders out of it. Ireland is rapidly improving! Science is every where driving back barbarism, and all its ignorance and waste! Agriculture has become a regular study and a most prosperous success in Ireland! Happiness everywhere beams! The fat cattle smile! There's no distress, no potato-rot, no cannibal feeding on dead dogs and dead cats, no mothers in the grip of death gnawing their dead children (not a year old), no gasping and maddened children (not three months born) tugging at the black putrid breasts of their dead mothers, and crawling up with an instinct (which has become a terrible insanity) to the lips which reek with the rottenness of famine! Nothing of this sort! The Royal Agricultural Society of well-fed beasts, pampered pigs and bloated bullocks, proves the contrary!

This is the burden of the speeches when those patrician pig-drivers, titled cross-breeders, and corpulent claret-colored importers of Peruvian rams and Shanghae fowls, meet to discuss the comparative merits of those forced tons of flesh, and assign the premiums to the successful artists of the crib, sty, and stable. Such Societies, useful and excellent as they would be in countries like Belgium, Switzerland, America, or Sweden, are here with us positively mischievous. Like those fireworks in the Phœnix Park and the illuminations in the city (all through Dublin), they not only conceal the true condition of things (that which lies at the heart of the nation's life) but in the eyes of America, in the eyes of the world, they contradict the cries of the people, the brave protest of those who swore to speak the truth and make the world hear and know it, and the very facts which upon hundreds and hundreds of grave-yards, and hundreds and hundreds of wrecked and rifled homes, upon villages struck dumb and homes made desolate as vaults chokefull of bones, God himself (though thousands of years were to come and go) has ineffaceably written.

In the midst of all this illumination, nonsense, wreck and and wretchedness, finery, filth and falsehood, I here stand steady prepared to dash against that old foe of ours through any path events may open for us. Thank God! after years, and years, and years of the cruelest suffering and defeat, we're not, at the end of them all, one whit worse off than Poland, than Hungary, than any other of the manacled and ransacked nations. We suffer, we think, we hope with them. God grant! we may strike and triumph with them.

KILMAINHAM.

A correspondent of the Kilkenny Journal (May 17,) writes the following account of an Orange riot at Dungannon.—"Thursday week being the market-day in Dungannon, a great number of country people, as is usual on such occasions had gathered together in the town. After the fair was over, those who belonged to the rural districts prepared to return home, it being seven o'clock at the time. Collected outside the town, however, was a great number of Protestants, who, armed with weapons of every kind, seized all that came out of the fair, and unmercifully beat every man, woman and child who would not curse the Pope. This was not all; unsatisfied with this atrocity, their vengeance descended to the inferior animals, and in the blindness of their bigotry, not to call it rank madness, actually killed an unoffending ass. Your readers will ask why? Because as the infuriated maniacs expressed it, he had a cross on his back! Some of Lord Northland's workmen were also severely beaten. Five of the Orange rioters have been made prisoners; and on being brought up before the magistrates on Monday, were admitted to bail, to take their trial at the next Assizes."

The distribution by the Lord Lieutenant of the prizes and certificates of proficiency granted under the Department of Science and Art to the successful students in the branches in which examinations were held, took place on Wednesday evening in the handsome and spacious theatre of the Museum of Irish Industry, Stephen's green, Dublin. Amongst the successful competitors were several ladies, whose proficiency was the theme of general admiration. After the distribution of prizes, the meeting was addressed by Sir Robert Kane, Professor Jukes, Dr. Barker, Mr. Sullivan, and his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant.

Letter from Kilkenny.

KILKENNY, MAY 31, 1856.

From the banks of the Liffey, "Kilmainham" sends you a flood of quaint gossip and racy anecdote; and I see by your fourth issue, just to hand, that the "Metal-Man," from his rocky eminence, sends chiming over the Atlantic such eloquent periods as never before emanated from the brain of Metal-Man, containing the local news and gossip of the intact city of your nativity.

Without presuming to approach the interesting excellence of either, I mean occasionally to send you an account of the men and things of this Faire Cittie and its vicinity.

Father Edward Rowan, who is well known to your friends McManus and Lalor, (he was the close friend of the latter and of Edward Butler, subsequently of the Nation, and now a distinguished barrister in Sydney, Australia,) has recently returned from a tour through Europe, I rejoice to say in improved health—for Ossory could ill afford to lose her most eloquent, pious, accomplished and truly zealous Priest. He has done a world and all of good in this city. When he ascends the pulpit, there is seldom one present who does not feel that he who admonishes them is one of Heaven's own choicest favorites. I have known many of our liberal Protestant citizens prefer attending Mass, the Sunday he is expected to preach, than going to their own Church. He, in connection with his brother Matthew, and Dr. Lalor, and some others, established the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, in this city, which has done an immensity of good to our poor people. I wish he could be induced to correspond with the News; for I can tell you that, though he is no politician, yet his love of truth renders his sympathies strongly in favor of your undertaking.

In our locality we have little or no politics; at least I say so; for though our Mayor and Town Council may spout about Tenant-right, it will be surely "no go." Even the very farmers themselves don't believe in it. No wonder, you'll say. "The pitcher that's always going to the well must get broke at last." So it is with the poor farmers. Sold over and over again, they are at last beginning to open their eyes, and see that that they themselves have long been no more than miserable dupes.

Even the Priests, who labored so hard to send to Parliament Members pledged to Tenant-right, are now retiring in disgust from the political world. Speaking a few days ago to one of the very best Parish Priests in Ireland, Rev. Wm. Hart, of Freshford, he told me that if he were to say anything on the subject it could be only "to counsel the poor deceived people no longer to put faith in political tricksters."

John Maher, the attorney, of Patrick street, died a few months ago. You must have known him. He used to be in Tramore often, and knew Dick Duckett and the other frequenters of Miss Gibbon's well known cigar shop and news-room. John was a celebrity in his own way. He carried a high head and aped the "quality." I remember being in the Four Courts, Dublin, one day during the summer of '47, listening to Fitzgibbon addressing a jury. Judge Ball was on the Bench. At this time John Maher was Clerk of the Crown for the County Longford, and he was that day going down to have all in readiness for their Lordships to open the Assizes a few days subsequent. As he came into the Court, Judge Ball beckoned him to come up under the bench. He did so, and they entered into a seemingly pleasant conversation. Fitzgibbon stopped his address, and looked sternly at them. He then turned round to his junior, Frank Maher with whom I had been sitting, (since deceased), who in he following year defended O'Donohoe at Clonmel, and censured their interruption. Whether Ball heard Fitzgibbon or not, I cannot say, but he said gravely—

"Mr. Fitzgibbon, we havn't been talking about this case or your address. This is Mr. Maher, the Clerk of the Crown for the County Longford."

Fitzgibbon made no reply but, turning to the jury, said—

"Public officers, gentlemen, have no right to interfere with counsel in the discharge of his duty towards his client."

As Fitzgibbon said this, the Ball's nose became as red as his gown, and the Clerk of the Crown for Longford, looking as if some one had discomposed his well-kept black wig, "made tracks" (as I believe you say in America,) for Longford. I wonder did John meet many of the "quality" in the other world?"

One of the most pleasing pieces of intelligence which just now can be mentioned to any of your readers who regard our "Marble City" favorably is the vast improvement of the Kilkenny Journal since it fell into the hands of Mr. Doyle, heretofore attached to the Nation. It really was a God-send to us to have some one come who would not let us forget entirely that we were the descendants of all the brilliant Irishmen who have passed away; that we were the inheritors of the fame of those whose names you yourself recounted in a lecture lately and told the very hod-carriers in New-York to "exult in, for the glory was all their own!" Besides his own writings, and those of other of some of our young citizens who contribute on literary subjects, Mr. Doyle has already shown much discretion in not deigning to enter into a bickering quarrel about Young and Old Irelandism which his neighbor, the Moderator, tried to force on him.

A few days back we had a great excitement at an election of Town Counsellor of St. John's Ward. The contestants were Messrs. Hyland and Davis. Edmund Smithwick, with his wonted plausible urbanity, presided. The number of votes cast were 78; of which Mr. Hyland had 38, and was declared duly elected.

As usual, on yesterday, for want of something better to do, I strolled into the City News-Room where, though there is never much to interest one latterly, still the faces of citizens and country-gentlemen make me feel at home. Amongst the latter, I had a chat with one of our County Coroners, W. J. Maher, who is—and long may he continue so—hale and hearty as ever; and Counsellor Finn, of Tullaroan, who, as usual, had a couple of pamphlets and some sheets of foolscap, folded like a brief, and all tied together with a skimpy piece of red tape.

When I commenced, I had intended to go up, pen in hand, to the top of "Kenny's steeple," and give you a view of our Faire Cittie, but I find I have already been too long and must defer it till my next.

ST. CANICE.

Irish News.

The Nation gives us a very interesting account of Mr. O'Shannassy, of Melbourne, Australia. We quote in full what it says of him:

"He is a Tipperary man, and is of about sixteen years' standing in the colony—standing, by the way, six feet high, and built in proportion, with a splendid Celtic head. He has for a long time been the great Demagogue (we use the phrase in its best sense) of Victoria; and is not merely this, but the most important Parliamentary personage, and the first leader of a Legislative Party, who has been developed in the new State. He could always divide the Legislative Council with the government, and, in fact, regulated the legislation of the colony quite as much as they did, while the government was purely colonial. Now that it has become a constitutional, we may very speedily expect to see him taking a turn at the government himself. It seems to be quite certain that he will be in office immediately; and it is impossible to look over an Australian paper, or into the debates of the Assembly there, without seeing that the member for Melbourne is in reality the first and most potential person in the state."

One of Queen Anne's farthings has just been discovered by a poor man in the neighborhood of Carrick-on-Suir, while digging in the Ash Park. The coin bears on the obverse a bust of the Queen in bold relief. The forehead is encircled by a diadem, and the hair in a large bunch is placed at the back of the head. The legend "Anna Dei Gratia," surrounds the figure. On the reverse are the quarterings of the Royal Arms, something in the same style as in Mr. Shiel's florins—the Irish harp to the left, the Thistles to the right, the Lions on shields at the top and beneath the cross of St. George, which is enclosed in a circular compartment surrounded by rays.

Mr. John Jefferson, an old and highly respectable farmer, has died at his residence, Aughnanoe, Ballymacash, near Lisburn. Deceased had lived to the age of eighty-nine years, and was the last survivor of the original troop of cavalry raised in 1795 by the Lord Hertford of that day. Mr. Jefferson continued in the yeomanry cavalry until the local troops were disembodied some time after the close of the war. He was a steady and consistent member of the Wesleyan Society for upwards of sixty years, and having been remarkable for temperance both in body and mind, he enjoyed the blessing of good health up to within a short period of his decease. As a man of stern integrity and purity of life, the Banner of Ulster, says, his loss will long be felt by those who had the happiness of his acquaintance.

The Irish contingent of cattle for the Agricultural Exhibition arrived at Paris safely after a splendid passage in the Windsor from Dublin to Havre. Not a single accident occurred on the voyage, and immediately on their arrival they were accommodated in the capacious stables of the Havre and Rouen Railway, where every comfort was provided for them and the men in their charge, at the expense of the French Government. The Irish cattle have been the first to arrive, under the able guidance of Captain Ball, and his First Lieutenant, Mr. Corrigan. The English and Scotch contingents are still on the road. The Swiss contingent entered Paris at one side just as their Irish rivals were arriving as the other. The Kerry came in capital condition; they occupy a separate department by themselves, with the name of "Kerry" emblazoned on them.

The deputation relating to the Irish militia waited, on Saturday, upon Lord Palmerston. It consisted of the chairman (the Marquis of Donegal) and some twenty others, representing the Irish Peers and Commoners who met, some time since, at the Thatched House Tavern. The Premier informed the deputation that the subalterns of militia were to receive a bonus of six months' pay in lieu of three months, as originally decided on; that the Irish regiments were not to be disembodied until the latter end of the year, and then very gradually; that the government did not intend to make any alteration in their arrangements as regarded the surgeons and paymasters, or to make any additions to the staff of the disembodied regiments of militia.

A most disgraceful scene was enacted a few nights since, at the Hibernian United Service Club, in St. Stephen's-green, the actors in which were officers in a distinguished cavalry regiment. Dishes, plates, and glass were dashed to pieces in the dining-room, where a large party had been assembled, and the furniture fared no better at the hands of the rioters. A meeting of the members of the club has been held to decide upon the propriety of expelling the rioters, and on a ballot being taken, their expulsion was voted by an overwhelming majority, there being but four dissentients. Lord Seaton is ex officio president of the club, and it is hardly probable that the affair will terminate at this stage.

Very recently about fifty of the inhabitants of Strabane entertained Mr. James Canning at a banquet in the Town Hall, as a tribute of respect to the family of the late Mr. John M'Laughlin, who are about to emigrate to Auckland, New Zealand. Mr. Canning is nephew to the late Mr. M'Laughlin, and was one of the principals of the firm of M'Laughlin and Co. The M'Laughlins are one of the oldest Catholic families in Strabane, and are deeply respected by their townsmem—Catholic and Protestant.

The Mars has sailed from Waterford with 200 passengers, the bone and sinew of the country. Those of the farmer class, who were routed from their domiciles by the Crow-bar Brigade have received cash remittances from their relatives and friends from the United States, to enable them to pay their passage, and provide food for the voyage to New-York. The Waterford Chronicle gives us this information.

A lengthened inquest was held at Athy on view of the body of Mr. Patrick Lalor, of Churchtown, who was found drowned in the canal at Miltown. The jury on the occasion found that the deceased had been found drowned in the Grand Canal, but that there was no evidence to show how he came by his death. Rumors having since gained ground that Mr. Lalor was murdered and thrown into the canal, the authorities have offered a reward of £50 to any person who will give such information as may lead to the arrest of the party concerned in the outrage.

On the night of the 19th of April, the Protestant church of Castletown, in the Queen's County, was broken into and robbed of its plate, consisting of a valuable silver communion service. Since the occurrence, says the "Carlow Post," several persons were arrested on suspicion but could not be convicted. On the 10th inst., however, Sub-Constables Murphy and Barry, of the Carlow Station, arrested a noted character named John Hill, originally a native of Dublin, and a female named Jane M'Evoy, from Old Leighlin. It appears that these are two of a gang of robbers who have frequented this neighborhood for three or four years. Through the vigilance of the above-named Sub-Constables, a great portion of the stolen property has been recovered. The case was fully investigated on Wednesday last, at the Ballickmoyler Petty Sessions, when some of the plate which had been traced to the possession of the prisoners, being identified by the Rector, Mr. Emmerson, the prisoners were committed to Maryborough jail to stand their trial at the Graigue Quarter Sessions.

On Friday evening, says the Wexford Independent of the 21st ult., the cap-stone of the spire of the new church of the Immaculate Conception and St. John, in John street, was placed, being at a height of 210 feet from the level of the door-way. We congratulate our respected townsman, Mr. Thomas Willis, builder and contractor, on the completion of this fine and beauteous edifice, fully five months before the term agreed on in his engagement, and that, too, without the slightest injury or accident to any of the numerous workmen employed. The other new church, that of the Assumption, in the south part of the town, will have its spire at its height in a few days. When the crosses are placed on the spires, the height of each will be 222 feet.

A meeting convened by the Protestant Association was held on the 30th of May, in the Rotundo, for the purpose of protesting against the measure introduced into the House of Commons by Mr. Miall for the disendowment of the Irish branch of the Protestant Church. The chair was taken by Colonel Boyes. The Rev. Dr. Gregg read and proposed the adoption of three resolutions, which it was intended to submit to the meeting. The first resolution was to the effect—"that the fifth article of the Legislative Union between Great Britain and Ireland was designed and calculated to estop Parliament from despoiling the Irish branch of the Protestant Church." The resolution concluded by calling on the members of parliament to oppose Mr. Miall's motion.

The Limerick Observer mentions a military outrage which has lately excited the Limerick Catholics greatly. It appears that when the Bishop, clergy and people were returning from the consecration of the new burial ground of that city, a party of sergeants of the Horse Artillery stationed there came out, some of them wearing hats made of straw, in derison of the Bishop's mitre. The women pelted them with stones, and a rush having been made upon them by the crowd, they took refuge in Mr. Sheehy's public-house opposite the barrack gate. Mr. Davis, a mason, stripped one of the artillerymen of the caricature of a mitre which he wore, and has it in his possession.

We clip the following curious paragraph from the Daily Orleanian, 13th inst.: "It is publicly stated that some of the Irish Catholic bishops contemplate applying to Louis Napoleon, to endow a Roman Catholic College in Ireland; that is, in the event of the motion of one of the members of the House of Commons, against Maynooth, being carried. The Queen and the Government, we are inclined to think, would not approve of such an application, and totally disapprove of the Emperor complying with it. It might be regarded as an interference with national affairs, and an intermeddling in ecclesiastical matters, more particularly as Louis Napoleon is so much of a papist as to desire to have the head of the church act sponsor for the Prince of Algeria. It won't do—depend on it, it won't."

On Saturday a young woman named Mary Sullivan was frightened to death under singular circumstances. The deceased, while in Pavour's Alley, Lambeth, was attracted by the display of a Jack-in-the-green accompanied by my Lord and Lady and Clown. The latter individual indulged very freely in the Clown's proverbial mischievous pranks, and suddenly catching hold of the young woman, he embraced her. This unexpected act produced a shock on the nervous system. One fit succeeded another. She was removed to the hospital, but never rallied.—Limerick Observer.

A public meeting of those interested in the propagation of the Gospel in Foreign parts, was held in the Court-house of Naas, three weeks since. The chair was taken by the Archbishop of Dublin, and amongst the clergy and gentry in attendance were the Very Rev. the Archdeacon of Kildare; the Rev. Messrs. Lawrence, Metcalf, S. Greer, John Browne, W. de Burgh, Percy, Vernon, West, Lane and Fitzgerald, the Countess of Clonmel, and the ladies Scott, Mrs. Walter de Burgh, Mrs. West, Mrs. B. Read, Messrs. Johnson, B. Read and Reamsbottom.

The title of the present possessor of the Carberry peerage is about to be disputed. The late Lord Carberry having died without issue, the title passed from the direct line to the collateral, and the Hon. George Evans Freke took it up, no other claimant having appeared in the field at the time. However, the attention of Mr. George Evans Crowe, of Rosepark, County Galway, having been directed to the fact that he derived descent from an elder branch, through his grandfather, Dean Crowe, of Clonfert, he has taken the preliminary steps toward making his claim, and proving it in due form.

We learn from the Waterford Chronicle that Lord Doneraile met his tenantry at Tramore on the 8th and 9th of May, paid their rents most freely and willingly up to the gale day. His lordship was so well pleased, that to each he handed 10 per cent. on their respective payments. In place of returning to their homes probably penniless, each tenant had from £5, according to their holdings, to £30 each.

The depot of the 51st Light Infantry is under orders to move from Bury, and embark at Liverpool for Cork. The depot of the 58th Regiment, from Kilkenny to Clonmel; the depot 94th Regiment, from Plymouth to Cork; and the depot 99th Regiment, from Cork to Buttevant.

The Town Commissioners of Youghal have passed a unanimous vote of thanks to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Limerick City Artillery, for the aid they gave in extinguishing an alarming fire that broke out at Youghal on the 6th inst.

The gentlemen of the long robe will be engaged shortly in a suit commenced against a lady in Waterford, for anonymously libelling an official gentleman in that city.

Mr. Gregory O'Neill has been appointed Consul at Cork, for Buenos Ayres and the Argentine Republic.

A bazaar was lately held in the round room of the Rotunda for the purpose of promoting funds in aid of the Stanhope street House of Refuge, Dublin. Notwithstanding the heavy showers of rain which fell during the day, the attendance was most numerous. Each of the stalls at which the ladies patronesses presided in the round room was tastefully decorated with evergreens and flowers. The several tables were covered with all kinds of needlework, embroidery, papier mache work, &c.

Amongst the ladies who presided at the different tables were Mrs. C. Lynch, Mrs. D. Sherlock, the Hon. Mrs. Preston, Mrs. J. O'Brien, Mrs. P. Sweetman, Mrs. Meldon, Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. R. O'Gorman, Mrs. Healy, Mrs. O'Farrell, and Miss Thunder.

The bands of the 16th Lancers and the 96th Regiment were in attendance.

The Right Hon. Lord Carew, Lord Lieutenant of the county of Wexford, and a Knight of the Order of St. Patrick, is dead. The event took place on Monday last at Castleborough, his lordship's seat at Wexford. The late lord was born on the 9th of March, 1787, and was first returned for the county of Wexford in 1812, which county he represented in the House of Commons for upwards of twenty years. He is succeeded by his eldest son, the Hon. Robert Shapland Carew, Colonel of the Wexford Militia, born in 1818.

We understand that Mr. Tarrant, our County Surveyor, has succeeded beyond his expectations, in his survey of this line, [Clonmel and Dungarvan,] between Clonmel and the half-way house, the summit level. The earth works are generally light, and the grades moderate. On the remainder of the line to Dungarvan and Cappoquin, there are no engineering difficulties whatever.—Waterford Mail.

A number of gentlemen in the employment of the Queen's Old Castle Company, waited on Mr. J. F. Maguire, M. P., at his residence, Passage, and presented him with an Address and Testimonial on behalf of the employees of that establishment as an acknowledgement of their sense of his services in connection with the early closing movement. The testimonial consisted of a French Time piece which has come from the repertoire of the Queen's Old Castle, and is of great magnificence, both as regards design and workmanship.

The gentlemen engaged in the other large drapery establishment of the city have signified their intention of presenting a Salver to Mr. Maguire on his return from London.

The 8th (King's Royal Irish) Hussars have arrived at Portsmouth from the Crimea, and will re-embark for Dublin, for further proceeding to Dundalk to join the depot stationed there, as soon as the corps has been inspected by her Majesty. Brigadier General Colonel Shewell, C. B., the Lieut.-Col. of the regiment, is in command. He gallantly led the regiment at the fatal charge of Balaklava. Lieut.-Col. De Salis, Major of the corps is is also with them. Neither of those officers has been absent on leave since the regiment embarked in England for the East.

The Catholic Telegraph observes, that the silence of the Irish Catholic Members on the Italian question, " has caused a very painful impression in all parts of the country. All are in fault. The censure falls with an equal weight upon men of all sides—upon Mr. John O'Connell not less than upon Mr. George Henry Moore. The time, the occasion, was one—if ever there is to be one—in which all Catholics should emulate each other in zeal by defending the Common Father of the Faithful."

The same paper tells us that a fleet of twelve luggers, accompanied by the North Star (cutter), as flagship, had arrived at Dunmore East. These vessels belong to Mr. Corrin, of the Isle of Man, who has selected Dunmore as his basis of fishing operations during the summer. Each lugger carries a crew of seven men, and is provided with a net of two thousand yards long and eighteen yards deep, so fitted that fish can be taken at various depths.

A man named Brown, a gamekeeper on the property of F. J. Gervaise, Esq., Cecil House, was shot through the breast by a man named Monteith, who had been poaching on the property of which deceased was the ranger. The unfortunate man managed to make his way home, and there he died. An inquest was held on the body by Mr. Buchanan, the coroner of the district of Clogher, and Monteith has been committed to gaol for trial.

Mr. Smith O'Brien's absence from Ireland will be prolonged by his making a tour on the Continent with his eldest son, Edward O'Brien, who has already attained eminent distinctions during the progress of his University studies. Rumor has it that the return of Smith O'Brien to Cahermoyle, in the county of Limerick, will be strictly private. Whenever or in whatever manner he comes, says the Limerick Observer, there is the old " Caithe mille failthe" of Clare to surround him.

On Trinity Sunday, the consecration of the Right Rev. Dr. McGettigan, coadjutor Bishop of Raphoe, was performed in the cathedral church of Letterkenny, county Donegal, which, long before the appointed hour, was crowded with a large and brilliant assemblage, comprising a large proportion of the Catholic gentry, and including quite a host of the respectable Protestants and dissenters from the town and neighborhood.

The Rev. Michael Crotty, whose separation from the Roman Catholic Church, several years since, created a good deal of excitement, has publicly sought re-admission to its union. He addressed a most contrite letter lately to the Right Rev. Doctor Vaughan.

The Limerick Observer states, that the enterprise and energy of the local steamship company in establishing a line of steam communication direct from Limerick to Liverpool, have been attended with the most promising results.

The Loughrea great summer fair passed off every way with the most satisfactory success.

Mr. Garratt, of the War Office, is on a tour throughout the military ports of Ireland, for the purpose of carrying out a change of system in the issue of bread, and forage to the troops.

The Irish M.P's have had a meeting respecting the juvenile offender's bill, as amended, and it was the unanimous opinion of those present, about twenty liberals, that it was not desirable to have any such measure, and a document to that effect was signed, to be forwarded to Mr. Horsman.

The Waterford News informs us that by opening the new park sewer in Harris's lane, Newtown, a portion of the Neptune Foundry wall has fallen into the lane.

The Hamiltonsbawn (county Armagh) fair was a large one in the aggregate, the show of stock being good, and the attend- of buyers numerous.

In the memory of the oldest fisherman on the Laune, the Salmon fishery of that once celebratod river was never half so unproductive as during the present season,

An accident attended with the loss of six lives took place off Killilea, a fortnight back. A boat's crew consisting of six men, left the shore near Killilea in a new boat, for the twofold purpose of taking fish and trying her, one of the men on board having had an idea of purchasing her. Some cries were heard from the shore, and boats immediately left for their relief, but no trace of the unfortunate party could be found, and there cannot be a doubt but they were all drowned.

Two of those heroic women, the Sisters of Mercy, who left the Cork convent to alleviate human suffering in the Crimea, have arrived at their quiet retreat, St. Mary's of the Isle. After all the fatigue and suffering they have gone through, and the horrors of war they have witnessed, they are in excellent health. The nuns from the Kinsale convent have been delayed in Derby by the slight indisposition of one of the sisters, but are expected in a few days.

The 2d and 3d Dragoon Guards will remain in Dublin; the 7th Dragoon Guards will remain in Dublin; the 7th Dragoon Guards to move to Manchester; the 3d Light Dragoons to Longford; the 6th Inniskilling to Canterbury; the 7th Hussars to Dundalk; the 13th Light Dragoons to Cork and Ballincollig; the 15th Hussars to Aldershott; the 16th Lancers remain in Dublin, and the 17th Lancers at Cahir.

A meeting of the fishermen of the North Strand, Limerick, for the purpose of protesting against their grievances, was held on the last Sunday in May, in St. Munchin's Temperance Rooms, Thomondgate, Limerick. Mr. M'Mahon, who has devoted his time to a consideration of the subject, will bring the state of the fisheries of Ireland and particularly of the river Shannon, under the attention of the House at the earliest day.

The amount of Duty paid at the Belfast Custom House for the week ending May 24, was £7,841 9s. 1d., against £8,389 18s. 1d. the previous week, and £7,120 19s. 9d. the corresponding period of last year. The number of pounds of tea entered for consumption at Belfast, for the week ending May 24, was 34,723lbs., against 34,022lbs. the previous week, making a total of 713,743lbs. since 1st January last, against 743,801lbs. same period last year.

We are gratified, says the Dublin Freeman's Journal, to perceive that the Guardians of the North Union have discussed and admitted the propriety of petitioning Parliament to adjust the tenant question, and thus permit the masses of the people to apply themselves to industry instead of to agitation. The question was introduced by Mr. James Loughnan.

The governors of the Kilkenny Lunatic Asylum assembled last week of May, presided over by the Protestant Bishop of Ossory. One gentleman having proposed that reporters from the local journals be permitted to take notes of their proceedings, the motion was rejected by a majority, after a debate during which the proposal was denounced as little short of Socialism and Red Republican.

Mr. Machi, of the Inland revenue department, was decoyed into a dungeon at Nottingham, a few days since, by two Irishmen, whose premises he visited in search of an illicit still. The dungeon was provided with a trap-door, which was closed upon the exciseman, and he was not discovered until the following day. In the interval the Irishmen decamped.

It is said that Mr. John O'Connell has got a positive promise of the Clerkship of the Hanaper in Ireland, and only waits Mr. Fitzsimon's convenience to walk quietly into the office. The vacancy in the representation of Clonmell, is to be handed over to Mr. Murray, a barrister, and said to be the editor of the Irish Quarterly Review.

The Right Hon. J. D. Fitzgerald, her Majesty's Attorney-General, has given two hundred guineas for the completion of the new chapel in Ennis. He has also given a handsome contribution to the Franciscan friars, and recently ordered a picture of the Holy Family which cost 5,000 guineas, and tendered it to the Chapel Committee.

Dr. Raylie, ex-mayor of Geelong, Australia, arrived in Cork on Tuesday last, after an absence of eighteen years. He proceeded to the residence of his brother, Dr. John Baylie, of Lakemount, near Bandon, where his reception was very warm, the peasantry of the locality assembling with lighted tar-barrels to greet him.

The total quantity of proof spirits charged with duty in Ireland last year amounted to 7,054,204 gallons, of which 825,348 were for exportation, and the rest for home consumption. The duty received was £1,927,249; the actual deficiency in proof gallons, 174,222; and the allowance made by the inland revenue, 131,929 proof gallons, and £35,108 in money.

The house of Miss Mary Finican, of Ballyscanlan in the county Waterford, and within a few miles of Tramore, was broken into by a party unknown, who carried away a quantity of wearing apparel, and other articles belonging to the servants and a lot of groceries. Some of the property was found hid in a heap of stones, collected together at the mountain of Ballyscanlan.

The second Synod of the Diocese of Killaloe has been opened in conformity with the statutes of Thurles, which prescribe that a diocesan synod shall be held every year. The Bishop (the Right Rev. Dr. Vaughan, and the Right Rev. Dr. Moriarty,) and the clergy assembled at the appointed hour at the parish church. Nearly every parish priest and very many curates of the diocese were present.

At the Metropolitan Church, Malines, on the 16th and 17th inst., 140 young men received orders from the hands of his Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Malines. Among them was the Rev. Patrick Heany, of the diocese of Tuam, and student of the College du St. Esprit Catholic University, Lovaine.

A branch of the Hibernia Bank has been opened at Athy, under the supervision of Michael Dillon, Esq., late of the Joint Stock Bank, Tipperary. Mr. Dillon had been for some years connected with the branch of the Tipperary Bank at Athy, during which time he won for himself golden opinions.

The Mayor of Waterford has received permission from the Lords of the Treasury to take on lease the additional for the enlargement of that already alloted for the "People's Park."

One of the most awful occurrences which ever took place in the county Tyrone happened lately near Killeter, two men being instantaneously deprived of life by a flash of lightning.

The Messrs. Malcolmson and Co., Waterford have made arrangements to run powerful steam-boats from hence to Milford, and vice versa daily, carrying the mails, &c., making Limerick to London twelve hours.

The Rev. Michael O'Brien, C. C., Tipperary, has been appointed parish priest of Caherconlish, county Limerick, by his Grace the Archbishop of Cashel.

The Lord Lieutenant has acceded to the memorial praying to have the barony of Slievemarigue constituted into a separate polling district, the town of Ballymoyler to be the polling place. The change will be a matter of much consideration to the electors of the barony of Slievemarigue, in cases of contested elections.

Mr. Baldwin, of the Albert Agricultural Institution, Glassnevin, Dublin, has compiled a very valuable system of Farmers' accounts, under the title of "The Farmer's Account Book." The classification is clear and excellent, and most valuable results might be obtained by keeping such statistics as are suggested.

The Right Reverend Doctor Murphy, Bishop of Ferns, administered the sacrament of confirmation to one thousand and fifty-eight children, at the Chapel of Cushenstown, the last week of May. One thousand and fifty belonged to the parish of St. Mary, New-Ross.

A numerous company of persons in the employment of William Dargan & Co., Chapelizod Mills, (at Mr. Broadbent's, Mullingar Hotel, Chapelizod,) have entertained Mr. James Smith, late foreman mechanic and engineer in this rapidly flourishing concern.

We believe, says the Leinster Express, it has been determined that, as soon as the new harbor at Holyhead is completed, the United States mails will start from thence, instead of from Liverpool, as at present. This is in accordance with the recommendation of the Packet Station Commissioners.

An advertisement in a Newry paper of a shoemakers's premises for sale in an English market town states;—"Here is a safe retreat from persecution—a town with nearly 6,000 population, without a Popish priest or Mass house nearer than fourteen miles!!!"

The Wexford Independent says: We have before us a sample of Californian wheat, in full ear, now growing on the lands of William Graves, Esq., at Rosbercon. It is clear out, from 30 to 36 inches in height, and full of fine promise.

The Great Southern and Western Railway Company have contributed £10 towards the expense of a patent for four new fairs in Maryborough, in which town there are at present only eight fairs held in the year.

The Marquis of Sligo has given two acres of land free of rent forever, to the Rev. Mr. Curley, P.P., of Louisburgh, Mayo, whereon to erect a chapel and school. The noble Marquis, during his stay in Rome, sent frequent assistance to the ladies of Westport Convent.

Eleven of the noble Marquis' horses have arrived at Mr. E. Keegan's second training stables, Whaley Lodge, Curragh, where they will in future be trained under the management of his lordship's trainer, Mr. Prince.

The number of paupers in the Clare workhouse at a corresponding period last year was 862; the number at present is but 487, being equivalent to a reduction of very near fifty per cent.

Mr. Butt has given notice of motion in the House of Commons, for the 3d June, for abolition of Ministers' money. Mr. Fagan's resolutions on the same subject, come on the same day.

The Lord Lieutenant has appointed Lord James Butler to be a Deputy Lieutenant for the County of Kilkenny, in the room of B. C. Wandesforde, Esq., resigned.

It is reported that Mr. John Bunton, solicitor, Ennis, has been appointed to one of the Crown solicitorships of the North Circuit, made vacant by the death of Sir Edward Tierney, Baronet.

Several curious relics have been lately found within the town walls of ancient Dublin. Amongst the articles enumerated is an antique-shaped signet seal, supposed by a distinguished heraldic authority to have belonged to the Lord Deputy Essex, time of Elizabeth.

On Thursday, May 29th, at one o'clock, the Right Rev. Dr. Ryan, attended by a large body of the city clergy, solemnly consecrated the new Roman Catholic Cemetery at Mount St. Laurence, near the Blackboy Turnpike, Limerick.

Traffic of the Waterford and Limerick Railway Company (77 miles opened) for the week ending Saturday, 10th of May, 1856: Passengers, parcels, &c., £499 2s. 1-2d.; goods and cattle, £501 15s. 2d. Total, £1.000 17s. 7 1-2d. Corresponding week last year, £984 9s. 3d.; for week ending Saturday, 24th May, Passengers parcels, &c., £524 11s. 10½d.; corresponding week last year, £903 5s. 1d.

Capt. Kennedy, formerly Poor Law Inspector in Kilrush, has been enthusiastically received in Western Australia, of which colony he has been appointed Governor.

The annual procession, commemorative of Corpus Christi, took place in the grounds of the Ursuline Convent, Waterford, on the Festival day.

The disciples of St. Ignatius of Loyola have just concluded a mission in Mullingar, where they had gone at the solicitation of the Bishop of Meath, the Most Rev. Dr. Cantwell.

John Dowell Grace, Esq., of Gracefield, near Athy, has been appointed to the Commission of the Peace for the Queen's County and County Westmeath.

Lord Gough has been selected to distribute the medals bestowed by the Queen on the officers and men of the Crimean Army.

The Right Honorable the Earl of Clare has appointed George Thomas MacFarlane, gent., to be second Lieut. in the City of Limerick Artillery.

The Very Rev. Dr. Burke acknowledges the receipt of £5 from Col. Townley, his subscription to the great bell purchased for the church of SS. Peter and Paul, Clonmel.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd most gratefully acknowledge the receipt of £5 from the Duchess of Norfolk.

The value of the Irish butter trade for the past year, in exports alone, is £3,750,000.

The several Cavalry depots in Ireland will shortly be broken up.

Judge Keogh travels the Connaught circuit with Baron Richards during the Summer assizes.

There are 292 paupers less in the Waterford Union to-day than on this day twelvemonth.

A call of about £40 a share is about being made on the shareholders of the Tipperary Bank.

Answers to Correspondents.

JEWS AND CHRISTIANS IN THE UNITED STATES.—As we close up for the press, we learn that Mr. Abraham, a gentleman whose conversion from Judaism to Christianity, some years since, created no little attention, will deliver a lecture on the Ceremonies and Traditions of the Jews, and their views of the Christian Church; in which some of his own experiences will be introduced. Mr. Abraham informs us that he lectures under the patronage of the Archbishop. His discourse, no doubt, will prove interesting.

We cheerfully comply with the request of the Reverend Pastor of St. Michael's, Limerick, for a full set of the NEWS, and beg to inform him, and several other friends throughout Ireland, that we have regularly mailed several hundred copies to our agent, Mr. Plasto, of 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin, and likewise to our friend Mr. Condon, of Waterford, for sale and distribution as specimens.

We will regularly send a copy of the NEWS to any part of Ireland, on receipt of subscription at the rate of 16s. sterling per annum.

Editors of Irish journals will confer a favor by giving publicity to the above replies.

Mr. P. H. McCAWLEY has received our authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "IRISH NEWS," throughout the Canadas.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 28, 1856.

DOWNFALL OF THE AMERICAN REPUBLIC.

For several weeks past the saddest cries have been heard. Faneuil Hall has ached with the loud words of tribulation, which merchants, politicians, members of Congress and preachers of the Gospel have given to the winds. Tremont Temple, too, has been a conventicle of grief, sackcloth, and gnashing of teeth. Nor have the signs and sounds of woe been confined to the Land of the Pilgrims.

From out of the smoke and ashes of the clanging city, standing where the waters of the Alleghany and Monongahela mingle, volumes of anguish have gone up. From Erie, down through the salt-vats of Syracuse, to the sand hills of Neversink, a tumultuous wail has travelled. From the eloquent pulpits of Brooklyn, the pews of the Tabernacle, the editorial nooks which overlook the Park and the old Brick Church, lamentations have incessantly gone forth.

But the dirge has been varied. There has been no deadening monotony of moans. Passionate bursts have occasionally heightened the strain. The plaintiveness into which it sometimes relapsed only served as a prelude to explosions of wrath. We had the stream and the cataract. The ripple and the roar. Maledictions succeed to prayers. When the sermon on morals becomes drowsy, a flourish of trumpets, an invocation to arms, a whirlwind of curses against the Union, exhilarate the audience. The past, the present and the future, nothing is too tangled or remote for these melancholy minstrels and prophets of fury.

The past, however, is beyond their reach. It is there, fixed as the cliffs of the sea, the stars, the relics of Grecian art, the Pyramids, or the idols of Yucatan. Not so the present, in which they live and move. Not so the future, for the happiness or bitternes of which they have to some extent the power to cast the seeds. Both lie within their reach. These days, actually so. The coming days, according to the strength they possess, develope, or acquire.

The outrages that have recently occurred in Washington, the fierce broils in Kansas, the armed deposition of the civil authorities in San Francisco, these are the events which furnish forth the elegies, the martial epics, and dark predictions which have of late, with discordant tones, disturbed the public ear. America is on the brink of a deadly gulph! The Republic, the foundations of which have been laid on the heights that overlook the bay of Charleston, laid deep on the bank of the Potomac, laid in the swamps of the Santee, set firmly amongst the wooded hills of Vermont—the Republic, they say, splits from base to battlement, and, giving way in all directions, tumbles to perdition.

There are a few, who like foul birds on stricken oaks, or toads in the rank grass of ancient graves, flap their wings and croak in exstacies and hysterics, contemplating the promised downfall. Such is Theodore Parker, the Sunday dramatist of the Boston Music Hall. Such is Lloyd Garrison, who would pull down the cross of Calvary, as well as the pillars of the Capitol, and sink both in the Dead Sea of disunion, infidelity, and fratricide. These men hate the Union. They would dismember it—tear it, with the tiger's lust, into pieces. These men curse the Constitution. They would sell it with less remorse than Judas sold his Master. These men—cold, harsh, implacable, dogmatic—have no genuine love to excuse their wickedness and mischief. Instigators of disaffection, turbulence, and murder—as in the case of Batcheldor, the U. S. Marshal—and all in the name of the colored race, we never hear of them manfully perilling their lives for their fugitive clients, or giving effect to their doctrine of equality by inviting the latter to sit at their tables and partake of their beds. Unloveable, insolent and malicious, they are to be dealt with as enmity to the common good has been dealt with in every clime, community, and era.

After these come a host of better men. Men, for the most part, of excellent minds and hearts. Men, for the most part, of sterling goodness, with political ideas tempered by philosophy and enlarged by sympathies, which, gratuitously, have given many a cheering word to the wrestlers for freedom in the dust of the dungeons and court-yards of Europe. The name of Emmet justifies us in speaking in this tone of the members of the late Philadelphia Convention. So does Horace Greeley's, which, in Ireland, has ever been identified with the purest benevolence, the love of labor, the love of liberty, and an intense ardor for the success, dignity, and supremacy of both. Other names rapidly and brightly occur to us. Were we writing a pamphlet, they should not be omitted.

The platform these gentlemen have adopted, and on which they have planted their favorite for the Presidency, is clear enough. The North dictates to the South. The North assumes a rigorous ascendancy, claims for its principles every inch of national territory, anticipates the will of the population which may in the course of ages give life to the vast wastes between us and the Pacific, annihilates by anticipation the freedom of opinion for which the framers of the platform profess so chivalrously to contend, despotically determining, so far as resolutions or platforms can determine human destinies, the future relations of the two great political divisions of the Union. Nothing is left for time, with its softening, wise, and humanizing influences, to achieve. The Senate which, intruding itself into the next half century at least, voted provisions for the probable offspring of Louis Napoleon, was less presumptuous and aggressive than the gentlemen who sat in Philadelphia last week, interpreting to the coercion of their posterity the interests of the Commonwealth and the principles of the Constitution.

Were it not, that in the American Republic men are infinitely of less consequence than the will of the Democracy and the laws which issue from that will, we might generously pause for a moment to congratulate the Free-soilers on the choice they have made. They have made the best. Young, intelligent, adventurous, gallant in the noblest degree and sense, John C. Fremont has without doubt a magic name for men of fluent tongues and pens to go before the masses with. His character, hardships, exploits—the wealth, the military and maritime consequence of the country his iron will and nerves have served to incorporate with the older portions of the Union—these, and many other incidents and features of his picturesque life, furnish a copious theme for the most persuasive lyrics and orations. Sergeant's speaker will be thrown on the shelf by the first of November. Extracts from speeches in favor of Fremont will supersede Demosthenes against Eschines, Rienzi against the Nobles, Pitt retorting on Walpole, and Webster in rely to Hayne. Far away, the Free-soilers have the best of the stump.

Yet, seriously speaking, the fate of the Union depends on the result of the contest, the challenge to which, sent forth from Cincinnati, has been answered from the great calabash on the banks of the Delaware. Buchanan successful, the principles of the Constitution are reaffirmed. The compact between the several States solemnly and securely renewed, the supreme dogma of popular sovereignty has nothing for the term of his Presidency to assail it. Directed by a wise old hand—a hand which in its youth fixed bayonets against the British, and which in latter days has with its cunning confounded the roguery of Kings and Queens, and the knaves that follow suit—the great interests of the country, on land and sea, will be compromised neither by a rash war nor a sneaking peace. The calmness, the sagacity, the decorum of the first days of the Republic will be restored, and all good and truthful citizens—the defeated candidate, John C. Fremont, foremost of them—will rejoice that, despite of the seditious outcries and conspiracies of this day, it has been the beneficent will of Heaven that the predicted downfall should not afflict the present generation.

The "Difficulty" with England.

Elsewhere we present an interesting, though lengthy resumé of the opinions held by the representative press of England on American affairs in general at present, and the Crampton dismissal in particular. They will repay perusal. Since they were compiled, two steamers have arrived, bringing London dates to the 11th, and a continuation of the labors of London journalists upon the same topic.

No official announcement of the dismissal had been received, but the most perfect unanimity prevailed among papers of all parties as to the fact. The nearer they approach the catastrophe, the more subdued becomes the character of their feelings, if the tone, indeed, by which the same are manifested retains its burly volume. Through divers channels of reasoning, they all tend to illustrate one issue, which is, that England will preserve the peace, because her chances in a war with this country would be more than doubtful.

The dismissal of Mr. Dallas was loudly suggested and confidently expected by the Times and others; but taking refuge in the statement, that England "never dismissed a foreign minister, except on public grounds," the former at once retires and contradicts its hitherto warlike and pertinacious demands, by a new view of the question, thus:—

"The British Government cannot allege that Mr. Dallas is disagreeable because Mr. Crampton is charged with being so."

The Times admits that the latter "has conducted his defence with unpleasant pertinacity," and winds up its abusive but evasive, and audacious though really mild article with this illogical conclusion:—

"The United States has driven itself to this refuge of weakness by pretending a strictness of neutrality it never observed when interest stood in the way; nor is there another Government in the world that on the same day would receive a Minister from Mr. Walker, and dismiss one from Her Britannic Majesty on purely private grounds."

The Morning Star regards the avenging of "Crampton" by involving some fifty or sixty thousand people in a deadly strife as an absurdity too immense for more than momentary condemnation. The Daily News is patronizing and pacific, looks upon a war between America and England as "a civil war," regarding the former clearly as an integral portion of the latter; and in this expansive mood thinks that the dismissal of Mr. Dallas would "only ripen animosity." The Morning Chronicle lauds the ex-minister as "a valuable public servant," who "too faithfully performed his duty," while the London Telegraph, in a bold and brilliant review of England's inability to attempt a tussle with America—going over, with brief and bitter eloquence, the humiliating facts of the career, both of the Army and Navy in the late war—derides the idea that in such a quartette as Crampton and the three consuls, the manufacturing districts of England should be left to starve for want of the "raw material" from America, while privateers of the latter would embark in English ships on sea, and ravage their coasts at home. The spirit of the English press is undeniably against a war with America.

IRISH ARMS BILL.

Mr. Isaac Butt has acquired a brilliant celebrity. All through Ireland, England and Scotland, he is known as a successful lawyer, of energetic mind and copious eloquence. As a scholar and a writer he is almost as favorably distinguished. Occupying for the usual term the professorship of Political Philosophy in Trinity College, he has left to the public a valuable gift in the lectures he delivered in that capacity. The pages of the Dublin University Magazine furnish abundant evidence of the poetic temperament and descriptive power with which he has been gifted. Papers full of political interest and information—papers on the Famine and the Emigration of those terrible years which immediately preceeded and immediately followed the insurrectionary failure of 1848—connect his name closely with the science of statesmanship.

Apart from these circumstances, his defence of the State Prisoners of that year, indentified him in the heart and memory of the Irish people, at home and abroad, with the old cause, proud insubordination, chivalry and soul of Ireland. To this epoch, the most glorious of his fortunate career, we look back with pride, with sorrow, with deep remorse. With pride, that to the patriotism of Ireland there was given in those clouded days a beautiful and bold expression. With sorrow, that the hopes excited in us by the rush of noble words, memories vividly revived, and principles haughtily asserted, should have descended into darkness, blending fruitlessly with the cold dust of the dead. Remorse, that the bright play of intellect over national sentiments and scenes, the rugged glories of Irish life and the great transactions of history—the fight at Marathon, the death of Cæsar, the sublime episodes of the Swiss crags and lakes, the black majesty of Cromwell, the republican conquests of England, the war of the Netherlands, the storm which hurled the throne of the Bourbons into the bottomless pit, the eternal peal of the old bell of Philadelphia proclaiming the Rights of Man throughout the world and to the ends thereof—should have hurried us into a faith and ecstacy from which we have been awakened into distrust, the saddest fretfulness, and despair.

True to his earlier prejudices and factious associations, Isaac Butt, from his seat in Parliament, has asked for the instant renewal of the Bill which construes the possession of arms in Ireland into a transportable offence. He calls for this bill peremptorily. Calls for it with all the earnestness and impetuosity of an insatiable partisan of Orangeism. Calls for it, as though the dragon's teeth, which ages of ruthless oppression had sown, were ripening into armed men, and every moat and graveyard, every field fertilized with Rebel's blood, from the Slaney to the Curragh, were bristling with pikes and fire-arms, prompt to avenge the butcherly blows and slanders, which from Essex, the henchman of Elizabeth, down to Clarendon, the callous and crafty viceroy of Victoria, has been through a terrible succession of famines, frauds, and martyrdoms heaped upon the Irish race.

He refers to the Arms Act of 1846. He calls—he by birth and fame an Irishman!—calls upon the law-givers of Westminster to renew without delay the provisions of this penal and abominable Bill.

What were the provisions of the Bill referred to? It was under discussion in the Repeal Association, in the month of February, of that year. Smith O'Brien speaking of it, said :—

"Under this Bill a power is given to the administrators of the Government to transport, for a period of not less than seven years, any man convicted of the heinous crime of being found out of his house one hour after sunset. It suspends the great charter of English liberties—the Habeas Corpus Act. It gives to the officials of the Government the power of arresting any individual who may be found out of his house one hour after dark. It places the whole of Ireland under coercion. And who are the administrators of this coercion?"

Then speaking of the Police, which body this nefarious Bill invested with such fearful and oppressive power :—

"The police of Ireland, he undertook to say, was a force utterly unconstitutional. It was a body of 10,000 men, armed and trained after military fashion, and not subject to an annual mutiny act. According to the British Constitution it has always been maintained, that the army should be under the control of Parliament, and depend upon an annual vote. It is one of the great privileges of the British people thus to have a control over the army through their representatives by a mutiny act, which is to be passed every year. But, in the case of the constabulary, we have not less than 10,000 men, armed and disciplined, who are paid out of the consolidated fund, without reference to Parliament. An indefinite power is given to the Government, and there is no control on the part of the local rate-payers who contribute to their support."

Richard O'Gorman, following Smith O'Brien, denounced the Bill, the resuscitation of which the present Member for Youghal, whom grateful clients looked upon as the Curran of 1848, now so impatiently implores. O'Gorman said :—

"Pressed by famine within, by coercion without, bending under the weight of additional taxation, by a happy provision of this Bill the Irishman is made to support the means of his own oppression and degradation. From this spot, slavery in other lands has been freely denounced. Henceforward, keep all your sympathies for yourselves. You want it all, for if this Bill pass into a law, the blight of slavery will have come upon your hearths, and in its worst form too. Never is slavery so loathsome as when it comes with the mockery of liberty—with the name of a free constitution."

Michael Joseph Barry was indignant. His indignation found a forcible expression. He said :—

"I shall, with as much patience as I can command, glance at some of its vile provisions. God forbid that they should ever become law, and one man, bearing the name of Irishman, outlive their enactment. Better that Ireland should be a universal grave."

To this infamous Bill of 1846, the tendencies and effect of which are so clearly set forth in the opinions we have cited, we allude merely for the purpose of impressing on our readers, our Irish readers especially, the wickedness of the spirit which demands its prompt and inexorable revival. Another wise lesson may be thus taught a people who commit their interests and honor to men, who gifted with great rhetorical powers, profusely pour out exciting illustrations and phrases, when some personal object, whether of fame or vengeance, is at stake, or professional accidents render the utterance of national sentiments a necessity. We allude to it—and, indeed, to the subject altogether—for yet another and a loftier purpose. If the cruel hand of coercion cannot be struck down and manacled, the fair name of a chivalrous people may be freed from the blots which the reproaches of the world—precipitate in most instances, illiterate in many, oftentimes vicious—have covered it with, as it were, some vulgar disease.

The legislation, of which this Arms bill ravenously called for by Mr. Butt is, with all its iniquitous provisions, but a diluted specimen, honestly explains the failures of the Irish people in their recent insurrectionary movements. The Dundalk Democrat, with the stroke of a sledge as it were, drives home the truth. "A disarmed nation," it writes, "is eternally in chains." With an Insurrection Act in 1801 ; Martial law in 1803 ; the act of 1801 renewed in 1807, and continued in force for three years after ; White Boy, Algerine, Tithe-rebellion acts, all closely following and riveted into one another like the links of a prisoner's chain ; no wonder that the efforts, made to emancipate Ireland from the control of England, should have proved fruitless. The American colonies would have had to make a tougher fight, had it been with them, as it has been for years and years in Ireland, a crime against the Crown to hold arms and practice the glorious use of them. The monarchists of Europe might now be writing melodies about the woes of America, her vain hopes, and heroism quenched in blood, were it not that, even in the colonial days, it was lawful for the Trans-Atlantic subjects of King George to have their rifles, as well as their spinning-wheels, their Bibles, and their saddle-bags.

"A disarmed nation is eternally in chains."

PAYING THE PIPER.

The Herald of last Sunday publishes an extract of a letter from Granada, dated June 1st, stating that a communication from the government of Costa Rica had been received, in which President Mora acknowledges the government of President Rivas and General Walker, considers hostilities at an end, and offers to become responsible for all the expenses of the war.

This is later news from Nicaragua than that furnished by the Panama Star of June 3d, which had recently—as it indefinitely stated—received "various and very conflicting accounts respecting the successes and reverses of Walker's army." One of those accounts was, that the Central American States had formed a coalition against Nicaragua ; Guatemala giving 3000 men, San Salvador 2000, and Honduras 1000 ; to meet which General Walker had 1,500—exactly one-fourth of the army said to be in the field against him.

Letter from an Irishman in London.

LONDON, June 7th, 1856.

A Parliamentary friend has kindly handed me a copy of the Parliamentary Blue Book lately issued, containing the correspondence between the British and American Governments respecting Central America and the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. The presentation of this precious volume was for a long period withheld on various pretences, and truly it is not surprising that the British Government should have hesitated before submitting to public examination a correspondence so damaging to their character.

From a hasty perusal of it, I gather the following facts:

I. That Great Britain has not at present, and never had, any claim as of right to occupy any portion of Central America.

II. That without any just cause, or even decent pretext, she took forcible possession, in 1848, of the port of San Juan del Norte—the property of the sovereign State of Nicaragua—changing its name to "Greytown."

III. That by the first article of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, signed in 1849, it was agreed that neither party—Great Britain or the United States—should "occupy, fortify, colonize, or assume or exercise dominion over the Mosquito coast, or any part of Central America."

IV. That Great Britain has, from the date of its ratification up to the present hour, systematically violated that Treaty. 1st by not withdrawing from her offensive occupation &c. of the Mosquito coast &c., and 2nd, by actually extending the limits of that fabulous territory, seizing the island of Ruatan, and proclaiming the Colony of the Bay islands.

These facts are patent on the face of the volume, and cannot be disputed. The attempt of the English minister to justify or explain them away is the most audacious thing in the history of diplomacy. No sooner does Marcy or Buchanan or Clayton explain one lie, than British diplomacy takes refuge in another. No sooner is Lord Clarendon driven from one corner than Crampton or Sir H. Bulwer provides another for his reception. The object of all this, mark you, is to gain time. The following anecdote you may rely upon as being authentic :

A member of the Irish independent opposition party lately addressing a supporter of the present Government, said :

"Why is it that, professing to attach no importance to the occupation of the Mosquito coast, &c., you hesitate about complying with the plain provisions of the Clayton-Bulwer compact!"

"Oh!" replied the ministerialist, "time is very important to us in this case ; for it strengthens our occupation. After the next Presidential election, the correspondence will probably be begun de novo, and thus we obtain a renewal for four years of our lease of the Mosquito and Ruatan."

This anecdote, which I repeat you may rely upon as being entirely authentic, furnishes in my mind the true key of this portentous blue-book. "Time strengthens our occupation?" I trust Americans will take note of the phrase. Had the American government insisted six years ago on the fulfilment of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, there would have been no Walker expedition since, and England would have been much more disposed to civility than she now is. But the inaction of the American Government both provoked the Walker expedition and emboldened the tone of the English Ministry.

Being but partially informed, I was inclined at first to deplore and condemn the Walker proceeding. I have a strong veneration for law, and I felt grieved that what could and might be done legally and constitutionally, should be attempted—as I supposed — illegally and unconstitutionally. Knowing that America has had justice all through upon her side, I regretted that a body of adventurers should have attempted to do that which the strong arm of the general government alone could have effectually accomplished ; namely, freed Central America from foreign monarchical occupation, colonization and intrigue. I still regret that America did not long ago insist upon the fulfilment of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty ; but, having failed to do so, I yield all due honor and praise to Walker for his gallant interposition in behalf of Nicaraguan independence. That his interference was not only justified but called for, is evident, from the simple fact that he has been enabled so long to maintain his ground, and that in face of the opposition of the American Government. The recognition of his minister is now an act, highly creditable, in my mind, to President Pierce and his Cabinet, and a graceful compliment to the gallantry and intrepidity of Walker. What the results may be which are likely to flow from it, I am not in a position to determine. I trust, however, I may take it for granted that the United States—Cabinet, and President, and people ; Whigs and Democrats ; Northerners and Southerners, are unanimous on this one point, that Great Britain shall not, in violation of a solemn compact, of justice, of right and international law, be permitted to occupy, fortify, colonize, or exercise dominion over the Mosquito coast, the island of Ruatan, or any part of Central America.

I perceive that the best feelings do not seem to exist between the United States and the French Government. The fault must surely lie with the French Emperor ; for the American people, as far as I have been able to perceive, have always manifested the kindliest feelings towards France. Or is this Louis Napoleon a mere Englishman in disguise—a puppet and a tool of Palmerston? That France retired from the Crimea crowned with laurels, she may thank the native chivalry of her sons ; but that no material interest of her's has been served by the war, she must be intimately persuaded. The French people never heartily sympathised in the Russian war ; their common sense told them that it was a war waged for English interests, and that their Emperor, the nephew of the sublime martyr of St. Helena, but playing the game of England. Will Louis Napoleon be mad enough, base enough, foolish enough, to back up England in the West as he has done in the East? Will he dare to say to the French people: "I must support my ally, England, fighting for a country where she has no claim to any position save that which she derives from usurpation, from broken faith, from perjury, and a Mosquito King of British manufacture? I must draw the sword against America, and thus vindicate the glory of France by warring against liberty to-day, as I pretended to war against despotism yesterday?" I feel confident that he will venture upon no such experiment as this—an experiment to which that of the 2nd December was but child's play. I apprehend no European coalition against America. The cause of America is too clearly and unmistakeably right (the treaty of Paris notwithstanding). It is notorious that the utmost harmony does not exist between the European Governments ; the aspect of the people, moreover, again becomes threatening. All these causes preclude the possibility of anything like a European coalition.

In my estimate of Louis Napoleon, I have the misfortune to differ with every one of my countrymen whom I meet. While I regard him as a knave, they almost universally behold in him a great hero. Yet it is easy to perceive that his popularity here is based, as it is in France, on the name he bears—the name Napoleon. The Irish people cannot believe that the man who bears that name, is the friend of England. They will tell you that his friendship for England is but a pretence, and that he has some "deep designs in view." There may, for aught I know, be some reason in this view of the case—and the instincts of the people are generally correct—I could wish however, that the "deep designs" alluded to would assume the form of a Hoche, and a landing at Killala.

Our countrymen have a decided leaning towards the French. This was strikingly manifested on the occasion of the Proclamation of Peace. There happened at the time to be two French vessels of war in Kingstown Harbor, and their officers took part in the procession. At every point of the line these French officers were loudly cheered—more loudly than the Queen's representative, the "amiable" Lord Carlisle, than the Lord Mayor with all his mail-bearers and sword-bearers ; than even Marshal Tom Reynolds on his fiery war-steed.

Stupid people, bigots, fanatics, and donkeys will tell you, that this partiality for the French proceeds from an identity of religion. There can be no greater mistake—else why not the same partiality for Spanish, Italian, &c.? The true cause is that Irishmen regard France as the natural enemy of England, and that some day the Red Rose will fade and wither beneath the shadow of the Fleur de lis.

The London Papers denounce the recognition of Walker's Government as a violation of the Clayton Bulwer Treaty! Surely the voice of impudence and mendacity can no further go. In the first place the recognition of the de facto government of Nicaragua can under no circumstances be regarded as a violation of the Treaty. But even supposing it were, what audacity in those English to talk of a violation of a treaty which they themselves have for seven years systematically, deliberately and plainly trampled on and set at naught. I have in my possession a copy of the London Times of January last, which distinctly admits that they—the English—had violated and were violating the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty.

But hark! What tidings are these from Washington? The expulsion of Crampton, the British Minister! Bravo, President Pierce! The world began to grow weary of interminable speeches and dispatches from America, and were looking for an act, a deed. Well, here is an act which all that is honest in the world must applaud. Indeed, after Clayton's terrible exposure of Crampton's last bold and clumsy lie about Ruatan, it is hard to conceive how, if he had a sparkling of gentlemanly feeling, he could have had the hardihood to remain in Washington. British diplomatists, however, are notoriously thick-skinned, and Crampton lied diplomatically.

They are a strange family, these Cramptons. Sir Philip, father, I believe, of the ex-Minister, is estimable for his fine social qualities, and held in high repute as a surgeon. He, however, is the only member of the family who possesses any good qualities at all. His brother, the Judge, is a canting hypocrite, who disgraced the ermine, and disgusted sensible men of all parties, by presiding a couple of years ago at the meetings of the notorious Gavazzi in this city. Another brother, a clergyman, who resides near Clontarf, was detected some years ago in a most infamous attempt to blacken the character of the poor people of his neighborhood, and to subject several of them to banishment or death. You may recollect the case. A hay-rick of this exemplary minister was burned down. The cry of incendiarism was immediately raised, and a number of decent men were put upon their trial for the offence. There being no evidence to convict, the men were acquitted. Some time after, however, it was discovered that the real offender was a servant of Crampton's, and that he had been instigated to the act by the Rev. Gentleman himself!

Of course the acts of Crampton in Washington are the acts of Clarendon and the British Government ; but I am inclined to think he is just as unscrupulous a tool of an unscrupulous Government as was that "oily gammon," Sir H. Bulwer himself.

It is to be hoped that amid the smoke and din of this diplomatic rupture the real irresistible casus belli—Central America—will not be overlooked.

FONTENOY

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.*

THE GALWAY ELECTION.—MONAHAN, THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

The Connemara pony galloped us into Loughrea in less than no time, the boy on the box shouting the whole of the way, at the top of his voice, for O'Flahertie, Repeal, and owld Ireland. The streets were crowded as if it were a fair day. Detachments of the Eighth Hussars, slowly riding up and down in front of Kilroy's Hotel, up and down before the Court-house, and round and round Eyre square, threw a variety of brilliant touches into what would otherwise have been a very sombre picture. The day was dull. A thaw had set in. The ground, covered with a soft crust, was inclined to be muddy. An ashy sky arched the old Spanish houses, the quaint, solemn look of which deepened the gloominess of the scene. Every one, except the Hussars, appeared to me to have been out all night on Lough Corrib, and to have come into town in wet clothes. The Hussars themselves, with all the swinging finery about them, and the fire and beauty of their horses, were not wholly free from the damp and mouldiness which seemed to prevail. The fur on their jackets looked moist—looked like a brown rabbit would, after being dragged out from under a heap of wet leaves. The mulberry nose of a sinewy broad-shouldered sergeant, sitting calmly in his saddle close to the back door of the Court-house, was covered with something resembling a very heavy cold dew. The white sheets of calico, with O'Flahertie's name and patriotic sentiments in lamp-black upon them, shared the general depression. Tacked to the dreariest bare poles, they dangled from the window-sills of houses that looked as if they never knew what a good fire or a laugh was. The banners were on the outer walls, but were all the worse for being so. Lifeless, colorless and clammy, they were calculated rather to depress than excite the enthusiasm of the City of the Tribes. Patriotic sentiments were never before so destitute of drapery. The undertaker must have been the painter, costumer, upholsterer, and decorator to the Repealers of Galway, on this slovenly and dismal day.

The dullness, however, was all outside. It was a superficial gloom and stupidity. There was life enough, a little way out of sight, behind those dead banners. Galway was piled up, and crushed within four walls that day. They were the walls of the Court house. Every man who had a heart, an arm, or a kick in him, was there. Every man with a shirt at his back was there. Every man who could shout for Repeal was there. Every man who could boast of a roof over his head, a penny in his pocket, or a crust for his breakfast was there. Landlords of every description were there. The tyrant of the fields, the swindling sportsman, the beggar in fine linen and broad-cloth, the sneaking supplicant for Government favors, the political traitor making a joke of his perfidy, the vulgar toady of the great house whose owner he knew would have a coronet on his coffin, when carried to the toads and leeches—all were there, jumbled up together, flushed, disordered, sweltering, tossing hats and handkerchiefs about, now and then fiercely shaking fists, shouting, crushing one upon another, many of them foaming at the mouth, all heightening the turbulent and stormy scene with the wildest excess of words, threats, cheers, oaths, and gestures.

Mitchel and I looked down from the Grand Jury gallery upon the tumult. Stunned by the terrific shouts, our eyes swam in the hot, suffocating haze through which thousands of arms and legs and heads—most of them in rags, many of them bleeding, all of them coated with dust, whitewash, and dishevelled—flung themselves frantically to and fro, aloft, and everywhere. Under a canopy of red maroon, in the middle seat of the Judge's bench, sat the High Sheriff of the borough, Michael B. Browne, Esquire. A thin white wand, which he nervously held fast to, denoted his official rank. Had it been a magic wand, he might have stilled the tumultuous waves of the black sea beating at his feet. As it was, he sat like Canute rebuking the flood, but incompetent to compose its fury, or resist its encroachments. Mr. Browne was a genteel spectacle of powerless dignity, exciting a polite pity, which his smiles of resignation and urbanity deepened. In the corner on his right, in a compact pillar of shining white teeth, aristocratic noses, proud flesh, and superfine cloth, were bundled the supporters of the Government nominee, James Monahan, the Solicitor-General. The Lynches were there; so were the Blakes; so were the Burkes, Martins, Gregories, St. Georges, and every other silken and scented slave of the neighborhood, in the interest of England. In front of them stood Monahan. In front of them, but with head stooped and eyes stealthily spying about him, exhibiting instinctively all the cowardly caution and cunning of a practitioner in the lowest grade of his profession, and the humility of the unpolished parvenue in the presence of his patrons. The parvenue in this boisterous scene seemed deeply conscious of the debt of gratitude, deference, and homage he owed to his patrons. The patrons glowed with the vain thought of the mischief and noise they were making with so plebian a client. Shabbily dressed, with a sallow skin, mottled with the blue refuse of his coarsely-shaved beard, with inches of crumpled soiled linen lapping over his neck-tie and puffing out from under his cuffs, he stood there, in gait, costume and look, the veriest varlet and hack which the worst government, or the meanest aristocracy subject to the worst government, could hire to do their jobs with in Parliament, under the blind eyes of Justice, in the out-houses and at the back-door of the Castle. A large, wide-drawn, heavy mouth, perpetually twitching and hardening between the firmness due to his office and the trepidation which men of coarse natures and sudden success experience, he shuffled, twisted and shrugged himself before the crowd which hooted and cursed him in that Court-house, the very image of the night-bird to which Devin Rielly, with his picturesque power and truthfulness, likened him. Of the humblest origin, the Irish people, who have a proud reverence for the princely old stock, spurned him as a mushroom, the spongy growth of a night. Sullen in his features, awkward in his gait, stinted in blood and muscle, having nothing whatever grand, or gallant, or gentlemanly even, in his aspect or address, he failed to exercise the influence which handsome features and a chivalrous air in many instances command, where morals are suspicious, or birth is dubious, or genius is deficient. The driest pedagogue in the school of law—with a mind, originally rude and barren, rendered still more sterile by the dead knowledge he heaped upon it, and which he disposed of as a phrenologist does his skulls, shoulder-blades, and hip-joints—without a flower of poetry to beautify, or a solitary pure gleam of philosophy to illuminate his studies, social conversation, or professional discourse—selfish, calculating, crafty, mean in heart as he was in look—ungrammatical, illiterate, inarticulate for the most part, slovenly and insipid—he had none of those radiant gifts, none of that intellectual fire which melts down prejudices, and fuses the speaker and the audience into one glowing mass, and which, beating down with a sword fashioned of sunbeams as it were, the conceits which frown upon the cradle of the poor, wins from Plantagenet and Tudor—from the lordliest brat who struts the stage of life in the wardrobe of some dead plunderer—the Cross of Honor, and in the majestic cathedral of history wears it till the sun grows cold.

On the left of the Sheriff were many of the sturdy honest merchants of the ancient town, the Irelands, MacLaghlans, Mangans; representative men of the Trades, such as Mahon and Barnacle; young, spirited, professional men; some few of the landed proprietory, such as Cummins, French, and Foster; several of the Catholic priests, amongst the latter, the Rev. Messrs. Roche and Daly. In the body of the hall, blocking up every avenue leading to it, hanging on to the pillars of the gallery, clinging to window-sills, swinging out of iron brackets in the walls, thrust upon each other's backs, surging and struggling, gasping with the heat and violent pressure, yet flinging up their brawny arms with an enthusiasm almost delirious, and cheering with all their might—cheering until their eyes started, grew red, and flashed, and the veins in their foreheads filled with burning blood—were the "rabble," as the dainty, sleek aristocrats on the right of the High Sheriff, called the poor, the ragged, the unpurchaseable honesty, the impetuous patriotism which, living on crusts, on crusts were content still to live, so that they could see the Green Flag flying, and their country free.

With considerable difficulty we made our way past that calm, mulberry-nosed Sergeant of Hussars, on guard at the back door, up the stone steps of the Court-house to the lobby of the Grand Jury room, and from the lobby to the gallery. At the entrance of the gallery, Michael Joseph Barry (now editor of the Cork Southern Reporter), met us.

"We'll all have to fight," he said.

"Fight!" exclaimed Mitchel.

"Fight!" I re-echoed.

"Yes," said Barry, somewhat hurriedly, but distinctly, "Monahan's party will drive us to it—O'Gorman goes out in half an hour."

This was agreeable news to hear, the moment we got into Galway. What a hurry we were in to be shot! Mitchel and I looked earnestly at Barry, then at each other, and then back at the steps up which we had rushed. Mitchel steadied his countenance, smiled for a moment, twisted a lock of his hair, jerked himself back, stood straight before Barry, and burst into laughter. The rumble in the glass coach to Ballinasloe—the Roscommon Sub-Sheriff, his zest for spatched snipe and broiled kidney — the drumming we had on the doors of Loughrea—the excavation of the old yellow chaise from the barrel-staves, broken ladders, hot-house frames, and hen-coops—the skeleton driver, his tape-worm whip and forlorn steeds, one long and one short—all the comical incidents and faces of the day and night previous, one after the other, flashed across his mind. And to think that to all this, in true Galway style, there was to be a conclusive catastrophe! The Comedy of Errors was perfect!

For my part, I wished myself still on the road from Loughrea, in the funeral chaise, which hadn't been out since the cholera.

* Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1856, by THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the U. States, for the Southern District of New-York.

SONG.

BY JOHN MAHON.

There is a young and blooming girl
Whose eyes are orbs of light,
Whose silken hair and teeth of pearl
Are lovely to the sight.
I've seen the gaudy tulip rare
'Mid lilies e'er so many,
But no sweet flow'ret can compare
With thee, my charming Annie.

Her lips appear like rubies rare
Emerging from the snow;
Her smiles illume a brow most fair
With Pleasure's sunny glow.
Her beauties burst upon the sight,
And captives make of many;
Oh! 'tis a heaven of delight
To gaze on lovely Annie.

Sweet Mary has soft eyes of blue,
Which woo the heart to love;
And Flora's cheeks of vermil hue
An anchorite would move.
Fair Betsy's lips in sweetness part,
And beautiful is Fanny;
But none of these can fix the heart
Like thee, my peerless Annie!

Reading the Arabian Nights.

Sister Emma, sister Emma, in this languid noon of May,
Fallen asleep above thy reading, like a child out-worn with play,
Closed the white and veinëd eyelids o'er the deep blue of thine eye,
And the long dark silken lashes on thy red cheek dewy lie.
With thy crimson lips half parted, and thy brown and braided hair,
Thou dost form a graceful picture, in the soft spring shadows there.

And what so long hath bound thee? Gently clasped within thy hand
Lie the wonder-woven stories of the wild Arabian land.
In what a realm of magic treads thy dreaming fancy now!
I can read its rippling shadows on the whiteness of thy brow,
'Neath the citron thickets fragrant, where the light wind wakes and dies,
Where the intermingling foliage thwarts the purple-zenithed skies.

By the songful waters gliding, through the dipping flowers away,
Dreamy echoes to the music of the golden-tressëd Day.
Thou hast learned the magic whisper, and hast glided down with ease
Into treasure-caves undreamt of, beneath old moss-grown trees.
Lamp-lit Aladdin hath passed thee, in these fragrant fairy woods,
And shadowy Genii started tall from out their solitudes.

Thou hast passed enchanted castles gray, amid the whispering leaves,
Where some wild, dark-browed magician, all his evil spell-work weaves,
And hast list'ned, in the silence, ever wishing that more fleet
Came the distant sounding gallop of the Champion's courser's feet!
How a wicked, shrivelled fairy hobbles to thee from the shade
Of the scented almond thicket, crossing dark the sunny glade!

Here, a light-winged bird of Paradise bears past thee the lost gem;
There, some fair, unhappy princess weeps beneath her diadem;
Weeps amid the glow and freshness of her blossomed garden bowers,
While a gentle fairy hastens to aid her with her powers:
All the while the Evil Genii cross the Good ones on their way.
Ah! my dreaming sister Emma, these are tales of every day!

Oft, to gain some toy that glitters, would we lose the grand and true,
Giving, like the foolish Princess, up the old lamp for the new.
There be dark magicians living—Gold, and Power, and Pride, and Wrong!
Nought may hope to break the bondage but some haughty, soaring song,
And a sword, though keen and polished, that will cleave no iron bars,
And some scattered crests that glitter in a night devoid of stars.

As for wicked, shrivelled fairies, such they say there are e'en now.
Not the surest charm to win them is the beauty on thy brow!
Sullen looks, like clouds, may cross thee on thy sweet path of delight.
Bend not thy blue eyes upon them—half in wonder, half in fright—
Thou shalt conquer, but not win them, no more than shall the song
Crush beneath its ringing music the embattled towers of Wrong.

Treasure-caves! ah, we have found them beneath many an ancient tree.
In the May-days of our childhood, where the summer winds sang free
Through the shaken leaves above us and the shadows as they pass,
We formed to courtly pageants, on the flower-inwoven grass,
And the curling cloud-pavilions, on the sapphire of the sky,
Into gorgeous fairy palaces a-sailing slowly by.

ENUL.

Literary and Artistic News.

Hiawatha meets with much favor at the hands of European readers. In England it is extensively sold and read, and is considered the poem of this century. At Leipzig an edition of this renowned poem is issued at half a thaler, by Alphonse Durr. The publisher notes on his title-page that Hiawatha is now supplied in Rome, Vienna, Paris, Hamburg, Amsterdam, Brussels, Basle, Turin, Trieste, Venice, and Verona. Two German translations are now being read far and wide on the Continent; one of them having had the genius of Freiligrath to turn the author's English into the language of Goethe and Schiller.

The magistrates of Munich have decided that the graves of Sennefelder, the inventor of lithography, who died in 1834, Gabelsberger, the inventor of stenography, who died in 1849, shall henceforth be attended to, and kept with unusual care.

The advertising columns of the London Times are supposed to yield £800,000 per annum.

Le Verrier, director of the Observatory of Paris, has named the last new planet, the fortieth of the series discovered by M. Goldschmidt, "Harmonia," in honor of the conclusion of the peace.

THE RISE OF THE DUTCH REPUBLIC.

The Rise of the Dutch Republic. A History by John Lothrop Motley; in three vols. Harper & Brothers.

Michelet, in his Life of the "violent and terrible Reformer," tells us that Luther's father, in assuming an armorial bearing, (for the peasants imitated the nobles in this respect,) chose a hammer, and no more.* Selected, no doubt, as a type of his occupation as a miner; the implement was not less symbolical of the striking characteristics of his sturdy son. He seemed to have inherited all the mining, sledge-hammer and explosive necessities of his father's humble and laborious calling, without any of the more gentle and trustful characteristics of that diligent, "simple and single-hearted man."

Denying himself the additional comforts which the help of his children, as is usual with the poor, could bring him, the elder Luther preferred to toil, like a gnome in the gloomy caves of earth, that his children should behold the light of education. He bored and hammered; drew blood and life from the veins of the earth, while young Martin sought the school at Eisenach, begged and sung for his livelihood through the streets—as all poor students did—until through a four years kindness of a charitable woman he was fitted to enter the University of Erfurth, where the potent hammer of the miner sustained him.

Some sixteen years afterwards, the whilom beggar of the streets of Eisenach has a hammer in his hand. He stands before the church of the Castle of Wittemberg, as though confronting the gateway of all Christendom. He nails his famous protest against the purchase of Pope Leo the Tenth's indulgences to the door, the clamor of which movement rolled like a succession of thunderbolts over Germany.

Vulcan forging the helmet of Pluto, or fashioning the lurid sceptre of Jove, roused not such echoes as sprang from the concussion of Luther's hammer on the church door of Wittemberg. Those of the one keep time with the fitful resurrections of dead languages; those of the other, then and since but gathered deeper volume from the revolutions they inspired, the civil wars they fed with most relentless "religion:" and even now, in this day of brotherly love and ambitious benevolence, they inflate and madden the pulpits of the world.

They raised the eyes and ears of all to the hammer from which they rose, and for good or evil, or for both, the man that held it became immortal.

Soon, numberless heads were hammering out their protests. All the nations were shaken, and the Babel tongues were echoing. The frenzy that possessed them was at once divine and demoniac. Upon it the impostor Munzer was lifted to preside over a millenial kingdom, only to be flung a prey to a sublunary scaffold,† to the enormous delight of Luther and Melancthon. The harmonious cantons of the Swiss Republic were smote into clanging discord. France, differing from those who already differed, flung up its Calvinistic banner beside that of the less ascetic Luther. The frenzy lifted up Holland to independence and commercial success; it weakened Spain; disgorged a flood of flame over England; wildly tore the body and soul of Ireland apart, the continued estrangement of which accounts for her present position. Nor did it stay here. The Atlantic Ocean has not been able to out-throb its turbulence, or compete with its fury. The most generous system of temporal being the world has yet seen—the noblest culmination of the struggling social theories of all times—has not been able to shake off the tattered garments of the mad Europe of the sixteenth century. Know-Nothingism excites the same social extermination; the same mad and unconditional analysis of man's most sacred and self-protective thoughts; the same summary invocation of hate, and the same proud inaptitude to obliterate it; the same callous irresponsibility to society for the sectionalities it sanctifies. It incites all the vigorous cowardice and stealthy despotism, by the rivalrous and deadly action of which the names of both Catholic and Protestant of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries are consigned to such unutterable shame.

Reformation had scarcely set in on one side, before extermination was the faith and refuge of all sides. Happily, from the state of Europe at the time, in some instances polemics—distracted by the discursiveness of the discussionists, and the disquietness engendered among the people who were made the prey of both, while they did not understand either—was soon lost in the more palpable and easily recognised political necessities of the day.

Luther was a brave beast, and, in many respects, at once the Mirabeau and Danton of his day. Resembling the former, who was "as ugly as the nephew of Satan," in the broken impetuosity of his eloquence, and the latter in being "consumed by passions," and the "fit leader of a band more timid and less ferocious than himself,"‡ he was more a demagogue than either.

Without a glimmer of the divinity of Genius, which at times almost transfigured the Frenchmen, he largely represented its great and most startling rival, talented audacity. There was more body than soul about him. While a furious lover of freedom, he was a desperate despot. Preaching against Kings and Princes, that power which they symbolized and he hungered after dazzelled his eye and humbled his tongue into the most right-divine phrases of address. He was a leveller and not a founder. And as with every leveller, his task was more easy than mighty. The oak that took centuries to grow can be levelled in a day. His whole life was an enthusiasm of egotism.

Among the gigantic disruptions which followed his hammerings at the church door of Wittemberg, perhaps the most remarkable—made so by the concentrated and persistent energy which characterised it—was the war in the Netherlands.

The independence of the Low Countries sprang out of the black horror of the Reformation, as day springs out of darkness.

The interest of the period is intense. It is the grandest episode of Europe marching from the hardy and adventurous, though theatrical gallantry of the middle ages to the wilder utilitarianism of modern civilization. We doubt if this panorama of Dutch struggles and success is not of more imposing grandeur than even the marvellous transformations of the Napoleonic era. The difference is that one is Dutch, the other French. If the latter is more brilliant in effect the former is more natural in its details, The action of the one was inspired by an irrepressible desire for freedom, that of the other by the most mortal, and consequently the most reckless ambition. The lessons they teach are of great individual importance; but from its nature, the French glory, in all its resonant magnitude, falls below the deep and emotional experiences of the revolt of the Netherlands.

The Napoleonic era was a brilliant catastrophe, the horrors and magnificence of which alike hold the world's attention, and between which the plummet of the human mind still pendulates without satisfactorily touching either.

The Rise of the Dutch Republic was a necessity—the arming of the Man against the tyranny of a Monarch as cold and gloomy as the cells in which his Inquisition was exercised, and as meanly unrelenting as the rack he inspired.

The magnitude of the domain of Charles V., the brilliancy of his successes, and the dramatic leanings for gorgeous display in which he was an adept, threw over, or wove into his actions an apparent if not actual generosity, which harmonized, if it did not humanize his ambitious and crafty though warlike nature. His son, Philip II., without the genius to be a statesman, or the generosity which should rule a warrior, inherited all the lower qualities of subtlety and insincerity which a more hearty and expansive nature had rendered somewhat negative in the father. Cold, cruel and conniving, selfish and sanctimonious, he continued the worst evils of his predecessor. He disgraced the heritage his father left him in every point save one—the Inquisition—and in that he could not, for Charles had disgraced himself.* The Abbe Lacordaire, adopts the stigma cast by the Committee of the Cortes upon the Inquisition "in the middle of the sixteenth century, under Philip II., when Protestantism threatened to propagate itself in Spain."†

The distinguished Spanish Catholic Divine and writer, Balmes, attempting, though under what difficulties is exceedingly apparent, to shield Philip, notes the passage from Lacordaire as an error superinduced by "that candor which sometimes accompanies genius," and can find no better defence himself than is given in these words, "Philip II., continued the work which had been begun by his predecessors; if they are excused, he ought not to be treated with greater severity. Ferdinand and Isabella directed the Inquisition against the apostate Jews; why could not Philip II. avail himself of it against Protestants?"‡ After exposing the reasons why some writers have attacked Philip, Balmes excuses himself from dwelling on a point of the deepest importance, thus: "Whether Philip used the Inquisition for political purposes, in certain cases, is not the question we have to examine here."

Against this monarch, when Spain was at the height of its greatness; when her rule on land was wide as her adventure on sea was startling; when the axle, which turned a thousand spokes in the four quarters of the globe, centred between the Pyrenees and the Pillars of Hercules; when half of Europe, like a rich and varied dream, was tribute to her couch; and America, like a slumbering Titan, was captured by her adventurers as the dareful sons of Lilliput chained the mountainous proportions of Gulliver; when the name of Spaniard was almost synonymous with master in Europe, Asia, Africa and America, the Netherlands arose. Then began the startling and protracted episode in the annals of Europe, which is only equalled by that which put a Declaration of Independence into English history, and sustained it as the first chapter of actual American life.

It is but natural that the subject of the former should interest a scion of the latter. We are glad that an American has devoted so much labor and scholarship to the re-awakening of the men and movements of the time, from the dim oblivion of state archives, where much that illustrated both had been too long slumbering.

Mr. Motley has devoted five years and three volumes to his noble work. The scene opens on the twenty-fifth of October, 1855, in the great hall of the palace at Brussels, where, surrounded by the States-General, the great Emperor Charles V. abdicated his empire in favor of his ill-shaped, constipated and icy son, renounced "the flesh and the devil," and thence plunged himself into the cloisters of the Jeromite Convent of Yuste in Estremadura. Alexandre Dumas, with the felicity peculiar to him, gives in his Emanuel Philibert, a striking picture of this, as Schiller says, "affecting farce," devised and enacted by Charles in the old ducal palace of the House of Brabant. Good as it is, however, we much prefer the picturesque ensemble, admirable grouping and vivid coloring of Mr. Motley. In Schiller's Revolt of the Netherland, we rarely find details. It is magnificent sketching, clear, graphic, pure. Motley, alone, fills up the outlines, giving them a strong epic character. Here are his pictures of the abdicating emperor, and the succeeding grave nonentity—his son.

"Charles the Fifth was then fifty five years and eight months old; but he was already decrepit with premature old age. He was about the middle height, and had been athletic and well-proportioned. Broad in the shoulders, deep in the chest, thin in the flank, very muscular in the arms and legs, he had been able to match himself with all competitors in the tournay and the ring, and to vanquish the bull with his own hand in the favorite national amusement of Spain. He had been able in the field to do the duty of captain and soldier, to endure fatigue and exposure, and every privation except fasting. These personal advantages were now departed. Crippled in hands, knees and legs, he supported himself with difficulty upon a crutch, with the aid of an attendant's shoulder. In face he had been extremely ugly, and time had certainly not improved his physiognomy. His hair, once of a light color, was now white with age, close-clipped and bristling; his beard was gray, coarse, and shaggy. His forehead was spacious and commanding; the eye was dark-blue, with an expression both majestic and benignant. His nose was aquiline but crooked. The lower part of his face was famous for its deformity. The under lip, a Burgundian inheritance, as faithfully transmitted as the duchy and county, was heavy and hanging; the lower jaw protruding so far beyond the upper, that it was impossible for him to bring together the few fragments of teeth which still remained, or to speak a whole sentence in an intelligible voice. Eating and talking, occupations to which he was always much addicted, were becoming daily more arduous, in consequence of this original defect, which now seemed hardly human, but rather an original deformity.

So much for the father. The son, Philip the Second, was a small, meagre man, much below the middle height, with thin legs, a narrow chest, and the shrinking, timid air of an habitual invalid. He seemed so little, upon his first visit to his aunts, the Queens Eleanor and Mary, accustomed to look upon proper men in Flanders and Germany, that he was fain to win their favor by making certain attempts in the tournament, in which his success was sufficiently problematical. "His body," says his professed panegyrist, "was but a human cage, in which, however brief and narrow, dwelt a soul to whose flight the immeasurable expanse of heaven was too contracted." The same wholesale admirer adds, that "his aspect was so reverend, that rustics who met him alone in a wood, without knowing him, bowed down with instinctive veneration." In face, he was the living image of his father, having the same broad forehead, and blue eye, with the same aquiline, but better-proportioned nose. In the lower part of the countenance, the remarkable Burgundian deformity was likewise reproduced. He had the same heavy, hanging lip, with a vast mouth, and monstrously protruding lower jaw. His complexion was fair, his hair light and thin, his beard yellow, short, and pointed. He had the aspect of a Fleming, but the loftiness of a Spaniard. His demeanor in public was still, silent, almost sepulchral. He looked habitually on the ground when he conversed, was chary of speech, embarrassed, even suffering in manner. This was ascribed partly to a natural haughtiness which he had occasionally endeavored to overcome, and partly to habitual pains in the stomach, occasioned by his inordinate fondness for pastry.

Of the surrounding figures and actors in the eventful history which the emperor thus unsuspectingly emblazoned on the chronicles of Europe, we have the following well individualized group.

"There was the Bishop of Arras, soon to be known throughout Christendom by the more celebrated title of Cardinal Granvelle, the serene and smiling priest, whose subtle influence over the destinies of so many individuals then present, and over the fortunes of the whole land, was to be so extensive and so deadly. There was that flower of Flemish chivalry, the lineal descendant of ancient Frisian kings, already distinguished for his bravery in many fields, but not having yet won those two remarkable victories which were soon to make the name of Egmont like the sound of a trumpet throughout the whole country. Tall, magnificent in costume, with dark flowing hair, soft brown eye, smooth cheek, a slight moustache, and features of almost feminine delicacy; such was the gallant and ill-fated Lamoral Egmont. The Count of Horn, too, with bold, sullen face, and fan-shaped beard—a brave, honest, discontented, quarrelsome, unpopular man; those other twins in doom—the Marquis Berghen and the Lord of Montigny; the Baron Berlaymont, brave, intensely royal, insatiably greedy for office and wages, but who, at least, never served but one party; the Duke of Arschot, who was to serve all, essay to rule all, and to betray all—a splendid seignor, magnificent in cramoisy velvet, but a poor creature, who traced his pedigree from Adam, according to the family monumental inscriptions at Louvain, but who was better known as grand-nephew of the Emperor's famous tutor, Chievres; the bold, debauched Brederode, with handsome, reckless face and turbulent demeanor; the infamous Noircarmes, whose name was to be covered with eternal execration, for aping towards his own compatriots and kindred as much of Alva's atrocities and avarice, as he was permitted to exercise; the distinguished soldiers Meghen and Aremberg—these, with many others whose deeds of arms were to become celebrated throughout Europe, were all conspicuous in the brilliant crowd. There, too, was that learned Frisian, President Vigilius, crafty, plausible, adroit, eloquent—a small, brisk man, with long yellow hair, glittering green eyes, round, tumid, rosy cheeks, and flowing beard. Foremost among the Spanish grandees, and close to Philip, stood the famous favorite, Ruy Gomez, or as he was familiarly called "Rey Gomez" (King and Gomez), a man of mediocrital aspect, with coal-black hair and beard, gleaming eyes, a face pallid with intense application, and slender but handsome figure; while in immediate attendance upon the Emperor was the immortal Prince of Orange."

As the great Prince William the Silent, is the energetic hero of this comprehensive history it would be unjust to his character and to the author who has with such untiring and unique pen-architecture reared this lasting monument to him, to attempt any paragraph-picture of him. The work closes with his assassination on the 11th of July, 1584.

Between those dates, Holland—about half the size of South Carolina, or perhaps equal in area to Ulster in Ireland—a sand-bank, as it were stolen from the sea, seemed to have all the stubborn untameableness of the element from which it was decoyed. With not more than two million of inhabitants, it wrested, under the guidance of William the Silent, its stalwart liberty from Philip, though his ablest generals and his own deadly cunning fought and connived against them.

An attempt at an analysis of this work would only lead us, in our enthusiasm, beyond the bounds which the necessities of our space warn us to observe. One remark we will however make. All the critics we have read of Mr. Motley have more or less alluded to his having gone over some ground which Mr. Prescott had to some extent encroached upon. No one that came within our knowledge seemed to be aware that Schiller devoted the capacity of his noble intellect to the very subject itself—The Revolt of the under Netherlands, which, however, he left unfinished. With Schiller's beautiful and philosophically balanced work, al

---

* Life of Luther. Universal Library.—Ed.

* He preached community of goods, and the social and domestic equality of all men. His disciples brought before him what property they had, and it was equally divided. Munzer was proclaimed King, but his kingdom was short, and he ended it on the scaffold.—Hist. of Switzerland. A. Vieusseux.

"Where now is Munzer," cried Luther, "with that sleeve in which he boasted he could catch all the missiles directed against his people? What is now that God, who for near a year has prophesied by the mouth of Munzer? I am of opinion, that all the peasants ought to perish, rather than the princes and magistrates, since they take up the sword without divine authority. The peasants deserve no mercy, no tolerance, but the indignation of God and man." (May 30th, 1535.) "The peasants," he says elsewhere, "are under the ban, both of God and the Emperor, and may be treated as mad dogs." In a letter dated 21st June, he enumerates the horrible massacres committed upon them by the nobles, without displaying the least sign of interest or pity. —Michelet's Life of Luther.

‡ Alison.

* It has been computed that during the reign of Charles V., 50,000 perished by the hand of the executioner alone. * * * The Emperor's gracious affability with his people, only served to throw a darker shade on the haughty gravity of his son. They read in his countenance the destructive purpose against their liberties, which, even then, he already revolved in his heart. Forewarned to find in him a tyrant, they were fore-armed to resist him.—Schiller's Revolt.

† Memoir on the re-establishment of the Order of Dominicans.—Lacordaire.

‡ Protestantism and Catholicity compared in their effects on the Civilization of Europe.—Balmes.

students of the period should be acquainted. It is a brave, bold outline, tinctured strongly with a manly republican spirit, and will only incite the reader to the gorgeous details and bounding generosity of Motley, who has been lavish of his labor.

The Revolt of the Netherlands was Schiller's first historical attempt, and by it, said the Weird Wieland, "he discovered a capability of rising to a level with Hume, Robertson and Gibbon. The same subject forms the first fruit of Mr. Motley's historical studies; and we may well say that by it he evinced powers and resources—both style and stuff sufficient to place him beside Macaulay, Carlyle, and almost near Louis Blanc. He is more reliable in truthfulness and less meretricious in style than Macaulay. He is more easy if less startling suggestive than Carlyle; and if he has not always at command the vigor of Louis Blanc, he resembles him in the usually well sustained equanimity of his sentences and the picturesque power of his scenes and groups.

Mr. Motley's faults are of a very minor character, and such as no manly critic in view of the labor accomplished, can do more than hint at. For ourselves, we heartily welcome the volumes, and thoroughly commend the publishers who with such spirit took up this extensive work of a young and hitherto unknown author. He need never write another book if he seeks only for reputation. He has it, and must have it—in the front rank of historians.

MILITARY MEMOIRS.

COLUMBIAN GUARDS, TROY, N. Y.

This company was organized July 13th, 1851, by Capt. A. L. Morisson, and other young men, in the city of Troy, and is attached to the Twenty-Fourth Regiment, Tenth Brigade, Third Division, Co. C., of the New York State Militia.

The present uniform adopted by this company consists of—Blue frockcoat, single-breasted; light blue pants, with buff stripes; buff worsted epaulettes, with a circle of blue cord; regulation cap, with buff cord and figure 24 in centre of wreath; plume white, tipped with blue; white patent-leather waist-belt, with brass plate and letters "C. G.," and white web cross-belts, priming wire, brush, and cartridge-box with S. N. Y. in brass letters on the centre, and black leather (with white frog) bayonet-scabbard. They made their first parade October 15th, 1853, numbering 38 muskets and 4 officers, viz: Captain, A. L. Morisson; 1st Lieutenant, Richard S. Quinn; 2nd Lieutenant, Leonard Bush; 3d, John H. Good.

A. L. Morisson, the founder of the Company, was always warmly attached to it, and remained with it until the 7th of May, 1855, when he sent in his resignation, and was highly complimented for the energy and perseverance he constantly displayed in behalf of the company. As a token of the esteem in which he was held by his fellow-members, on the eve of his departure for the far West he was presented, by company subscription, with a splendid silver-mounted revolver and a silver star appropriately engraved. He was a native of the county of Antrim, Ireland, and emigrated to this country in the fall of 1844. He resided in New York city until the breaking out of the Mexican War, when he enlisted as a private in the New York Volunteers, and proceeded direct to the scene of action. He served faithfully and bravely, and proved himself an active and energetic soldier. At the close of the war, he returned to New York with the survivors of the Volunteers. About the time of his return to this country from Mexico, the rising in Ireland for freedom was enthusiastically talked of. He took passage for that country, landed on its shores safely, with a number of companions in arms, but had not proceeded farther than the county Carlow, when he was taken, with two others, and imprisoned. There not being sufficient evidence produced on his examination to authorize his detention, after some time he was discharged. He returned once more to the United States. He now resides in Chicago.

The present officers of the Columbian Guard are: Captain, Richard S. Quinn; 1st Lieut., Michael Welsh; 2nd Lieut., Geo. J. Brennen; 3d Lieut., (vacant); Orderly Sergeant, Patrick Kennedy; 2nd Sergeant, John Barrons; 3d Sergeant, Ambrose Barrons; 4th Sergeant, Thomas Harty; 1st Corporal, Peter Noldt, 2nd, Dominick Welsh; 3d, Michael McGovern; 4th, John English. The company drill takes place every Tuesday evening, at 7 o'clock, at Washington Market Hall, corner of Second and Division streets. Business meetings the third Friday of each month, at half-past 7. The number now on the muster-roll is 32; all active and energetic young men without an exception.

NEW YORK, June 18th, 1854.

To THOMAS F. MEAGHER, Esq.

Dear Sir:—I have great pleasure in presenting to you, on behalf of the O'Brien Columbian Rifles, a memoir of the company, from its formation to the present time, which we hope will appear at your earliest convenience in the IRISH NEWS.

I am, Sir, yours &c., with the highest respect,

GILBERT RIORDAN.

THE O'BRIEN COLUMBIAN RIFLES OF ORANGE NEW JERSEY.

On the 6th of June, 1853, the O'Brien Columbian Rifles were enrolled as a company attached to the 5th Regiment Essex Brigade, New Jersey State Militia. Michael Crean (deceased) being one of the principal men, who left nothing undone to advance this company in its early days, being assisted by several other patriotic Irishmen, amongst whom was the present Captain, Owen Murphy.

John Clark was elected Captain at that time. The company made considerable progress in a short time, notwithstanding the Native American or Know Nothing spirit which worked against it.

On the 22nd Feb., 1854, the first Annual Soiree of the company was held, on which occasion a splendid Irish flag, with the likeness of William Smith O'Brien on one side and on the other the harp and wolf-dog, Goddess of Liberty, &c., was presented to the company by the ladies of Orange. Colonel Babbit presented the flag on their behalf. It was received by Michael Crean in the name of the company.

On the 20th Sept., 1855, John Clark resigned the Captaincy, when the company unanimously elected Lieut. Owen Murphy to the vacancy; a citizen of energy and tried worth, under whose command the company progressed most favorably. They muster 35 men, rank and file, and comprise many of our most respected citizens (Irish Americans) of Orange. They drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month, at their armory, Willow Hall, Orange. Their uniform consists of a dark green frockcoat, red facings, three rows of buttons in front, collar trimmed with gold lace, bugle, star, &c., red epaulettes with green fringe, black pants with gold stripe 1.1-4 inches wide, black patent leather belts, cartridge-box, &c., regulation hat with initials O. B. C. R. in front, with a red-and-green plume.

The names of the officers are as follows:

Captain, Owen Murphy;
1st Lieut., George Maxwell;
2nd do. Conrad Scheimann;
1st Sergeant, Patrick Nevin;
2nd do. Terence Murphy;
3d do. James Dempsey;
4th do. Timothy Linden.

James McDevitt, Secretary

American News.

Hon. John C. Breckinridge is the son of Cabell Breckinridge, a distinguished lawyer, and though young, being about thirty-five, has won many honors. He was first elected to the Kentucky legislature; accompanied the Kentucky regiment to Mexico during the war with that power, in the rank of major, and bore himself gallantly. On his return he was elected a member of congress from the Ashland district, and delivered a beautiful eulogy on Henry Clay. The Cincinnati Commercial gives the following personal description of him:—"Near the eastern aisle, and within a few seats of the front—on the western side of the aisle—sits John C. Breckinridge, the impersonation of democratic Kentucky chivalry, who won a high position in the last congress, and declined to be a candidate for re-election. He is a tall and gracefully formed young man, with delicate features, and would be singularly handsome if his profile line were more prominent. Looking at him sideways, his forehead, nose and chin are nearly in a straight line. But his eye beams with intelligence, his nose is handsome in outline, resolute will. On the whole, there is a poetic glimmer about him. And that there is something of this in his character, the fact that he has purchased an island in Lake Superior for his summer home, would indicate. His manner in speaking is proud, defiant, and full of passion, tempered by educated discretion.

A letter from Nicaragua states that Watson G. Haynes died at Le Virgin, on May 9, of yellow fever. Mr. Haynes was known in this country by his services in procuring the abolition of flogging in the navy. He had served in United States men-of-war, and his statements and appeals in that behalf carried great weight with the public; and with the co-operation of humane persons, both official and others, his labors finally resulted in the desired reform. Mr. Haynes went to Nicaragua soon after Walker was established there; and after having tried to get his living by other labor, at last joined the army, and held the rank of captain when he died. We believe this was not his first experience of military life, and that he had served in Spain under Zumalcarregni, the famous Carlist partisan, by whom he was promoted to a considerable rank. He was an earnest and well meaning man, of Irish birth and a great deal of enthusiasm.

The Buffalo Car Company lately shipped a lot of cars for the Illinois Central Railroad, which the Detroit Advertiser says are far ahead of anything in their line yet seen in the west. One of them contains six state rooms, each having two seats with cushioned backs, long enough for a person to lie upon. The backs of the seats are hung with hinges at the upper edge, so that they may be turned up at pleasure, thus forming two single berths, one over the other, where persons may sleep with all the comfort imaginable. In one end of the car is a small wash-room, with a marble wash-bowl, looking-glass, &c. On the opposite side of the car from the state-rooms is a row of seats with revolving backs, similar to barbers' chairs, so arranged that the occupant may sit straight or recline in any easy attitude, at pleasure. The other five cars have each two or three similar state-rooms.

The Nacogdoches Chronicle says that General Houston was suffering from ill health while in that town, on his way home. He did not refer to his intention of becoming a candidate for the Presidency. In private conversation with his friends he gave the indications of a total want of confidence in the success of the present American party, and a total disinclination to support either the platform or the nominees. The party to which he allied himself for great and noble purposes, has become the tool of selfish politicians, to whose schemes he cannot lend the sanction of his name and influence.

Yesterday morning, says the Cincinnati Enquirer of the 17th, a genteel-looking man walked into the vestibule of the Burnet House pretty briskly, and handed an overcoat to one of the porters to hold until he could step down stairs and back. The man had just time enough to get out of sight when in came an officer, who claimed the coat as having been stolen from the Railroad House. The officer hurried down stairs after the thief, who was too closely followed into the house, to escape with his property, so he employed that ruse to get out of the way. Pretty 'cute trick.

The mayor of Baltimore has exercised a "censorship" over the stage, by directing the managers of a theatre in that city not to perform pieces called "Jack Shepard" and "A Glance at Baltimore," they being, in his opinion, improper and demoralizing in their tendency.

The President of the United States receives an annual salary of $25,000 per year. The salary of England's Queen is two hundred times as large as that paid to the President. Such is the contrast between monarchy and republicanism.

S. H. Hammond of the Albany Register, in a speech at Albany, stated that he had been offered five one thousand dollar bills and twelve thousand subscribers to hoist the Fillmore ticket. A Fillmore paper suggests that the bills were on a broken bank.

Professor Conrad, of Wittemberg College, Ohio, estimates the number of Germans or descendants of Germans in the United States at about 4,000,000.

Mr. E. Meriam, the meteorologist, says that his record for the last fourteen years gives an aggregate of seven hundred and fifty deaths by lightning on the land, only one person being killed in a building furnished with conducting rods.

Salt works have been established in Texas, on the west side of the Colorado, about fifty-five or sixty miles above Austin, and a very superior article is produced—not inferior, in any respect, to the best salt brought to that market for sale.

Buchanan and the Press.

The N. Y. Day Book, June 18, says, "We thought that Horace Greeley had greater audacity than any other man living, but just after Mr. Buchanan was nominated he declared he would not charge that Mr. Buchanan had said that if he had a drop of democratic blood in his veins he would let it out. Greeley intimated that this was a lie even too big for him, but Senator Wilson, at the Sectional Convention at Philadelphia, boldly made the charge. He went even further, and said that Mr. Buchanan opposed the war of 1812, while the truth is well known that he was a volunteer in that very war, fighting the battles of his country, while Wilson or his fathers were meeting in the Hartford Convention and plotting the destruction of the Union. If Wilson has not "banged Bannagher," then no one ever did.

The Louisville Democrat says, "We understand that the excitement in Lexington upon the reception of the news of the nomination of Hon. John C. Breckinridge for the Vice Presidency, was tremendous beyond the powers of description. The nomination of Buchanan had just created the wildest enthusiasm; but when it was known that Kentucky's favorite son had been placed on the ticket the whole population seemed mad with joy. This feeling will not be confined to the home of Mr. Breckinridge. As the news spreads out over the rural districts, one universal shout will go up from the valleys to the hill-tops and from the hill-tops to the valleys again. We venture the prediction that one hundred Know Nothing Councils of this State will be disbanded before the first of July next."

We learn from the Cincinnati Enquirer, that the nomination of Buchanan and Breckenridge is enthusiastically received in Ohio. The papers are unusually cordial and jubilant in their notices of the event, while ratification meetings of the people are being held in every city or considerable locality. Not only is the old guard of Democracy present at these meetings, but Democrats who have been estranged from our organization for the last two or three years are once more present and enthusiastic in the good old cause. Unless all indications are deceptive, Mr. Buchanan can hardly fail to carry the State by a handsome majority.

The same paper says, "We challenge the most astute and inquisitorial among our adversaries, whether in journalism or on the stump, during the ensuing canvass to bring up a single instance during Mr. Buchanan's long and notable career in public life, in the House of Representatives, in the Senate and in the State Department, wherein he did not approve himself the FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE in the most comprehensive sense of that term. No measure calculated to lessen the burdens of the industrious classes; no act promising or well-fitted to promote the interests and stimulate the activity of working men; no proposition of great and substantial benefit to the people at large ever failed to receive not only his favor, but his earnest and eloquent advocacy."

The Tribune sneers at Mr. Buchanan as the "embodiment of wordly prudence and unfaltering discretion." We do not know that a handsomer compliment could be paid to Mr. B. as a nominee for the Presidency.—Columbia (S. C.) Banner.

The same journal says: In relation to the nomination by the Cincinnati convention of the Hon. James Buchanan, we are free to say that, while he was not our choice, and there are others, after General Pierce, whom we would have preferred, we yield to the nomination of Virginia, who has in this case presented to the Union a candidate whom she has selected over all others to fight her battles in defence of the Constitution, which are equally ours. We have expressed a willingness to co-operate with our southern confederates in the great issue of the day, which is rapidly culminating to its zenith. Whatever our own views may be, this is not the time for South Carolina to isolate herself from her southern sisters. We are for hearty co-operation, and we are ready to follow, not to lead. The south has adopted Mr. Buchanan on the platform recently erected unanimously by the Democratic party. We are willing to abide by the decision of the southern states in that convention. Mr. Buchanan has served the country faithfully and effectively in every official position in which he has been placed. We respect him as an honorable gentleman, and are satisfied with his qualifications. He has accepted the highest trust which could be tendered to him, by the predominant party in the Union, and the only constitutional one now organized, and we believe he will carry out his obligations to the Constitution and to the trust confided to him. We cheerfully adopt his nomination under the circumstances.

In relation to the Vice Presidency, we believe no exception can be taken to the nomination of Mr. Breckenridge, who is a States Rights man of the southern school.

The Menasha (Wis.) Advocate is in great delight. It says: In displaying at our mast-head this week the names of the regular Democratic nominees for President and Vice-President, we cannot refrain from taking advantage of the occasion to testify our fullest acquiescence in the action of the National Democratic Convention. In making choice of James Buchanan, the tried patriot, astute statesman, and unswerving democrat, they have proved themselves equal to the occasion that called them together.

The nomination of either Mr. Pierce or Mr. Douglas would scarcely fail to give general satisfaction, but "Old Buck" is the "noblest Roman of them all." With him for our standard-bearer, the true democracy of the land cannot fail to crush the hydra of fanaticism and bigotry under their heel. The black flags of abolitionism and Hindooism must trail in the dust before the banner of democracy, borne by its acknowledged leader. The "old Democratic noise" will reverberate from one end of the Union to the other, and the denizens and frequenters of secret places, "whose deeds are deeds of darkness," will skulk away to their favorite haunts, wherein the glimmer of the dark lantern is the only light that is seen, and grips and signs and pass-words the only means of communication.

The Columbus (S. C.) Examiner says: While we would have preferred to have seen Mr. Pierce re-nominated, we cannot withhold our support from Mr. Buchanan. There is little doubt we presume, of his receiving the electoral vote of South Carolina. Mr. Buchanan has been so long in private life, both as a member of the Government and as a diplomatist, that it is unnecessary to give any sketch of his political career. We believe he is a sound constitutional and conservative statesman, and will carry out faithfully the principles of the party who have named him for the high position—the only principles South Carolina has ever sustained. Mr. Breckinridge is quite a young man, but possesses undoubted ability, and has already achieved a high degree of party popularity. He represented what is known as the Ashland District of Kentucky in the last Congress, but declined the nomination of his party at the last election. The people of South Carolina, in our opinion, will endorse and sustain the nomination.

The Madison (Wis.) Argus and Democrat says: The Journal is out with extracts going to show that Mr. Buchanan, in a speech some time made by him, expressed himself as opposed to "foreign influence." Whether this statement be true or not, we cannot say; but have no objection whatever to admitting its truth. The term "foreign influence" does not mean the tendencies created by the votes of the adopted citizens of the Republic, whose votes when cast under right impressions are always on the side of Democracy, and in favor of the rights of the mass against the few; of labor against oppressive monopolies; nor does opposition to it involve the sacking of churches, the shooting of unoffending citizens, or the murder of babes. Foreign influence signifies the intermeddling, either directly or indirectly, of foreign powers in the affairs and management of our Government, and to this all classes are opposed; the adopted, as well as the native citizens. It is one of the innate sentiments of our people, and the statesman who does not cherish it is unworthy of the confidence of the people of the Republic; and we are proud that we have a candidate for President who is against, now and for ever, the influence of foreign powers over our affairs. Among our adopted citizens, as a class, this feeling is stronger, if possible, than among citizens that are "to the manor born," and for the reason that they have felt its grinding, prostrating effects in their native lands, have fled to the Great Republic for protection, and are bound to resist its insidious encroachments here to the extent of their abilities. This is the reason they are so universally Democrats; they see in the Democratic party the only one that has the ability and the disposition to successfully resist it.

Col. Fremont.

The "Black Republican" convention held at Philadelphia, ominated on the 18th inst. John C. Fremont of California, for the Presidency. The Sun gives the following notice of the nominee:

He was among the first discoverers of gold in California, and evinced his sagacity by purchasing the Mexican title to a rich mining district. Perhaps to this, more than to his successful exploration of the South Pass to the Pacific, may he ascribe his present luck in the political world. Were he as poor and penniless now as when he first returned from California, his name might not have been heard of as a Presidential candidate. As a man of science, and as a hardy, daring adventurer, Col Fremont may take rank with such men as Wilkes and Dr. Kane, but in politics he has had but little experience. After the organization of California as a State, he and Mr. Gwin were chosen to represent the State in the United States Senate, but he took no prominent or active part in the Senate's business, and evinced but little interest in political matters.

John Charles Fremont, was born in South Carolina, in 1813, and is, consequently, now in his forty-third year. His father emigrated from France. His mother was a Virginia lady. At four years of age he was left an orphan, but he received a good education, and graduated at Charleston College, in his seventeenth year. During his youth he contributed to the support of his mother, and her other children, by teaching. From teaching mathematics he turned his attention to civil engineering, in which he made great proficiency, and was recommended to government for employment in the Mississippi survey. Having received the Commission of a lieutenant of engineers, he proposed to the Secretary of War to penetrate the Rocky Mountains. His plan was approved, and in 1842, with a handful of men, he reached and explored the South Pass.

His report of the expedition, and of his explorations was printed by the United States Senate, translated into foreign languages, and the name of Fremont became associated with the names of men who do their country good service. He next planned an expedition to the territory of Oregon, reached the Rocky Mountains by a new line, scaled the summits south of the South Pass, explored the Great Salt Lake valley, and pushed his survey forward until he connected it with that of Wilkes' surveying expedition. He had found one route to Columbia, but he wished to find another, and again, with only twenty-five companions, and without a guide, he turned towards the Rocky Mountains. The thrilling history of that expedition, so full of adventure and peril, and attended by suffering which only the greatest human fortitude could bear, has been written, and is familiar to the whole reading world.

In 1845 he was again on his way to the Pacific to examine the Asiatic slope of the Continent. It was while on this expedition that he reached California in time to render efficient aid in its conquest. His subsequent history need not be detailed, as it is connected with events sufficiently recent to come within the knowledge of all. He is now before the people as a candidate for the highest office in their gift. They will examine and judge of his qualifications and fitness in contrast with his competitors for that high and responsible position, and decide as they believe to be best for the interests of the country.

The Mobile Register, 8th instant, says the bag containing the entire letter mail from this city to the east, which left here on the morning of the 21st ult., is missing. There is no trace of it after leaving this post office. The postmaster at Montgomery, six days after it was due there, sent an inquiry to the office in this city to know if a mail had been forwarded on that day, the presumption until then being that it had been forwarded from Montgomery by mistake, and would be returned. Nothing, however, has transpired in relation to it, although every effort is being made to ascertain its whereabouts. We also learn that the mail of the 9th of April from New-York disappeared in some mysterious manner, and that no tidings have been received of it.

This will account to our subscribers in the locality alluded to why they have not duly received the numbers of the Irish News published about that period.

CITY AND NEWS ITEMS.

When Recorder Smith was presiding in the Court of Sessions on the 19th afternoon, a very beautiful girl, aged about 17 years, was brought from the prison and placed before him on a charge of vagrancy, preferred by her own parents. When his Honor inquired into the matter, he found that the young lady had been committed by her father and mother in order, if possible, to prevent her from marrying a man they did not approve of. The Recorder, thinking that the course of true love, if it did not, should, at all hazards, "run smooth," was about to discharge her, when he was informed that even at that moment a gentleman from Wisconsin was in waiting, in an ante-room, in order to run off with her and marry her in that state, when liberated. His Honor did not wish to send her adrift in the world under such circumstances, but called up the man, and said if he were sincere in his professions, he might marry her here, and then take her West. The lover joyfully consented, and Recorder Smith thereupon descended from the bench and performed the ceremony.

North Presbyterian Church Corner-stone.—The ceremony of laying the corner-stone of the North Presbyterian Church took place on the 19th. The edifice will be of the Romanesque style of architecture, and is to be built of blue stone, faced with New-Jersey brown stone, the roof of slate, and the spire of wood. The size of the building will be 66 by 91 feet; the height, from the pavement to the eaves, 41 feet, and to the ridge of the roof, 62 feet. The height of the spire will be 170 feet. The interior of the church is to be painted in fresco. There will be seats sufficient to seat one thousand persons comfortably. In the basement there will be a lecture-room, a school-room, an infant class-room, a session-room, and a study. The entire cost of the building, including furniture, will be about $40,000. It will be completed some time next fall.

The La Farge House, in this city, is estimated to be worth, building and ground, $360,000, and the furniture and fixtures $100,000 more.

Mr. Fillmore accepts the Know Nothing nomination as a candidate for the Presidency, and adopts the platform put forth by the National Council, in a letter of three columns.

The annual earnings of the several lines of railroads that connect at Chicago, Illinois, with New York city, exceed $26,000,000.

Elizabeth Shea got into a passion with her husband in Boston, on Saturday evening, and procuring a dose of laudanum, swallowed it, from the effect of which she died on Sunday morning.

Tom Hyer, says the Cincinnati Sun, whipped a politician at the Burnet House.

Incredible numbers of wild pigeons have settled, and are building their nests and rearing their young, about thirty miles north of Utica.

A Yankee in Iowa has taught ducks to swim in hot water, and with such success that they lay boiled eggs.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Western Africa: its history, condition, and prospects. By Rev. J. Leighton Wilson, eighteen years a missionary in Africa. With numerous engravings.	Harper & Brothers.
Harper's Magazine, for July	"
Harper's Story Books, by Jacob Abbott. No. 20. Rambles among the Alps	"
Clara; or Slave Life in Europe, with a Preface by Sir Archibald Alison, Bart.	"
Lecture on the Life and Times of O'Connell, by most Rev. John Hughes	Jas. B. Kirker
Public Documents from	Hon. Lewis Cass

MARRIAGES.

At Fore, by the Rev. M. Cochlan, P. P., James Smyth, Grangestown House Westmeath, to Anne, daughter of the late Daniel Corrigan, of Johnstown.

At St. Catherine's Church, Patrick M'Grath, of Fir House, Dublin, to Miss Kate Gavan, of Thomas street.

At St. Thomas' Church, Dublin, Richard E. Bourne, barrister at law, to Isabella, daughter of T. Mangan, of Piercetown, Kildare.

At Clontarf church, Henry M. Carden, son of Captain Paul Kyffin Carden, of Manna Cottage, Templemore, to Elizabeth, daughter of John Stephenson, of the Bank of Ireland.

At Rathfarnham, John Cormick Walshe, son of John Walshe, of Castlehill, in the county Mayo, to Bride Teresa, daughter of Robert Hodgens, of Beaufort, Dublin.

At Trinity Church, Waterford, Miss Alice Hartery, to William Pover, of Barrack street; and at the same hour, Miss Ellen Hartery, to Maurice Chasty, of Ballymorris, both daughters of William Hartery, of Kilbarry.

At Clonmel, Pierce Grace, Solicitor, Cashel, to Bridget, daughter of Alderman P. Fennelly, of Clonmel.

At Waterford, Frederick Jones Hyland, Wexford, to Julia, daughter of John Nash, Dumbarton, Scotland.

At St. Peter's Church, Louis Monsell Dartnell, son of Richard Dartnell, of Callao, to Jane, daughter of the late Dr. Lloyd, of Limerick.

At Lockeen church, Thomas Ross Jefferson, of Foyle House, county Kilkenny, son of the late Thomas Jefferson, of Newry, to Mary Jane, daughter of the late Captain Corrigan, Rockview.

At Lurgan church, John Butt, of the Northern Banking Company, Belfast, to Lucy, daughter of the late Roderick Byrne, Belfast.

At Herringfleet, Richard Drought Graves, King's County Regiment of Rifles, to Henrietta Catherine, daughter of Henry Mussenden Leathes, of Herringfleet Hall, Suffolk.

D. M'Grath, merchant, Carlow, to Margaret, daughter of John Brennan, of Ballyharman, Queen's County.

DEATHS.

At 9, Pembroke place, Joseph Myles, son of Michael Keogh.

At Eblana terrace, North Circular road, Eliza, daughter of the late George Brooks, M. D., of Spanishtown, Jamaica.

At Herbert place, John Cooper, late of Demerara, son of the late George Cooper, formerly of Barn Hall, county Kildare.

At Richmond, Surrey, Douglas Murray Hearn, son of the late Edward Hearn, Accountant-General of Excise, Dublin.

At Marlborough street, Dublin, Philip Lee, formerly of the parish of Lavey, county Cavan, aged 76 years.

At Knockiyon Castle, aged 75 years, Judith, relict of James Murray, late of Dublin.

William Pasley, of No. 24, Capel street, Dublin.

Thomas Cullen, of Piercetown, county Meath.

At Ballyphehane House, Caroline, daughter of Terence Fitton, solicitor, of Cork.

At Warringstown, Grace Charlotte, daughter of the late John Brown, of Donacloney.

In Limerick, Mrs. Westropp, relict of William J. Westropp, of Roxborough, and sister of the first Viscount Guillamore.

At Loughrea, Galway, Robert Skerrett, M. D.

Aged 76 years, the Rev. Charles Atkinson Caffry, incumbent of Mullough, in the diocese of Kilmore.

At Davidstown, aged 91 years, Anne, relict of John Dixon, of Milltown, Dunlavin, Wicklow.

At Louisbourg, Mayo, Mrs. M'Hale, mother of the Rev. Martin M'Hale, Catholic curate.

In Chester, Eliza, relict of William Morgan, of Ravensdale, Kildare.

At Ballynona, county Cork, Ann, daughter of the late William Wigmore.

At Ballyhaise, county Cavan, Catherine, daughter of George Nesbitt.

At Southsea, the Hon. Mrs. Hope, wife of Captain J. Hope, of the Royal Navy, second daughter of the late Lord Kinnaird, and niece of the Duke of Leinster.

At Queenstown, William Crosbie, Manager of the Provincial Bank at Dungarvan, county Waterford.

At Cork, John Castles, nephew of the late John Bennett, solicitor.

At Charlemont terrace, Montgomery, son of the late Dr. Ferguson, Dublin.

In Fethard, William Harden, son of John Harden, and grandson of William Harden Bradshaw, late of Summerville, Clonmel.

Lieut. Col. W. G. Cameron, K. H., J. P., late of the Grenadier Guards.

In London, Jane, wife of the Rev. J. R. Moore, of Newcastle, county Down.

At Blackheath, John May, aged 81 years.

Athlone Barracks, Denis Devlin, aged 54 years.

At Bates Villa, Upper Rathmines, Clara, Daughter of Thomas Bennett, 75 Grafton st.

At Avoca avenue, Blackrock, Amelia Anne, the wife of Samuel Page, of Dame street.

Amusements.

BOWERY THEATRE.

LESSEE AND MANAGER, Mr. John Brougham, will open for the season, entirely renovated and re-organized,

ON MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 30.

THE STOCK COMPANY

will be composed of the following actors and actresses:

Mr. Brougham,
Mr. Charles Fisher,
Mr. Canoll,
Mr. Whiting,
Mr. Bellamy,
Mr. J. Dunn,
Mr. J. Seymour,
Mr. Grosvenor,
Mr. B. Yates,
Mr. Lingard,
Mr. Haviland,
Mr. T. Price,
Mr. Carpenter,
Mr. Oliver,
Madame Ponisi, Mr. Denham.
Mrs. Brougham,
Miss Kate Reignolds,
Miss Emma Taylor,
Miss M. Partington,
Miss Emma Reignolds,
Miss K. Partington,
Mrs. James Seymour,
Miss Kate Duckworth,
Miss S. Partington,
Mrs. Lingard.
Miss Macdonald.

Together with others not yet engaged.

Scenic Artists.....Messrs. Hyllyard and Culbert assisted by Mr. Gaspard and Maeder.
Leader of Orchestra.....Mr. Charles Dodworth
Prompter.....Mr. T. Price
Machinest.....Mr. W. Demilt
Costumiers.....Mr. Williams and Assistants
Properties, by.....Mr. T. Campbell and Assistants
Captain of Supernumeraries.....Mr. Post
Treasurer.....Mr. T. S. Murphy
Superintendent of Box Office.....Mr. S. Miles

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL,
596 BROADWAY,
TWO DOORS ABOVE THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL.
GREAT ATTRACTION — TABLEAUX SOIREES.
First week of the Great Magician,
SIGNOR ADONIS.
Second week of
MADAME LOVARNY AND F. STOEPEL.
Performance at 8 o'clock. Tickets, 50 cents.

Extra Advertisement.
KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL, 596 BROADWAY.
WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 25TH.
COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT TO MADAME KELLER.
See Programme.

Mrs. Luby's Academy for Dancing, Deportment, and the Calisthenic exercises, 275 Bleeker street. A Private Class for the above exercises has been formed, and will continue to meet during the month of June, on Wednesday evenings, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Mrs. Luby gives lessons on the Piano Forte, and in the French language. 2tJun2

S. CAHILL'S
BOOT AND SHOE STORE,
NO. 377 BROADWAY,
(One door below White street), New York.

S. CAHILL respectfully informs his friends, customers, and the public generally, that, having made an extensive addition to his Store, for the better accommodation of his customers, he has now the largest and most extensive Boot and Shoe Store in the world, and is prepared to exhibit the most extensive assortment of

LADIES, MISSES, AND CHILDREN'S, GENTLEMEN'S, BOYS, AND YOUTH'S
BOOTS AND SHOES
EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE CITIZENS OF NEW YORK.

His facilities for manufacturing on an extensive scale, together with his superb assortment of French Boots and Shoes, received direct from Paris by every steamer, enable him to sell a much better article at much lower prices than can be purchased at any other house in the city. Boots and Shoes of all descriptions made to measure at the shortest notice. je28 3mos

Monday, June 16th, and during the week—

HEAD-QUARTERS OF
BARGAINS IN DRY GOODS!
AT RODGER'S, 340 BOWERY,
Between Bond and Great Jones Streets.

CONSISTING of an elegant assortment of Embroidery and Lace Goods, Barages, Lawns, and Barage-Delaines. With a splendid assortment of Stella Shawls, and the latest styles of Mantillas.

Ladies, bear in mind, we always carry out the adage, that "the nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling!" 1m Jun7

Important to the Ladies.
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH.
FOR the dressing of Laces and all descriptions of fine goods. This celebrated starch is unrivalled.
ONE TRIAL WILL CONVINCE.
For sale by all respectable druggists and grocers.
3m28ju ROBERT HOSIE, 8 Pine Street, New-York,
Sole Agent for the United States.

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,
AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,
NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,
3mos (near Broadway.)

Continental Military Establishment.
J. PARKS,
195 FULTON, BELOW DUTCH, N.Y.
Hats, Caps, Ornaments, &c., made to order. 3m28ju

THOMAS BRENNAN,
DRAPER AND TAILOR,
CANAL STREET, ONE DOOR FROM BOWERY, WEST SIDE.
NEW-YORK.
☞ I am prepared to serve my customers with the newest styles, and at the most reasonable rates. y28je

SHIRT IRONERS.
500 Wanted,
AT THE
BROADWAY STEAM LAUNDRY
je28 4t CORNER OF CANAL STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, via Southampton and Havre, per U. S. steamer Arago, will close at this office on Saturday, the 28th day of June, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.
my17 Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster

Fireworks.

FIREWORKS!

THE only Depot and Agency in this city for RELIABLE FIREWORKS, is at No. 83 LIBERTY STREET, corner Broadway. The assortment (as per sample) comprises a great variety of new designs in Exhibitional Pieces, of the most brilliant colored fires, together with SMALL FIREWORKS of every description. Our patrons, also Committees for City and Country Displays, supplied on the most reasonable terms, by applying direct to Glenn Putnam, Agent for Edge's Exhibitional Fireworks, at 83 Liberty street, New-York. je21 3t

HANNA & BEEBE,
COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,
No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists' Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.
ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.
They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,
Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, O Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather belting.
☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON all CONSIGNMENTS.
Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.
ap19 3m*

Gould's Eating Saloon—THE BEST AND CHEAPEST EATING-HOUSE in New-York.—"Strawberries Smothered in Cream."—Can anything be more delicious than a "dish of ripe strawberries smothered in cream?" particularly if you drop in at Gould's Saloon, No. 144 Fulton street, and enjoy it in perfection. The berries served here are perfect pictures, large, and of the most tempting lusciousness, and the lacteal accompaniment is none of your sky-blue apology for milk, but the pure article, fresh, thick and creamy. Mr. Gould has one of the best dining places in the city; he serves up daily everything in season, in the cleanest and nicest style. je21 4t

If you wish a Portrait, call at Brady's Gallery, 359 Broadway. THE AMBROTYPE.—Some members of the daguerrean fraternity have represented the Ambrotype—the latest and best improvement in the art—as unworthy of public confidence. As these representations proceed from those who are debarred by the provisions of the patent from making the Ambrotype, they are not worthy of consideration. Mr. BRADY, the introducer of the Ambrotype in New-York, has found in them a combination of rare qualities, never approached by any other style of camera pictures. Three months have sufficed to demonstrate their superiority, and the great demand for them at his gallery interprets the good will evidenced by his cotemporaries in their assaults upon the "Glass Pictures." 3m28ju

Caution to the Public.—To distinguish the genuine magnetic powder, for the destruction of insects, from poisonous imitations, it is necessary to examine the wrapper. See that four national medals—those of England, France, Belgium, and the United States—are engraved thereon. Be sure also that a lithographic fac simile of Lyon's signature appears both on the wrapper and label. This caution is necessary to protect the proprietor from fraud and the public from danger and disappointment. The leading scientific societies, and the first chemists of Europe and America, have pronounced the magnetic powder the only poisonous insect bane in the world, as well as the most effective and fatal means for the destruction of bed-bugs, roaches, fleas, ants, flies, moths, &c., that was ever prepared or sold. The proprietors of the principal city hotels endorse it. Come and see the testimonials of Prince Albert, ex-President Fillmore, and hundreds of the nobility of Europe, as well as the sovereigns of America. The magnetic pills, for the extermination of rats and mice, are endorsed with equal emphasis by all who have tried them. Call and see the medals, diplomas, government orders, scientific certificates, letters, &c., at the Central Depot, No. 424 Broadway.
jun 21 3m EMANUEL LYON.

Interesting from Nicaragua.

A San Juan letter of the 4th, to the N. O. Delta, says that the steamer Daniel Webster reached this place on the morning the Minnie Schiffer expedition did, with some additional aid of thirty men for Walker. Both parties were landed at Punta Arenas, the Transit Company's depot, and immediately despatched up to Granada, where they expected to be on the 2d inst.

All the information I have been able to gather about Nicaragua, states everything, as far as military matters are concerned, as being quiet; but in place of the Costa Ricans, sickness prevails to a frightful extent—worst forms of yellow fever and cholera. The applications for relief and assistance made by Walker's men to the American Consul at this place are many. The Consul, Mr. B. Squire Cotterel, is a worthy representative of the glorious republic, and is much esteemed by the people of this quarter. He is, however unable to grant any assistance to the suffering objects of the United States now at Greytown.

From all I can ascertain, Walker is not now in need of more fighting men; it is the sinews of war which he really wants—the dollars. If the New Orleans committee could manage to effect a shipment of dollars, it would have a very salutary effect, and aid the Nicaraguan Government in consolidating its affairs. Walker has not been able and is at present unable to provision his suffering army, which has undergone very great trials and hardships during the last two months, so much so, that property has been quite insecure in the country. At Castillo, a claim has just been brought against the government of $15,000, the soldiers having robbed and plundered the stores. Capt. Kelly, in command of Castillo, has been arrested by orders of Walker, and is now at Granada.

The rainy season is just commencing, during which season it is impossible to work in the fields. Emigrants would become dissatisfied and return indifferent accounts home, and thus retard emigration when wanted. Good honest working mechanics and farmers are what Nicaragua stands in need of. Men of industry will do well; loungers had better stay at home, for they will starve in Nicaragua.

Walker has nothing to fear; all reports say he has completed amicable arrangements with all the other States. He will leave the Costa Ricans alone till the rainy season has expired, and turn his attention to internal affairs at home.

Col. Parker H. French, I am told, was not even received by Walker on his last visit to Granada from the United States—that he has anything to do with Walker or his government is not believed. Schlessinger is reported to be in Honduras.

Courtland Cushing died at Punta Arenas, on the 24th. He was formerly United States Charge d'Affaires at Equador; he has been agent for the Transit Company for two years at Virgin Bay. The funeral was respectably attended—the American Consul officiating. Present, the British Consul, Mr. Green; Capt. Tarleton, with his officers of the Eurydice, and many respectable citizens. The family of the late Courtland Cushing are at present in the States. The cause of death is attributed to general debility, for which the climate here is so well known.

Col. Kinney is nobody here, and nobody recognizes him; he has no plantation in the neighborhood of Greytown, nor any land or grants of land that I can learn of. It is a mystery to the respectable few how the old gentleman manages to live.

The Iowa emigrants have settled here pro tem, till Nicaragua becomes healthier. It is reported that more than one hundred of the California passengers have died at Granada and Castillo. The Costa Ricans are suffering badly from cholera, and a revolution is troubling the country.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." —— KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. GEO. B. MAGRATH, Capt.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company C, (O'Brien Columbia Rifles,) drill on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in each month at their Armory, "Willow Hall," Orange, N. J. OWEN MURPHY, Captain.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (—— ——,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. M. KEATING, Com'dt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White st. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (Wolf Tone Volunteers,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

Company —, (Republican Guard) drill every Friday Evening, at "Worth's Military Headquarters," 22 White street. W. H. LYONS, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 104 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. PATRICK O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa. M. W. MORRISS, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ST. LOUIS LEGION, MO.

Company—(St. Louis Washington Guard) drill each Tuesday evening, in the city of St. Louis, Mo. D. M. FROST, Capt.

FIRST WASHINGTON BATTALION OHIO S. M.

Company A, (Shields Guard), drill on each Thursday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. DENNIS KAVANAGH, Captain.

Company B, (Sarsfield Guard), drill on each Monday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN LEVY, Capt.

Company C, (Republican's Guard,) drill on each Saturday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. JOHN ELITCH, Capt.

Company D, (Montgomery Light Artillery,) drill on each Wednesday evening, at the "Battalion Armory," Cincinnati. THOS. TIERNAN, Capt.

Company E, (Queen City Cadets, Rifles,) drill on each Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the "Cadets Armory," Pomeroy's Building, Third street, Cincinnati. JOSEPH H. BURKE, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

WEEMAN'S IRON RAILWAY MANTFACTORY.
No. 26 Merrimac street, Boston, Mass.
Where he has been for the past thirty years.

ALL persons in want of IRON FENCES, suitable for cemetery, house, garden, Balustrades, &c., can, by calling on the subscriber, purchase a better fence at a lower price, than at any other establishment in the state, as he makes it his entire business.
jun14m6 EBENEZER WEEMAM.

Business Directory.

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.
The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,
No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,
AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.
The largest assortment of Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,
AND
MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,
of all Kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,
WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.
possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,
SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.
(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,
OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.
A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.
One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.
☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durab l quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

☞ NOTICE.
LOVEJOY HOUSE,
NO. 160 GREENWICH ST., NEW-YORK.
(21ju6m) LOVEJOY & FALLON, Proprietors.

Special Notices.

Mayor's Office, New-York, June 16, 1856.

Notice to Owners of Dogs.—Notice is hereby given that on and after Wednesday, June 25th inst., the ordinance respecting dogs found running loose or at large in any street south of forty-second street, without being muzzled, will be strictly enforced. The sum of fifty cents will be paid for every dog brought alive to the Pound, on the corner of First Avenue and Thirty-first street, which shall have been found in the streets, running loose or at large without being properly muzzled, on presentation of the certificate of the pound-keeper to the Chief of Police at his office in the Park. Owners of dogs may reclaim them at the Pound between sunrise and sunset on the day on which they are received, on payment of expenses.
FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, May 28, 1856.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Complaint Book, opened at this office on the 1st of January, 1855, is still open for the reception of complaints of municipal abuses of all kinds. So far as the Mayor has the power, he will continue to exercise it for the abatement of any such evils, when brought to his attention through the Complaint Book, or otherwise. The Mayor invites all persons to take this method of reporting to him all violations of corporation ordinances, nuisances, or dereliction of duty upon the part of the officers of the Corporation, and he will, as heretofore, use all the legal means at his command to see the laws enforced, and the interests of the public protected. By order of the Mayor. ALEXANDER MING, Chief Clerk.

To the lady readers of this paper.—Ladies, if you wish to get Linen and other Gaiter Boots from 12s. to 20s.; Slipper Ties and Buskins, 1st quality, 8s. to 10s.; second quality, same styles, 6s. and 7s. per pair; boys', misses', and children's Boots & Shoes of all kinds and prices, Patronize
4tjun21 J. B. MILLER & CO., 134 Canal street.

Strawberries and Cherries, Or any other fruit or vegetable, may be effectually preserved in a fresh state for years, by the use of Spratt's Patent Self-Sealing Cans. Full directions for preserving accompany the cans. They are easily opened or closed by the hand with a patent screw attachment, and are guaranteed always to fully answer the purpose represented.
N. B. The Genuine Self-Sealing Can has cast in letters on the cap, "Spratt's Patent." This is mentioned to prevent imposition upon the public, by any spurious or worthless article in imitation. For sale by the proprietors.
2t21ju WELLS & PROVOST, 321 Pearl st., near Franklin Square.

Information Wanted—of MICHAEL CARROLL, and ELLEN CARROLL, otherwise SWEENEY, his wife, late of the town of Galway, Ireland, who left that place in the month of July, 1851, for New-York, and who when last heard from in the month of July, 1853, were residing in New Orleans. Any information of their whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, will be thankfully received.
☞ New Orleans papers please copy. je14 1t

Information Wanted—Of MICHAEL BOODEN, a native of the Parish of Urlingford, near Johnstown, County Kilkenny, Ireland, who left his residence in Ireland for New-York last December. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, N. Y., will be thankfully received by his wife.

Information wanted. If Patrick Mara Currier, and Michael Mara, Blacksmith, both supposed to be living in Newark, N. J., will forward their address to the Commissioners of Emigration, New-York, they can hear of their brother, who has recently arrived in this city.

Wanted, A situation as Engineer, to run a stationary engine, in any part of this city. Apply to James Casey, 405 Ninth street, opposite the Morgan Iron Works, who will give most satisfactory references.

Information wanted of John Dufly, a native of Castleblaney, county Monaghan, Ireland, by trade a carpenter, who arrived in this city about five years ago, and when last heard from was living at Staten Island. Any information of his whereabouts, sent to the office of the Commissioners of Emigration, will be thankfully received by his wife Alice Dufly.

OFFICE of Receiver of Taxes—New City Hall, Park, May 29, 1856.—Public notice is hereby given that there is no such office as Collector of Arrearages on Personal Taxes, and that no person but the undersigned, or HENRY B. VENN, Esq., appointed for that purpose, to be found at this office, is authorized to receive any moneys due for arrears on Personal Taxes.
je7 6t HENRY H. HOWARD, Receiver of Taxes.

Information Wanted—Of WILLIAM KELLEY, a native of the county Cavan, Ireland, who left this city about three years ago for the State of Pennsylvania. Any information concerning him will be thankfully received by his sisters, Rosie and Anne Kelley, at No. 15 Rose street, in care of Thomas McManus. je14

Business Notices.

Reed's Celebrated London Cordial Gin, having gained much popularity in this country, being distilled the same as that in London, as he was formerly a distiller of the same kind of Gin in England, under the EXCISE LAWS.

This article is used in every hospital in and out of England's great metropolis. Its medicinal properties are invaluable.

☞ This Gin is not an imitation or a mixture of raw materials, of which much is sold in this city, under the name of London Cordial Gin, but a genuine and pure article, equal to any imported.

W. R. takes the opportunity of thanking the public for their liberal support, support, and begs a continuance of the same.

DISTILLERY,
118 East 29th st., New-York, between 2d and 3d avenues.

LABORATORY AND CHEMICAL OFFICE,
18 Exchange Place, N. Y., March 4, 1856.

MR. REED: Sir—I have submitted to close examination two samples of London Cordial Gin, manufactured by you, and purporting to equal the English article. I find on comparison with samples of Hodges' and Burnett's previously examined by me, and which I know to have been imported direct, that the quality of yours is by no meansinferior to their celebrated compounds, while the perfect method you posess of rectifying, insures an article of a higher degree of purity and flavor, when it has the equal advantage of time to soften it, than much of the so-called imported London gin. As a medicinal agent and cordial, under proper advice, it may be depended upon, from the care with which you select the essential oils combined with it in the distillation.

Yours, respectfully,
ISAIAH DECK, M. D.,
Consulting and Analytical Chemist.

Mr. REED'S Distillery, 118 East Twenty-ninth st., New-York. [my31 3m

"Hereditary bondsmen, know ye not
Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow?"

RICHARD KAVANAGH,

182 and 184 FEDERAL STREET, BOSTON.

THANKFUL to his numerous patrons for past favors, is desirous of letting them know that he has given up the Grocery and Provision trade, and intends in future to devote his untiring exertions to promote their terrestrial happiness in the shape of good Liquors, Segars, to say nothing of a Free Lunch every day at 11 o'clock. Attached is a very handsome Sitting Room, and a splendid Room for Committee Meetings. my31 4t

I. E. Tate's Pannus Corrium Boot and Shoe store, for tender feet. A large stock of Boots, Shoes and Gaiters always on hand, in great variety, and made to order at the shortest notice, for Gentlemen, Boys and Youths—wholesale and retail, at the lowest Cash prices. Particular attention is requested to the Pannus Corrium or Leather Cloth Boots and Shoes, for those troubled with corns, bunions or tenderness of the feet. Its qualities for summer boots or shoes, surpass anything ever got up in this country for real comfort, as it keeps the feet perfectly cool, and at the same time is susceptible of the finest polish; for a dress boot more so than any French calfskin, with one half the labor. ISAAC E. TATE.
my 24, 3 mos. 427 Broadway New-York.

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.
Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my3 3m

Furniture.—F. FITZSIMMONS respectfully calls the attention of his customers and the public to his stock of elegant and substantial FURNITURE, (not made for the auction room) consisting of rich Parlor Suites in rosewood; oak Dining and Chamber Sets of every description; Upholstery in all its branches executed in the best mechanical manner. Prices unexceptionable. Warerooms No. 8 Astor place, near Broadway. my24 3m

Lumber and Timber for Export and City Trade.—THOS. RIGNEY & Co. offer for sale AT THEIR YARD FOOT OF THIRTIETH-STREET, North River, a general assortment of LUMBER AND TIMBER, suitable for export and the city trade. SHIPPERS AND BUILDERS will find it to their advantage to examine their stock previous to buying. Apply as above, or to J. PICKARD, Agent, 26 Bridge street. my17 3m*

KNOX'S
OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,
59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.
DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and Single counting-room DESKS, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office Desks from 3 to 6 ft., of Mahogany, blackwalnut and oak; cases for Books and pigeon-holes. Office chairs, cushions, lounges and Office Tables of every description. my17 tf

STATEN ISLAND
FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.
Also ladies and gentlemen's garments, Shawls, &c., &c.
BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 3 John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

$100,000 WORTH OF NEW GOODS!

FROM AUCTION, at LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY. EGAN & CO. have just purchased an entire new lot of Spring and Summer Dress Silks of all styles and qualities, and will sell them at Low Prices in their New Store. In consequence of Overstock of Goods being Imported, Silks have reduced in value full 30 per cent., and we buying them at the reduced prices, can afford to sell the most desirable styles and qualities lower than those that have purchased when goods were high and scarce. We have no Old Stock—no Damaged Goods—no Bankrupt Sale—none of those Humbugs—but we have good PLAID SILKS from 4s. 6d. to 12s per yard; new and splendid Striped Poplins, from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per yard. A large assortment of Black and Colored Silks. We ask but one price, and sell in dollars and cents. Some of the newest STELLA SHAWLS, from $2 50 to $20. A large and splendid lot of CRAPE SHAWLS, and a general assortment of spring goods. Being the only LINEN HALL in the city, and having a buyer in Belfast, Ireland, we are always supplied with the best qualities of LINEN for Shirting, Sheeting, and Damask Table Cloths, by the cloth or yard. Some splendid Damask and Snow-Drop Napkins at $1 50 per dozen. Ten cases of French Printed Lawns for Dresses, will be opened tomorrow and the following day, from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per yard. Marseilles Quilts from 14s. to $5 each. 4tjun7

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto IS ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street,
ap26 3mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

Analytical and Metallurgical Chemistry and Mining Geology.

DR. ISAIAH DECK,
No. 18 EXCHANGE PLACE, NEW-YORK.

MAY be consulted on all subjects relating to Practical Chemistry, Mining- and Metallurgy. Assays of Ores, Analyses of Minerals, and Mining Products in general carefully and expeditiously conducted, and sound opinions delivered upon the most economical methods of working them, based on the latest chemical discoveries. Geological and Mining Surveys undertaken in any part of the world—Dr. DECK having had considerable experience in this branch of his profession. my31 3m

SARAH McFADDEN,
Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,
198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

☞ Mrs. McFadden justly boasts of having made up, for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also, the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport. y21june

REMOVAL.

McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 86 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

Medical.

THE CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

BRONCHITIS.—WHAT PRODUCES BRONCHITIS?

FIRST STAGE OF DISEASE.

COSTIVENESS is the first link that connects disease in the System. It creates, induces, feeds and supports Bronchitis; and is slightly or indifferently treated, as though it was of no serious tendency: nevertheless, it has laid the fonndation of that destroying disease, without the knowledge of the sufferers, undermining and sapping the very vitals of their constitutions.

Among the numerous class of diseases which afflict man, there is none more silent or treacherous in its approaches or more certain to triumph over its slowly consuming victim, than that formidable and insidious leveller of humanity—Bronchitis, which is produced by catching cold, through a neglect of regulating the state of the bowels when arriving to adult age. It seldom excites attention or alarm in the mind of any person, until it has sown the seed of disease and suffering in the human system, by checking the circulation of the blood; and it is to this source alone that we attribute the awful mortality of Consumption.

The following is a simple but correct illustration, namely:—If the culverts and sewers of the city were choked or clogged up, accidentally or otherwise, what would be the result? An overflow of accumulated filth and slush on the surface of the earth in its neighborhood, until it fills every hole, corner and crevice. This is quite similar to the human body, when the channel or sewer of life, as I may term it, which is the bowels, is checked or confined through constipation or some unnatural obstruction, which prevents the blood from circulating through the general system.

What, then, is the consequence? An accumulation of diseased matter and bile. Where will this bile and poisonous substance go to when it is prevented from taking its natural exit, through the bowels? It must surge itself back again into the blood, to be infused through the entire frame by the agency of the blood, bringing in its passage disease and suffering, and exhibiting itself by pain, nervous sensations and irritation all over the body—producing a bad feeling at the stomach, sourness of the food, a rush of blood to the head, catarrh, bronchitis, a short dry cough, dizziness, pain in the shoulders, and through or under the shonlder blades, cold feet, a peevish and irritable temper, annoyed by this hacking cough, and then gradually begins the expectorating from the throat of a lightish phlegm, resembling boiled starch or tough jelly of various colors, from a light to a darkish substance, and hawked up like a string.

SECOND STAGE.

From this period the patient is aware of some unusual and disagreeable feeling, though he seldom takes the hint till it goes from bad to worse. Catching cold from the slightest exposure, which he cannot avoid in consequence of the blood being in a diseased and corrupt condition for a long time previous to the appearance of those troublous symptoms, through the impure state of the blood, that at every breath the patient draws he inhales a similar quantity of fresh air by the nostrils and mouth, which keeps the tickling that exists in the throat and bronchial tubes in a ferment of irritation—this is the reason why some people complain of catching cold, even when confined to their room. Hence the sufferer is hacking, hawking, or expectorating a little at a time, with the impression that there is something in his throat that wants to come out; and which he desires to get out. There is a frequent desire for heavy sighing, with a dryness of the nostrils, which inclines the patient to pick or scratch them; sleepy, drowsy, dull, and heavy loss of appetite, and confused memory; a stuffing, tightness, and oppression of the chest, with a rawness and soreness of the gullet of the throat. This is caused by the silent enemy that has lurked in the system for months, and even years, and has at last aroused your fears, and well it might; for out of one hundred persons who die of Consumption ninety-nine are owing to disease of the throat alone, though simply called Bronchitis; and wretchedly treated by this self-pretended and dignified class of sheepskin physicians termed M. D.'s, who have proved a curse to the human family. They treat their patient on the following abusive principle, by cutting the tonsils and palate from the throat, as you might cut the gills out of a fish—next comes the solution or wash of nitrate of silver or caustic, and the whalebone swab, to wash and burn away the disease that has occupied the throat. Then comes the application of blister, and Croton oil externally to the throat and neck, to draw out the inflammation, as the physicians suppose (what blind philosophy.) Then comes the quack sheet of their MATERIA MEDICA—Calomel, Antimony, Morphine and Opium, to salivate and lull the feelings of the pafient, which adds to the disease and increases the suffering, by giving the disease an opporiunity of triumphing over nature. What a delusive idea to think the above treatment would be available in having recourse to those debilitating and irritating remedies of cutting, burning, blistering, purging and starving, which is of itself sufficient to lower and reduce the constitution of an ox.

THE THIRD STAGE

Confirms the above remarks. While undergoing this torturing treatment, the constitution is gradually failing and giving away, in giving rise to more alarming symptoms, evidently preparing its victim for the shroud, while the physician and friends fail to see the cause until those confirmed symptoms of consumption set in, but foolishly assign the cause to some other besides the genuine one, till the disease has reached its meridian, with a complication of fresh symptoms, breathing short and hurried, cough frequent, with an accumulation of corrupted matter, sometimes streaked with blood; profuse night sweats, emaciation and debility; cold chills in the forenoon, with a burning fever after; flesh soft and flabby, the limbs scarcely able to support the body; a susceptibility of catching cold on the least exposure, attended with a hoarseness and loss of voice, with a very heavy expectoration in the forenoon; flying pains in the chest, sides and shoulders, with a severe fit of coughing in the morning, or awaking from sleep. The painful crisis is fast approaching, with a swelling and puffing of the feet and ankles, and frequent attacks of diarrhœa. In females, the symptoms are more distressing at an earlier period than in the male, with a weakness in the back and loins, a sinking and exhausted feeling at the stomach, nervous and excitable, with gradual and frequent interruptions of the monthly flow, and as the disease progresses, a total or final cessation of it, with the harbinger of a broken down constitution which is a discharge of whites, a symptom that proves very debilitating and irritating to females.

All the above symptoms and sufferings are the fruits of costiveness at an early period, accruing to the sufferer through neglect of keeping the bowels in gentle operation, which would circulate the blood, and prove as ventilation to the general system, from the age of 18 to 26, when this disease creeps on and grows on, until every organ in the body is totally disorganized.

My long experience and observations, and my unprecedented success in treating consumption, inclines me to devote the remainder of my life to the cause of suffering humanity. I have cured more consumptive patients in the last ten years than any other doctor in the world in that time, and not by steam, smoke or vapor, nor by smelling medicine through an India rubber or glass tube, but through the selection I make from the forest and verdant meadows. I can always determine on examination whether I can be successful or not, and I speak accordingly. I have made it a rule to treat no disease longer than three weeks. If I cannot check the fatal progress of the disease in that time, I give up the patient as lost, and lead the sufferer to no further expense.

☞ In compliance with the repeated solicitations of consumptive patients living in remote parts of the country, I have opened an hospital at No. 178 Bowery, for the exclusive treatment of those laboring under any species of the above disease, where I can bestow on them the unremitted attention which the seriousness of their cases require; where I can be able to regulate their diet and regimen according to circumstances. Three weeks under the supervision of my especial care is worth four months at a distance.

All persons desirous of medical information can obtain it by enclosing one dollar, when all information and communication will be forwarded on receipt.

D. Durkin, Chronic and Consumptive Doctor,
my31 No. 178 Bowery, New-York.

DR. B. F. ADAMS,

SURGEON DENTIST, (formerly of Barclay street,) feeling grateful for the patronage so liberally bestowed upon him for the last fourteen years, respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he has taken an elegant suite of rooms, at

NO. 122 CHAMBERS STREET,

(near the Sixth and Eighth Avenue Railroads,) where he may always be found, ready to perform all operations pertaining to his profession, in a manner unsurpassed, and on the most reasonable terms. Whole or part sets of incorruptible teeth inserted without pain, on gold plate or gutta percha, excelling nature in beauty and durability. No impure gold or dangerous amalgams used. Irregularities in children's teeth prevented, or of adults remedied. Cleansing, extracting, &c. &c., all at reduced prices. Sets of teeth inserted on Silver or Gutta Percha, for six shillings each. Teeth examined, and advice given free of charge. Please call.
8m7jun B. F. ADAMS, 122 Chambers street, New-York.

DR. J. VOORHIES,
MEDICAL ELECTRICIAN,
NO. 69 SANDS STREET,
Brooklyn.
Office hours from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M.

N. B. All chronic or nervous diseases cured by Electricity in some form. Electro Medicated Vapor Baths ready for operation. Dropsy can be cured by this treatment. Consultations free. m8jun14

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,
ap196m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

Medical.

DRS. GILBERT AND KENNEDY,
TREAT
CANCERS, TUMORS, ULCERS, &c.,
WITHOUT SURGICAL OPERATIONS.

OFFICE 746 BROADWAY, COR. ASTOR PLACE, N. Y.

CERTIFICATES FROM

Ex. Gov. T. M. Tucker.	Hon. T. Butler King.	Judge Alex. Walker.
Judge F. W. Huling.	Gen. Narcisso Lopez.	Col. Maunsel White.
Capt. Isaiah Sellers.	Capt. Wm. Leathers.	Thos. E. Bond, M. D.
A. S. Baldwin, M. D.	W. P. Allison, M. D.	J. S. Peacocke, M. D.

PERMISSION TO REFER TO

Ex. Gov. Jas. C. Jones. Hon. Fred. B. Stanton.
B. F. Palmer, Inventor of "Palmer's Artificial Leg."
Francis Grice, Naval Constructor, Navy Yard, Phila.
Proprietors of the Girard House, Philadelphia. my24 1m

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Stiles, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.
ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

"Eye and Ear."—DOCTOR HENDERSON, Oculist and Aurist, 419 Broadway, corner of Canal street, treats all diseases of the eye and ear, without cupping, leeching, blistering or the use of calomel. Within the past two years upwards of thirty cases of blindness from inflamation have been restored to sight, to whom reference can be given, (hundreds of which can be seen in my circular,) by inclosing three postage stamps. Electro-chemical Medicated Vapor and Sulphur, hot and cold water BATHS. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Sundays and evenings by appointment. 419 Broadway, corner of Canal st., New-York. my17 3m
ARTIFICIAL EYES inserted.

H. G. LUTHER,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST,
No. 698 BROADWAY, Second House above Fourth st.

HAVING enjoyed an extensive practice during the last twelve years, feels confident of his ability to give perfect satisfaction to all who may honor him with their preference. He is prepared to perform all operations connected with his profession, in the most faithful manner, and in strict accordance with scientific principles, embracing all the recent improvements of the day.

References of the most respectable character given if desired. Patronage respectfully solicited.

☞ N. B. Teeth extracted without pain. my17 3m

Dr. J. J. McGowan, Physician and Surgeon, Graduate of Harvard University, Fellow of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Medical Societies, etc., has removed to No. 69 Canal street, New-York, a few doors from Broadway, where he will attend to calls in every branch of the medical profession. Dr. McG. will devote particular attention to chronic diseases, and those of women and children. ml0 1t

New School of Medicine and Pharmacy. The last Unfolding of the Art of Healing. My daily practice proves that I CURE CONSUMPTION, in all its varied forms and most advanced states, as readily as any other disease. Therefore I desire to treat all Consumptives, but particularly those who have tried all other physicians without relief. Mrs. M. J. MARIN, M.D., No. 37. Lafayette place, N. Y. (First street east of Broadway, between 4th and 8th sts.) Office hours: from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., exclusively for Ladies; and from 2 to 5 P. M., for Gentlemen, Wednesdays excepted. All other hours by appointment. my31 3m

THE GREATEST WONDER OF THE AGE!

A REMEDY WHICH CURES IN FIVE MINUTES.—M. LEROUX'S FRENCH CHOLERA COGNAC BITTERS.—This wonderful and scientific compound is recommended by the most eminent and learned physicians of all Europe and America, and enjoys the best reputation of anything similar ever offered. It is without doubt the best, most efficient and generally acknowledged remedy against Cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, and complaints of the stomach in general. The numerous patients who have tried it according to directions, have invariably found relief in a very short time, and the best proof of it is, that since this standard remedy was introducee in the armies of the allies in the Crimea, the mortality of the soldiers from Cholera and similar diseases was reduced by over 75 per cent.; in consideration of which, the inventor was presented by the French and English governments with a gold medal, bearing the inscription, "Hail! M. LEROUX, the great Chemist and inventor, by whose knowledge our armies are preserved from Cholera."

This invaluable preparation is also a remedy for biliousness, indigestion, weakness, and general derangement of the stomach. Upon being taken, it creates appetite, and prevents the heaviness attendant upon eating, by persons who are dyspeptic.

In this city, also, this remedy has been tried with the most undoubted success, and the undersigned can produce the best testimonials of our most celebrated physicians, as to its immediate and complete success, which he will be happy at any time to show to any that may wish to see them. S. STEINFELD, sole agent for the United States, No. 70 Nassau street, corner of John.

P. S.—Those not having money to pay, may call at my place from 8 to 5 P. M. and receive this remedy gratis. my17 3m

TO NERVOUS SUFFERERS.

A Retired Clergyman, restored to health in a few days, after many years of great nervous suffering, is anxious to make known the means of cure. Will send (free) the prescriptions used. Direct to
Rev. JOHN M. DAGNALL,
my10 3m No. 59 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Best Hair Dye.—DR. O. M. BALLARD'S new article received the highest premium at the World's Fair and American Institute, where it was examined by the distinguished Chemists, Dr. Chilton, and Prof. John Torrey, and pronounced the best. For sale by the best Druggists. Principal office and store, 498 Broadway, New-York. my17 3m

The undersigned announces to the legitimate faculty that he has opened a store for the dispensing of pure medicines, chemicals, &c. Having obtained a knowledge of the profession in the best schools in the world, during twelve years, he will be able to compound prescriptions precisely as they are ordered. JOHN. C. GILES, Apothecary,
21ju3m 285 Bleecker, two doors above Barrow.

☞ A CARD.—To the Medical Profession.—A Physician residing in a large and wealthy city, west of New-York, is desirous of selling his Practice, the actual receipts of which amount to $4000 per annum. The appointment of Physician to a Large General Hospital would be also available,—thus securing at once a prominent professional position. Satisfactory reasons will be assigned for the disposal of this fine practice, and a reasonable introduction in the form of a copartnership for a limited period, will be given. Address, &c. &c., to the office of the "Irish News," 29 Ann street.

"TERRA COTTA"
CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental. Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture lowest rates. LONG ISLAND POTTERY. Depot, 82 Nassau street New-York. my10 3m

JAMES O'FLYN.
HOWARD HOTEL,
176 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.
Advertising Envelope Manufacturer, Embosser, Die Sinker, and General Engraver. Notarial and Lodge Seals, Crests, and Coats of Arms. Seal Presses of every description constantly on hand. 14ju3m

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	8s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 8s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap198m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

NEW STORE

AND

NEW GOODS.

THE subscriber having leased for a term of years the premises]

374 Hudson street,

and made exthnsive additions thereto, and having laid in a large stock o

Carpeting and Oil Cloths,

mostly bought at Auction, for CASH, is now prepared to sell them at the following extremely low prices:

Tapestry Brussels, 8s. usually sold at 10s.
Three Ply Ingrain 8s. usually sold at 10s.
Superfine do 6s. usually sold at 8s.
Fine do 5s. usually sold at 6s.
Common do All WOOL 3s. 6d. per yard, a price absolutely unheard of.

Ingrain, Cotton Warp and Wool Filling 2s. 6d.
Oil Cloths 3s. per yard, usually sold at 5s.

Mats, Matting, Table and Piano Covers, Venetian and Hall Carpetting, Stair Rods, &c. &c.

Clergymen and Churches furnished at wholesale prices.

Goods in all cases warranted as represented.

J. R. Landon, 374 Hudson street, New-York,
3mjun a few doors from Hamersly.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hadd a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap268m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

P. L. ROGERS,

FOUNDER OF THE ONE PRICE SYSTEM,

invites an inspection of the extensive

SPRING STOCK OF FASHIONABLE CLOTHING,

at his great central wholesale and retail warehouse,

CORNER OF FULTON AND NASSAU STREETS,

opposite the Herald office.

There any gentleman can procure an elegant outfit in twenty minutes Every garment is warranted of the newest cut and of good workmanship.

Parents can fit out a family of boys with equal dispatch from a stock that includes every style, size, color, material and quality.

The selling prices, which are guaranteed to be 25 per cent. under market average, are all affixed in plain figures to the articles, and NO DEVIATION can be made.

The Order Department is stocked with the finest CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, etc., and the Clothing made to measure cannot be excelled in the world, although the prices are far lower than at other establishments.

my24tf P. L. Rogers.

TAILORS, ATTENTION!

If you wish to possess the best and most exact system of Coat and Jacker Cutting, procure HOLDWAY'S DIAGRAM AND SCALE, whereby you are enabled to cut for 30 dinerent sizes, varying from 20 breast measure (which, you know, is small,) to 54, which you also consider large, and whereby you will find a misfit next to impossible. See it and judge for yourself.

To be had of TILL & COOK, 299 Broadway; or of A. HOLDWAY, 29 Anne street, next door to the IRISH NEWS office. je14 tf

---

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

GEO. McDONNELL,

BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURER,

32 PARK ROW, NEXT DOOR TO LOVEJOY'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK.

Boots, Shoes, and Gaiters of the best quality made to order.

3m.my10 Geo. McDonnell.

ROBERT IRWIN,

CHEAP BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

my10 156 Chatham street, opposite James' st., New-York. 3m

R. HOGAN,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

UMBRELLA AND PARASOL MANUFACTURER,

374 BOWERY, NEAR FOURTH STREET.

Repairing neatly executed. my17 3m*

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 193 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap198m

---

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN O'ROURKE,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE STREET,

(Opposite the Superior Court Buildings,)

7jun NEW-YORK.

JAMES M. SHEEHAN,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law,

No. 13 Chambers Street, New-York.

2y1ju Collections promptly attended to, and Liens carefully filed, &c.

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co., C. Meletta, | Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co., James Cook & Co. 6m

---

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months.

JOHN FOLEY,

WATCHMAKER,

JEWELER AND FINISHER OF FINE WATCHES,

NO. 202 BOWERY.

Between Spring and Prince Streets, New-York.

Watches of a superior quality made to order, and warranted not to err more than four minutes a year. Cases jointed, works jeweled, and chronometer balances set in the best style. Jewelry of every kind repaired in a ju12m6 workmanlike manner. All orders punctually attended to.

J. McCARTEN,

WATCH AND CLOCK MAKER,

154 SEVENTH AVENUE.

Between 20th and 21st streets, New-York.

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry carefully repaired and warranted. A good 7jun assortment of watches and clocks always on hand. 3m

JOHN FOLEY,

MANUFACTURER OF FINE GOLD PENS

BEST QUALITY ONLY.

GOLD AND SILVER PENCIL CASES.

my24tf No. 163 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to.

THOMAS GAFFNEY'S

SOAP AND CANDLE

MANUFACTORY,

325 EAST SENECA STREET, BUFFALO,

NEW-YORK. 6mJune7

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

OFFICE, 28½ SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK,
ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1 yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

M. GRADY.

27 FAYETTE STREET, LOWELL, MASS.

ju21 Agent for the IRISH NEWS and all the other choice literature of the day.

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this conntry, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

"The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN & McSHANE,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

NEW-YORK. 3m

SHIP STORES SUPPLIED.

CALL ON

THOMAS LYNCH,

OF the "FULTON SHADES," Fulton Ferry, Brooklyn, for the best XX and XXX ales, brandies, and segars.

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE, CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of MESSRS. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

Office 138 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap268m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,
ap268m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

HOSEY & RILEY,

PACIFIC RESTAURANT,

600 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

Private entrance on the first floor, 134 Crosby street.

Hosey & Riley invite their friends to give them a call.

my24 3m

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

DRY-DOCK DISTILLERY.

No. 291 East-thirteenth st., near Avenue B.

JAMES RUSSELL,

Rectifier and Manufacturer of Cordials,

IMPORTER AND DEALER

IN Foreign and Domestic Wines, Liquors, Cordials, &c. J. R. having had long experience in the liquor trade, he has facilities of selecting wines and liquors of the most superior quality, which he offers to dealers and families at the lowest market prices, and flatters himself that a single trial will be quite sufficient to secure custom.

Goods delivered free of expense in any part of the city, and country orders promptly attended to. 3m jun14

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES 6 CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JULY 5, 1856. NO. 13.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. XIII.

Editorial.

MEMORIES OF THE DAY—FOURTH OF JULY.
IRISH AID SOCIETY, NEW-YORK.
HOLY ALLIANCE—FREE SOILERS AND KNOW-NOTHINGS.
THE MURDER AT WILLARD'S.

Literature.

Personal Recollections.—Richard Shiel—The River Suir—Stoneyhurst College—Shiel and O'Connell.—A trip across the Atlantic, by "An Irish Rambler."—Magazines for July, Harper's; Mrs. Stephens' New Monthly; Putnam's; Household Words, &c.—Notes from the Nore, by "A Kilkenny Man."

Correspondence.

Letters from San Francisco—by "Terry Alt," and "Humboldt."
Letter from Dublin—by "Kilmainham."

Poetry.

My love among the Flowers—by "Pontchartrain."—The Liberty Bell.

Miscellaneous.

Irish, English, and American News—Spirit of the Irish Press—Buchanan and the Press—A Woman in Man's Clothes—Answers to Correspondents—Irish Marriages and Deaths, &c., &c.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient - - - - - - - - - - - - - $1
Monthly - - - - - - - - - - - - - $2
Quarterly - - - - - - - - - - - - - $5
Yearly - - - - - - - - - - - - - $16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. MAHONY, Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. P. WALSH, Cincinnati, Ohio.
—— COURTNEY, Charleston, South Carolina.
BRICE, 100 Exchange Place, New Orleans.
JOHN PLASTO, 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin.
STILL & CO., 120 Montgomery street, San Francisco.
WM. BOYLE, News Carrier, San Francisco.
J. C. Morgan, next post office, New Orleans.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y.
McGOWANS, Portland, Me.
ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
MORRISEY, " "
DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.
JOHN C. CLARKE, 88 Newark avenue, Jersey City.
B. E. DOWLING, Jefferson st., next the Post Office, Newport, Ky.
M. GRADY, 27 Fayette st., Lowell, Mass.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.
POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

NEW-YORK CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

"The objects of the Association are, 1st. The dissemination of Catholic and useful knowledge. 2d. To forward the moral and intellectual advancement of its members. 3d. To create among its members a spirit of harmony and good feeling, that will be conducive alike to their interest and pleasure. These to be attained by establishing a Library and Reading Room, and by Readings and Lectures when practicable."

Contributions of either books or money received at the office, No. 107 Nassau street.

M. T. COZANS, President.
JOSEPH McGUIRE, Vice-President.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, D. Quinn.
RECORDING SECRETARY, James Fabb.
TREASURER, John Russell.
LIBRARIAN, T. S. Haughey.
DIRECTORS, R. T. Kelly, J. J. Mullen, M. B. Lynch, L. T. Cozans, P. J. McGuire.
m8jun14

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.

JOHN HAMILTON,
S. W. JOHNSON.

Publications.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL. 4 vols., very scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
HAYES' BALLADS OF IRELAND. 2 vols. in one, 12mo. cloth, $1.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornellan. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.
O'BRIEN'S ROUND TOWERS. Scarce.
MUSGRAVE'S IRISH REBELLIONS. 2 vols., 8vo.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 62 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Shandy Maguire, 50 cts. Griffin's Adventures of an Irish Giant, 18mo., cloth, 25 cents. Wild Irish Girl, 12mo., cloth, 50 cents. Ireland's Welcome to the Stranger, 12mo. cloth, 62c.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
110 Fulton street, New-York.

In press, Madden's Lives of Robert Emmett and Thomas Addis Emmet.
With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.
VOLUNTEERS ASSEMBLED IN COLLEGE GREEN—A copy of this rare engraving, (described in No. 10 Irish News) for sale. Price $5.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,
By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to
A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

A VALUABLE BOOK OF REFERENCE.

Will be published in July,
In one volume, 8vo. cloth, price $1 50,

HISTORY OF IMMIGRATION

TO THE

UNITED STATES,

EXHIBITING THE

umber, Sex, Age, Occupation, and country of birth,

OF

PASSENGERS ARRIVING IN THE UNITED STATES,

By sea from Foreign Countries, from September 30th, 1819, to December 31st, 1855.

COMPILED ENTIRELY FROM OFFICIAL DATA.

With
An Introductory View of the Progress and Extent of Immigration to the United States prior to 1819.
And an appendix containing the

NATURALIZATION AND PASSENGER LAWS

Of the United States, and extracts from the Laws of the Several States relative to Immigrants, the Importation of Paupers, Convicts, Lunatics, etc.

BY WILLIAM J. BROMWELL,

Of the Department of State.

tf28je J. S. Redfield, 34 Beekman street.

OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE.

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

(JAMES B. KIRKER,)

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK,

PUBLISH the largest and finest assortment of Catholic Bibles, Testaments, Prayer Books, Tales, School Books, and other works, to be found in the United States.

An extensive supply of all other Catholic articles always on hand.
Catalogues of their publications sent free of postage.

E. D. & BROTHER HAVE JUST ISSUED

1. THE LOVE OF MARY. Devotions for the month of May. 38c.
2. THE YOUNG CRUSADERS. A tale. 38c.
3. HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR; or Meditations on the Blessed Sacrament. 25c.
4. THE CONVERSION OF RATISBONNE. 25c.
5. CONSCIENCE, or the Trials of May Brooke, a tale by Mrs. A. H. Dorsey. 2 vols; each 38c. 4t May 24

P. O'SHEA,

789 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assiscium. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½
Edna and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to 4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to 12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to 12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to 25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

8mos P. O'SHEA, 789 Broadway, New-York.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for California, per U. S. steamer Illinois, will close at this office on Saturday, the 5th day of July, at one o'clock P. M.

Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

Publications.

WILL BE PUBLISHED EARLY IN JULY,

THE MAN FOR THE TIMES,

THE LIFE OF COLONEL JOHN CHARLES FREMONT,

And his Narratives of Explorations and Discoveries in Kansas, Nebraska, Oregon, and California.

With a new and accurate

STEEL PORTRAIT,

and other illustrations. One large 12mo. volume, 500 pages. Price $1.

This will be decidedly the most

COMPREHENSIVE

as well as the

CHEAPEST EDITION

of the Life and Adventures of

THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE

that will be published during the campaign; and being mainly his own Narrative of Explorations and Discoveries, it will of course be Authentic.

Liberal discount will be given to persons ordering the work in quantities.

2t28je Miller, Orton & Mulligan, Auburn and New-York.

FOUR NEW VOLUMES

OF

SADLIER'S POPULAR LIBRARY.

 These and other books for popular reading, libraries, &c., issued by the publishers, are sent free by post, on receipt of the amount; and if ordered in any considerable number for libraries or prizes, a very large reduction is made. It is hoped that the low terms will induce a very general use of these books.

Just Ready—Volume 10th,

HISTORY OF THE WAR IN LA VENDEE, and THE LITTLE CHOUANNERIE. By G. J. HILL, M.A. With two maps and seven engravings. 12mo, cloth, extra, 75 cents; cloth, extra gilt edges, $1 12.

Volume 11th,

TALES AND LEGENDS FROM HISTORY.

CONTENTS.—1. Gonsalvo of Amaranta—2. The victory of Muret—3. The Dominicans Ghent—4. The Martyrs of Stone—5. The Abbey of Premontre—6. Legends of St. Winifride—7. The feast of the Immaculate Conception—8. The Consecration of Westminster Abbey—9. The Monk's last Words—10. The Martyr Maidens of Ostend—11. The loss of the Conception—12. Foundation of the Abbey of Anchin—13. Our Lady of Mercy—14 John de la Cambe—15. The Carpenter of Roosendael—16. The Widow of Artois—17. The village of Blankenberg—18. St. Edward's Death—19. The windows of San Petronio—20. The Vessels of St. Peter.

12 mo. cloth, extra, 63 cents; cloth, gilt, 88 cents.

Volume 12th,

THE MISSIONS IN JAPAN AND PARAGUAY. By CECELIA CADDELL, author of "Tales of the Festivals," "Miner's Daughter," "Lost Genoveffa," &c. &c. 12mo, cloth, extra, 63 cents; cloth, extra, gilt edges, 88 cts.

Volume 13th,

CALLISTA, A Tale of the Third Century. By Very Reverend JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, D.D., Rector of the Catholic University, Dublin. 12mo. cloth, extra 75 cents; cloth, extra gilt, $1 12.

The following extract is from a very long notice of the work in the Dublin Tablet:

"The story is partly interwoven with historical facts, but its author professes, at the outset, that as a whole it is a simple fiction from beginning to end. However that may be, as an instrument of conveying a real and genuine historical knowledge of the days of which it treats, in their aspect toward Christianity, it will probably remain without a rival in the literary world."

Just Ready, the eighth thousand

1. FABIOLA, or the Church of the Catacombs. By Cardinal WISEMAN. Cloth, extra, 75 cents; gilt, $1 12.

"In "Fabiola" it is not difficult to recognize the learning and brilliancy of an eminent person, whose perfect knowledge of the Rome of to-day imparts to his description of the primeval remains of Christian antiquity a truthfulness and value, independent of the rich stores of erudition which he has applied to their examination."—Catholic University Gazette.

2. HEROINES OF CHARITY. With Preface by AUBREY DE VERE, Esq. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

CONTENTS:—1. The Sisters of Vincennes—2. Jeanne Biscot—3. Anne de Melun—4. Louise de Marillac, Duchess de Aiguillon, Madame de Pollallon, Mademoiselle de Lamoignon—5. Madame de Moramion—6. Mrs. Eliza A. Seton—7. The Little Sisters of the Poor.

3. THE LIFE OF ST. FRANCES OF ROME. By Lady GEORGIANNA FULLERTON. With three others; and an Essay on the Miraculous Lives of the Saints. By J. M. CAPES, Esq. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; cloth, gilt, 75 cents.

4. CATHOLIC LEGENDS AND STORIES. A varied and beautiful volume, containing 31 of the choicest specimens, for the most part new to English readers. Cloth extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

5. THE WITCH OF MELTON HILL. By the author of "Mt. St. Lawrence," &c. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; cloth gilt 75 cents.

"We have seldom read a better story than this. If all the volumes of the 'Popular Library' are as good as this, the series will have an immense success. As for the moral and religious tendency of the book, it is excellent. We can conscientiously recommend it.—Catholic Leader.

6. PICTURES OF CHRISTIAN HEROISM. With Preface by the Rev. H. E. MANNING, D.D. Cloth, extra, 50 cents; gilt, 75 cents.

CONTENTS:—1. Father Azevedo—2. Sister Honoria Magaen—3. Blessed Andrew Bobola—4. Blessed John de Britto—5. The Nuns of Minsk—6. A Confessor of the Faith, 1793—7. The Martyrs of the Carmeg—8. Gabriel de Naillac—9. Margaret Clitherow—10. Geronimo at Algiers—11. Martyrdoms in China—12. Father Thomas of Jesus.

Cloth, extra, 12mo, 50 cents; gilt edges, 75 cents.

Just published, the 5th thousand of

7. THE BLAKES AND FLANAGANS. A Tale illustrative of Irish Life in the United States. By Mrs. J. SADLIER. 12mo. 400 pages, cloth extra, 75 cents; cloth, extra, gilt edge, $1 12.

"The style is excellent, thoroughly natural and unaffected, the narrative flowing, the conversation full of vivacity, and the characters well sustained. ....We cannot but wish it the widest circulation that a book can have."—St. Louis Leader.

8. THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ST. BERNARD. Translated from the French of M. L'Abbe RATISBONNE. With a Preface by Henry Edward Manning, D.D., and a Portrait. 1 vol. 12mo. 500 pages. Cloth, extra, $1; gilt edges $1 50.

9. THE LIFE AND VICTORIES OF THE EARLY MARTYRS. By Mrs. HOPE. Written for the Oratorian's Schools of our Lady's Compassion. 1 vol. 12 mo. 400 pages. Cloth, extra, 75 cents. Gilt edges, $1 12.

D. & J. SADLIER & CO., 164 William street, New-York; 128 Federal street, Boston; and cor. Notre Dame and St. Francis Xavier streets, Montreal, C. E.

THE LONDON JOURNAL

Is now printed in New-York, and published weekly at 60 NASSAU STREET, by J. SMITH. Price two cents each. Subscription terms, one dollar per annum. N. B. All the back numbers, from the commencement of the new volume, can be obtained by applying as above.

Agents wanted in every town in the Union and the Canadas. 2tjly5

Wanted.—Good hands to embroider on linen. Apply at GENIN'S Bazaar (under St. Nicholas Hotel,) 513 Broadway. mv17 3m

☞ Post Office Notice.—The MAILS FOR EUROPE, via Southampton and Havre, per U. S. steamer Atlantic, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 5th day of July, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

my17 Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster

Shipping.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC.....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC.....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC.....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC.....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 80 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m

---

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
88 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,

OLD LINE PACKETS,

Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House using the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap26 3m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

Shipping.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP LINE.

CITY OF BALTIMORE....CITY OF WASHINGTON.
CITY OF MANCHESTER...KANGAROO.

THE magnificent new steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Leitch, 2,367 tons, 500 horse power, will sail from Philadelphia Thursday, 7th August, and from Liverpool Wednesday, 27 Aug. Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $40, including cooked provisions. Persons wishing to send for friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to

Sabel & Cortis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in

Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.
Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—F. S. Saxton.....New-Orleans—Jenkins, Williams & Co.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati—————.....Toronto, C. W.—D. K. Feehan. tf24my

BLACK BALL LINE

OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,
Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING,
ROBERT J. DILLON,
HUGH KELLY,
} Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN,
ARTHUR M'AVOY,
} Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

Business Notices.

S. CAHILL'S

BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

NO. 377 BROADWAY,

(One door below White street), New York.

S. CAHILL respectfully informs his friends, customers, and the public generally, that, having made an extensive addition to his Store, for the better accommodation of his customers, he has now the largest and most extensive BOOT AND SHOE STORE in the world, and is prepared to exhibit the most extensive assortment of

LADIES, MISSES, AND CHILDREN'S, GENTLEMEN'S, BOYS, AND YOUTH'S

BOOTS AND SHOES

EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE CITIZENS OF NEW YORK.

His facilities for manufacturing on an extensive scale, together with his superb assortment of FRENCH BOOTS AND SHOES, received direct from Paris by every steamer, enable him to sell a much better article at much lower prices than can be purchased at any other house in the city. BOOTS AND SHOES OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS MADE TO MEASURE AT THE SHORTEST NOTICE. je28 3mos

Monday, June 16th, and during the week—

HEAD-QUARTERS OF

BARGAINS IN DRY GOODS!

AT RODGER'S, 340 BOWERY,

Between Bond and Great Jones Streets.

CONSISTING of an elegant assortment of Embroidery and Lace Goods, Barages, Lawns, and Barage-Delaines. With a splendid assortment of Stella Shawls, and the latest styles of Mantillas.

Ladies, bear in mind, we always carry out the adage, that "the nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling" 1m Jun7

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists' Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

"They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices," Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, O Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather belting.

☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON all CONSIGNMENTS.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.

ap19 3m*

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap26 3m

---

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my8 1y

---

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

8mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

---

BREWER & CALDWELL,

20 OLD SLIP, CORNER OF WATER STREET, N. Y.

ISSUE BANK OF CHARLESTON BILLS

ON

BANK OF LIVERPOOL,

In sums of one pound sterling and upwards, payable at any of the Banks in

ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND, AND WALES. jun14

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE FOR SERVANTS.

275 BOWERY, NEW-YORK.

MALE and Female Servants can be promptly suited at the above number, with any situation in the city or country, at good wages, in first-rate families, without delay.

N. B. Employers quickly supplied.

8m may 31 ALEXANDER F. RUNGE, Agent.

Wanted, at 766 Broadway, (near 8th street.) Places procured for conductors, Bookkeepers, Clerks, Salesmen, Firemen, Brakemen, Barkeepers, Porters, Waiters, men on Steamers and Railroads, boys for trades, and girls of every description. 21m 3m

French, English, and German spoken. LOUIS KAUFMAN, Agent.

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE for Servants, 129 Waverley Place, two doors from Sixth avenue, New-York.—A large number of competent help can be suited with good situations, in city and country, without delay. Employers in the city and country supplied with the best of female help. [my17 3m] WM. O'BRIEN, Proprietor.

NEW-YORK EMPLOYMEMT OFFICE.

480 Broadway.

HONEST, capable, and faithful servants can at all times find good situations at this office. Protestant and Catholic have equal privilege. Established in 1844 by [3m21ju] T. P. SAUNDERS.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap19 3m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 682 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap19 1y Thomas Maher.

European News.

The steamship Anglo-Saxon, from Greenock 13th inst., arrived at Quebec at 4 o'clock 25th ult. She brings dates from London to the 12th and Glasgow to the 13th inst.

The Daily News again calls attention to the domestic troubles of America. The Post, in a leader on the serious aspect of the internal affairs of the United States, says Kansas is but the field in which the great American question of Slavery is to be debated, most probably in arms; and so thoroughly is the vital character of the crisis understood in America, that there are many who hold that the postponement of the contest would be cheaply purchased by a foreign war as its only means of uniting the jarring States once more under the same banner. The Times says: "There is unfortunately no longer any doubt that Mr. Crampton is to be dismissed, and though the exact news of his dismissal has not yet reached us, we may certainly expect to receive information to that effect by the next arrival. At the same time that our Minister is dismissed, the exequator will be withdrawn from three Consuls, whom the American Government consider guilty of violation of their municipal law." Of the correctness of this intelligence the Times did not pretend to express any doubt.

The American Government's intimation of its intention, it says, is accompanied by the most profuse assurance of good-will and respect toward Great Britain. Mr. Dallas, the Times is assured, is armed with the fullest powers to negotiate and finally settle the disputes connected with the Central American question; and if unable to come to an agreement, the contracting parties are empowered, without further reference to America, to refer the question to the arbitration of some impartial third person, to be selected by mutual concurrence.

"As regards our retaining Mr. Dallas," says the Times, "that question should rest entirely upon the guilt or innocence of Mr. Crampton. If the latter be innocent, Mr. Dallas ought not to remain, and if he be guilty, no false pride should prevent us from acquiescing in his expulsion."

The Times correspondent writes from Paris that the French army will be further reduced 20,000 men.

There has been a Ministerial crisis in Holland, and the Premier, Vanhell, has resigned.

The American Minister had an interview with Lord Clarendon at the Foreign office on Wednesday.

In the House of Commons on Thursday, Mr. Disraeli said, if the Government did not go on with the army estimates, they might expect a discussion on our relations with the United States. The Chancellor of the Exchequer in reply said, he would fix on Monday, if there was no objection, for discussion on the army estimates.

The British in Central America.

IMPORTANT CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND COSTA RICA ON THE INVASION OF WALKER.

The correspondence which has passed since December, 1854, between the British Government and the late Mr. Wallerstein, the Consul-General in London for Guatemala and Costa Rica, has just been laid before Parliament.

The earliest letter is one of the 9th December, 1854, in which he asks to be allowed to purchase two brass howitzers for the Republic of Guatemala, encouraged to do so, he says, by the courtesy and ready attentions he had received on a previous occasion, in a similar application on behalf of Costa Rica. The reply is that her Majesty's Government have no objection. This was at the end of 1824.

A clear twelvemonth afterwards—on the 22d December, 1855—there is a long letter from Mr. Wallerstein to the Earl of Clarendon, in which he explains the position of affairs in Central America, and the urgent need of British intervention to protect the Republic of Costa Rica against the aggressions of a band of "foreigners, by birth, habits and feelings, evidently actuated by projects of plunder, headed by a citizen of the United States, of the name of Walker, who had just been repulsed in a daring fillibustering attempt on the Mexican Province of Sonora." He observes, that looking at the important position of the Central American Isthmus between the two oceans, Great Britain, with her vast and distant possessions in the Pacific, must be interested, perhaps, more than any other State in upholding the integrity of the States of Central America, the importance of which, to her, must be little, if at all, inferior to that of Turkey, in a political as well as commercial view. He then says:

"The British Government appears, indeed, to have been always alive to any attempt of any foreign Power to subvert the independence of the Sandwich Islands, while it has maintained and guarded with care its small settlement of Belize—thus testifying that it looks beyond the mere requirements of the hour. The treaty concluded between Great Britain and the United States in 1851 contains a further proof of this foresight and intelligence. That treaty was hailed by the States of Central America, and by no one of them more than by Costa Rica, as a security for their independence, and an encouragement for that peaceful industry which they had begun to cultivate. The State of Nicaragua alone, which had been long disturbed by foreign counsels and intestine struggles, formed a sad exception in this respect; but it has already discovered its mistaken policy, and is now paying for it; its dissensions have had the misfortune to introduce into the country a band of adventurers, who have usurped the power and authority of the Government of that Republic."

He then asserts that Walker's band are bona fide now all that exists of a Government of Nicaragua; and it is greatly to be apprehended that the consequence of this usurpation of the Government of Nicaragua will be that questions of Territory which have been in dispute between Costa Rica and Nicaragua will be again revived and hostilely pursued in order to follow the designs of this band. The possession of one of the Central American States by these adventurers will therefore, in all probability, be speedily followed by an aggression upon another of them." He refers to the proceedings of Kinney at San Juan del Norte or Greytown, and his pretended claim to an extensive tract of country belonging to Costa Rica. He says these parties are obviously acting in concert for the purposes of spoliation, and that Costa Rica "has the greater cause to fear, because, as it has cautiously abstained from such appeals to the Government and people of the United States as have been made by some of the Republics of Central America, it has been regarded with more or less hostile feeling by the United States, and has been accused of being partially disposed towards the Government and interests of Great Britain." He states that Costa Rica, on its mountain fastnesses, can repel any invader, but that "its sea coast is exposed to marauding expeditions, which may at any time be expected, and to which it can oppose no adequate naval resistance." He urges that such a band of lawless adventurers, as that led by Walker, "acting under no government, and under no recognized flag, having no character to sustain, seeking no other pretext for an attack than the defenceless state of the object of it," is the enemy of all nations, because its violence is opposed to every principle of public law. He, therefore, makes an earnest appeal to the British Government to adopt effectual measures for the protection of youthful and comparatively weak countries against this intolerable system of aggression. He reminds Lord Clarendon that the port of Punta Arenas contains much British merchandise and shipping, and that Costa Rica was connected with Britain by a treaty of commerce in 1849.

A week later, on the 29th December last, this letter is followed by the Consul presenting to Lord Clarendon a letter of equal length, and of the same purport, dated San Jose, Nov. 8, from Don J. B. Calvo, the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Costa Rica. He describes in very declamatory language, the outrages of General Walker's "band of freebooters," and the terror which they have spread; he states that the President of Costa Rica, though confident of its internal defences, has great fears for the town and harbor of Punta Arenas, and he only asks that a single English or French ship of war may be stationed there to prevent any fillibustering attack. He expresses the willingness of Costa Rica to make a grateful return for that service, at whatever sacrifices in its revenues or commercial relations. A similar letter to this was at the same time addressed by Costa Rica to the Emperor of the French.

On the 12th of January, Mr. Wallerstein writes to the Earl of Clarendon, having had an interview with him in the meantime; he dwells much on the internal improvement of Costa Rica, as mainly effected by British capital, and solicits the aid of a British ship-of-war to protect it, while he also asks sympathy for the people of Costa Rica. On the 22d of January, Mr. Hammond replies from the Foreign Office, "that instructions will be given to the Admiral on the Pacific station to cause the coast of Costa Rica to be visited by her Majesty's cruisers, for the protection of British interests."

On the 4th of February, Mr. Wallerstein expresses his hope "that the interests of Costa Rica will be included in this protection; and he informs Lord Clarendon that the fillibusters "have been in effect, if not astensibly, aided by a ship of war of the United States in the port of Greytown, and that they are, therefore, directly or indirectly, countenanced in the territory of Nicaragua by the United States Government." We find no reply to this letter.

The remainder of the correspondence is about a request made in January to be allowed to purchase two brass mortars at Woolwich, for Guatemala, and 2,000 muskets for Costa Rica. This the British Government consented to, but a note appended to this paper states that neither of these articles have yet been issued from her Majesty's stores.

Conspiracy to Assassinate the Queen of Spain.

The following are some details of the affair given by the Diario:

"A man named Rendondo Marauez organized a secret society three months ago, and a young carpenter was drawn into it. It having been resolved to kill the Queen, this young man was designated by lot to do the deed, and he was told that if he fired on her Majesty a sum of 2,000 piastres should be given to him, and that if he failed to do so he should be certainly put to death by his fellow conspirators. On the 28th ult., at the moment at which the carriage of the Princess of the Asturious approached the Calli del Arenal, a young man named Fuentes drew a pistol from his pocket, but a police agent seized his arm and prevented him from discharging the weapon. On being interrogated, he made known the facts above related. Just after his arrest, Rendondo Marquez went to the Palace, on pretext of making revelations respecting the conspiracy. No arms have been found in any house of the Calli del Arenal. Marquez is a native of Almadenejos, in the Province of Ciudad Real. His political opinions have always been Carlist. He is a bold, enterprising man, and has been imprisoned for forgery."

The following are some details of the affair given by the Nacion:

"The military precautions which were taken on the 26th ult., on the occasion of the visit of the Queen to the Theatre del Principe, and which have given rise to a good deal of conversation, were, it appears, caused by the discovery of a plot to destroy the Queen in the Calli del Arenal, near the Calli de la Duda, as her Majesty was returning from the theatre. The government received the information on the previous day by means of an anonymous letter sent through the post. Some suggestions were given in it for baffling the conspiracy. The government afterwards learned that another attempt was to be made on the 29th, and it took some new precautions. What is curious is, that the anonymous letter was written by the very man who was to have fired on the Queen with a pistol. He is a young married workman, named Fuentes. It results from his declarations, and from those of other persons who have been arrested, and who, like him, belong to the lower classes, that the chief of the conspiracy was an officer of the National Guard, named Rendondo Marquez, well known in the capital. This man has hitherto escaped capture, though it is said that he is secreted at Madrid. Amongst his papers were found written permissions to enter the palace and speak to the Queen; he, it appears, obtained them by pretending that he was in a position to make disclosures respecting dark plots against the Queen."

The Inundations in France.

The Journal de l'Indre et Loire gives the following description of Tours on the day of the inundation:—The Rue Royal presents the appearance of a canal, and boats are plying on it incessantly, carrying relief to the unfortunate inhabitants who either would not or could not quit their houses. The Mail is like a torrent, and all sorts of things brought down by the Loire and the Cher are floating about it. The ornamental trees on it have been torn up. The railway station, the centre of the commercial activity of the town, is still surrounded with water, as high as the windows. In the garden of the Prefecture opposite nothing is to be seen but the tops of the trees; the walls of the garden are thrown down. The Rues de Paris, de Bordeaux, and du Rempart, built on the old ramparts of the city, are under water. At every step we take we see the ravages of the waters, and from the Route de Grammont we perceive in all their horror the effects of the catastrophe in the adjacent country. As far as the eye can reach there is water. The inundations were not able to surmount the obstacle caused by the Route de Bordeaux, but they rose to a great height, and they were strewed with articles of furniture, clothing, and woodwork. The Pont de l'Archeveque threatens to fall in; the viaduct of the railway to Nantes, beaten with great fury by the waters, has been thrown down. Wherever the eye rests, it sees farms submerged, houses that cannot be inhabited for a long time to come, even if they can ever be inhabited again, and on the heights thousands of victims grouped together without shelter and without food. Even the dark and narrow streets of the old city, occupied by the lower classes, have not escaped. From the Rue Borgne to the commune of La Riche, from the Champ de Mars to the Mail, and from the Place d'Aumount to Saint Sauveur, is an immense lake, reaching in height to the first story of the houses. Such is the state of our city after five days of mortal anxiety and indescribable calamities!

The accounts from Saumur of the ravages committed by the Loire and the Authion are even more distressing than those previously received. The pupils of the cavalry school of that place gave a fine example of courage and devotedness. They plunged into the water with their horses, they saved many invalids and infirm persons from certain death, and compelled the inhabitants to leave their dwellings. The clergy likewise displayed considerable energy, and effected much in combating the strange determination of the people to remain in their houses. A young curate swam to a man who was clinging to a tree, and succeeded in landing him in safety.

From Lyons we learn that as the waters recede numerous bodies are discovered, all in a state of decomposition. Workmen are employed in building wooden huts on the Place St. Pothin for the reception of the persons who are without homes. The Directors of the Mediterranean Railway have placed a number of railway carriages at the disposal of the authorities for the temporary accommodation of the houseless. When the Emperor came to Lyons he gave 1,000f. to be divided among the engine-drivers and other employees of the train. That sum has been generously given by these men to the subscription opened at Lyons for the sufferers. A letter from Arles states that the extent of the country inundated in that neighborhood is at least twenty leagues. Although the waters are going gradually down, guns are still frequently heard in different parts round, as signals of distress from the inhabitants of the inundated houses. Boats are moving about in all directions to render assistance.

By the Asia.

By the British and North American mail steamer Asia, we have dates from Liverpool, London, and by telegraph, from Paris and other parts of the continent of Europe to the 14th instant, including various commercial reports to the close of the markets on that day.

Although the Anglo-American question still occupies a large share of public attention, commercial men seem to have not much fear of any real disturbance of relations between England and the United States. Mr. Dallas, it is understood, will not be dismissed, even should Mr. Crampton be so. Such, at least, is the rumor which our correspondent repeats from Liverpool and Manchester, although it is not confirmed by the conversation which took place in Parliament on the evening preceding the steamer's departure, when Lords Clarendon and Palmerston gave the country to understand that the government had not come to a decision whether Mr. Dallas shall be dismissed or not.

Meantime the government presses continue to stir up excitement, especially the London Morning Post and London Times, both of which in language studiously offensive and irritating, demand the dismissal of Mr. Dallas and the application of force to the United States. On the other hand the obstinacy of the government is awakening the attention of the country to the terrible consequences which a war with America would produce, and as Manchester is moving in the matter, and the conservative party seem particularly interested, it is hoped the result will be not war, but the overthrow of the Palmerston administration, for it cannot be overlooked that—while the organs of the British government continue to reiterate that the excitement is kept up by President Pierce and his cabinent for private ends—the excitement in England is mainly attributable to the necessity that exists for the Palmerston party to have some rallying-cry to keep themselves in power.

The anxiety which is felt may be best ascertained from the tone of the inquiries in Parliament, made on Friday evening the 13th. The position of affairs is there spoken of as critical, and Lord John Russell has given notice of a special motion of inquiry on the subject for Monday the 16th.

A peace address to the people of the United States was placed for signature in the Manchester Exchange and received eight thousand signatures in a few hours.

THE RELATIONS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND ENGLAND IN PARLIAMENT—LORD JOHN RUSSELL'S MOTION OF INQUIRY.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Friday, June 13.

The Earl of Derby said that, under present circumstances, he would abstain from making any observations upon the subject of the relations between this country and the United States; but in consequence of the intelligence which, it was understood, had reached Her Majesty's government, he felt it his duty to ask the Foreign Secretary whether the American Minister in this country had communicated to Her Majesty's government the intention of the government of the United States to suspend diplomatic intercourse with the British minister at Washington, and to withdraw the exequatur from Her Majesty's Consuls at Cincinnati, New-York and Philadelphia. He also wished to know whether Her Majesty's government were now in a position to state to Parliament what course they intended to pursue under these circumstances; and, further, if the several despatches from the American government would be laid on the table.

The Earl of Clarendon said that the day before yesterday Mr. Dallas called upon him and read to him a despatch from Mr. Marcy, on the part of the United States government, in which it was stated that the explanations of the British government on the recruiting question were perfectly satisfactory. The American government were satisfied that the British government had given no instructions, and that they had no intention of doing so, to violate the laws of the United States; but that, so far as related to the proceedings of Mr. Crampton and the proceedings of the Consuls, the explanation which had been offered were not sufficiently satisfactory.

The American government had, therefore, resolved upon sending Mr. Crampton his passports, and also upon withdrawing the Exequatur of the Consuls. Her Majesty's government had not yet had an opportunity of arriving at a conclusion as to the course they should adopt; but as soon as they had, it should be communicated to Parliament, and the despatches, a copy of which Mr. Dallas had left with him, should be laid on the table; he thought it his duty also to state that Mr. Dallas had read to him another despatch in which the question of Central America was treated. On that subject the American government considered that there were some parts of the question which might, with advantage, be made the subject of arbitration; but upon the whole they thought that the entire question could be settled by direct negotiations between the two governments.

House of Commons, Friday, June 13.—Mr. Disraeli wished to ask Lord Palmerston whether information had reached her Majesty's government that diplomatic relations between our minister at Washington and the United States government had ceased; and secondly, whether the noble lord had also learned that the exequator had been withdrawn from several of her Majesty's consuls in the United States; and if this information were true, whether the noble lord could inform the House what course government was disposed to take under these circumstances?

Lord Palmerston stated that Lord Clarendon received, late on Wednesday evening, a dispatch from Mr. Dallas, which contained two dispatches addressed to Mr. Dallas by Mr. Marcy, Foreign Minister of the United States; one related to the Recruiting question, and the other to the Central American question. It resulted from these dispatches, that the United States government, though perfectly satisfied with the explanations contained in Lord Clarendon's last dispatch, as regarded the course pursued by her Majesty's government in the matter, and although Mr. Marcy deemed the explanation a perfect settlement of the question, as far as her Majesty's government were concerned, yet, nevertheless, for reasons which were alleged, that the United States government were not equally satisfied with regard to the course pursued by her Majesty's Minister at Washington; and they had, therefore, requested Mr. Dallas to communicate to her Majesty's government their intention to deliver passports to Mr. Crampton, and to withdraw their exequator from the three Consuls at Cincinnati, Philadelphia, and New York, who were engaged in the enlistment transaction. With regard to the course the government might think it right to take in a matter of such consequence, he need scarcely assure the House that, until the government had had an opportunity of fully considering all the circumstances, he could not answer the questions put to him by the right hon. gentleman.

Mr. Baillie said, that, as he had given notice of a motion on the enlistment question, he wished to know whether the noble lord would lay on the table the dispatch sent by Mr. Marcy. Unless that was done, he should deem it his duty to bring on the question on Monday.

Lord Palmerston said government desired to give all the correspondence that could be fairly produced; and the hon. gentleman might take his choice whether he would bring on the question on Monday or Friday next.

Mr. Gibson said he understood the noble lord to say that Mr. Dallas had made a communication to Lord Clarendon, with regard to the Central American question, as well as that relating to the recruiting question. He now wished to know whether in that communication, an answer was given to the proposal to submit the Central American question to arbitration?

Lord Palmerston said it would require time to enter into a long detail to give explanations upon that point; but he might say, that the general tenor of the communication was, that the United States government were of opinion that the question would be better settled by direct negotiation between the two governments.

Mr. Gibson inquired whether, in case direct negotiations failed, the American government refused arbitration?

Lord Palmerston replied that there was no refusal of arbitration.

Mr. Disraeli expressed a hope that the noble lord would place the dispatch upon the table before the debate upon Mr. Baillie's motion took place.

Lord Palmerston replied that that would depend upon the manner in which the government might reply to it. The subject then dropped.

At a subsequent period of the evening, Lord John Russell said he wished to make a few observations with reference to the statement of Lord Palmerston on the American question. It appeared that her Majesty's Minister at Washington had been furnished with his passports, and desired to leave the United States, and that Mr. Dallas, the American Minister at the Court of St. James, had been furnished with certain instructions with respect to the Central American question to the effect that negotiations between the two governments were desirable, and that if necessary, arbitration should be resorted to.

He (Lord J. Russell) did not at all wish to find fault with his noble friend the First Lord of the Treasury for not giving further information to the house on this subject, but he did feel that we had arrived at a most critical state of affairs, and he thought that the house ought to have further information. He intended, on Monday next, when the Army Estimates came before the house, to ask Lord Palmerston to furnish the house with some information as to the course which her Majesty's government intended to pursue on the American question. It was not desirable that any discussion should take place in that house upon the subject, and he could not but regret that whilst the house had been silent upon it, it had been taken up by some of the newspapers, in which had appeared articles calculated to make an impression highly unfavorable to the continuance of peace between England and America (hear, hear). He was persuaded that that house and the whole nation earnestly desired the continuance of that peace (loud cheers). He thought it was desirable that his noble friend should state at an early opportunity what were the views of her Majesty's government upon the subject, and he should therefore on Monday next, before the house went into Committee of Supply upon the Army Estimates, ask his noble friend what was the course which her Majesty's Government intended to pursue with regard to Mr. Dallas, the American minister, at this court, and whether the Government intend to enter into the negotiations proposed by the American Government.

Miscellaneous Foreign News.

The universal excitement in Italy continues. Austria is taking measures of precaution. For example, single sentinels are no longer posted at different points of the towns—they are concentrated in the Corps de Guarde, in order to protect them from the knife, the only weapon left to the Lombards, they are placed behind gates of iron. In the mornings the police has much ado to remove from the walls inscriptions in honor of Victor Emmanuel and Cavour, and appeals to the Piedmontese.

Lola Montes whipped by a Woman.—The Ballarat Times of March 3, contains an account of a whipping at length administered to this terrible whipper by one of her own sex. Lola Montes was engaged to perform at the Ballarat Theatre for Mr. Crosby. She quarreled with him about accounts, abused him, and was then set on by his wife. Mrs. Crosby broke a whip on her opponent, then seized Madam by the hair—the rest may be imagined. The Ballarat Times says that Lola Montes will not be able to appear for a long time on the stage.

Honduras.—In the year 1853 the total amount of the exports from Honduras to Great Britain, the United States and other countries, was £345,377. In 1854, the total amount was £452,313, In 1853, the total amount of outward ships was 23,936 tons. In 1854, it was 27,803 tons. The number of men employed in the former year was 990; in the latter, 1,132. In 1854, the total amount of the imports was £2,417,642. The inward ships in that year from Great Britain, the United States and other countries amounted to 31,124 tons, and the number of men employed was 1,259.

We read in the Brussels Independance, "Russia, taking into consideration the daily increasing importance of its relations with China, has determined—the Court of Pekin having given its consent—to appoint a Charge d'Affaires at the Government of the Celestial Empire, in the place of a simple Consul at Canton. Baron Solvinski, a celebrated Chinese scholar, has been chosen for this post. He will reside one part of the year at Macao, and the other at Canton."

Mr. Dillon, French Consul at San-Francisco, has been named Consul-General at Port-au-Prince. A Paris letter asserts that he has received instructions to intimate that France will not permit Soulouque to invade the Dominicans.

The rumor of a new French loan is contradicted in the Moniteur.

The Emperor Alexander has arrived at Riga.

English News.

Execution of William Palmer.—During the whole of yesterday, says the European Times, 14th ult., the railway trains poured in their thousands of souls who were this morning to be spectators of the dreadful tragedy, which was at so early an hour to be enacted. They were not to be deterred from witnessing the execution either by wind or weather, and although the rain descended pitilessly the greater part of the day, accompanied by convulsive gusts of wind, there was no lack of eagerness displayed to be present on the mournful occasion. The elements lent a melancholy air to the intended proceedings, and the pervading gloom was only relieved by the commotion of the visitors, who were endeavoring to secure favorable spots of observation.

As night came on, all the approaches to the jail became more crowded than during the afternoon, and up to the dawn of this morning there was no abatement of the interest manifested all day. Here they remained in the mud, rain, and in darknes for several hours; once a position taken it was retained most obstinately, and by eight o'clock this morning there were not less than 20,000 persons present, who exhibited the utmost decorum and regularity. Every available inch of ground was occupied both in front and around the jail. Precisely at the hour appointed for the execution (eight o'clock) the culprit appeared on the drop. He looked exceedingly well, and had passed an excellent night.

It had been announced that he would address the multitude on the scaffold, and considerable anxiety was apparent as to the tenor of his observations. He did not, however, say anything. He was accompanied by the sheriff, chaplain, and the other officials connected with the prison; was dressed in the prison dress—a suit of grey. None of his relatives were present, but many of his friends of the turf were witnesses to the sad spectacle. Upon the unfortunate man's appearance, the cap was placed over his face by Smith, of Dudley, who performed the duties of executioner, and the rope having been adjusted, in an instant the earthly career of the greatest criminal recorded in the annals of history was at an end. He made no confession; even yesterday he desired that the visits of Mr. Wright, the prison philanthropist, should be discontinued, it being alleged that he did not desire to be induced to disclose the truth of the offence with which he was charged. As Palmer is now numbered with the dead, his name, as associated with crime of the deepest dye, will be spoken of and shuddered at for centuries to come.

"None but himself can be his parallel."

The following may or may not have reference to the American disputes, but it is generally regarded as a demonstration against the United States:—The ships-of-war Nile, 91 guns, Captain Mundy; Shannon, 51, new screw frigate; Plyades, 21, Capt. d'Eyncourt, and Cossack, 21, Capt. Fanshawe, have been telegraphed to prepare with all possible despatch for foreign service—destination supposed to be a rendezvous on the coast of America. All the commanders of the gunboats at Portsmouth were also called to the Port Admiral's, it was rumored, to receive instructions for active service at telegraphic notice. When these vessels sail there will be upon, or on their way to, the North American and West India station the following fleet: Nile 91, Powerful 84, Boscowen 70 (flag), Imeuna 72, Pembroke 60, Cornwallis 60, Euryalus 51, Amphion 34, Vestal 26, Erudyce 26, Termagant 24, Cossack 21, Pylades 21, Arachne 18, Malacca 17, Falcon 17, Archea 15, Mariner 12, Espiegle 12, Arab 12, Daring 12, Buzzard 6, Argus 6, Scorpion 6, Hermes 6. The 12-gun sloops are fitted with the new "long 32's," and the 6-gun steamers' guns are all of the new long range. If the gun-boats be taken into account, about 80 of the new guns may be added to the computation. The light squadron of despatch-steamers and gun-boats, under the command of Capt. Watson, in the Imperieuse, of 51 guns, and comprising of the first-named class the Wanderer, the Victor, the Ringdove, the Lapwing, the Pioneer, and of the Intrepid; and of the second named the Starling, the James, the Beaver, and the Drake arrived at Falmouth on Sunday, to fill up with coal and provisions, in conseof a telegraph from the Admiralty to that effect."

The citizens of Ramsgate, of which place Colonel Lake (of Kars) is a native, have subscribed to purchase for him a sword of honor.

The Lord Mayor of London has called a public meeting to raise subscriptions for the sufferers from the floods in France.

Capt. Thompson, one of the defenders of Kars, has died from the effects of his wounds and privations.

Richard L. Swift, British Consul at Buffalo, is appointed to the same office at Riga.

A few Thursdays back two men were seriously injured at the shaft now being sunk by the Marquis of Downshire, near Carrickfergus. The gearing having got out of order a bucket which was being lowered broke from its fastening, and descending with fearful rapidity fell upon two of the workmen who were employed at the bottom of the shaft. One of the men had his head frightfully cut, several of his ribs broken, and one of his hands pierced through with a pike; the other had his head cut, and his body seriously bruised.

American News.

The Chicago Press says: that five years ago a considerable number of French Canadians from the vicinity of Montreal, came into the State of Illinois and settled upon lands near the Kankakee river, in a town now called St. Anna. This enterprise was opposed by the Canadian priesthood and land-owners, but was vigorously sustained and carried through to a successful issue by Rev. Father Chiniquy, well known as the Father Matthew of Canada. From a gentleman who has recently visited that interesting colony of French settlers we learn that there are now at St. Anna about five hundred families that came from Lower Canada within a few years past, all of whom have risen from extreme poverty to ease and competence, and in some instances to wealth. It was doubtful whether the generally apparent and real prosperity that has attended the French Canadian colony at St. Anna, in Kankakee county, has a parallel in the history of any part of the continent. Men who came into the State extremely poor within the past five or six years are now worth from two to ten thousand dollars each and look with pity on others who persist in the unprofitable and unremunerative occupation and cultivation of land under the Seignorial Tenure in Canada, or lands elsewhere that require the labor of a life-time to prepare for farming

A fellow was arrested in Syracuse on a charge of vagrancy, when he unburdened himself of the following budget, the latter part of which contains much more truth than poetry, and is applicable to cases occurring in many places beside Syracuse: I am not a vagrant, your honor; far from it, sir. I am a gambler, and obtain my living that way; do you not remember, sir, the answer made by the pirate to Alexander, when he asked by what right he infested the seas? His answer was, "by the same right that you conquered the world, but," said he, "I am called a robber because I command one small vessel, and you a conqueror, because you command large fleets and armies." It is just so with me, your honor; I am a gambler in a small way, and you call me a vagrant. Mr. B——, Mr. G——, and Mr. P——, can buck against a faro bank, and bet their fifties and their hundreds, and you let them pass for gentlemen. I have no more to say. I can get no bail. I am willing to go up.

A correspondent of the Tribune, speaking of Iowa City, the capital of the State of Iowa, gives some interesting facts. It has advanced in the course of three years from a small scattering village to the dignity of a Western "city," and now boasts7,000 inhabitants. As by act of the Legislature, the capital is to be transferred to Desmoines, the Capitol building is to be enlarged and used for the purpose of the State University, which has an endowment of $200,000. The city has several steam-mills, and is thriving at a wonderful rate. Mechanics are not in so great demand in that vicinity as farmers who have the capital to pay for their land, and the skill to make it productive. Educational privileges are excellent.

A letter dated Christy's Prairie, Ind., June 21, says: We have the severest drouth ever known here at this season of the year. Corn, grass, oats, and most kinds of vegetation, are withering for want of rain. This is not the case everywhere, however. In some places, not far from us, there have been heavy showers recently. In others there has been very little rain since December last. Another letter, dated at Peru, Champaigne County, Ill., on the Central Railroad, June 20, says: A very severe drouth is prevailing at this point at the present time. Both Winter and Spring wheat look most miserably, and, unless rain falls shortly, cannot yield more than one-fourth of a crop. Oats ditto. Corn has not come up well. Sod corn plowed in late did not come up at all. Where it was planted in old ground early it looks better than could be expected. The farmers have at least half of a crop of old corn on hand.

A great deal of complaint is made in regard to exorbitant prices which were charged by the Cincinnati hotels, hackmen, &c., to the delegates to the recent Democratic Convention. The Rochester Union thus speaks of the charges at the Burnet House:—

"We hear of gentlemen being charged $5 a day for board, though even at that price they could not get single rooms. Bills were made out in gross—and the sums were stated in round numbers. One of the delegations from New England paid some $250 for a small room for their conferences. The Hard delegation paid $450 for theirs, and the Softs paid $805 for room rent alone! In one of the two rooms occupied by the latter were several beds in which the delegates slept. But their board was just the same as if their room rent was not already paid. Other delegations had corresponding bills to settle; but we doubt whether any other State suffered so much as New-York."

Some "fiends in human shape" placed a coffe-pot, charged with powder, under the dwelling-house of a colored man, named Wood, in East Boston, which exploded about two o'clock on Saturday morning. The windows were thrown into the street, and both floors were torn up. Five colored people were asleep in the house, but escaped serious injury. Wood was recently married, and it is conjectured that the rascality was perpetrated by some unsuccessful aspirant for the hand of the "fair young widow" who consented to become his bride.

The Albany Transcript, one of the most spirited American papers in the State, hauls down the Fillmore and Donelson flag, and abandons the Dark Lantern party. The editor, Mr. Cayler, gives his reasons at length for taking this step, and concludes as follows: "We have too long recognized men whose chief aim is the acquisition of spoils, while avowing principles that cannot stand the test to which they must be subjected, and we feel a relief, now that we are independent of them and their influence."

The Wheeling Intelligencer says: In a journey of 150 miles in the State of Ohio, we did not see a field of really bad wheat, and in most places the straw stood as close as it well could, and was very finely headed. The high price for this staple for the last few years induced many farmers to put lands in wheat not heretofore devoted to that purpose. There are now more acres growing than there were last year, with a prospect of a better grain.

Shakers are in danger of yielding to fashionable temptation, as well as the "world's people." The Albany Transcript says that John Harwood, who is at the head of that order in Watervliet, has just ordered a carriage, to cost $800.

A laboring man named Wm. Delany, aged 40 years, was run over by a hand-car, on Monday last, on the Philadelphia and Trenton Railroad, and crushed to death.

The United States Railroad Directory stated that the Railroads in the Union are over five hundred in number, besides some eighty branches, and the amount of capital invested in them exceeds seven hundred millions dollars.

Ours, says the Boston Post, must be a great drinking and fighting people, judging from the prevailing custom of presenting pitchers and canes; 437 silver pitchers and 9,001 canes have been presented to various citizens within the past twelvemonth, owing to their "excellent qualities in public and private," &c., most of which gifts "might be seen" at such and such places, kindly pointed out by the newspapers. If the numbers of said curiosities were to be marked upon them, they would become a great deal more curious.

The Indianola Bulletin of the 13th says: The camels, having recruited much sooner than we anticipated, left last week for San Antonio. Two of the hump-backed camels were harnessed to a wagon, and presented a novel sight. In Arabia, we learn, it is common to yoke and work them as we do oxen. It is Major Wayne's intention to seek a place better adapted than the coast to carry out the views of the Government with regard to them. The cold weather and sudden changes of our winters, he thinks, would be fatal to them the first season.

A fellow sitting behind a lady in the cars between Rochester and Niagara Falls, a few days since, insulted her. Complaint was made to the conductor, who, after satisfying himself of its truth, dragged the fellow out of his seat, shoved him to the platform, checked the train, and kicked him off! The whole proceeding did not occupy more than a couple of minutes. We wish every beast who similarly acts were similarly served.

The Cincinnati Gazette, of the 17th inst., says: The Treasurer of Montgomery county, Ohio, David Clark, it has been ascertained is a defaulter to the amount of $45,000. He hopes to be able to account for half of this large sum, but no attempt is made to account for the balance.

Affidavits are published in the Tampa Peninsula disclosing the fact that a band of white men have been organized in Hillsboro' and Manatee counties, for the purpose of committing depredations in the name of the Indians. The disclosures were made by a man named Wm. H. Dillingham, who gives the names of a number of persons as belonging to the band.

A joint resolution, introduced by Senator Mason, has passed Congress, appropriating $40,000 for the purchase and restoration to the British Government of the ship Resolute, late of the British navy, which was abandoned in the Arctic Seas and found by the crew of an American whaleship, by whom she was brought to this country.

A printer named Wm. Giles died in jail in Cincinnati. He had been on a spree, was taken before Judge Pruden at his own request, under the liquor law, to get over it by confinement, but his system was so shattered that death was the result. It is stated that he had a wife in Wheeling.

The Ohio wine crop is estimated at 500,000 gallons. The quantity bottled by Mr. Longworth this season is 150,000 bottles, and with that added to his previous stock, he has now in cellar fully 300,000 bottles, mostly quarts, of which 20,000 are of Isabella. The demand rapidly increases.

The Chicago Democrat says: "While the workmen were engaged in removing the old block-house at Fort Dearhorn, a large quantity of cannon-balls, canisters of grape, powder, &c., were found buried. The powder was in a good state of preservation. A chest had also been discovered, but had not been dug out. It is supposed that the chest contained the treasure buried in the Fort at the time of the massacre by the Indians."

It is stated that the laborers on the line of the Virginia Central and the Covington and Ohio Railroads are all on a strike for higher wages.

There are at the present time in this country 716 churches belonging to the Quakers, and the number of attendants is estimated at 283,000.

There are in San Francisco 30 churches, having an average attendance of 9,665 persons, which is estimated to be one-fifth of the total Christian population of the city.

The Hessian Fly is desolating the wheat fields of tidewater Virginia, and the papers bring accounts of its ravages in other sections of the State.

An Irishman named Laurence Murphy was killed by a kick from a mule in New-Orleans on the 16th inst.

A woman at Chicago drowned herself the other day, in a fit of delirium tremens, by ducking her head in a bucket of water, and keeping it there till life was extinct.

An arrangement has been effected between the authorities of Hoboken and the Jersey City Board of Water Commissioners, for a supply of Passaic water for Hoboken.

There are to be nine hundred and thirty-four hotels, and two hundred and eighty-one eating-houses in the city of Philadelphia under the new liquor law.

On the 25th ult., the Grand Jury of Washington presented Preston S. Brooks for assault on Mr. Sumner. The latter appeared before the Jury and gave testimony.

The Massasoit Flouring Mills, in Fall River, were destroyed by fire on Wednesday morning. The mills were among the largest in Massachusetts.

Edward Bernard, a native of England and a jeweller by trade, died of apoplexy in New-Orleans on the 15th inst.

The number of emigrants arrived at Quebec from the opening of navigation to the 6th of June, was 4,878; for the same time last year the number was 4,601.

The assessment returns of Indianapolis make a property valuation of $3,472,790 in lots; $1,892,153 in personal chattels.

Interesting from California.

The news brought to New Orleans by the Granada, with San Francisco dates to the 5th June, is very interesting.

Casey and Cora were hung on the 22d of May—the same day on which Mr. King was buried. Perfect decorum was observed throughout the proceedings.

The Vigilance Committee had arrested several other desperate characters, including the notorious Yankee Sullivan. The latter committed suicide in his cell, at the Committee Rooms, leaving a confession touching the elections in San Francisco.

The opponents of the Vigilance Committee attempted to hold a meeting on the 2d, to denounce the Committee, but it proved a total failure.

Several murders in the interior are recorded.

Rumors were circulated that Governor Johnson would call means into requisition to suppress the revolution, but nothing had been done as yet. These rumors, however, had created much excitement throughout the State, and word was sent from the interior that thousands were ready to march to the assistance of the Committee. Sacramento alone offered to furnish one thousand men.

The excitement was on the increase, and martial law had been declared at San Francisco.

The Committee were determined on carrying out their measures, and continued to make arrests. The opposition, however, were organizing, with seven hundred stand of arms. It was rumored they intended to attack the Committee Rooms, which were strongly guarded, with two cannon before the door loaded with grapeshot. All the journals, except the Herald, side with with the Committee.

Indian hostilities in Oregon are partially suppressed. A difficulty had occurred at Washington Territory, owing to an attempt made by Judge Saunders to hold a Council during the existence of martial law. The Judge was arrested for safe keeping until peace should be established.

The health of San Francisco was good, and business moderate.

Arrived out at San Francisco ships Sweepstakes, Sea Nymph and Empress of the Seas, from New York.

Advices from Costa Rica state that the army is disbanded. Cholera was raging fearfully throughout the State. Baron Bulow died of it while on his retreat. Nothing important from Nicaragua.

Congressional.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

June 23.—Mr. Toombs gave notice of a bill to take the census of Kansas, to protect the exercise of the elective franchise in that Territory, and to provide for calling a Convention to form a Constitution preparatory to the admission of Kansas into the Union. He spoke at some length upon the state of things in that Territory.

June 24.—A Message was received from the President, in response to a resolution asking for a copy of the instructions to Mr. Buchanan, late Minister to England, on the subject of the invitation of the British Government to enter into a treaty, similar to that between Russia and the United States, recognizing the principle in favor of neutral commerce, that free ships make free goods, contraband of war excepted, and that the goods of a friend captured on board the vessels of an enemy, with the like exception, shall not be subject to confiscation; and, furthermore, that the parties shall apply these principles to the commerce and navigation of all such Powers and States as shall consent to adopt them on their part as permanent and immutable.

Mr. Marcy, among other things, says that France was likewise invited to enter into a similar treaty, and that he apprehends no serious objection excepting from Great Britain, and but for her resistance to the principle that the neutral flag protects the property which it covers, if it be not contraband of war, it would long ago have been regarded as a well-established rule of international law. She has implicitly admitted its justice by adopting it as the guide of her conduct in the present war with Russia. If it is fair toward neutrals to act upon it now, it will be difficult for her to devise good reasons for not observing it in all future wars.

In presenting this subject to Lord Clarendon, August 30th, 1855, Mr. Buchanan says: "It is scarcely necessary to observe that the present proposal does not proceed from any apprehension that Great Britain will ever hereafter reverse the precedent she has so recently established. It has been solely dictated by a desire to give to the principle of her Majesty's Government the solemn sanction of both governments, and thus by their combined influence to recommend the adoption of them to the other nations of the civilized world."

No response from France or England accompanies the President's message.

Mr. Hunter replied to the allusions of Mr. Sumner to the State of Virginia, and commented on the resolutions of the Massachusetts Legislature concerning the late assault. He knew of no previous instance in which the Legislature of any State had stepped forward to prejudge a case of this kind, and he thought it could result only in increasing the exasperation of that unfortunate sectional feeling which is now threatening the peace of the whole country, and endangering the perpetuity of of its institutions. He also essayed to prove that the attack of Mr. Brooks upon Mr. Sumner was not a breach of privilege, but merely a matter for the exclusive jurisdiction of the Courts of Law.

Mr. Seward, in reply to Mr. Hunter's argument relative to the Brooks assault, said the remarks of the Senator had filled him with profound surprise and deep regret.

Mr. Butler said Mr. Sumner was the first man who had ever abused his privilege as a member of the Senate to lay his profane hands upon the Revolutionary history of the original thirteen States.

June 25.—Mr. Wilson presented a petition from the officers of the Massachusetts Emigrant Aid Society, setting forth the objects of that body, and stating that they have been misrepresented by the Majority Report of the Committee on Territories. It was referred to the Committee on Claims. Mr. Foster spoke against the Nebraska Kansas Bill, and in favor of excluding Slavery from all the Territories; after which, on motion of Mr. Weller, the Kansas Bill, with all the amendments proposed, was recommitted to the Committee on Territories.

June 26.—The resolution to adjourn on the 28th of July was taken up. Mr. Seward opposed it, as no day could reasonably be agreed upon until the Kansas business was disposed of. No vote was taken on the proposition. The Judiciary Committee was directed to report a bill, if any be necessary, regulating the succession to the Executive Chair in case of the death of President and Vice-President. The bill for a Military Road from Missouri to California, via Salt Lake and Carson's Valley was adopted.

HOUSE.

June 23.—The bill to authorize the President to cause the southern boundery line of Kansas to be surveyed and marked was passed. Mr. Wakeman gave notice of intention to introduce a bill amendatory of the act of 1818, prohibiting the introduction or importation of slaves.

June 24.—The bill establishing two additional Land Districts in Minnesota was passed. Mr. Whitney introduced a bill to preserve peace and protect public property in Kansas. Referred to the Committee on Territories. The consideration of the bill authorizing the people of Oregon to form a Constitution and State Government was then resumed. The Oregon bill was debated and laid aside, and the bill explanatory of the act of 1854, establishing additional Land Districts in Minnesota was passed.

June 25.—Territorial business occupied the attention of the House, and the session was principally spent in a debate on the bill for the admission of Kansas into the Union, with the Topeka Constitution.

June 26.—The bill to admit Kansas as a State under the Topeka (Free State) Constitution was taken up. A debate ensued upon Mr. Dunn's motion to refer the bill to the Commmittee of the Whole, which motion Mr. D. proposed to withdraw, so as to leave the bill before the House, with a limitation to five minute speeches. A debate ensued, which was closed by Mr. Grow, who gave notice that he will on Saturday, move the previous question on the bill. A bill was reported to punish and prevent Polygamy in the Territories, providing a penalty of $500 and two to five years imprisonment. It was referred to the Commit tee of the Whole.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, June 12, 1856.

Queen's Visit to Ireland—Mosquito—Central American Question—The King of Oude—British Blue-Books—Yankee Doodle.

It is rumored—I know not on what authority—that Queen Victoria intends coming to Ireland this summer, ostensibly for the purpose of viewing the encampment on the Curragh, but in reality, as we all know, to improve her mind. At the same time, it is quite certain that the King of Oude is en route to England, with the real and avowed object of looking after his kingdom. Fancy this poor king looking down the lion's throat, and beseeching the beast to disgorge his prey. Hapless king of Oude! He will receive a right royal welcome. Princes of the blood will wait upon him; the virtuous aristocracy will fete him; the enlightened populace will cheer him; he will be provided with an interpreter, and having been led about for a month or so—a captive lion in gilded trappings—he will be sent back to his native East, satisfied, no doubt, that the robbery and destruction of his kingdom were necessary for the advancement of civilization and morality.

It is beautiful to contemplate the zeal, impartiality, and devotion with which England prosecutes this work of morality and civilization. In their interest, she one day pulls down a king in the East, and the next, sets up a king in the West. One day we hear of the kingdom of Oude being abolished, and the next, of the "kingdom of Mosquito" being established.

Apropos of Mosquito, Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, brother of Sir Henry, the diplomatist, in a speech recently delivered in the House of Commons, spoke with all gravity of the "kingdom of Mosquito!" Lord Palmerston, with equal gravity, repeated the phrase, "kingdom of Mosquito!" Now both these rogues know well that the said "kingdom" is a fiction. The following happy description, however, of the mode of manufacturing a "Mosquito king," which I find in a number of the London Times of January last, may not be without interest at present:

"It is, no doubt, a very glorious thing to carry off his Mosquito majesty to Jamaica, and then, after he has recovered from the effects of his three or four days' devotion to the celebrated rum of that island, to stuff his sable limbs into a general's uniform, to crown him with a cocked hat, to anoint him with palm oil out of a calabash, to put a sugarcane as a sceptre into his hand, and to send him back to his native subjects with all the solemnities that can wait on protected royalty; but surely even this gratification, and that of occupying the island of Ruatan, may be bought too dear."

The article, from which the above is taken, contains much useful information on the subject of Central America in general. For instance, the Times thus candidly explains the nature of the British possession at Belize:

"Great Britain is possessed of a settlement at Belize, on the coast of Central America, the right to occupy which for certain purposes was conceded to her by Spain in the treaty of 1783, reserving, however, to the crown of Spain full and undiminished sovereignty over the district."

Again the Times says:

"The treaties of Great Britain, during the last century, with Spain, left her at Belize a settlement, established for the purpose of cutting logwood, and evidently restricted within those limits which the object for which it was granted rendered necessary."

These admissions I deem of value, and worthy of being placed on record, as conclusive evidence that England's right to the only portion of Central America to which she can be said to possess any right at all, is limited to a right merely of occupancy, and that, too, for a specific purpose; and, as the Times well expresses it, "within those limits which the object for which it was granted rendered necessary." Notwithstanding these admissions of the Times, it is now gravely insisted by British statesmen, that Ruatan—that "fine island," as the Times says, "placed in a commanding situation in the Bay of Honduras"—rightfully belongs to England, as being a "dependency of Belize." That is, Ruatan must be regarded as a dependency of a dependency; for Belize itself is but a dependency, or, more properly speaking, a portion of Honduras. This, too, mark me, notwithstanding the Times tells us that the settlement at Belize was "restricted within those limits which the object for which it was granted rendered necessary."

I will now quote one or two sentences from this article respecting the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, and you will perceive even the Times admits that England has violated that treaty. After quoting the first article of the Treaty, the Times goes on to say:

"Notwithstanding this treaty, the British Government still retain possession of Ruatan, still occupy Belize, and still retain the protectorate over the Mosquito Indians. It is not disputed that all these places are within Central America. The Government of the United States waive any claim to the evacuation of Belize, but insist upon our abandoning the protection of the Mosquito Indians and the possession of Ruatan island."

The "Thunderer" then proceeds to administer this gentle rebuke to Sir H. Bulwer:

"The American Minister contends that the words of the treaty are clearly large enough to include Ruatan and the Mosquito protectorate and that the intention of the treaty is to be gathered from its own language, and not from any collateral writings or circumstances. We do not intend to offer any opinion on the subject, but we may remark that it was a most extraordinary omission of the English Plenipotentiary, while using words so wide and comprehensive, not to have saved, by an express proviso, the existing interests of Great Britain, if such had been his intention, and it is not wonderful that the Americans, when renouncing all right of interference in Central America, should have expected a similar concession from Great Britain."

The article concludes with the following sensible suggestion:

"Let us take our stand on the literal construction of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, which accomplishes for us all that we can reasonably desire in Central America. Let us frankly give up our questionable right to the Mosquito protectorate and the island of Ruatan, and, by way of delivering ourselves of the whole embarrassment at once and for ever, throw the worthless settlement of Belize into the bargain."

So much for the Times. The article from which I have so largely quoted, appeared in that paper of January last, and when yet the prospect of peace with Russia was but very dim. The tone of the English press has since undergone a considerable change. It is a notable circumstance in connection with this tedious controversy, that the English Government and press have shifted their grounds of argument from time to time, according as it suited their convenience. Thus, we had at first the "point of honor" objection. That is, the English explained and justified their violation of the treaty by saying, that they would cheerfully give up the Mosquito and Ruatan, but that really a "point of r" forbade such a proceeding! Driven from the "point of honor," they took refuge in the "prospective" interpretation of the treaty; that is, they solemnly endeavored to maintain that the treaty confirmed their past usurpations, and simply bound both parties to future good conduct. Forced to abandon the "prospective," and grown bolder by the impunity with which they have been met, they now seek to maintain that the treaty admits their protectorate and establishes their usurpation.

It is true the treaty recognizes a protectorate in actual existence at the time the treaty was framed—which is a fact—but the object being to end that protectorate, or reduce it to a mere nullity, the first article provides that henceforth "neither party shall occupy, fortify, colonize, or assume, or exercise dominion over the Mosquito coast, or any part of Central America." If, therefore, it be admitted that England has within the last six years occupied, or fortified, or exercised dominion over the Mosquito coast, or any part of Central America, excepting Belize, she must be adjudged guilty of a violation of the letter and spirit of the treaty. It is so admitted even by the English themselves, and therefore England and America now stand before the world, the one as the upholder of public law, the other as its contemner; the one as the supporter, the other as the violator of treaty stipulations.

I trust America will continue to maintain this lofty position, and that no consideration will induce her to cast away the moral power with which the certainty of her being in the right, and the enemy in the wrong, now proudly invests her.

It was with some surprise that I learned there was a party in the States favorable to the total abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. I cannot conceive a more suicidal policy. In the first place, the treaty is already abrogated, so far as one party is concerned; but England's breach of faith should only make America cling the more closely to the instrument to which she has attached her name. Moreover, the abrogation now on the part of America would be regarded as an act of cowardice. People would say, and with great show of reason,—"You had not courage to maintain your own treaty; you allowed England to violate it, and now you declare it at an end."

Only on one condition could America with honor abrogate the treaty, and that is, that she would at once dispatch a sufficient naval and military force to Central America, and dispossess England of all her usurped possessions in that part of the world. On no other condition could she attempt to end it. No—let the treaty stand, and let America stand up as its upholder—then, when the issue comes to be decided, the moral force of all the world must be with America, and against that force, reflected from the arms and banners of the Republic, the battalioned hosts of Hell and England will contend in vain.

It is all important that this matter should be placed in its true light before the world. There is no lie however atrocious, no sophistry however mean, no misrepresentation however gross, to which the English Government and press will not have recourse to make the worse appear the better reason, and to place America in a false position.

The same falsehood and deceit which marked their policy on the Central American question, characterise their conduct with regard to the Enlisting business. As I write, Crampton's outrageous lie about Ruatan stares me in the face from the columns of the British Blue Book. But why do I say Crampton's lie? It is the lie of the British Government—prompted for the purposes of this British Blue Book—and British Blue Books are the basis of British history.

To expose these lies; to unravel these sophistries; to crush these misrepresentations; to make the truth appear plain, clear, and intelligible—such, I am sure, you will regard as a sacred duty, as it is the sacred duty of every American journalist.

But what of Crampton? Dismissed, or not dismissed? The next mail, I trust, will confirm the rumor, that he has been sent about his business, and prove to Europe that American Republicanism is too proud, too honorable, to tolerate at its Capitol the presence of the dishonorable representative of a dishonorable Government.

"A queer Irish letter this," I hear you exclaim, "from my Dublin correspondent!" But cannot you understand how all eyes in Ireland are now turned westward; how even the delicious strains of Jullien's Band, with its Zouaves' Trumpeters, fail to divert the attention of our people, and prevent them bending forward to catch from across the Atlantic wave the first notes of Yankee Doodle.

And shall not the cause of America be the cause of Ireland, too? It is, at all events, and shall be the cause of KILMAINHAM.

Irish News.

A fatal accident occurred in the river Suir, at Etonville, near Clonmel. A number of the West York Rifles were engaged in playing cricket in the large drill field, and the day being excessively warm, about twenty of them went to bathe in the river. They had been but a few minutes in the water when one of the men, named Thomas Allsworth, got beyond his depth and sank to rise no more. Although there were nearly forty of his companions on the bank, it is said that scarcely an effort was made to save the drowning man. The body was interred with military honors in St. Mary's churchyard, on Tuesday.

The proprietors of the large drapery establishments in Clonmel have liberally responded to the request of their assistants. Their houses will be closed in summer at 7 o'clock, and at 6 in the winter evenings.

A deserter named Pollard, known as "Joey the tailor," was rescued from the police on the 25th of May, near Ballingarry, county Tipperary. A Clonmel paper says that "Joey" joined in the "insurrection" of 1848.

The Cork branch of the Medical Benevolent Fund Society of Ireland has just held its annual meeting. This valuable society, founded in 1842 by Dr. Kingsley, of Roscrea, has given many instances of its great worth; its object being to assist medical men when under the pressure of disease or other calamities. It also administers relief to the widow or family of a professional man, who may have been deprived of the support of a husband or parent. The meeting in question was preliminary to the metropolitan one, which was to have been held on the 2nd of June at St. Patrick Dunn's Hospital, Dublin.

The Limerick Reporter says, the Right Rev. Dr. Ryan, the Bishop of Limerick, proceeded a few Sundays since to the ancient parish of Manister, within a short distance of Croom, for the purpose of blessing the church and receiving the offerings of clergy and people towards the Cathedral of St. John's. Thousands visited the ruins, and feasted their eyes on the remaining memorials of those stirring times in which the Irish fought for the possession of their faith. The appearance of the Right Rev. Dr. Ryan among them afforded the greatest possible satisfaction His lordship presided at High Mass. After which the venerable bishop, standing on the altar, addressed the congregation. His lordship's appeal was most successful; a sum of £82 having been contributed.

Lieut. Benjamin Hill, of the Revenue Police, lately stationed at Pontoon bridge, has been transferred, at his own request, to the town of Sligo. Lieut. Hill is a very active, energetic, and most efficient officer as well as a first-rate diciplinarian. Sligo is a most important station, and requires a gentleman such as Mr. Hill to preside over it.

The suberb bell, cast especially for the Great Paris Exhibition of 1855, by Hodges, of Abbey street, Dublin, and to which a certificate of honor was awarded by the Commissioners, has been brought to Tullamore, having been purchased by a parishioner for the Roman Catholic church of that town, as a present to the Rev. Dr. O'Rafferty.

The progress made by the students in the Clonmel School of Art, under their excellent Master, Mr. James Healy is most favorable. The committee of the Mechanic's Institute have received official intimation that the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade have, on an examination of the drawing of Messrs. Thomas M'Cann, Clarke, and Edward O'H. Canavan, been pleased to express their approval of the same, and to appoint those young gentlemen Pupil Teachers in the Clonmel School. Their lordships have also conferred a Prize Studentship on Mr. Robert Hewett, and the distinctions thus obtained redound much to the excellence of the system adopted by Mr. Healy, while they exhibit most favorably the admirable results of the establishment of the School of Art, in connection with the Clonmel Mechanics' Institute.

"We are delighted," says the Limerick Reporter, "to state that the building of St. John's Cathedral progresses most admirably. The blocks of limestone, cut into suitable forms for the different requirements of the edifice, could not be surpassed in massiveness, size and strength, in any part of the world."

At the last meeting of the Cashel Union, R. U. Bayly, Esq., presided, and seventeen other guardians were in attendance. There were 953 paupers in the house, being a decrease of 358 from the same period last year. The weekly expenses of provisions was £91 10s. 11d. and the average cost of each pauper, 9s. 1 3-4d. The uncollected rates amount to £690, and the guardians have to their credit £1,382.

The contractors of the Limerick and Castle Connell Railway have already commenced operations on that line. The works progress favorably.

The directors of All-Hollows College acknowledge a sum of £8 6s. 8d, forwarded to them by the Rev. P. Morrin, P.P., of Bagnalstown, county Carlow. This sum was accompanied by two others of an equal amount, and which, being intended for the "Association for the Propagation of the Faith" and for the "Catholic Institution for the Deaf and Dumb," have accordingly been forwarded to secretaries, the Rev. Dr. Flannery and the Rev. Canon Grimley.

The quantity and size of the trout caught at Killaloe during the last month, and now catching there, exceed any for several years past. Mr. Brassier took, one day last week, 28 trout, weighing 70lbs.; another gentleman took 30, weighing over 80 lbs., several of them 4 to 7lbs. each.

The Irish benchers have advertised in all the English and Scotch papers for a librarian. It is confidently asserted that a gentleman who has the good fortune not to have the Irish taint in his veins, or the Irish accent on his tongue, is almost certain to be appointed.

The first stone of the Church of S. S. Mary and Michael, Rathdrew, county Wicklow, has been solemnly laid by the Rev. Richard Galvan, P.P. A procession, formed of the lay gentlemen of the Committee, the architect, the children of Rathdrum schools, and the clergy, advanced to the site of the high altar, where the ceremonies commenced. The stone was laid in its place by James Comerford, Esq. The church will be in the early Gothic style. Arrangements have been made for the rapid progress of the building this season.

The entire stock, farming implements, &c., belonging to the late John C. Garvey, Esq., of Murrisk Abbey, have been sold. The produce of the sale exceeded £7,000.

Richard Atkinson, Esq., of Collegegreen and Highfield House—one of the Town Councillors for the South City Ward, Dublin, will probably be put in nomination to fill the civic chair of that city during the ensuing year.

Miss Kennedy, late of Broad street, Waterford, has been received into the Convent of Mercy, Cappoquin.

Orangeism, we are informed by a correspondent of the Dublin Telegraph, has assumed a dangerous aspect. Low ruffians parade the roads after nightfall to do the bidding of others higher up, who pay them to waylay and beat Catholics to the point of death. The catholics of Dungannon are determined not to appeal again for redress to the magistrates, so that if Government do not look to it, retaliations the most bloody and desperate are likely to ensue.

The 1st August is the day stated for the opening of the Limerick and Foynes railway to Rathkeale.

Emigration to the United States from Clare and Kerry of a comfortable class of people has been going on for some time past to a large extent. Several hundred emigrants, with their beds, bedding and a large quantity of baggage, took their departure from Limerick the other day.

The May devotions were concluded in the Black Abbey of Kilkenny, by Vespers and procession of the Blessed Sacrament. Forty young girls, including the children of some of our most respectable citizens, attired in white, with veils and white wreaths, and each carrying a beautiful bouquet, took part in the procession. "We have seldom," says the Kilkenny Journal, "witnessed a more edifying sight than that presented by those interesting and innocent children, passing through the ruins of our once magnificent abbey."

Lord Seaton after investigating the escapade at the Dublin United Service Club, which resulted in the expulsion of the seven officers of the 16th Lancers, expressed himself desirous to become the mediator between the committee and the delinquents. The United Service Gazette says it has no doubt but this arrangement will be acceded to.

By a return of the House of Lords, of the various amounts received from the Colonies and dependencies of the British Crown towards the Patriotic Fund, it appears that Antigua has contributed £128 5s.6d.; Australia, £96,590 2s. 7d.; Bahamas, £449 11s. 6d.; Barbadoes, £496 14s. 2d.; Bermuda, £405 2s. 2d.; Canada, £26,347 0s. 6d.; Cape of Good Hope, £6,773 19s. 7d.; Ceylon, £4,451 11s. 7d.; Gibraltar, £1,508 13s. 1d.; Grenada, £157 13s.; British Guiana, £4541 8s. 2d.; Honduras, £573 13s. 6d.; Hong Kong, £2.216 4s. 2d.; India, £79,413 10s. 5d.; Jamaica, £1,391 13s. 3d.; Labuan, £34 19s. 8d.; Malta, £862 4s. 3d.; Mauritius, £981 3s. 8d.; Nevis, £15 16s. 1d.; New Brunswick, £7,107 1s. 11d.; Newfoundland, £1,893 17s. 3d.; New Zealand, £6,952 3s. 7d. Nova Scotia, £5,522 14s. 8d.; Prince Edward's Island, £2.984 8s.; Sierra Leone, £164 3s.; St. Helena, £x01 16s. 3d.; St. Lucia, £71 9s. 4d.; St. Vincent, £137 4s. 8d.; Singapore, £407 17s. 4d.; Trinidad, £1,178 2s.9d.; Tortola, £3; Vancouvre's Island, £60 1s. 6d.

John Read, a Victualler, cut his throat with a razor in the town of Bandon, on Wednesday morning while laboring under delirium tremens, induced by excessive drinking.

It is stated that Mr. Russell, the special war correspondent of the Times has received instructions to proceed to Canada.

At the Limerick Petty Sessions a vote of thanks was passed unanimously to the Devon Regiment of Militia, for the good conduct of the corps whilst in Limerick.

James Fitzgerald Windle, of Tarbert, son of Thomas Windle, Esq., of Rockview Terrace, Cork, has been sworn an Attorney of the Courts of Queen's Bench. Common Pleas and Exchequer, and a solicitor of the High Court of Chancery in Ireland.

Sister Gonzugue Barry, daughter of the late John Barry, Esq., Kanturk, has entered the Holy Community of Loretto Abbey, Gorey.

A few days since a young woman arrived in town from America, on her way to rejoin her family at Bundoran. Unfortunately, while going from the steamer to the train she lost ten sovereigns, all the money she possessed. The case having been reported to Mr. Dawson, Manager of the Londonderry and Enniskillen Railway, he generously granted her a free passage to her destination.

On the 26th of May last, there were not in either of the gaols of Drogheda, Dundalk, Monaghan or Antrim, a single prisoner for trial at the ensuing assizes, while in one of the two remaining towns on that circuit—viz., Armagh and Downpatrick—there was but one solitary prisoner, and in the other towns but five.

The Rev. mother who founded the convent at Derby, and who with fifteen other nuns attended the sick and wounded at Scutari and the Crimea during the whole of the war, arrived in this town, and will remain some time. Miss Nightingale, in one of her letters, declares that the services of these ladies, accustomed beforehand to wait on fever and cholera, were invaluable to her; insomuch so, that if they had not been with her, the attempt to supply nurses for our army would have been a failure.

On last Monday a court martial was held at the Waterford barracks on a private of the Waterford Artillery, who was charged with creating a row in the streets of Dungarvan and disciplining his corporal with the barrack-room poker.

The extensive estates of William Henry Gregory, situate in the county of Galway, are to be sold in the Incumbered Estates Court in January next. The property is one of the best circumstanced in Ireland. The rental is over £6,000 a year. The present inheritor is grandson of the Right Hen. W. Gregory, for many years Under-Secretary for Ireland, and the intimate friend of the late Sir. R. Peel.

The Right Rev. Dr. Walshe, Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin, proceeded to Bagnalstown at an early hour on Sunday morning, for the purpose of blessing the foundation stone for the proposed addition to the church of that town.

After the 15th and 7th Hussars have completed their turn of duty at Aldershot, they will relieve the 3d and 4th Light Dragoons at their respective stations, and those regiments will proceed to Dublin and relieve the 2nd and 3d Dragoon Guards, as these regiments are under orders for England in the autumn.

Dr. Dempster, of Nenagh, the Deputy-Inspector General of Hospitals, has arrived in England from Jamaica.

Gen. Sir William Williams, of Kars, has arrived in Paris with three aides-de-camps.

Dr. Cahill has been most successful in his lectures in Cork, before the Young Men's Society in that city.

We understand from Dr. J. D. Goggin, that Mr. Granby, of the Theatre Royal, Dublin, was to have opened on the 16th of June, the Theatre Royal, Limerick, with a first rate company, including Mr. George Vandenhoff.

John Arnott, Esq., Fir Hill, Monkstown, has purchased of the Messrs. Leahy & Sons, Duncan street, Cork, their magnificent side table, which was shown at the Cork Exhibition.

Richard Kane, jr., eldest son of R. D. Kane, Esq., of Talbot street, Dublin, and grandson of Capt. Kane, of Whitehall, went up for examination at Sandhurst, on the 3d of June, and passed. In a few days he expects to obtain his commission in the army, by purchase. Mr. Kane was educated in the Jesuits College, at Clongowes, and read a short preparatory course with Mr. Dunbar, at the Military Academy, Talbot street, Dublin.

Mr. Greer, the Irish barrister, who took an active part in Mr. Sherman Crawford's agitation, some years since, having recently purchased in the Encumbered Estates Court a property situated a few miles from Londonderry, instead of evicting the occupying tenants, has given them leases in perpetuity of their respective holdings, and at low rents. An example to be followed.

The Annual meeting of the Cork Medical Association has been held. The following officers, after a ballot, were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Finn; Vice President, Dr. R. Corbett; Treasurer, Dr. S. H. Hobert; Hon. Secretary, Dr. Armstrong; Council, Doctors O'Connor, Cummins, and Cremen.

Thomas John Bourke O'Flahertie, Esq., eldest son of Capt. O'Flahertie, of the Kilkenny Fusiliers, and nephew of the late Sir Wheeler Cuffe, Bart., of Lyrath, in the county Kilkenny, has been married to Fanny Robbins, daughter of the late Daniel Falkiner, Esq., of Wellington, in the county of Tipperary.

On the night of the 19th of April, the Protestant church of Castletown, in the Queen's county, was broken into and robbed of its plate, consisting of a valuable silver communion service. On the 10th of May, Sub-Constables Murphy and Barry, of the Carlow station, arrested a noted character named John Hill, originally a native of Dublin, and a female named Jane M'Evoy, from Old Leighlin. The plate, which had been traced to the possession of the prisoners, being identified by the rector, Mr. Emmerson, the prisoners were committed to Maryborough jail to stand their trial at the Graigue quarter sessions.

Mr. William H. Magrath, son-in-law of Cornelius O'Brien, Esq., M. P., has been appointed Crown Solicitor for the counties of Tyrone and Fermanagh, vice late Sir Edward Tierney, Bart.

Dr. Geary, Medical Poor Law Inspector, has given £1 as his contribution towards the new Franciscan church, Ennis.

The Lord Chancellor, on the recommendation of Lord Bandon, has appointed George Lucas, Esq., of Annevilla, to the commission of the peace for the county of Cork.

The number of paupers in Clonmel Union Workhouse is 984.

Emigration from the county Wexford is going on briskly. The Woodstock, Captain Wright, with 342 passengers has left New Ross for Quebec.

A cow in the possession of Mr. John Ward, of Enniscorthy, gives from 36 to 38 imperial quarts of milk daily. She has to be milked three times a day.

Mr. James H. Hogan, of Newport, Tipperary, is candidate for the situation of master of the Nenagh Union.

Chartres Brew, Esq., late Sub-Inspector of Constabulary, but for some time Assistant Commissary General in the Crimea, has been permanently attached to the army, and is at present Deputy Commissary General at Malta, with a salary of £1,000 a year.

Sir Alexander and Lady Hood are staying at the Killaloe Hotel, and fishing on the lake. Her ladyship expressed her unqualified delight at the scenery of Killaloe.

Great rejoicings have been held at Larchfield House, the residence of Wm. Mussenden, Esq., in honor of Lieut. Mussenden, of the 8th Hussars, on his return from the Crimea. Upwards of 120 of the tenantry, together with a number of gentlemen, sat down to an excellent dinner, in a spacious apartment, tastefully fitted up for the occasion.

Mr. Bolton, High Sheriff of Wexford, has been for some time past shipping large quantities of fat cattle for sale in the Liverpool market.

The old mode of punishing dishonest bakers in Dublin was more humane than that of the ancient Egyptians, who baked such persons in their own ovens. They were punished by being drawn upon hurdles, at the horses' tails, along the streets of the city.

On the 2nd of last month, there was a meeting at Lord Talbot de Malahide's apartments in the Hotel du Louvre, of the members of the several deputations from the Royal Agricultural Societies of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and from the Royal Dublin Society. A joint address was agreed to for presentation to the Emperor on the part of those societies.

Mr. John Brown, farmer, was crushed to death on the Waterford and Limerick railway, whilst turning his cows across the line between Carrick and Fildown. The poor man being deaf did not hear the whistle, and the train passed over his body, almost separating his head and arms from the trunk.

Ejectments at the suit of Lord Dunraven have been served on J. O'Brien, Esq., and Anna Marie Elizabeth O'Brien, his wife, of Dublin, and several others, of the plot of ground on George's Quay, Limerick, on which Barrington's Hospital stands. The ejectment is for non-payment of five and a-half years' rent, amounting to £173 5s. Mr. J. Synan is the solicitor who has served the notices of ejectment.

The payment by Mr. Vincent Scully, M. P., of the first call of £40 a share on his shares in the Tipperary Bank, will amount to the sum of £28,000.

The potatoe crop is particularly promising through Clare.

On the conduct of the Allies in relation to Circassia, the Waterford News cannot but think there was something very culpable in the neglect of the Representatives at the Congress, to leave Circassia so much at the mercy of Russia. The campaign against the brave Circassians in which the Russians are now engaged, we hold to be most aggressive and unjust. How the peace of Europe can be said to be re-established by the late Peace, while Russia is thus allowed to aggrandize herself so near the scene of the late campaign, we know not.

If we do not mistake. Circassia wished effectually to aid the Allies in their late struggle, which fact must certainly add much to the desire of the Russians to wreak punishment on them; and to that destruction they are now devoted, so far as the Allies are concerned."

Spirit of the Irish Press.

The Tuam Herald speaks of Irish emigration very fully and ably—

"Though the accounts from America are less encouraging than those of former years, they are sufficiently tempting to stimulate the young and the active, before whom no prospect of comfort in old age opens at home. The rage for emigration, for emigration's sake, which prevailed during the last ten years, may be said to be over, and yet we witness the passage of occasional batches of well-dressed young men and girls through this town on their way to foreign countries. The rage for grazing and the consolidation of farms which has seized upon the great body of the landlords of Ireland, makes it a matter of impossibility to procure land for tillage purposes. Whilst meat and wool bear the high prices which have prevailed during the last few years, and which, notwithstanding the cessation of the war, still continue to prevail, the same reluctance to let land for tillage will exist. Clearances occasionally, and upon a considerably large scale, occur. Though not of such frequent occurrence as in former years, they are sufficiently so to startle and render uneasy the holders of small farms. The tenant has not a shred of protection, either against eviction or for his property in and on the soil. Landlords have a mortal antipathy to giving leases on any terms. The tenantry must be held by them by the throat in an unrelenting grasp. At this moment, we know not a single landlord willing to make leases. The tenant must hold his homestead and his conscience, political, and in many cases religious, at the mercy of the owner of the soil. Here lies the root of the emigration which is now going on. We are compelled to chronicle the fact with regret."

The British Army in Ireland is distinguishing itself brilliantly, according to the Kilkenny Journal—

"In Tipperary they buffet and insult a group of inoffensive peasantry, till human forbearance is exhausted and the infuriated people turn and trample them under their feet. In Limerick they mimic the ceremonies of the Catholic church, and disturb the celebration of the Festival of Corpus Christi. In Dungarvan, their conduct has been somewhat similar. In Dublin, a company of "officers and gentlemen," dining at the Club-House in Stephen's Green, are guilty of proceedings so discreditable, that they are ignominiously excluded from the club."

The Waterford Chronicle has the following article upon the Italian question:—

"We cannot help recurring to the state of Italy. We fancy that classic ground will shortly be the theatre of much diplomacy—if it goes no farther—between the nations of Europe. Among the many reforms contemplated by Sardinia, is an interference with the government of the Pope, and that without any communication whatever with his Holiness. Nolens volens it must be accepted by the Holy Father; and Sardinia, the confiscator of the property of the Nuns and Monks, force her reforms on the Roman States.

Something, undoubtedly lies beneath the surface of this apparently reformatory spirit; and we much fear, where we find the Papal States on the tapis, that Sardinia has sold herself to the enemy."

The subjoined facts, from the Wexford Independent, will be read with interest.

"The emigration from the County Wexford, though very considerable, never bore the character it did in other counties. A steady emigration goes on all the year round, and it is a pleasing duty we have to perform when we state, that our fellow-countrymen who have sought homes in another land have been generally successful. The Woodstock, Capt. Wright, 342 passengers, very many of them Wexfordians, left the quays of New-Ross on Thursday last for Quebec, being towed down the river by the Duncannon steamer. An immense concourse of relatives and friends were on the quay to bid a warm farewell to the outward bound, most of whom were of a respectable class, going out to join families who formerly emigrated from New-Ross, and settled in Canada and the United States.

The Woodstock is the property of the Messrs. Graves & Sons. The ship under notice is one of a superior class, and commanded by a gentleman of the highest nautical skill and kindness of heart. She is the largest that has yet floated on the waters of the Barrow, and taking her name from the beauteous seat of the Tighe family in the adjoining County of Kilkenny, she bears a beautiful figure-head of Phyche in compliment to the lovely and accomplished authoress of that world renowned poem."

The same paper vindicates place-begging in this spirited and and practical style:—

"Notwithstanding the knavery and hypocrisy of those who publicly shout up the "Independent Opposition," a few good and upright men are resolved, so far as they can accomplish it, to afford the youth of Ireland their fair share of the Government patronage. Foremost in the good work is John Hyacinth Talbot. Some time back, a memorial was respectably signed in this town, praying the Lords of the Treasury to appoint Mr. John Gladwin to a situation in the Inland Revenue; but such a document would have remained mere waste paper to the end of the chapter, only that old faithful M. P. for Ross backed it up by a strong recommendation, and had the pleasure of receiving from Mr. Hayter a prompt and cordial reply, complying with the prayer of the memorial. We should state that Sir Thomas Esmonde signed the document and suggested to Mr. Talbot the propriety of his sending it forward. We mention these simple facts to show that such men are not afraid or ashamed to exercise their just influence with Government in behalf of well-deserving fellow-citizens, without distinction of creed—for young Mr. Gladwin is a Protestant—and are unlike those mean and deceitful parties who openly oppose the Government in order to throw dust in the eyes of the populace, whilst they secretly beg the crumbs that fall from the Treasury tables, for their friends."

The Dundalk Democrat, seldom shrinks from speaking the naked truth concerning the ridiculous shams of the day. Here is some common sense about the Jubilee:—

"We never rejoice with England. When she claps her hands, cocks her cap, or flings it into the air, we insert our hand in our coat pockets, and take care to keep our hat firmly on our democratic head. We entertain the feeling that England never accomplishes anything at which honest men should feel joyous and merry; and despising cant, humbug and hypocrisy, we stand far off when her minions or her slaves proclaim a jubilee.

Did she achieve some great victory for human freedom—did she win some noble triumph for mankind, we might be disposed to relax our resolve a little, and become joyous and merry; but this on her part we never expect to witness. She sits like a nightmare on the breasts of millions of men. Her movements in war are selfish and domineering—her approaches to peace are characteristic of the insolence of the bully.

We have no sympathy for her misfortunes, and no joy for her success. We know her history, and how she has oppressed mankind. We know the manner in which she treated America in the past, and her plunder and tyranny in the east and elsewhere in the present. And we know that but for her proximity to France, the insolence of her aristocracy would be intolerable, and her rule so terrible that it could not be borne."

The new Arms Bill for Ireland finds a supporter in the editor of the Leinster Express:—

"It is the intention of Government to introduce a Bill somewhat modified in its provisions, to prevent the unrestricted possession of arms by the Irish peasantry. It is well that the Executive should retain some check upon the diffusion of weapons which can be of little use to their owners, but which may afford facility in the perpetration of crime. Under all these circumstances, the proposed Bill is not likely to meet with serious opposition; although from the absence of "crime and outrage," with which the measure is commonly identified, the enactment need not be of a very stringent character."

The Nation says:—"It is very likely that there will be War with America. The English journals affect to imagine that all these warlike demonstrations of Mr. Pierce are merely electioneering bunkum. In our opinion, more or less conversant as we happen to be with the American opinion that never penetrates English society, and would not be believed if it did, the President is the perfect mouthpiece of American honor in this matter; and if war be declared to-morrow, he will be backed by the nation to a man. By persuading herself that the affair is not serious, it seems to us that England is drifting into hostilities just as she did with Russia, but at an immensely more rapid rate. We may be at war this moment for aught we know. The case is in that state of complication that the mistake of a single British officer on the Central American Coast might plunge both countries into the contest.

America seems not merely willing, but anxious for war. They are a patriot people, God be praised. There never was in the world a more daring or a more stubborn soldier than the American—especially if his blood have the old Celtic azul in it. A campaign between English and American soldiers is certain to have an ill ending for the former—unless the soldier of Simpson and Raglan be an improvement on those of Gage and Ross. What part an Irish soldiery would play in such a war, it is not expedient to say—but it is time to consider—for war we believe there will be."

The Kilkenny Journal speaking about the chances of a war between England and America, exclaims:—

"Here, then, is a war in which the Irish at home will feel some genuine interest and sympathy, and in which the Irish abroad will probably have an opportunity of making another Fontenoy."

A Woman Disguised in Man's Clothes.

We notice, says the Pittsburg Dispatch, in the papers, mention made of a young woman having been recently detected in the garb of a man, among the workmen employed in a whip factory in Westfield, Mass.; and now that it can do no injury to expose her secret, we shall throw a little light upon her previous history—at least during her three years' residence in this vicinity.

The young woman first made her appearance in the west in 1851, when she sought and obtained employment in the whip factory of Mr. Underwood, then engaged in the business in our city. After working some three months for him, she complained of ill health, and thought a more active life would suit her better, and engaged as a cabin-boy, running a whole season on our rivers in that capacity, without the slightest suspicion that she was other than a smart but rather delicate lad. In the summer of 1852 she appeared, in her river garb, in the wareroom of a well-known whip manufacturer on Wood street, and asked work as a "finisher" in his shop, which she obtained, filling the situation creditably for two years.

In the summer of 1854 she worked less steadily, devoting several days in the week to buying peaches, which she sold again in the market; this led to dissatisfnction on the part of her employer, and she left the shop, engaging for a few months in the fruit and confectionery business, in a little shop she opened on Penn street, in the Fifth Ward. This was finally closed, and she left the city a year or eighteen months ago, to turn up again in the Westfield whip factory. All we can learn of her history is that she hailed from Rochester, New-York, and during her residence in this city was several times visited by a man, who was represented by her as an uncle. She had with her a little girl some six or eight years old, probably her daughter, but who passed as her deceased brother's orphan child. She boarded on Boyd's Hill, behaved herself commendably, had no vices but cigar-smoking, joined a Methodist church in Alleghany, and never was spoken evil of, except in regard to her intimacy with a young Irish widow, an acquaintance she made after leaving the whip factory, and with whom she finally left our city; but this charge did not affect her much, as she assured her old acquaintances that she had married the widow.

During her residence of nearly three years in Pittsburg, the only one who suspected her was the woman who kept the boarding-house, and who had better opportunities for observation than others—but she said nothing of her suspicions until the girl had left town. Her employer reposed every confidence in her, and during a portion of her stay with him employed her in the out-door business of the establishment. After leaving Pittsburg, her acquaintances heard no more of her for some time, not, indeed, until some accident revealed her sex, at Westfield, Mass., when her employer received a letter of inquiry from a manufacturer in that place; and a brother in the church another, from the Methodist minister at Westfield, inquiring as to her conduct and reputation here, of which they could give no other than a favorable report.

Since the above was written, we learn that the lady was married some twelve years ago in Rochester, where she and her husband opened a small confectionery, and not succeeding very well in business, they abandoned it and engaged as waiters in a hotel. After being in the hotel some time, her husband became jealous of the attentions of another man, and had her arrested and confined in jail about three months. She is Irish, or of Irish parentage; her real name is Connolly, but she passed in this city by the name of Dally. She came to work in June, 1852, and remained until August, 1853.

Answers to Correspondents.

In an editorial column we have given some historic memories, suggested by the "Fourth of July." There are others less prominent on the scroll of history, but which must ever have a deep interest for Irishmen, and in fact for all students of a great cause, pure men, and a heroism only unappreciated because unsuccessful.

In turning from the Fourth of July memories suggested by American History to those which are associated with Ireland, there is a touching declension which at once carries its pangs for the sufferings of the dear old Fatherland, and of throbbing reverence for our adopted country. On the Fourth of July, 1798, the wreck of the Wexford insurgents—after passing from the first vengeance under the patriot Murphy of Boolavogne at Oulart, through the desperate fight at Enniscorthy—the bivouac on the Rock Mountain—the glorious capture and occupation of the "little Republic of Wexford," the brilliant massacre at Tubbermeering and Gorey, the desperate but disastrous nineteen-hours assault on New Ross—through the front-to-front battle of Arklow, where Michael Murphy the Priest, was torn to pieces by a cannon-ball—thro' the innumerable well-fought meetings and skirmishes from the 27th of May to June 21, when they made such a deadly stand on Vinegar Hill, before General Lake and his twenty thousand—this heroic remnant, after escaping from the county Wexford joined with a like remnant of the Wicklow men, are under the command of the brave patriots Edward Fitzgerald and Garret Byrne. This Fourth of July, which is such a day of rejoicing to their countrymen who had shared the struggles and glory of the American War of Independence, is a day of sad retrospect and gloomier prospect for them. They are almost broken up—broken but not defeated—marching for Wicklow Gap, to "fight it to the last." They did fight. Many of them died fighting, for which their spirits ought to be thankful in Paradise; but actually there was an end of them and their Wexford insurrection.

Upon the same Fourth of July there is another scene—closely allied with the revolutionary movement—in Dublin. The brothers, John and Henry Shears, are brought up for trial. On the arrest of the chief members of the Executive Directory of the United Irishmen, John Sheares was appointed to fill one of the vacancies. He was a pure-souled, clear-headed man, of strong capacity, and undeniable pen-craft, as his famous letter to Lord Clare—for which the Press newspaper office was sacked—shows. The brothers were betrayed by a Captain Armstrong, who had, through representations of rebellious fervor, wormed himself into the fool-hardy confidence of John; and who dined the day previous to the arrest with the family of Henry, and caressed the little children of the father for whom he had already bespoke the scaffold. On this Fourth of July, Curran rose to a motion, a plea filed in court showing why the trial should not proceed, as one of the Grand Jurors who found bills against the Shears' was not a Frenchman and not a naturalized citizen. His arguments were of no avail; the brothers suffered the penalty of their patriotism.

Another memory of the day: Commodores Decatur and Bainbridge in the Algerine War (to punish piracies,) after capturing some of the enemy's ships, effected an honorable peace on this day 1815.

We have had a pleasant little letter from a friend of ours in Paris, an Irishman, who, as an officer of the National Guard, greatly distinguished himself in the Revolution of February '48. He calls up many sparkling memoris and gives us several crumbs of good news:

"John Martin and O'Doherty left here about a fortnight ago; not a rebel remains but myself. Eugene O'Rielly's occupation is gone in the East. I hope he may find something to do in some other war. He was a brave fellow and a fine soldier. When I last heard of him, he was a Pacha, an Aga, or something of the kind. Poor Ireland has the sad privilege of having her sons only great abroad. O'Brien was with us here about three months ago. He is the same noble-minded, warm-hearted patriot as ever."

Here is a clarion tone from one of the finest of American poets. The day, and the forcible and rhythmical grandeur of the lines, recommend their publication. We may premise by saying that the Liberty Bell still hangs in the steeple from which it rang the knell of British domination in America.

The Liberty Bell.

BY WILLIAM ROSS WALLACE.

A sound like a sound of thunder rolled,
And the heart of a nation stirred—
For the Bell of Freedom, at midnight tolled,
Through a mighty land was heard.
And the chime still rung
From its iron tongue,
Steadily swaying to and fro;
And to some it came,
Like a breath of flame—
And to some a sound of wo.

Above the dark mountain, above the blue wave,
It was heard by the fettered, and heard by the brave—
It was heard in the cottage, and heard in the hall
And its chime gave a glorious summons to all.
The sabre was sharpened—the time-rusted blade
Of the Bond started out in the pioneer's glade,
Like a herald of wrath: and the host was arrayed!

Along the dark mountain, along the blue wave
Swept the ranks of the Bond—swept the ranks of the Brave;
And a shout as of waters went up to the dome,
When a star-blazing banner unfurled,
Like the wing of some seraph flashed out from his home,
Uttered freedom and hope to the world.

O'er the hill-top and tide its magnificent fold,
With a terrible glitter of azure and gold,
In the storm, in the sunshine, and darkness unrolled.
It blazed in the valley, it blazed on the mast—
It leaped with its eagle abroad on the blast;
And the eyes of whole nations were turned to its light;
And the heart of the multitude soon
Was swayed by its stars, as they shone through the night,
Like an Ocean when swayed by the moon.

Again through the midnight that Bell thunders out,
And banners and torches are hurried about:
A shout as of waters! a long-uttered cry!
How it leaps, how it leaps from the earth to the sky!
From the sky to the earth, from the earth to the sea,
Hear a chorus re-echoed, "THE PEOPLE ARE FREE!"

The old Bell is still seen by the Patriot's eye,
And he blesses it ever, when journeying by;
Long years have passed o'er it, and yet every soul
Will thrill in the night to its wonderful roll—
For it speaks in its belfry, when kissed by the blast,
Like a glory-breathed tone from the mystical Past.
Long years shall roll o'er it, and yet every chime
Shall unceasingly tell of an era sublime,
More splendid, more dear than the rest of all time.
O yes! if the flame on our altars should pale,
Let its voice but be heard, and the Freeman shall start
To rekindle the fire, while he sees on the gale,
All the Stars and the Stripes of the Flag of his heart!

Mr. Dooly, in reply to his friendly note, is informed that Mr. Meagher arrived in New-York the evening of the 28th of May, 1852, from Pernambuco, Brazils, in the brig Acorn, Captain Coombe.

A Tipperary Boy receives our thanks for his suggestions. We are well acquainted with the ballad of Shemus O'Brien, and vastly admire it. It was written by Mr. Lefanu, Editor of the Dublin Warder.

Ballinaslee is impatient about the Galway election. He wants to see the end of it. Carrick-shock implores us to have a chapter or two on the pike exercise. Pierce O'Hara desires us to give him our opinion of wooden cannon as an instrument of guerilla warfare. Our correspondents overwhelm us. They'll have to wait to have their wishes gratified. Time at last sets all things even.

A Buffalonian has asked us a question, which, for any practical purpose, it's now too late to answer. The letter of our correspondent failed to reach us time enough for a reply to be given to it in the last number of the News. We do not see, however, how there could have been any doubt about the matter. If the General of Division had ordered out the military under his command on the occasion of Mr. Fillmore's arrival in New-York, every company Irish or otherwise, was bound to obey the order. Military subordination, in such cases, supersedes all political feeling. There being no such order issued, the military were left to do as they pleased. The Irish companies didn't turn out. A mighty queer thing if they did.

Jeremiah O'Connor writes to us from North Cambridge, Mass. He is anxious to know who the Monk of Kilcea is who inquired about Smith O'Brien. He is, we believe, a respectable grocer, in some town somewhere between Ogdensburg and Milwaukee. That's all we're permitted to divulge. We fear, therefore, we are unable to satisfy Jeremiah O' Connor, of North Cambridge whether the Monk of Kilrea is (as he surmises in his letter, and we quote the words of Jeremiah) one of his "childhood's playmates, who accompanied him through the Gothic arches of that ruined abbey."

Ballinakill, who writes to us from Independence, Mo., mistakes us seriously in supposing our columns are open to such communications as he thinks of writing.

The letter of a Garryowen Boy has greatly pleased us. But he asks us for a little bit of information which wiser men than ourselves are unable to give. For his sake, as well as our own, we regret that the spirit of prophecy has been denied us.

Ball-Doyle. Yes. Lord Cloncurry had a seat on the borders of Kildare and Dublin. Lyons was the name of it. Seven miles from Clongowes, the beautiful hill, at the base of which the house stood, commanded a clear view of Dublin city, the bay of Dublin, Dalkey and Killiney. In front of the house ran the Grand Canal. Between them, however, were the most beautiful grounds, gracefully and richly wooded. Immediately behind the house, and stretching away to, and all round the base of the hill, was a lovely sheet of water, belted with shrubberies and woods, brightly speckled with little islands, the shores adorned, here and there, with summer-houses, boat-houses, rustic ruins, and other fancies of the kind. Lord Cloncurry, as we thought every body knew long ago, was a Repealer.

We will regularly send a copy of the NEWS to any part of Ireland, on receipt of subscription at the rate of 16s. sterling per annum.

Mr. Sullivan, our California agent, desires us to state, that though we send the News to subscribers there, from here, at the rate of $3 per annum, he has to charge $5 to those who receive it through him.

Mr. P. H. McCAWLEY has received our authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "IRISH NEWS," throughout the Canadas.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JULY 5, 1856.

MEMORIES OF THE DAY—THE FOURTH OF JULY.

This date is intimately connected with the fortunes of two men, famous among men, and over whose career the student of history ponders with still-increasing assiduity.

Both were central figures in great revolutions, and from the uses to which they put their position a deep lesson is written in history. The reckless perversity of a cavalier king kindled one of these revolutions; the flabby stupidity of an imbecile monarch incited the other. The former was Charles the First, the latter George the Third. The Revolutionists were Oliver Cromwell and George Washington.

There is no more likeness beeween those heroes than can be instituted between a pious butcher and a calm victor; saving indeed, that each was best suited to his time. If, however, the disinterested nobility of Washington commands our loftiest gaze, we cannot lower our eyes to the rugged brazenness of the sturdy psalm-brawler without regarding him with certain feelings of appreciation. Cromwell's was the philosophy of the iron arm. He was a thorough despot; a man of distinct and self-interested purposes; at once fearless, reckless, energetic and self-willed. He was an impromptu character; pondering little, but acting much. No better evidence of his power, and the distracted weakness of the nation which he held alone for himself could be instanced, than the fact, that after his death monarchy was embraced with a frenzy characteristic of a long-separated love, and that the populace allowed his tough old bones to be disinterred and dangled from a gibbet.

Is there not a deep suggestiveness in these facts, when taken in comparison with the career of Washington, whose very name is invoked to calm the heat and still the turbulence that rages and roars in the wild conflicts that political frenzies inspire.

Upon the Fourth of July, 1653, the famous Barebones Parliament assembled at Whitehall. Having dissolved the "Long Parliament," and beholding the indignation with which the people viewed this audacious act, Cromwell convened one hundred and twenty-eight persons from various parts of England, six from Ireland, and five from Scotland, who meeting on this memorable Fourth of July, voted themselves, with his approval, a Parliament. It was a heterogeneous mass—a few gentlemen and a majority of the lowest grades of society—"fifth-monarchy men, antinomians, independents," possessed with a stubborn and ignorant fanaticism, and who in their new positions forgot the allegiance to Cromwell that he put them there to pay. Their time was mostly taken up with ranting, psalm-singing, and the blatant ebullition of the particular sectarianism which every man was possessed of. One of the most active members was a fanatical leather-seller, named Praise-God Barebones, the toughness of whose wares was only equalled by that of his sermons and the length of his prayers. So much of the latter entered into the business of the house, that the people, in ridicule, named the assembly the Barebones Parliament. Though the length of Cromwell's own prayers were said to have seriously invaded his time and injured his prospects when a farmer, he soon lost patience. He demanded a dissolution, against which many nasal Barebones walloped their tongues with startling clamor, to drown which Cromwell sent Colonel White with a party of soldiers.

"What do you here?" cried the Colonel.

"We are seeking the Lord!"

"Then you may go elsewhere," answered White, "for to my certain knowledge he has not been here these many years"

A Legislative Assembly having thus been made ridiculous in the eyes of the populace, Cromwell had himself installed as Protector with absolute executive power, and thus that gathering of the Fourth of July, at Whitehall, planted the most autocratic 'Republican' the world has yet seen upon the throne of Kings.

The Protector died. The English Republic fled, like a ghost at cock-crow, on the appearance of Charles the Second. The "Regicides," as the accusers and judges of his father were called, were executed, and upon the ruins of the obdurate Puritans, beautiful harlots—the ungodly goddesses of the merrie monarch—fluttered like the standards of a victorious army of occupation, while the inhabitants were made the prey of licentious wit and gay lewdness.

Yet from the period something survived, which it would seem Providence ordained should help the retaliation that came upon England. The lives and writings of such pure republicans as Algernon Sydney, Sir John Elliot, John Hampden and others, survived to iufuse many of their thoughts and desires into the minds of the men who stood sponsors for American Independence.

For more than a twelve-month the Americans had been in open arms against the British. The latter by a series of uncalled for barbarities put reconcilation out of the question. The best offices of the Colonists to wounded soldiers were returned by the unrelenting exercise of fire and sword. A system of desolation was pursued which kindled passions of resentment and revenge, which, says Sanderson, "the blood of many wars shall not expiate, and the revolution of many ages shall not extinguish."

Concord, Lexington, Bunker's Hill, the Burning of Charlestown, swept by like a red panorama. Ethan Allen, like a flash of lightning, sent "in the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress" had broken upon Ticonderoga. Crown-Point had fallen. Arnold, Morgan, Burr, and men not less vigorous had forced their way through the dangers of the Dead River, through the untracked forests of Maine into Canada. Montgomery's blood had fallen in frozen fragments upon Canadian snows. Washington, fortifying Dorchester heights, had driven the British in Boston into such extremities that on St. Patrick's Day, 1776, they were forced to evacuate it. Instigated by the English, the Indians in Virginia and the Carolinas, had plundered, burned and murdered the 'Colonists.' Success to some extent, however, kept alive the patriotic fire. The royalist General, McDonald, was captured after engaging the "rebels" at Morris Creek, in North Carolina. General Lee's activity in Charleston, and Moultries' gallant defence of Sullivan's Island, vivified the South.

These scenes and achievements had passed to occupy and illustrate the "Rebellion in America." In May, Congress had recommended each State to adopt such Government as was deemed best for their liberties. The Provincial Assemblies, with few exceptions, and such as had already abolished monarchism, echoed the Congress; but still discussion, delay, and some irresolution followed.

It was the Fourth of July! and in the Quaker City of Philadelphia, in the old State House, Jefferson's immortal document was still under discussion.

The popular excitement was intense; and thousands thronged to the cradle of American Freedom—as the wise men sought the stable of Bethlehem.

With closeed doors, Congress deliberated; while the people with dreadful anxiety, for they knew the causes which excluded them, awaited the signal which was to announce the fate of the Bill. With eager ears, and eyes leaping from thoughtful doubt to hearty anticipation, the faces of the multitude look up to the steeple of the State-House, for there hangs a bell, brought from London near a quarter of a century previous, with this prophetic inscription, "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof."

Can we not see the multitude heaving, like the ocean under the premonitory throb and shiver of the storm? A buzz breaks through the red-brick walls and barred doors. What, what does it portend? Tongueless and breathless, the crowd gaze inquiringly at the old State-House. What, what is the noise? Ah, it is the first spasm of the infant Hercules, just born to the world!

A creaking noise—a swinging noise—keep breath ye newly baptized people—and ye slumbering Democrats of Europe awake—THE BELL TOLLS! And then—then the enchantment was broken. The United States had no past, for the Republic was born; and the thirteen Colonial sponsors rose with becoming dignity into nations, and prepared to fight for the birthright proclaimed to the world.

The bell rung immortality to Washington, not less than disaster, defeat and death to British rule in America. The course of Washington is almost beyond parallel. Jefferson was the greatest mind, purely the grandest intellect of the era, above all in devising and accomplishing the philosophic means by which a nation lives. But no mortal in America no doubt in the world—could have so carried the arms of the young Republic through such an accumulation of impending and actual dangers, through such scores of jealous friends, and such hosts of mad enemies, as George Washington. He, above all others, had the strength of mind, the carefully and practically analytic brain, the thorough abnegation of self in every sense where personal respect is not sacrificed, to do it.

Cromwell fought and led to advance himself. Washington fought and led to advance his country. Cromwell won and was feared even by his friends. Washington won, was loved by his friends and respected by his enemies. Cromwell longed to be king but dared not accept it when his tools made the offer. Washington could have been king but repelled with abhorrence, and reprehended with severity the intimation. Cromwell had not courage to be king, Washington had courage to be a republican. Cromwell felt proud of the offer, Washington felt insulted by it.

Cromwell was a revolutionist against monarchy, and then usurped, in the name of a Republic, functions which the king never had; Washington was a revolutionist against a bad government, and when it was overturned, he was a wise and retiring citizen—not the grasping tyrant of that which he had helped to create. In a word, England was the property of Cromwell, Washington was the property of the United States.

IRISH AID SOCIETY—NEW-YORK.

One of the saddest misfortunes which happens to our countrymen on their arrival in America, is that of their being unable to get out of the city in which they first set foot. It is perhaps, the most grievous misfortune which befals them, for, in many instances, it is the cause of every other evil which overtakes them.

The crowding of emigrants into such cities as New-York and their being compelled to remain there huddled together and pent up, is a mischief concerning which volumes might be written. We speak of the mischief done to the emigrants themselves. Want of cleanliness, imprudent and intemperate habits, disease, beggary, all sorts of wretchedness proceed from it.

The tenement which the emigrant, in the vast majority of cases, is forced to resort to in one of these huge cities, is by a thousand degrees less wholesome and affords less shelter than the rudest hut which could be thrown up on the prairie or within the forest. Provisions here are far dearer too, and so are all the other requirments of life. Industry, ingenuity, daring—all bringing floods of health and heart, manly beauty and bright morality with them—will supply at a little cost out there what it takes days of aching drudgery to purchase on the seaboard.

Of the temptations which lead to drinking, debauchery, and riotousness in great cities, among the struggling and hard-pressed especially, it is needless for us to speak. These are no more to be denied, than the fact that the night comes. Rich and poor are made sensible of them. But the latter they conquer more rapidly, and, in most instances, wound with a deadlier thrust. The competition for wages, moreover, grows fiercer, as the laboring population of a city grows more dense. Where the same poplation is thinly scattered, the demand for labor is more anxious and productive.

Truths so plain, so oft repeated, so evident to the dullest brain as these are, we feel it almost a waste of time to chronicle. But plain as they are, evident as they are, constantly reiterated as they have been, few of our countrymen can be induced, or have the means, to act upon them.

The consequence is the very worst which could afflict them. The hope which led them across the ocean falls to ashes on their dismal hearth-stone. Instead of prosperity they find rags, and the husks of swine, and the filthiest caves or garrets instead of the bright free homes of which they had many a glad dream upon the sea.

In some measure to remedy this sinful and ruinous state of things, a number of honest and intelligent citizens, most of them of Irish descent or birth, have formed themselves into the Society the name of which prefaces these few words. The first sentence of their circular simply but fully communicates their object and good wishes:

"The object of this Society is to aid and assist, by pecuniary means and practical advice, all deserving Irishmen who have large families, and require aid to reach a home in the West, or any other part of the country where labor is in demand. In order to carry out this object more effectually, and serve the cause of humanity, we appeal to every citizen who desires to relieve the suffering and want of many deserving and industrious families."

The appeal with which that sentence closes, should meet with a prompt response. The object which calls it forth is urgent, useful, and most noble. The evils to be corrected by the Society are of a grievous nature. Grievous to the emigrants in the first instance and in the deepest measure, they are grievous to the city where the emigrants are compelled to remain. The blessings to be secured through the instrumentality of the Society will be without end; generations will enjoy them. The emigrants will have their fondest hopes fulfilled. Their grand idea of America as a happy home will at length be realized, and America will be all the happier, wealthier, and more stable.

THE MURDER AT WILLARD'S.

Private letters just come to hand from Washington, inform us, that Mr. Reverdy Johuson declined to prosecute Mr. Herbert for the murder of Keating. It is alleged he is too busy elsewhere. Every other lawyer of ability in the district has, it appears, either been employed by the friends of Mr. Herbert, or refused to interfere.

A letter from the brother of the murdered man, has also been handed us. It corroborates the statements we publish.

What, under these circumstances, is to be done? Is Keating to be left with the worms in his grave, while the man who dealt him his death-blow, walks abroad free? Is the murder to be forgotten, to be let slip quietly into the category of the accidents of the day, without one brave effort to punish and avenge it? Let the officials of the district of Columbia take heed. Even at a distance of ten thousand miles, we shudder at the perils which besiege that beautiful city of San Francisco. It were better that the earthquake should come, and the Capitol and White House be swamped in the Potomac, than for such perils to visit the city founded by the Father of the Republic. Justice done in time, wards off revolution.

HOLY ALLIANCE—FREE SOILERS AND KNOW-NOTHINGS.

Mr. H. J. Gardner, Governor of Massachusetts, has ratified the nomination of Mr. Fremont for the Presidency.

Governor Gardner it was who disbanded the gallant Irish companies throughout Massachusetts.

Governor Ford, of Ohio, and other members of the Know-Nothing Convention, held recently in New-York, have gone clean over to Mr. Fremont.

Mr. Fremont has received their communication "with deep sensibility," and is strongly impressed "by the generous spirit of of conciliation which influenced their assembly."

Fremont and No Foreigners! That's the cry.

Thus have the Free-Soilers and Know-Nothings cordially embraced. They are one and the same from this out.

Letters from California.

There appears to be a difference of opinion in California with regard to the action of the Vigilance Committee. It is one of those questions on which we do not feel ourselves competent to decide. We offer no opinion. Anxious, however, that our readers should hear both sides, we publish the following letters. The writers are well known to us, and we vouch for their intelligence, respectability, and truth.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3, 1856.

The excitement under which our city labored when the last mail left, has continued up to the present time. The newspapers will, no doubt, give you particulars of the occurrences, as they have since transpired. The Vigilance Committee, having disposed of Casey and Cora, seem to have devoted themselves, since then, to ferreting out the rascals who have so long plundered the community, played "thimble rig" with our ballot-box, and laid the office-holding rogues under contribution for mutual support.

From the examination of a ballot box lately discovered, it has been explained how the rogues managed the elections. Sufficient is known to throw doubt on the legal election of even the Governor himself! The instrument is a ballot box with false sides, presided over by an accomplice—an Inspector call him—who could at all times produce the majority his instructions indicated. These instructions came from an organized clique, which has managed to rule the roast here since 1849.

This clique, by means of fighting and fraud, appointed the judges and inspectors at the elections, and consequently had the appointment and gift of every office, from a constable to a governor. To the people of the Atlantic border this state of things is inexplicable. With a determination to remedy the great evils which existed, acts of abuse becoming more and more frequent, and glaring, the people have risen in their might, determined that the laws shall be enforced against all offenders.

The energetic action of the Vigilance Committee is supported by the active sympathy of the people at large. It is well known, in taking on themselves the reponsibility of their office, they did so for the public good. True it is, the clique I have alluded to, their aiders and abettors, have endeavored to vilify the conduct of the twenty-nine members of the Committee. They have made national—yes, and religious appeals to their prejudice. They have called it a Know Nothing and anti-Democratic movement. At other times they have declared that it is an organization for the purpose of getting rid of debt by a general bankruptcy. It is intended, they say, to make this revolution the means of repudiating liability, as was once afforded by the great fire. This talk is silly. A community outraged, never acts unless under a general sense of wrong, and then if their is an abiding sentiment of vindication of the law against the wrong doers, it is maintaining the great ends of its existence.

The cells of the building occupied by the Committee are now filled with some six or eight of the most desperate of those villains who seem to have been "licensed rogues, at large,"—all our Courts, Officers, Law and Justice, to the contrary notwithstanding. At one time it was stated the Governor had been prevailed on to call on General Wool for aid from the United States Goverment, to put an end to the existing state of things. No call on the militia can avail anything against the unanimity with which the Vigilance Committee is supported. Those on the side of the Committee outnumber the opposition a hundred to one.

The rooms of the Committee are in Sacramento street, a few doors from Front, in the Granite Buildings lately occupied by the United States Appraisers. They have nearly 2000 muskets, and about a dozen cannon, so that the interior of their rooms has quite a warlike appearance. At a moment's warning, all these arms are in the hands of men ready to lose their lives if necessary in carrying out the plans of Justice. They are well sustained by the voice of the people.

What a powerful combination such Committee would be, controlled by bad men, or formed for a bad purpose. In this respect we are safe. The Revolution after all is a moral one. The subversion of our government is not intended nor attempted.

At our next election for City and County officers, the City and County will be for the first time consolidated, the same officers discharging the duties formerly transacted by two sets of officers.

There can be no doubt that honest men will not only be selected by all parties, but there will be a more careful supervision of the ballot boxes.

Woe unto the man attempting any fraud.

It appears to me, that we may reasonably expect this City, in a short space of time to be as free from Gamblers, Bullies, Rowdies and all that class of people, as any large city in the United States.

The next thing we may expect, is that our City and County affairs will be managed with prudence, and the large amount we have heretofore paid indirectly to those gamblers, bullies, rowdies, &c. in the shape of Taxes, will be paid out for no other consideration than value received.

At least we shall have something to show for the millions the city can yet raise to improve and embellish the Queen city of the Pacific.

The Governor having made his call on the militia, and issued a proclamation declaring the city in a state of insurrection, has done all that was required to preserve the integrity of his official position, and will not I think have anything further to do in the matter. There is no fear of any collision between troops, militia or citizens. The excitement at the closing of my last letter, is pretty nearly over. Yours as ever,

HUMBOLDT.

[SAN FRANCISCO, 5th June.

The steamer sails in hour. I have barely time to say a word to you. I refer you to my last, as to the Vigilance movement. It is now dead. The Governor has issued a proclamation calling on all good citizens to maintain law and order, and over a thousand men have sprung into arms in an instant. Five thousand will respond to the call within a week. Companies are forming in every part of the city, and the smothered feeling of indignation which this high-handed combination of bankrupt merchants has created, has burst out, and will recoil with a fearful vengeance on their heads.

As I stated in my last, Eastern shippers may expect smaller remittances, both by this and several following mails, and be prepared by the Fall for a general burst of the gingerbread merchants of San Francisco. Their money, however, has been freely used in employing a band of mercenaries for the subversion of the laws of this State and the Constitution of the Republic. Their objects, however, will be defeated; but the "revolution" will give many of the improvident merchants an opportunity to settle their Eastern accounts as they were formerly settled by a good fire.

The prisoners have been smuggled away this morning to Callao, or elsewhere, and the Vigilance Committee will likely dissolve in the face of the powerful organization that has sprung up against them.

Yours, TERRY ALT.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

RICHARD SHIEL—THE RIVER SUIR—STONYHURST COLLEGE—SHIEL AND O'CONNELL.

The river Suir—the gentle Suir as it has been called by Edmund Spenser—himself a gentle poet. From out of the sweet furze which gathers on the peak of Benduff, it bubbles into light. The ivied arches of Knocknageerah throw their shadow on it in its sparkling childhood. From the green rushes through which it glides by Thurles, the towers and twisted pillars of Holycross rise up. The winds of the autumn deck its brown breast with the red leaves as they fall in the woods of Gurteen, and the wild hawk of the Commerahs dips his wing in the wave as it throbs through the honied plains of Clonmel, and on to the old city of the Dane.

Richard Shiel loved this glorious river. He loved it, for his home, like mine, was on its banks. When age had come upon him, and he was far away from the old land, he spoke in raptures of it. He spoke of the many evenings he had stood beside it, when the vesper-bells of the city tolled the death of the departing day, and the smoke above the ancient walls was turned into a cloud of gold, by sunsets such as Claude Lorrain would have worshipped. "Here," said he "where my infancy was passed, I once hoped that my old age should decline. But it is not in the midst of the woods of the gentle Suir that I shall fall into the sere and yellow leaf."

He goes down the Suir one evening, and out beyond those bold headlands, crowned with fort and lighthouse. There is a good clergyman of Languedoc with him. It is the Abbe de Grimeau. He has been charged to see the boy safely lodged within the iron gate of that old-fashioned house at Kensington, where certain French Jesuits, known then in England as the Peres de la Foi, taught science and the classics. The head of the establishment is Monsieur le Prince de Broglio—"a slender, delicate, little creature," we are told by Shiel himself, "a slender, delicate, little creature, with a sloping forehead, and the few hairs left him nicely powdered and pomatumed." He receives the little Irishman with much suavity. He receives him in black silk stockings and small shoes buckled with silver, in a chamber covered with faded gilding. Then he shows our friend, Dick, to the school-room, where he hears not a word of English, for the boy's new acquaintances are little emigrants from France, for the most part, children of the old noblesse. He is shown to his desk. The lad next to him is the son of the Count Decar, an aristocrat of the first water. Dick doesn't like him much. He writes home that "he is a huge, lubberly fellow, with a greasy sudorific complexion, and a strong repugnance to soap and water—surly, dogged, and silent—altogether one in whom it would be very difficult to detect a patrician derivation."

Kensington won't answer. That's plain. Our young scholar moves northwards.

Two towers topped with eagles, rise up before him, out of a deep valley. It is a deep, blackvalley. Yet there are streams rippling through that valley; and there are old trees in dense masses, stretching their wrinkled arms all through it, and sheltering betimes amongst their fallen leaves and branches the most delicious game, pheasants, deer, and woodcock; and there are high hills, once the haunt of witches, girdling it in gaunt and desolate sterility.

Shiel likes this old place well. His account of it—published, if I mistake not, in the New Monthly, some years after—is full of beauty, tenderness, wit and loving recollections. He speaks of his old master, the Rev. William Brooks, in terms of especial commendation. He tells us that "his mind was full of precepts and examples from the best authors of the ancient and modern schools, that his taste in literature was highly cultivated, that his manners were polished, perhaps, to the utmost limit of refinement, but that, in all respects, he was an admirable specimen of the old English gentleman."

"Let us hear what you have," said Mr. Brooks to his young charge one day. Shiel got up, opened out a bundle of manuscript, and with much fervor threw off several pages of exuberant composition. He finished with a great burst, and then, throwing down his manuscript, waited for a shower of praises.

"Richard," says the old gentleman—looking steadily at him—Richard, you have to-day succeeded in soaring to the highest regions of—nonsense!"

When Richard Shiel leaves Stonyhurst, he crosses over to Dublin, and there writes his name on the books of Trinity College. The law is to be his business, and he tries his pen at tragedy. He does right. Acts right manfully in so doing. His father had failed in some commercial speculations, and Dick will go upon his own hook.

Justice is not cheap in Ireland. Neither can one serve in the temple of the Blind Goddess, without dropping a few guineas into her suspended scale. He throws off without much skill, and with much conceit, a pompous play called "Adelaide, or the Emigrants." Fortunately for the author, there is at that time, shining on the boards of the old cob-webbed theatre in Crow street, Dublin, a beautiful young actress, one Miss O'Neill, who, "by her wonderful power," as McNevin tells us "rescues the Emigrants from their legitimate damnation." The morning after its appearance, with the most profuse gratitude, and citing some exquisite verses of Voltaire in illustration of her charms, Shiel dedicates the play to Miss O'Neil. He brings the dedication to O'Connell, and asks him what he thinks of it? "Shiel, my dear fellow," says the great Kerryman, with his richest brogue, and his gray eye twinkling with vicious fun, "Shiel, my dear fellow, you have been gathering honey at Blarney, and have laid it on Miss O'Neil with a trowel."

Shiel has pluck, and tries his hand again. He gives us the Apostate, and then Bellamira, and then Evadne. The latter makes a decided hit, accomplishes a great run, and from the illiterate and the learned, the critics and the crowd, elicits an immense applause.

For these dramatic efforts, Shiel gets in hand a sum amounting to $10,000. He stood in need of it. He had married a Miss O'Halloran, a great beauty without a fortune. He had the honest daring to take the hand he loved, though the white fingers wore no jewels. However he may have altered in latter days, here in the fresh morning of life, he discloses a generous nature in the light of a glowing genius. He will not hang upon his father for support. He will bake his own bread. He will not measure the purse of the girl he loves, and trim the sailing of his heart by its latitude and longitude. Like a brave fellow, he will take her in his arms, and bear her to a sunny shore, if it be possible, through the waters of adversity.

Having by his dramatic efforts put together sufficient means to buy a wig, a bag, and gown, and having been called to the bar, and, with an oath before the Lord Chancellor, being installed in the profession of the law, Shiel, filling up his leisure hours with profitable labor, sits down and writes for the literary world a series of articles in the New Monthly Magazine. Sketches of the Irish Bar, he calls them, and vivid sketches they are.

Pregnant with sorrowful truths; dismal experiences; incidents revealing themselves through clouds, and sunlight, and sparkling showers, and rainbows; strange characters gliding through the strangest scenes of life; with their quaint oddities tickling us into laughter; with their ebullitions of insanity filling us with dismay, or in their desolate adversity drawing from us the saddest sympathies; humor and lamentation; intellect run wild; giddy fashion living, and dressing, and reveling upon the hard-won earnings of the brain; behold the pictures which this fine hand has left us of that profession—the profession of the law—which in Ireland has exhibited so many contradictions, and been, at the one and the same hour, a fountain of corruption, and a pedestal of fame.

I have no reason to believe that Shiel had, in his own career at the Irish Bar, a momentary experience of the calamities he so vividly describes. But he was intimate with those upo whom such visitations had fallen, and his narrative of the struggle, the agony, the terrible wreck and desolation, of such men, is as true to the letter as though he himself had bled and writhed under their experience.

But, after all, there is something greater for Shiel to do. Something greater for him to do than write sketches. The penal laws against the Irish Catholics are in force. These laws must be done away with. They are the laws of the bigot. They attach to a conscientious belief, disabilities the most offensive, the most oppressive, the most galling. Upon the integrity of man, they impose a penalty which amounts to an interdiction. To the commission of a cunning or a cowardly apostacy, they hold out a world of inducements. A curse to the country, a scandal to Christianity, an abomination in the sight of God, they must be done away with!

Who says so?

Plunkett says so, with those words of his, which rapid as the lightning, are as pure as the sunbeam. Curran says so, with that deep melody of his, which combined all the moods of sensibility and passion, and was, by turns, as thrilling as a War-Song or as touching as a Funeral Hymn—as haughty as the canticle of Miriam, or as sorrowful as a lamentation of Jeremiah. Grattan says so, with that astounding eloquence of his, which was a combination of cloud and whirlwind and flame. O'Connell says so, standing like a giant among his people, and hurling those defiances which terrified the senate, the camp, the court, into a sudden capitulation.

And here, a young lawyer, with a little, slender, wiry figure, in shabby clothes, but with a beautiful hand of the most delicate shape and whiteness, and an eye like that of a basilisk, starts up. With a voice that with its ringing sharpness startles us, and with a wild swinging of the arms, he cries out—it must not be!

"Slaves! slaves!" he exclaims, "you are seven millions! Know your own strength! Appreciate your power! Assemble round your altars—let the chalice ascend and the cross be lifted up—and then raise your voices for liberty together. Raise such a call for Freedom, as shall travel through every department of the State. Let it reach to the lofty walls of the titled Senate, and amidst the luxurious recesses of the kingly palace let it not be unheard. Let a shout go forth for Freedom, at which England will start and France will not be deaf, at which princes shall be amazed, and cabinets shall stand appalled! Call for Freedom," he conjures them, "and call for it as your right—call for it in the name of reason—call for it in the name of justice—call for it in the name of safety—call for it determinedly—above all, let seven millions call for it together!"

George the Fourth spreads his silken sails for the Irish coast.

The Catholic party were disposed to hail the event as the precursor of great political blessings. The King was the companion of Charles Fox and the Earl of Moira, and the Marquis of Wellesley, and these men were their staunch friends—the staunch friends of the Catholic cause—and the King, accordingly, would grant them Emancipation. So, they designate his visit a most propitious event, and go out to meet him in blue silk-scarfs and red rosettes. The Catholic Bishops advance to the royal presence, in ecclesiastical costume, with their golden chains and crosses. Daniel O'Connell kneels on one knee, and presents a crown of laurel to the King. In return, the King draws the Ribbon of the Order of St. Patrick over the dutiful neck of the Earl of Fingal, the Earl being the foremost man amongst the Irish Catholics of the time. Profuse reciprocity of compliments, between the master and the slave, is the charming order of the day!

That little wiry figure, with small white hand and eye of a basilisk, stood aloof, away from the crowd, in a dim corner, as it were, looking out, with fretfulness and anger upon the whole scene. He stood aloof, treasuring up the burning thoughts which rushed upon him at the moment, and afterwards, when the delirious shouts had been hushed, and the spiders had spun their dusky webs from the beams of the vast banquet-hall, and the men, whose credulity had hurried them headlong into the giddiest excesses of adulation, stood with awakened sense contemplating the wasted scene and measuring the exhausted depths of their debauch, our bright-eyed orator, with the flashing white hand is seen, and with ringing voice is heard, amongst the betrayed citizens of Dublin, exposing the duplicity of the King and the fatuity of his subjects.

He bids them remember the ovation with which the sovereign of the empire had entered their city; bids them remember how, with uplifted eyes, and hands, and voices into which their hearts were thrown, the multitudes had conducted the royal widower to his Irish capital; recalls the scene of his departure when the monarch stood upon the shore, was surrounded by his people, heard their prayers for his happiness sent up with a rapturous enthusiasm to Heaven, and saw many a brawny arm stretched out to him in an affectionate farewell. He describes the ship, with the royal standard at the mast-head, moving slowly and majestically through the ocean, and the hills, crowded to their tops by hundreds of thousands reverberating with the benedictions of the multitude.

"Is it possible," he exclaims, "that at such a moment his heart should not have melted and dissolved within him? Did not the tear of a generous sensibility rush into his eyes, and as the shouts of his people came to him from the receding shores across the waters, did he not exclaim—"Yes! yes! I will do something for Ireland."

"But I forget," he proceeds, "I forget myself. I am hurried away by the emotions which the recollection of those striking scenes cannot fail to awaken, and I pause to put the question—what, after all, has George the Fourth done for Ireland?"

"Nothing," he exclaims; "he left us his advice, and he gave us, nothing else; and on his tomb should be inscribed—

"Here lies the man who was beloved by Ireland in his youth, who beguiled her in his manhood, and betrayed her in his age."

From the event of this royal visit to the concession of the Catholic claims, Richard Shiel was an indefatigable laborer in the cause of Religious Liberty.

In the Summer of 1828 he meets Daniel O'Connell at a friend's house in the mountains of Wicklow, and there the two lawyers devised that system of political action, which, operating on the fears of the English Cabinet, served to revoke the iniquitous code, which, to the incalculable detriment of Ireland, had been so long in force.

Of the struggle which resulted in this triumph, O'Connell was the guiding and preponderating power. His quickness, his sagacity, his unconquerable industry, his rich and racy humor, his grand intonations, his noble figure, everything placed him high beyond the reach of competition. But Shiel stood next to him. Next to him, and high above the rest.

O'Connell and Shiel were the names on every tongue. O'Connell had the more correct judgment. Shiel the more brilliant genius. O'Connell was ready for all occasions. Shiel prepared himself and was adequate only for the great. The first, more popular, was inspired. The latter, more classical, was all study.

M. Duvergier and the Duke de Montebello, travelling through Ireland in 1826, enter an old chapel, in the town of Ballinasloe. It's a little old chapel, without any ornament, white-washed and half in ruins. Before the altar, a rude platform has been raised. On the left of it, a gallery for the men. Another for the women on the right. On the platform, about two hundred country gentlemen. In every other part of the Chapel, a peasant population of a savage aspect.

Shiel is speaking!

The Frenchmen are delighted with him; they return to Paris and bring out a pamphlet. What says this pamphlet about Richard Shiel?

"When you behold that little Gascon figure in repose, it is impossible to suspect the changes which passion produces in it. There is in Shiel, something of Juvenal, of Pindar, and of Mirabeau. His satire is shrewd and biting; his poetry dazzles; his enthusiasm whirls you away; when he flings forth a sarcasm, a bitter smile contracts his lips; when he threatens, his eyes dart forth lightnings; when he is under the dominion of inspiration, they take an expression altogether sublime; his gesture is quick, abrupt, almost irregular, but it is always in perfect accord with the sentiments he has to express; he possesses in an eminent degree, the surprising faculty of exerting himself to the very verge of delirium, without once losing his self-possession. During an hour, one single soul, that of the orator, seemed to animate this living mass."

The services which Shiel rendered to the Catholics of Ireland ought never to be forgotten by them. Of their claims, he was a brilliant and dauntless champion. If his genius had the eagle's power of flight, it had the eagle's courage, too. If it could soar to the loftiest crag, it could wheel in the sunlight, and pounce upon the stateliest prey below. Witness his attack on Plunkett, the Attorney General, when he proceeded against Daniel O'Connell for sedition. Witness his attack on the Duke of York, when his Grace invoked the evidence of God to his hatred of the Catholics. Witness his attack on Lord Stanley and the Duke of Cumberland, when the subject of Orange Lodges in the British Army was before the House of Commons. Witness, a little later, his onslaught on Lord Lyndhurst, in the debate on the Irish Municipal Bill.

For the victories which his genius won in the public forum, at the bar, and in the senate, Ireland will think of Shiel for many years to come; she will think of him, as she thinks of Moore, and Gerald Griffin, and Thomas Davis, and Clarence Mangan, and Banim of Kilkenny, and Callanan, who sang of Gougane Barra, for they all, like him, have gone from earth. But high above the island, whose traditions, hopes, wrongs, beauty, sorrow, had been in life their inspiration—high above her cathedral ruins, her purple mountain of the South, her brown eagle's boldest flight—in the night that encompasses her, their memories shall be to her as new stars, making bright the desolation that surrounds her, and lifting up her heart as she meditates upon her fate.

* Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1856, by THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the U. States, for the Southern District of New-York.

Standing at the foot of that tomb, in the darkness of which the black eye of surpassing beauty has been quenched, and the tongue of fire has fallen into ashes, there is a sad lesson to be read.

Alas poor Yorick! He died a slave! He died in chains! He had long been silent before death struck him dumb for ever!

He had entered the service of England, been a Commissioner of Greenwich, Vice-President of the Board of Trade, Master of the Mint, Member of the Privy Council. He had dismissed the great scheme of National Independence as "a splendid phantom," for which, in 1833, he had pleaded with such vehemence, and against the Church Establishment, which for many years he had assailed with such relentless vigor, in his latter days he had not the faintest syllable to utter.

When that question was last before the Parliament, he was missed from his seat on the floor, and might have been seen stealing nervously along the galleries, now and then peeping over the railing to see what was going on below. He was under orders from his masters. The Whigs were his masters. It did not answer the Whigs, they being in office at the time, to lay their hands upon the golden dome and pinnacles of the Establishment; and Shiel, who, in 1836, had said they should take down that dome "for it had become too ponderous," had to creep by, and leave the ponderous mass still towering and expanding.

The Debate on the Ecclesiastical Titles' Bill is at hand. Shiel is in a fix, they say. They say so at the Atheneum and Reform Club. The ministers to get him out of the fix, transpose him from the home to the foreign service. He is shipped off as Ambassador to Tuscany. He makes his bow to the Grand Duke, delivers his credentials, and then retires to his hotel, where the gout seizes him for the last time. All is over!

It is not in the woods that overhang the gentle Suir, as he once thought, that he falls into the sere and yellow leaf.

MY LOVE AMONG THE FLOWERS.

Surely my love hath passed this way,
Else the skies were not so bright,
Else the birds were not so gay—
Carolling in the morning light.

Violet, she hath looked on you,
Else you were not half so blue,
Never in cerulean skies,
So deep an azure hue was sought;
That heavenly tint you must have caught,
From the blue fountains of her eyes.

Ne'er before you scattered round,
So profusely on the air,
And along the dewy ground,
Odors sweet and perfumes rare;
Was it a laugh, or was it a sigh,
That left her lips as she glided by?

Gentle lily, to her breast
Sure my love your form hath pressed,
How could you ever be so fair,
If you had not rested there?
Lily bending in the gale,
When she clasped you to her heart,
Was it from joy you turned so pale,
Or, grief, that she must again depart?

On you alone, thrice happy rose,
On you alone my love bestows
The crimson treasures of her lips.
The careless bee their sweetness sips,
But ah! he little knows how much
Was caught from her red lip's glowing touch.

Lily and rose and violet blue,
Violet, lily and rose so red,
Violet, rose and lily white,
Shall I not be happy too?
Will her eyes their lustre shed
Ever on me with delight?
Will her form my arms entwine?
Will her lips be pressed to mine?
Thus if she should ever do,
Then I should not envy you.

PONTCHARTRAIN.

Over the slab which has hitherto covered the grave of Wm Cobbett, in the churchyard of Farnham, Surrey, a tomb has just been erected by Mr. Thomas Milnes, the sculptor who executed the statue of Nelson recently put up in Norwich. The tomb is made of a durable stone, from the quarry at Roch Abbey, in Yorkshire. It stands near the porch of the church, is of solid workmanship, oblong in form, and in style following the plainest old English architecture. On one panel, the inscription, copied from the slab is: "William Cobbett, son of George and Anne Cobbett; born in the parish of Farnham, 9th of March, 1762. Enlisted in the 54th Regiment of Foot in 1784, of which regiment he became Sergeant-Major in 1785, and obtained his discharge in 1791. In 1794 he became a political writer. In 1832 was returned to Parliament for the borough of Oldham, and represented it till his death, which took place at Normandy Farm, in the adjoining parish of Ash, on the 18th of June, 1835." On the panel opposite: "Anne Cobbett, daughter of Thomas and Anne Reid, and wife of William Cobbett; born at Chatham, 28th of March, 1774. Married at Woolwich, 5th of February, 1792. Died in London, 19th of July, 1848." Farnham Church is within a mile of Waverley Abbey, and of Moor Park, (once the residence of Sir William Temple,) and about two miles from Alderchott.

Notes from the Nore.

BY A KILKENNY MAN.

"We had a fashion o' callin' this sort o' writin' a memorandle."
Admiral Terence O'Brien.

To the Editor of the Irish News:—In the name of the many exiled children of Ossory, I heartily thank you for having made arrangements for a regular series of letters from the beautiful "old city of St. Canice," as your faithful friend and compatriot, Father Meehan, in his history of the Confederation of Kilkenny, styles it. Of Irish counties, the county of Berkeley, Bushe, and Banim confessedly stands at the head, for the social independence, the enlightenment, and the patriotism of its inhabitants. Its scattered children feel proud of their birthplace, and, as "absence makes the heart grow fonder," they hail with enthusiastic and affectionate delight, anything that proceeds from it.

The "letter from Kilkenny," in your paper of last Saturday, has a paragraph about a young clergyman of shining virtues and great talents. I refer to father Edward Rowan. My position enables me to give you some particulars of his origin. If they possess any value you can publish them. In writing them out from my note book, I prefer to use the past tense, as an absence of eight years from my native land disqualifies me to write otherwise with correctness.

Of the parents of the Rev. Mr. Rowan, let me say a few words. They were of the first class of Kilkenny Catholics; high praise you will admit. Mr. Rowan Sr. and my father were friends in early life. He was in every respect an exemplary man. He was the proprietor of an extensive woolen hall in Kilkenny. It stood on the north-west corner of High and Walkin streets.

Walkin street was next to and ran parallel with William st., where, in the summer of 1848, I first heard you address a meeting of the citizens of Kilkenny. You were accompanied by P. J. Smith. Dr. Cane was one of the orators on the occasion. You remember how an idle rumor of the approach of soldiers, with loaded muskets and fixed bayonets, threw the meeting into the utmost confusion. Dr. Cane left the balcony of the Mechanics' Institute, where the speakers were all arrayed, and retired to his residence; then, on the opposite side of the street, you, Smith, and a few others, remained unmoved and firm—as was expected of you, and as became your position. When order was restored, I vividly recollect how effectively you taunted certain leaders of the Kilkenny confederates on their imbecility and lukewarmness. You cannot forgot how heartily the multitude approved of your well-directed taunt. After you had finished your address, Smith was called on for a speech. He excused himself, on the ground that he was a military man, and their swords were the only "organs of speech" military men were suspected of knowing how to use. If an opportunity were afforded him, he thought he would make himself heard exactly as a soldier should. By the way, Smith was taken by not a few for Smith O'Brien. It was an odd, but not a censurable blunder.

On the south-west corner of High and Walkin street, stood the china store of Orange Anson Floyd, one of the "packed jury" who, in 1844, convicted O'Connell and his co-laborers in the great Repeal movement, of treasonable conduct, and who, by their "loyal" verdict, consigned a noble band of patriots to the fellowship and fate of the vilest inmates of Newgate. Floyd resided in Dublin. Kilkenny was only tainted by the presence of a branch of his gigantic china warehouse. His chief salesman in Kilkenny was an individual who passed for a dissenting clergyman, and who was far less attentive to the business of vending his employer's cups and crocks, plates and pitchers, etc., etc., than he was to the witching daughters of the "Faire Cittie." You will say he should not be blamed for that. His "pastoral" cares were "magnificently" light, and the poor wretch never seemed troubled about such matters.

Nearly opposite, on the eastern side of High street, was the cozy little fancy store of Michael Banim, the brother and co-laborer of John Banim, the greatest of Irish novelists. The widow of the latter resided in King street, near its junction with Coal-Market. The grave of her illustrious husband was in Madlin street chapel. By the way, I learn from recent accounts, that Michael Banim has been appointed postmaster of his native city. No man better deserves such a position. He is of marked ability, upright, industrious, and patriotic. The two brothers were schoolmates of my father's, and Michael has been a life-long friend of his.

Six or eight doors south of Banim's store, and on the same side of High street, was the office of the Kilkenny Journal, one of the oldest papers in Ireland. You know its reputation and history for the last thirty years, and will coincide with me in recognizing its devotion and fidelity to popular interests. It was for a long time the property of Cornelius Maxwell, whom you must have known. Maxwell was pre-eminently a man of the people; honest, zealous, and unflinching. He began life in the employ of the Marquis of Ormond. Having therein saved some hundreds of pounds sterling, he purchased the Journal from old "Moll Henderson"—as the then owner of it was familiarly known among her acquaintances. She was outwardly one of the most unattractive of women, but at heart generous, affectionate, and true. She had a daughter as ugly as herself, but destitute of her good nature, for whom the mother never could procure a husband. After Maxwell became proprietor of the Journal, our friend of the Irish-American, Mr. Lynch, was for a while its editor. I have his own words for this. His successor, if I am not mistaken, was Ken. Buggy, who wrote the once very popular song called the "Saxon Shilling." You remember the scene of Banim's tragic story of the "Roman Merchant." "The Irishtown of our dear and not uncelebrated native city is now before our eyes, as vividly as when we roamed through it in childhood." Buggy was a native of that part of Kilkenny. He was a near relation of mine. He was an ardent Repeal advocate, and a young man of much promise. He it was that was selected to succeed your noble friend Duffy, on the Belfast Vindicator, when the latter removed to Dublin in 1842, to conduct the Nation. Buggy died in Belfast, in 1843. So beloved was he by the people of that city, that they peremptorily refused to allow his remains to be removed to his native county for interment. They erected an expensive monument over his last resting-place, and preserved his memory in their warm hearts. You could not but have known Buggy. He was one of the orators who addressed the "Monster Meeting," held on the plains of Danesforth, about a mile outside of Kilkenny, early in the summer of 1843, if I don't mistake. I was then but nine years old and insufficiently interested in politics to preserve an exact recollection of dates. O'Connell was there, of course, and I remember having heard my father say that you were also present, but that you avoided public notice. You were then only a few months away from your "Alma Mater." Buggy's address on the occasion I have reference to was impassioned, eloquent, and soul-stirring. O'Connell thought it was a little too exciting, and before Buggy had reached the close of his remarks, O'Connell checked his impetuosity by affectionately patting him on the head and advising him to "be calm, be calm, my fine, frank, fearless enthusiast."

But I must not digress thus, if I desire to have you read this rambling "bit o' writin'."

Father Rowan's mother was a sister of the celebrated Bishop Kelly of Waterford, and possessed much of his talents, and all of his piety. One of the most endearing traits of the character of Curran, was his affectionate recollection of the virtues of his mother, to whom he was never slow to ascribe whatever genius he was honored for. I think young Mr. Rowan owes as much to maternal influence, and I believe he is equally prompt to acknowledge all such indebtedness. You don't remember Bishop Kelly, though I think I have heard you say you accompanied your honored father, when he attended the funeral of the beloved prelate. As with all his family, Bishop Kelly was a native of the City of Kilkenny, where some of his immediate relations still live. One or two of his nephews, lineally descended, reside in Madlin street, Kilkenny, near the (to me) once fondly familiar scene of Banim's deeply interesting story of "The Mayor of Wind-Gap." Early in life Bishop Kelly became President of St. Kieran's College, near Kilkenny, whence he was transferred by Pope Pius VII. to Richmond, Va., where he was elevated to the Episcopal See, then newly and provisionally organized. He arrived in this country towards the close of 1820, but was allowed to remain only a few months in his infant diocese. On the death of the then R. C. Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, Dr. Kelly was chosen to succeed him, and he returned to his native land in 1821. Of Dr. Kelly, Sheil (who, according to the authority of your lamented friend Macnevin, was also a native of the County 'of Kilkenny) has given his views, in a speech delivered in the Catholic Association, sustaining a motion of a vote of thanks to Dr. Kelly, for his noble and exemplary efforts in commencing the first regular census of the people of Ireland. On a vacancy occurring in the Episcopal See of Lismore and Waterford, in 1821, Sheil observes:

"The clergy of Waterford looked round for an ecclesiastic, who was fitted to the time. They wanted a man of high talents and acquirements—of a firm decided, and manly character—with a bold and inflexible spirit, and something of a republican simplicity of mind. And where did they seek him? These lovers of despotism by religion—these necessary slaves—these men who are deemed insensible to the love of liberty, and incapable of its enjoyment—these Popish priests—looked out into the democracy of America, and selected for their prelate a Bishop of the United States. It was among the forests that mark the boundaries of the United States—it was in the midst of the savannahs—in the midst of poverty and privation, and surrounded with every hardship—that Dr. Kelly had evinced the qualifications of a truly Christian pastor. He had not, when far away from his country, lost his affection for the land that gave him birth, and his anxiety to do that service to Ireland which he has proved that it is in the power of every bishop to confer, induced him to accept the honorable tender which was made to him by the clergy of his native diocese. [A mistake: Kilkenny was Dr. Kelly's birth-place.] He came; and what more need I do than appeal for the results of his coming to the simple fact upon which I rest the resolution in which the gratitude of the Irish people is expressed? It did befit a man who lived in a free country—in a land of manly spirits and fearless minds—to put into accomplishment a measure which belongs to the spirit of genuine citizenship, and which enumerates the people for the purpose of giving assertion and extension to their rights. To such a man great praise is due."

From 1821 to 1829 Dr. Kelly labored to promote the interests of religion; the freedom and happiness of his countrymen. Throughout the most vigorous struggle for Catholic Emancipation, he was a foremost man. Waterford was the first place where the sceptre of the bigoted and ferocious ascendancy in Ireland received an irreparable fracture. You are familiar with Wyse's graphic History of the Agitation. The people's hearts were in this movement, and their young pastors generally shared their views and hopes, while nearly all the veterans of the clerical body were "averse to all species of disturbance." The young priests already observed the enslaved condition of their fellow-countrymen, and determined to use their talents and influence, without fear and without cessation, to emancipate them. They found a resolute and spirited leader in Dr. Kelly. Sheil, in his Sketches of the Irish Bar, calls him "The Becket of Ireland."

Without entering fully into his history, it must suffice to say that it was Dr. Kelly, who, adopting the suggestion of Sheil, began to teach the people their strength and influence, by an enumeration of his own flock, and who, co-operating with the Catholic Association, showed them how they might use their undervalued power to accomplish their high objects by defeating the Beresfords, where, from long immunity, these believed themselves "lords of all they surveyed." You can have but a faint recollection of the Waterford election of 1826. My father participated in it. It was one of the most exciting that ever occurred in Ireland. For nearly a century previous thereto, the Beresfords had enjoyed undisputed sway in that locality. They looked upon the Waterford constituency as their private property, and dreaded not any denial of their atrocious pretension. Villiers Stuart was induced to enter the contest of 1826, as the liberal candidate, against Lord George Beresford, as the Tory nominee. At the opening of the campaign, Stuart had but slight hopes of success, but possessing wealth, character, and the popular clerical support, he persevered—he triumphed. Even the Beresfords' own tenantry, servants and dog-boys conquered their fears, and gave Stuart their votes. Never was a victory so complete. Dr. Kelly was the man who thus elected Stuart, defeating and undeceiving the haughty, rampant, and ruthless aristocrat of Curraghmore House. After the election, Beresford gave an entertainment to his leading supporters to bury their mutual disappointment and chagrin under a good dinner. Among his guests, was Joe Green, the baldheaded and "bothered," but ever courteous uncle of Captain John Green, one of the present parliamentary representatives of the County of Kilkenny. To him, Beresford, furious with wrath and wine, was heard to utter these characteristic words:—"I thought the devil, himself, could not beat me in my own county; but I have been woefully defeated and undeceived by that miserable monkey of a friar called the Bishop of Waterford and his popish rabble." But though the popular party triumphed through the judicious guidance of a sanctified Catholic bishop, their triumph was preceded and followed by great sacrifices and great sufferings, occasioned by the malignant and insatiable vengeance of the defeated intolerants. Dr. Kelly and his clergy did all that lay in their power to shield their poor and helpless, but patriotic flock from the vengeance of their oppressors. They were warmly aided in this holy work, by the Catholic Association. I cannot follow out this story through all its details. Dr. Kelly lived to see the success of the great movement in which the best sympathies of his heart were enlisted. Early in 1829, Catholic Emancipation was extorted from a reluctant, but discomfitted and terrified government. In the winter of the same year, the Right Rev. Bishop Kelly died, honored, beloved, and, in a measure, idolized by the grateful people of his diocese.

Young Father Rowan is the inheritor of the talents, the rectitude, and the independence of his illustrious uncle. Mr. Rowan, I think, was educated in St. Kieran's College, Kilkenny. I am under the impression he was ordained in 1847 or 1848, and he preached his first sermon in St. James' Cathedral of that city, late in the year of his ordination. St. James' Cathedral is on James' street, Kilkenny, and on the occasion referred to, it was densely thronged and surrounded by multitudes of Catholics and not a few Protestants, from all parts of the diocese of Ossory, eager to hear the pious eloquence and to see the saintly person of the young clergyman, whom they had learned to regard as the most promising preacher in the Catholic ministry. His discourse, if I rightly recollect, was on the "Last Judgement." It was thoughtful, brilliant, earnest and impressive. It powerfully affected his auditors. And when the services, were over, the crowd dispersed, conscious of having beheld and heard, on that day, a soldier of the Cross, that would yet adorn the Christian Church. Father Rowan was then almost a spectre—thin, feeble and careworn from the austere and studious habits of his life. I am sure every living child of Ossory will rejoice to learn from your Kilkenny correspondence that he is now in much improved health.

I had intended to say something of Edward Butler, late of the Dublin Nation, and now a distinguished barrister in Australia. He also is referred to in your Kilkenny correspondence. He was a school-mate of mine, and though at that time he was one of "the big boys," and I but a "wee bit of a gorsoon," I knew him well. He is a native of the Parish of Thomastown, county Kilkenny; both of us attended the one school kept by a Mr. Lyons, long since deceased, in my native town, by the name of which the parish is known. But the extreme length of this communication, in which you may decide there is "so much ado about nothing," warns me to bring it to a conclusion.

New-York., June 28, 1856.

The Buffalo Republic takes occasion to show that Mr. Sumner's speech is not altogether original. It quotes from Demosthenes' great oration on the crown, thus:

"It cannot be that you have acted wrong in encountering danger bravely for the liberty and safety of all Greece. No! by the generous souls who were exposed at Marathon! By those who stood arrayed at Platea! By those who encountered the Persian fleet at Salamis, who fought at Artemisium! By all those illustrious sons of Athens whose remains lie deposited in the public monuments! * * * What belongs to gallant men they all performed. Their success was such as Providence dispenses to each."

he following is from Senator Sumner's speech:

"But it cannot be that she acts wrong for herself and children, when in this cause she thus encounters reproach. No! by the generous souls who were exposed at Lexington—by those who stood arrrayed at Bunker Hill—by the many from her bosom who, on all the fields of the first great struggle, left their vigorous arms to the great cause of all—by the children she has borne, whose names alone are national trophies, is Massachusetts now vowed irrevocably to this work. What belongs to the faithful servant she will do in all things, and Providence shall determine the result."

A new edition of Cooper's Novels is announced by Messrs. Stringer & Townsend, comprising a selection of his acknowledged master-pieces, and representing all the different phases of his genius, to consist of not more than twenty volumes. It is to be issued in the highest style of typography, forming a fine library edition of the choice works of the great American novelist.

A Trip Across the Atlantic.

BY AN IRISH RAMBLER.

In all our wanderings we have ever had a strange dread of ocean. And though we had passed from Genoa to Civita Vecchia, and from Gibraltar to Malta, and sickened with impartial heave alongside of Turk, and Jew and Christian, we ever looked upon these little seas but as shrimps to the great Atlantic Lobster. We had sometimes, too, dreamt that some kind fairy of a Yankee would pass a glass tunnel from Halifax to Galway, through the transparent walls of which we might see, in passing, the meteor ribbon fish glancing below, and numbers of slippery acquaintances devouring their nearest friends. We hate that cannibal expression on the face of every fish, which plainly says, "I would eat you if I could." They alone, too, of living things have no soul for music, and we do not think even the Drinking Song of Vestvali or the Canjonet of Rigoletta would stay the softest fish in the ocean from eating, if he had the opportunity, his own Grand-Papa. But unwilling to wait the realization of these dreams, in an hour of gay audacity we boldly entered the counting-house of Browne, and on a glorious day last summer saw the white cliffs of "merrie England" grow gradually dim, and, like some fairy towers, dissolve into the distance. As the pilot leaped lightly into his minnow skiff and skimmed from the great whale beside him, we whispered to the breeze that touched his sail "farewell," and fairly turned to the great West before us.

Next to finding oneself in a coffin, we dread being caged and cribbed in a berth. One feels exactly as the carp in a reservoir. No matter how pleasant or well fed during the confinement, "ils regrettent leur bourbe." From the window of a Merchant-Prince, whose palace, pleasantly styled "a box," looked upon the Mersey, we had often, over a glass of sweet Bucellus, watched in the first hour of evening the huge American steamer stride down the river in full strength and steam, and "seen as it were through a glass" with its giant flag lazily flapping in the center of a thousand dwarfish ribbons that flutter like a field of flowers around, one could hardly look on a more glorious thing. But like Madame Vestris, or ladies who have passed the Missouri line of forty, such beauteous things look better at a distance. When nearer, the basin is apt to take the place of the Bucellus. Nor though we are constantly reminded that we are on the brink of eternity, is it pleasant to find so practical an illustration as the light plank between berth and burial affords. Of how and with whom we travelled we may not speak. To do so would be to lift our visage, and we claim the privilege of many a good Knight in days of old to hide and shine beneath a palmer's gown. But in truth, there were little gallant or gay to tell. We basked away our time in one dozing dream beneath the bright presence of two beautiful children of America, beautiful even in this land of beauty. In many things America excels, but in nought so much as in her "who was originally made beautiful."

The first American girl we had ever seen or known was lovely as the first creation of a painter's dream. When first we saw Edith McTavish, for by the name of Edith she was known from being the original of Disraeli's beautiful heroine in "Coningsby," glittering above the horizon of a London season, she well realized Burke's beautiful portrait of that ill-fated Queen, to whom in beauty and misfortune she bore a strong resemblance, and shone like the the morning star—full of life, and splendor and beauty. Her light, brilliant talk was the champagne of conversation, crested with a thousand sparkling bubbles of wit and fancy. We remember one night at a party, after opera, at her aunt's the late Lady Wellesley, a whisper went round that she had lost one of those light girdles with which beauty encircled her fair knee. Immediately a hundred "Hansoms" flashed from their stands and bore a hundred knights in quest of the lost treasure. The janitor was roused. The torch was lit. The truant garter found, and, borne back in triumph, was restored, thrice happy sentinel, to its beauteous guard. Little did we dream as every knight bowed down in homage to the Queen of a young order of the Garter instituted on that night, that she who was the cynosure of every eye was in a few short years to die lone and deserted in some miserable suburb round Paris. Cold, indeed, must be that heart who could contemplate without emotion such a fall.

The "merrie maids" of England are doubtless beautiful. They are trained to a higher state of physical perfection, and possess a richer luxuriance and greater duration of charm than the daughters of America. Beauty has in the latter no summer; but starting suddenly into spring passes also with a bound into the fall. But how full of delicate and exquisite blossom is that spring! These two lovely "compagnons de voyage," whose smiles lit our dull ocean path, were both returning from the Sacré Cœur of Paris. And par parenthese, few things appear to us more passing strange than the fancy which prevails of committing the early culture of those tender plants from which are to spring America's future rulers to the care of a Roman Catholic Sisterhood who, however pure and gentle, must communicate to the tender heart of youth impressions which even if effaced, are seldom wholly obliterated. One was from Oregon, fair and sweet—

"Nor loved the less
For blooming in a wilderness," a young "La Moguese," beautiful and arch and playful as a fawn, with that gazelle eye, "so brightly bold yet beautifully shy," which, at it owner's bidding, sent bright glances, like heralds of delight, to bear around her heart's sweet messages. She wore, too, one of those bewitchingly simple straw cottage hats, which gave to her coquetry a dash of demureness. But though her agile beauty and laugh, merry enough to make glad the very air, was the more attractive, there was a something about the other, a child of New York, which stole with a more subduing influence over us. There is a certain indefinable grace given to a few, which clothes every look and motion, as the Scotch poet sings—

"There's somewhat in the gait Gives ony class look weel."

Voltaire has, perhaps, most happily described it, as—

"Une grace
Un je ne sais quoi qui surpasse
De l'amour les plus doux aphus."

She had one of those spiritual pale faces, in which gleams of French vivacity struggled through a soft sweet cloud of German thoughtfulness; and the Grecian forehead shone like a fresh, smooth sand, from which the waves of silky hair had just retired. But though in our eyes she clearly read the ruin a hero had wrought, the exchanges were unfavorable to England. Never was the golden fleece more jealously guarded. Whenever we came near, half a dozen young Americans bristled up

"Like quills upon the fretful porcupine," and no golden apples thrown out of civilities or smiles could lure away the sentinels.

The quality in which, to our thought, American women surpass, is soul—that soul which looks out in the searching, speaking eye—which breathes in the delicate nostril, and touches every fibre with a subtle fire—that soul which is full of enthusiasm for all that is beautiful and noble, and, when it finds the true reflection, glows with love. We can never forget one morning in the Mediterranean, when on some distant sail the Stars and Stripes was seen floating like some glorious flower, the look of proud devotion which paled the cheek and lit the eye of a beautiful American woman who was on board. An English lady, under such circumstances, would have calmly looked up, asked if it was near dinner, and quietly gone down to make things comfortable.

But though we slept in such sunlight all the way, we are ashamed to say we felt like Marianne in the moated grange, "weary and weary," and the first voyagers who touched your shore,

"And silent stood upon a peak in Darien," could not have felt a deeper rapture than when seized, rather than solicited, by an Irishman gentleman who "lobbied" for the St. Nicholas on the Collins' pier, we committed ourselves to the cushions of the clumsy carosse of that empire of hotels.

MAGAZINES FOR JULY.

Harper, this month, is a capital number, presenting a brightly illustrated series of papers, some of which are very interesting. We have read old Joel Barlow's heartily appreciative and well-turned eulogium of "Hasty Pudding." It is really refreshing, in these fashionable days of Charlotte Russe, and constipating pies to read over the almost glorious adoration of Barlow for the muscle fostering and sledge-hammer power of the Maize. Some of the illustrations are very good, and some happily tantalizing, chief of which latter certainly is the kissing when

"High as a hop-field waves the silent grove,
A safe retreat for little thefts of love,
When the pledged roasting-ears invite the maid,
To meet the swain beneath the new-formed shade."

The paper which follows, on "Negro land and the Negroes," is a graphic review of Rev. Mr. Wilson's Western Africa, and is accompanied by no less than sixteen illustrations, which add much to the descriptive details of the article. Probably the most interesting contribution to this number is that which gives the history of the Great Seal of the United States.

We have fac-similes of the growth of that important instrument, to the character with which it at present gives official sanction to the documentary history of the Union.

"Lion-slayers and Man-eaters" is another of those clever articles on natural history and adventure, which have of late interested the readers of Harper. Any one who beholds the engravings must read the letter-press. A variety of other things, including "Little Dorrit," and a disjointed, but interesting, series of specimens of Daniel Webster's conversations, make up the number.

The initial number of Mrs. Stephens' Illustrated New Monthly, at the first glance, has a pleasant and indeed radiant appearance; the paper is good, and the illustrations full of lively grace. On a closer examination, we are not disappointed, as the chief writing in the issue is much above the usual and hackneyed character of magazine story-writing. The talented editor (or editress) leads off with two chapters of a new novel, entitled "The Lost Jewels," written with her usual vigor and grace. It will, no doubt, interest readers even more than Fashion and Famine.

"Love in '76," a story of the revolutionary era, by the author of Blaneh Dearwood, must at once attract the reader. The illustrations, by Dallas, a very clever and finished artist, are excellent—especially those accompanying "Lost Jewels" and the "Falls of Minehaha." In the former, the graceful outlines, judicious management, and delicacy of light and shade, is in Dallas's best manner; while in the latter we realize the "laughing water" of Longfellow's Indian epic.

"Things we talk about" is, as the title suggests, a gossip on "Things as ar'." We learn here that Uncle Tom-ism is not so modern a source of notoriety as the reviewers of Mrs. Beecher Stowe believe. Mrs. Stephens gives us the following:

Mrs. Behn was a celebrity in the reign of Charles II. Not one in a thousand of the present generation ever heard of her, nevertheless she was in her day quite as distinguished as Mrs. Stowe in ours—and for a similar reason. To her, and not to Mrs. Stowe, belongs the credit of writing the first anti-slavery novel. Mrs. Behn had lived in the West Indies—went to London, published a novel in which the horrors of West India slavery were depicted, or rather exaggerated, and she became the town toast, and the town rage. Strange that two hundred years ago the fashionable work of fiction was a species of Uncle Tom novel! The lady went to Germany—a German was smitten with her—and the object of this paragraph is to introduce a love letter which the fair authoress received—a marvellous and model love letter, the reader must confess:

"Most Transcendant Charmer—I have strove often to tell you the tempest of my heart, and with my own mouth scale the walls of your affections; but, terrified with the strength of your fortifications, I concluded to make more regular approaches, and first attack you at a farther distance, and try first what a bombardment of letters would do; whether the caresses of love, thrown into the sconces of your eyes, would break into the midst of your breast, beat down the court of guard of your aversion, and blow up the magazine of your cruelty, that you might be brought to a capitulation and yield upon reasonable terms. Believe me, I love thee more than money; for indeed thou art more beautiful than the ore of Guinea. * * * Oh! thou art beautiful in every part, as a goodly ship under sail from the Indies; thy hair is like her flowing pennons as she enters the harbor, and thy forehead bold and fair as her prow; thy eyes are bright and terrible as her guns; thy nose like a rudder that steers my desires; thy mouth like a well-wrought mortar whence the granadoes of thy tongue are shot into the gun-room of my heart and shatter it to pieces; thy teeth are the grappling-irons that fasten me to my ruin, and of which I would wish to get clear in vain; thy neck is curious and small like the very top-mast head, beneath which thy lovely bosom swells itself like the main-sail before the wind." * * * *

And so on for as much more. Of course the reader wants to know if the lady yielded to a broadside like this. She did not.

Here are some remarks which carry their own reflectiveness with them:—

"In all pictures of the world limned upon the canvas of imagination, our own purposes, fortunes and existence loom up disproportionately and largely in the foreground. This is probably very natural, but that our sympathies, interest and knowledge should be so exclusively of a perspective order, does not at least evince expansive liberality or large wisdom. Why, for instance, our pity and sensibilities should only be shed in a geographical ratio, why concern and solicitude should be measured by latitude and longitude is not very clear. When we read in the morning paper last month an account of our opposite neighbor's broken leg, and in the same column of a hundred wrecked and drowned unfortunates three thousand miles away, why did Mr. Greene's broken leg so preponderate in our sympathies? How insignificant, in fact, was Mr. Greene's leg compared to all the horror and terrors of that shipwreck scene! Because the shriek, the prayer, the agonising cries of drowning and struggling beings cannot be borne 3,000 miles, should the heart refuse to heed what the ear cannot hear! Are human beings drowning on the coast of Africa less than human beings drowning on the coast of New-Jersey? A few weeks ago there came news of a terrible earthquake at Jeddo, which had overwhelmed thirty thousand people in destruction. The papers which contained this news were filled also with the particulars of a calamity nearer home in which nearly twenty lives were lost. The lesser misfortune was in every man's mouth. The greater was scarcely noted at all. A few gave it a passing comment, scratched their heads, and tried to think of Jeddo and thirty thousand killed—but the affair was too remote to be grasped forcibly. The impression at the best was but a vague and glimmering one. Others appeared to give it no heed at all. In none did it awaken keen sensations of sympathy, of horror, of grief. It was altogether mythical and obscure. In brief, it was ten thousand miles or more away, and earthquakes are matters that we read of but do not experience. Sympathy is something that should be more cosmopolitan than this. It should know neither time nor space. It should be human, and extend to the remotest reaches of humanity."

We trust that success will crown this new "aspirant for public honor" (those are the approved terms we believe.) We must not be too critical on a first number, knowing well how difficult it is to have everything in working order. A lady at our elbow suggests that we congratulate the readers of Mrs. Stephens' Monthly on the fact that there are no pages wasted on Crotchet Needle work, Collar Patterns, &c., as ladies know all about those things much better than the theoretical Magazine instructors do. So be it.

Putnam commences the eighth volume, and evidently with a brave effort, notwithstanding the heat of the weather. The number opens with a paper on the labors of Dr. Henry Bartte, who, for a period of five years has breasted almost incredible difficulties in Africa. The article is appropriately, and we suppose, popularly entitled "Uncle Tom at Home," and is a good digest of the indefatigable Doctor's experiences and observations. The paper on New Poetry, takes up some late publications in that line, and dispenses very fair criticism. The "Angel in the House," it regards as the "most pastoral-comical poem ever read" by the writer, and in proof thereof says:—

"The author so soberly treats a conceit as a thought, and so seriously elaborates the purest prose, apparently supposing that the rhyme makes it poetry, and with such solemn pomp conducts the reader to each part or canto of the poem through little passages of verse, sonorously labelled 'The Accompaniments, the Sentences,' that the impression, at last, is entirely ludicrous, when the same thing is so carefully observed in the affected quaintness of the typography in the English Edition. The typography, indeed, seems to be an essential part of the poem.'

The reviewer, however, gives just praise to many passages. Of William Allingham we have an appreciative notice (which is better late than never), although the "Music Master, a Love Story," is an old tale, "not very well told." Buchanan Read's "House by the Sea," and the "New Pastoral" next come in order. The latter commands the sympathies of Putnam. "The reality of the Pastoral is better than the lurid fire-works of the House by the Sea." In opposition to the English opinion of Mr. Read's powers, the reviewer will not give Mr. R. credit for any "fine imagination, strength or subtlety of thought, passionate feeling, intensity, airy coloring, peculiar melody, or individuality of any kind." He admits, however, that "he has written some fugitive lines of tenderdess and beauty; but that is not a rare accomplishment. He has yet to vindicate his claim as a poet." Mr. Whittier's "Panorama" is recommended as "a true poem," although written for the opening of a series of Boston lectures. Such are the opinions of Putnam—whether true or not we cannot say, not having read any of the poetical effusions criticised. The article is pleasant reading. "Napoleon as a Family Man" is concluded; and we find that the writer has made even a third magazine article interesting. A more than usually extensive group of editorial notes on literature is very welcome. The "Political Aspect" we have not read, as our patience is more than overmatched by the political labors of the daily press. Altogether a good number.

Household Words is full of graphic and pleasant stories, essays, and descriptive papers.

The Schoolfellow, as usual, is bright.

Buchanan and the Press.

HOW BUCHANAN WILL WIN.

The following is the major portion of clear article in the Cincinnati Daily Enquirer. It is worth a careful perusal.

"The Free States have 176 Electoral votes; the Slave States 120. It requires 149 electoral votes to choose a President. It is generally conceded that all the Slave States will vote for Mr. Buchanan; at any rate it is absolutely certain that Fremont will not receive a single electoral vote in one of them, and that his strength is entirely at the North. His friends, therefore, go into the contest with 120 electoral votes sure against him. In all the Free States Mr. Buchanan has got to obtain but 29 electoral votes to defeat Fremont.

Now, as Illinois elected a Democratic State Treasurer in 1854, the year when Black Republicanism and Know-Nothingism were most omnipotent, by a majority of 5,000, there cannot be a particle of doubt that at the present time, when both of these factions are in a decaying condition, that she will vote for Buchanan and Breckinridge by a heavy majority. We, therefore, mark her 11 votes as sure for Buchanan.

In Wisconsin, at the election in November, 1855, the Democracy carried their whole State ticket, which contained the names of seven or eight persons, by an average majority of 3,000, with the exception of the Governor, Barstow, who was defeated by opposition in his own party. But two State tickets were run. There was a complete "fusion" of the opposition, and yet they were in the minority 3,000. Who doubts, therefore, that the Democracy in Wisconsin will not do as well in the election of 1856 as they did at that of 1855, and give its electoral vote to Buchanan? We put her down five electoral votes sure for the Pennsylvania statesman.

In Indiana, last October, there were elections in most of the counties, conducted upon political issues, and nearly all went Democratic. The Black Republicans and Know-Nothings were terribly beaten. They can do no better, but will probably fare worse this Fall. The Hoosier State is sure for Buchanan, by a decisive vote.

The Democrats of Connecticut, in April last, gave their candidate for Governor (Ingraham) about as many votes as the Know Nothing and Black Republican nominees received, both put together. We consider Buchanan's chances in Connecticut as far above par.

In New-York, at the State election in 1855, the Democratic vote, 'Hard and Soft,' was some thousands more than any other organization, although a large number of Democrats knowing that there was no chance of success, on account of the division of the party, staid at home, and did not vote at all. This year Mr. Buchanan will receive the whole Democratic vote, 'Soft and Hard,' while the opposition will be divided between Fremont and Fillmore. Who can doubt in view of these facts, that Mr. Buchanan will carry the State.

It is unnecessary to say, as the opposition admits in regard to Pennsylvania, that nothing is more certain than that she will roll up for her favorite son a very large majority. We carried her in 1855, and will do even better in 1856.

The same may be said of New-Jersey, which last fall elected a Democratic Legislature, against the best efforts of the Black Republicans and Know-Nothings. She is a sure Buchanan State.

In New Hampshire, at the last State election, there was but eighty votes difference between the respective candidates for Governor, the Democrats having gained 9,000 votes in a single year. The change against the Fusionets is still in progress in the "Old Granite," and we have no fear but that she will cast her electoral vote for Buchanan and Breckinridge.

The States we have named, from the results of their last elections and their former antecedents, are all pretty certain to go Democratic, and they are entitled to 109 electoral votes. Now, even if Mr. Buchanan should not get quite all the slave States, he still would have two-thirds of the whole number of electoral votes, by means of his support in the free States.

In this calculation we have left Michigan, Ohio, Maine, Iowa and California, out of the catalogue, although Buchanan's chances are better than Freemont's in all of them. The only States we mark down as likely to go for the latter are Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Vermont. The most intelligent and candid supporters of the latter, indeed, only hope to throw the election of President into the House of Representatives, where they think corruption and intrigue might carry him into the Presidency; but, even in the present House, the probability is against him. It requires sixteen States to make a choice, and the Black Republicans can only count thirteen. The fifteen slave States would be against him, together with the Buchanan delegation from California, and that makes a majority of the whole number of States. In case the House was unable to make choice of either of the three Presidential candidates who would come before it in the three weeks which they have to ballot—and such a contingency is highly probable—Mr. Breckinridge, who would be elected Vice President by the Senate, would become the President for four years just as if the President was deceased. Thus fortified on every hand, the Democrats, if they are only active and diligent in the campaign, can look with confidence to a favorable result. It will not do, however, to be idle or supine, for we desire to win a victory that will forever crush the odious factions opposed to us. It is certain that ever since the spring of 1855, there has been a great reaction in the public mind against both Know Nothingism and Black Republicanism, and there is every indication that it will not cease until Mr. Buchanan is borne amid popular applause into the Presidential chair."

MARRIAGES.

At St. Mary's Church, William B. Orpin, barrister-at-law, son of John Orpin, of Highthorn, county Dublin, to Harriet, daughter of the late Daniel Bastable, of Rutland square.

At St. Peter's Church, Arthur Wolfe Smyth, of Portlick Castle, county Westmeath, to Wilhelmina, daughter of Charles Barry, of Killcairn, county Meath.

At St. Peter's Church, Wm. King, of Grafton street, to Ellen, daughter of Richard Thacker, Clanbrazil place, Dublin.

At St. Peter's Church, Eugene Perrin, of Oxton, Birkenhead, Cheshire, to Anna, daughter of the late W. Owen, of Erkindale, Queen's County.

At St. Peter's Church, Pierce Purcell, of Dromore, Cork, to Alicia Ellen, daughter of the late Richard W. Gason, of Richmond, Tipperary.

At St. Peter's Church, Solomon A. Richards, Captain in the Wexford Militia, to Sophia Mordaunt, daughter of the late Rev. Bernard John Ward, of Bangor, county Down.

At the Catholic Church, Arran quay, Patrick Dwyer, 88th regiment, (Connaught Rangers,) to Hanna, daughter of John Conran.

At Birkenhead, Cheshire, Henry Clarence, son of Aldermen Hoyte, Dublin, to Eleanor, daughter of Richard Henry Watson, of Australia.

At Booterstown church, Captain St. George Mervyn Nugent, of the 96th regiment, son of the Elmond Nugent, of Bobsgrove, Cavan, to Emily Frances, daughter of Edward Litton, Master in Chancery.

At Booterstown church, Samuel Alker, of Fortfield, Templeogue, to Catherine, daughter of the late Richard Archer.

At Lea church, Queen's County, Colonel Hawkshaw, of the Royal Engineers, to Letitia, daughter of the late William Philip Brabazon, of Donecarny, Meath.

At Monkstown, Godfrey Holmes, of Charleville, Cork, to Sarah, daughter of Menus O'Keeffe, of Mount O'Keeffe, in the same county.

At Killpatrick, Hugh Dale Matthie, of Rock Ferry, near Liverpool, son of the late Rev. Hugh Matthie, rector of Worthbury, North Wales, to Louisa Eleanor, daughter of P. Walker, of Killown, county Wexford.

At Nenagh, Thomas John Bourke O'Flahertie, eldest son of Captain O'Flahertie, of the Kilkenny Fusileers, and nephew of the late Sir Wheeler Cuff, Bart., of Grath, to Fanny Robbins, daughter of the late Daniel Falkiner, of Wellington, Tipperary.

DEATHS.

At 7 Summer hill, Charlotte Maria, the wife of John Hill Linde, and daughter of the late Sir Henry Jebb.

At Netley, John Power.

At Mountjoy place, at an advanced age, Helena, daughter of the late John Roche, and grand-daughter of Philip Roche, of Newcastle, county Limerick.

At Dawson street, Dublin, aged 86 years, J. Nunn.

At Lower Leeson street, Dublin, Elizabeth, widow of Martin Keene.

At Upper Baggot street, Dublin, Frances Mary Evelyn, youngest daughter of the late Rev. John Caldwell.

At D'Olier street, suddenly, Burton Bindon, of Munnie Lodge, county Clare, aged 79 years.

At Longford terrace, Salt-hill, William Forsyth late of Belfast.

At Melbeach, Monkstown, county Dublin, Jane, widow of the late John Williamson.

At Bloomfield, county Mayo, Katherine, the beloved wife of Robert Rutledge.

At Williamsfort, King's County, Jane, wife of A. J. Watson, of Castle Connell.

In Belfast, John W. Trousdell, Comptroller of Customs at that port.

Mr. Michael Campion, late of Phipsborough, and formerly of Nenagh, Tipperary.

At Bellee, near Downpatrick, aged 88 years, Thomas Smith, late of London.

At Ballinderry, John Nolan, a magistrate of the county Roscommon.

At Parsonstown, aged 84 years, Elizabeth, widow of Captain William Johnston, of the 87th regiment.

At Glenville, county Kerry, John Sealy, son of the late John Sealy, of Rockfield.

At Ballinagore, county Westmeath, Charlotte, daughter of John Perry.

At Glebe Lodge, Killead, the Rev. Joseph M'Kee.

At Galway, Mary Anne, relict of Captain Robert Alexander of the Royal Marines.

Caution to the Public.—To distinguish the genuine magnetic powder, for the destruction of insects, from poisonous imitations, it is necessary to examine the wrapper. See that four national medals—those of England, France, Belgium, and the United States—are engraved thereon. Be sure also that a lithographic fac simile of Lyon's signature appears both on the wrapper and label. This caution is necessary to protect the proprietor from fraud and the public from danger and disappointment. The leading scientific societies, and the first chemists of Europe and America, have pronounced the magnetic powder the only poisonous insect bane in the world, as well as the most effective and fatal means for the destruction of bed-bugs, roaches, fleas, ants, flies, moths, &c., that was ever prepared or sold. The proprietors of the principal city hotels endorse it. Come and see the testimonials of Prince Albert, ex-President Fillmore, and hundreds of the nobility of Europe, as well as the sovereigns of America. The magnetic pills, for the extermination of rats and mice, are endorsed with equal emphasis by all who have tried them. Call and see the medals, diplomas, government orders, scientific certificates, letters, &c., at the Central Depot, No. 424 Broadway.

jun 21 8m EMANUEL LYON.

A perfumed breath.—What lady or gentleman would remain under the curse of a disagreeable breath, when by using the "Balm of a Thousand Flowers" as a dentrifice, would not only render it sweet, but leave the teeth white as alabaster? Many persons do not know their breath is bad, and the subject is so delicate their friends will never mention it. Pour a single drop of the Balm on your tooth-brush, and wash the teeth night and morning. A fifty cent bottle will last a year.

A Beautiful Complexion may easily be acquired by using the "Balm of a Thousand Flowers." It will remove tan, pimples, and freckles from the skin, leaving it of a soft and roseate hue. Wet a towel, pour on two or three drops and wash the face night and morning.

Shaving made Easy.—Wet your shaving brush in either warm or cold water, pour on two or three drops of the "Balm of a Thousand Flowers," rub the beard well, and it will make a beautiful soft lather, much facilitating the operation of shaving. Price only 50 cents. For sale by all druggists.

8mjly5 W. P. FETRIDGE & Co., Franklin Square, New-York.

Amusements.

BOWERY THEATRE.

LESSEE AND MANAGER..... Mr. John Brougham.

NO CHANGE OF PRICES!

PRICES OF ADMISSION:

Boxes.....25 cents. | Pit..... 12½ cents.
Gallery.....12½ cents. | Orchestra Stalls..... 50 cents.
Private Boxes.....Five Dollars.

Doors open at 7½; commence at 7½.

In preparation for the Glorious

FOURTH OF JULY,

A NEW HISTORICAL AND PATRIOTIC

AMERICAN DRAMA.

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL,

596 BROADWAY,

TWO DOORS ABOVE THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL.

The coolest hall in New-York.

Crowded houses—Rapturous applause.

Entire change of programme.

Three new Patriotic Tableaux, entitled

The Third and Fourth of July,

Washington Planting the standard of Liberty,

and

Washington Crossing the Delaware!

Second week of Signor ADONIS, the great Magician.
Eighth week of Madame LOVARNY and F. STOEPEL.
Second week of Miss MARIA DUCKWORTH.
Friday, three grand performances in honor of the Fourth of July.
Madame LOVARNY's benefit next week.

Performance at 8 o'clock. Tickets, 50 cents. Children half price. Private boxes $5. Single seats in private boxes $1.

ONE THOUSAND AND ONE THINGS

WORTH KNOWING!

A BOOK disclosing invaluable Information, Receipts and Instruction in the Useful and Domestic Arts, everything of which is of practical use to everybody. 12mo, cloth; price 50 cents; sent by mail free of postage.

One Thousand and One Things contains full instructions in relation to the Art of Millinary and Dressmaking; Rules for Good Behavior; How to get Rich; 24 Practical Rules and Receipts on the choice of Meats and how to cook them; a Concise Treatise on the Treatment of Infants, Morally and Physically; Diseases of the Hair, with receipts for cure; 28 practical directions on Carving various dishes, with Illustrations; How to prevent or cure Warts and Corns; Receipts for making 23 different Puddings; A chapter on various small dishes for Supper or Tea; Pickling; Pastry; The Canary Bird Fancier; The Etiquette of Courtship and Marriage; The Water Cure; Art of Conversation; Cookery for the Sick Room, with 8 Receipts; Directions for the preservation of Clothing; On the care of Furniture and Housekeeping articles, with 25 Receipts; 4 cheap and wholesome Drinks for warm weather; 17 Receipts for Sweetmeats and Preserves; The Nurse's Manual, containing 25 plain prescriptions; 7 Medicinal Prescriptions; Young Ladies Manual, containing various rules for Dress and Toilette, with numerous receipts; The Lips, Hands and Arms; The Invalid's Manual, with directions as to Diet, &c.; On the use and choice of Spectacles; The Young Man's Manual; Choice of Husband or Wife, and how to win them; Various directions for improving Personal Appearance; How to make Money, with Receipts for manufacturing 73 articles in every day use.

The above work should be in the hands of everybody particularly of young persons. It is written in a plain, easily-to-be-understood style, and no household should be without it. Address George Backer, 85 Nassau street, or Box 3890 New-York P. O.

jy5 6mo

OFFICE OF RECEIVER OF TAXES, No. 32 Chambers street, New Court house

To avoid the risks that must inevitably occur from the crowd of Tax Payers who put off to the latest day the payment of their taxes, I have determined to adopt the following rule, which will be rigidly adhered to during my term of office. I shall receive no money after 2 o'clock p. m. Every officer in this department is STRICTLY PROHIBITED from receiving ENVELOPES containing money or checks for the payment of Taxes. By order, 8mjly5 HENRY H. HOWARD, Receiver.

New-York, June 28, 1856.

Hotels.

STEVENS HOUSE.

(LATE DELMONICO'S HOTEL.

21, 23, 25, & 27 Broadway, New-York.

THE undersigned avails himself of this opportunity of informing his friends and the public that he has leased the above named house for a term of years, and has made extensive alterations and repairs, and omitted nothing that will tend to the accomodations or comfort of guests. The house having been newly furnished throughout in the most thorough and modern style, with a view to convenience and comfort, and as it will be conducted on the European plan, and with an experienced caterer, and thorough cooks, he hopes to give satisfaction to those who favor him with their patronage which has never failed while in other Hotels in this city.

Catholic families and clergymen visiting New-York will find in the arrangements of this spacious establishment, elegance, convenience, and comfort, at moderate charges. JOHN O'GRADY, JR.,

3m5jly Formerly of Judson's Hotel and the Brandreth House.

HERRING'S

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure mere perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,

GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 185, 187 and 189 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

SHIRT IRONERS.

500 Wanted,

AT THE

BROADWAY STEAM LAUNDRY

je28 4t CORNER OF CANAL STREET, NEW-YORK.

"TERRA COTTA"

CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental, Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture lowest rates. LONG ISLAND POTTERY. Depot, 82 Nassau street New-York. my10 3m

SARAH McFADDEN,

Maritime and National Flag Manufacturer,

198 Hudson street, four doors below Canal street, New-York.

☞ Mrs. McFadden justly baasts of having made up, for Thomas Francis Meagher, the Irish tri-color flag which he presented to the Confederate Club Men of '48, resident in New-York: also, the beautiful U. S. Flag recently presented by Mr. William Kinsella to the Montgomery Guard of Bridgeport. y21june

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 198 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap193m

Sewing Machine Depot.—Sewing Machines of all kinds improved and repaired, on reasonable terms, an in the most substantial manner. Superior Machine Oils for sale. A large assortment of Machine Silk Twist and Needles for sale at reduces prices.

my 24, 3 mos. F. S COATES & Co., 345 Broadway, New-York.

Massachusetts Advertisements.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 10 CENTRE ST., OPPOSITE CITY HALL.

WEEMAN'S IRON RAILING MANUFACTORY.

No. 26 Merrimac street, Boston, Mass.

Where he has been for the past thirty years.

ALL persons in want of IRON FENCES, suitable for cemetery, house, garden, Balustrades, &c., can, by calling on the subscriber, purchase a better fence at a lower price, than at any other establishment in the state, as he makes it his entire business.

jun14m6 EBENEZER WEEMAM.

Gould's Eating Saloon—THE BEST AND CHEAPEST EATING-HOUSE in New-York.—"Strawberries Smothered in Cream."—Can anything be more delicious than a "dish of ripe strawberries smothered in cream?" particularly if you drop in at Gould's Saloon, No. 144 Fulton street, and enjoy it in perfection. The berries served here are perfect pictures, large, and of the most tempting lusciousness, and the lacteal accompaniment is none of your sky-blue apology for milk, but the pure article, fresh, thick and creamy. Mr. Gould has one of the best dining places in the city; he serves up daily everything in season, in the cleanest and nicest style. je21 4t

